Introduction

This book describes the worship and the church life of the evangelical churches of the Reformation in Germany and the neighbouring lands, as their own church orders laid them down. A church order (Kirchenordnung) is the law that a prince or a city council gave its church. It says who shall preach and what, how the Lord's Supper, baptism and marriage are to be held, which feasts are kept, how ministers are examined and bound, and how the schools and the poor are provided for. The orders read here are those printed in Emil Sehling's edition, Die evangelischen Kirchenordnungen des XVI. Jahrhunderts: 2,581 texts, dated from 1521 to 1620.

The book is written chiefly for Lutherans who want to know what the first Lutheran churches did: which parts of the Mass they kept and which they dropped, what they sang, how they prayed, preached and kept the church year, and how they ordered their ministries. The orders are left to speak for themselves. Each chapter quotes them in the original, gives a close English translation, and cites every passage to its page in Sehling. Orders of other traditions are used where they show the practice of their time, and they are always marked as such (Conventions).

The source: Sehling's edition

Emil Sehling, professor of law at Erlangen, began the edition in 1902. By 1913 he had published five volumes at Leipzig, covering Saxony and Thuringia, Brandenburg, Lusatia and Silesia, Prussia, Poland and Pomerania, and the Baltic lands, Mecklenburg, Lübeck, Lauenburg and Hamburg. The Institute for Evangelical Church Law of the Evangelical Church in Germany, at Göttingen, took up the work again in 1955. The Heidelberg Academy of Sciences carried it on, publishing its volumes from 2004, and completed it in 2017. The edition runs to 24 volumes in 30 parts, with two volumes of registers.

Each volume treats a group of territories: principalities and counties, bishoprics, imperial cities and towns, from the North Sea to Transylvania. For each territory an editor's introduction tells the history of its reformation and describes its orders. The orders follow, with their variants and notes. Sehling took "church order" in the widest sense (§1.2.1), so the set holds visitation articles, mandates, consistory and school orders, marriage and poor-law orders, agendas and confessions as well as the great church orders.

Of the 2,581 texts, 1,950 are Lutheran. The rest are Reformed, Moderate Reformed and Philippist, with a few of other traditions (§1.3). Sehling meant to print no orders made for the Augsburg Interim of 1548, and only four are in the set (§1.4). The texts run from Breslau's beggars' order of 1521 to the orders of 1620 for Stade, Limpurg and the Transylvanian Saxons. One later text, a report of 1635 on the consistory of Henneberg, stands outside that range.

How the book is arranged

Chapter 1 is an inventory of every order in the edition, volume by volume and territory by territory, with its date, its kind, its confessional tradition and whether it belongs to the Interim. Each of the other chapters takes one subject through the whole edition:

- the Mass: its order as a whole (Chapter 2), the preliminaries, confession and exhortation (Chapter 3), the propers (Chapter 4), the collects (Chapter 5), the general prayer (Chapter 6), and the Canon in the German Masses (Chapter 7);
- music: hymns (Chapter 8), and the organ, other instruments and bells (Chapter 9);
- the daily office (Chapter 10), preaching (Chapter 11) and the church year (Chapter 12);
- the occasional and extraordinary rites, from baptism to the rites of the feasts and seasons, among them what was done with houses and things that sorcery had touched, and the Litany (Chapter 13);
- the furnishing of worship: art, architecture, paraments and vestments (Chapter 14);
- the duties of ministers, officers and people (Chapter 15), and the ministries themselves: minor orders, deacons and elders, and what women and laymen might do in the services (Chapter 16);
- confessional subscription (Chapter 17), and church fellowship between the confessional traditions (Chapter 18).

Most chapters open with a summary of findings and a section on scope, sources and method. They then set out the evidence subject by subject, quoting the orders and translating them. Tables by order follow, and every chapter ends with a concordance of the orders it quotes.

Sections are numbered within their chapter, with the chapter number first: §2.3.2 is section 3.2 of Chapter 2. Every reference to a section is a link, and so is every entry in the Contents. The Scripture index and the Index of persons list the sections where each passage of Scripture and each person is cited, and the Glossary explains the rarer terms.

The repository and its methods

The book was made from a digital copy of Sehling's edition and from databases built from it. They are kept, with the programs that built them, in a public repository: https://github.com/sethkasten/sehling-corpus. The chapters sometimes name these files. This section describes them, so that the book can be read without the repository.

The digital corpus

The corpus is the text of all 24 volumes, in their 30 parts, and of the two register volumes. It was taken from the digitized edition of the Heidelberg Academy of Sciences (digi.hadw-bw.de) and divided into documents. Each document carries:

- Sehling's citation, for example "Sehling 7, I/Bremen Nr. 3";
- its heading, with place and year;
- its range of printed pages;
- its full text, as read by optical character recognition (OCR).

Two limits of the corpus matter for the quotations in this book. Sehling's footnotes, variant readings and editorial brackets stand in the text as printed, mixed with the order itself, because OCR loses the type that tells them apart. They are left out when a passage is quoted (Conventions). And the OCR is not corrected in the corpus, so a quotation can keep a misreading, as the Conventions describe.

Three pairs of half-volumes, 7/1 and 7/2.2, 17/1 and 17/2, and 20/1 and 20/2, were bound as separate books that each number their pages from the beginning. A page number alone is therefore ambiguous in these volumes, and this book always names the half-volume.

The "Doc" numbers in the tables and concordances of this book are the record numbers of `eko.db`. Every quotation is preceded by an invisible note naming the record it was checked against. A record is a unit of the digitized edition, not always one order: one record may hold several short orders, and a long order may run over several records. The database's year and heading for a record are sometimes wrong, so this book names every order from Sehling's running heads instead (see, for example, §8.2.3).

The database is about 120 MB. It is not kept in the repository, but is rebuilt from the corpus by the program `build_database.py`.

How the chapters were made

Each chapter was made in the same way.

- Search. The whole corpus was searched in `eko.db` for the words of the subject in High German, Low German, Dutch and Latin, in their period spellings, and, where useful, through Sehling's registers. Each hit was read in its context.
- Findings. What each order prescribes was recorded order by order. Where a thing was looked for and not found, the chapter says so. These negative findings are part of the evidence.
- Quotations. Every quotation was checked against the text of its record in `eko.db`, and its page against the edition's page markers (Conventions).
- Translations were made from the original, in the idiom of the Authorized Version (Conventions).

- Traditions. Each order's confessional tradition and Interim status was fixed once, in the inventory of Chapter 1. The other chapters mark the orders they cite by that inventory (Conventions).

Each chapter's own section on scope, sources and method gives its searches, its sources and its cautions: §1.2, §2.2, §3.2, §4.2, §5.2, §6.2, §7.1.3, §8.2, §9.2, §10.2, §11.2, §12.2, §13.2, §14.2, §15.2, §16.2 and §17.2.

The hymn database (`hymns.db`)

`hymns.db`, with its workbook `hymns.xlsx`, holds the chief-hymn prescriptions: the places where a church order, a hymnal or a later list assigns a hymn to a particular Sunday, feast or occasion. Chapter 8 treats where and how hymns were sung. The database holds the tables of hymns by day, and Appendix 8.A condenses its "Compare by day" sheet.

The database holds 4,534 prescriptions from 54 witnesses, in two layers that must be kept apart:

- The church orders. 865 prescriptions come from the twelve orders in Sehling that carry a table of hymns: Naumburg 1537/38, Heilbronn 1543, Nördlingen 1544/1555, Anhalt 1551, Pirna 1555–1569, Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1565, Pomerania 1569, Weissenfels 1578, Nördlingen 1579, Mansfeld 1580, Hof 1592 and Hohenlohe 1596. All are Lutheran. Naumburg and Weissenfels come nearest to the later table of one hymn for each Sunday. The word Hauptlied does not occur in the corpus. It is later terminology.
- The hymnals and compilations. 3,669 prescriptions come from later books and lists:
  - Liliencron's concordance of fifteen hymnals of 1545–1694, Sunday by Sunday;
  - Ludecus's Ordo cantionum Germanicarum (1589);
  - Selnecker's own account of the scheme he kept;
  - a modern Hymn of the Day table, which collates the schemes of Selnecker, Carpzov and others with those of modern hymnals;
  - Krusemark's Hymns ABC (2018), of which only the hymns of the day are taken.

An order commands what shall be sung. A hymnal records what was sung, sometimes long after.

Witnesses, not books, are counted. A witness is counted once, whichever compilation it was read from. Selnecker, for instance, appears in Liliencron, in the Hymn of the Day table and in his own account, and he counts once. One overlap could not be resolved. A column of Krusemark's, taken from Jason Thompson's dissertation, collates Ludecus with twelve other lists of the sixteenth century without saying which list each hymn came from. Where that column and Ludecus agree, Ludecus may be counted twice.

Titles. Each hymn is named by its German or Latin incipit as printed, with a literal English rendering, and with its English title where it has one. 132 of the 217 hymns take their title from the Lutheran Hymn Index (below). 18 of these titles are Matthew Carver's, from Walther's Hymnal (2012) or Liber Hymnorum (2016), for hymns that no older English book has. For 21 hymns that the index lacks, the title of Carver's translation on his blog Hymnoglypt is given. 22 others keep the English title their sources give them, or the English name of a canticle or creed. 42 hymns have no English title at all. Where a hymn has rival English titles, the index's title is taken, and the others are kept in the database.

Assignments. On four days where no hymn has three old witnesses, the editor of the database assigns a hymn, and two on Easter Monday. These are marked "Assigned" and never counted as witnesses.

The Lutheran Hymn Index (`Hymnal Index/hymnal.db`)

The folder `Hymnal Index` holds the Lutheran Hymn Index, a concordance of the hymnals of the English-speaking Lutheran churches. Its database, `hymnal.db`, has a row for each hymn, 4,931 in all, with the hymn's number in each of 34 books: the hymnals and supplements of those churches, from A Collection of Hymns and a Liturgy (1827) to Te Laudamus (2024); Walther's German Kirchen-Gesangbuch (1862) and its English translation, Walther's Hymnal; and Liber Hymnorum (2016), the Latin hymns of the Lutheran Church. A row gives the titles the books give the hymn, its German title in Walther's hymnal, and the original of a hymn translated from another tongue. The folder's README describes the tables and how to query them.

The book takes the English names of hymns from it: in the translations, in the table of Appendix 8.A and in `hymns.db`. Each hymn of `hymns.db` was matched to its row by the German or Latin original that the index records, and every match was checked by hand. A German version of a Latin hymn takes the Latin hymn's row where the index has no row for the German. The matches are listed in `hymn_tables/index_titles.py`. The English name is the row's master title: as a rule the title of Lutheran Service Book (2006), else of The Lutheran Hymnal (1941), else of the Evangelical Lutheran Hymnary (1996), else of the book that brought the hymn into the index. Where the index gives a master title without its commas, they are taken from a hymnal's title of the same words. One title is shortened: the index calls Luther's Creed hymn "We All Believe in One True God, Maker", to tell it from Tobias Clausnitzer's, and the book gives it as the hymnals do, "We All Believe in One True God".

The general-prayer workbook and database (`general_prayers.db`)

`general_prayers.db`, with its workbook `general_prayers.xlsx`, holds the general prayer of the Sunday service (Chapter 6) from every order in Sehling that prints one: 57 orders, dated 1526–1618. The orders give 455 petitions, which fall into 18 families of text and 28 standard categories of intention. Their languages are High German, Low German, Low Dutch and Latin.

Each petition is divided into its rubric (the heading or marginal note), its bid (the words addressed to the people) and its prayer (the words addressed to God). Each part is given in the original and in English.

How the texts were made. The original is Sehling's base text with his editorial matter stripped out: sigla, footnote numbers, the variant readings of later editions, page and folio markers, running heads, and words interleaved from the second column by the OCR. The spelling of the print is kept, and obvious OCR slips are corrected. Every rubric, bid and prayer was found again in its record in `eko.db`, with at least nine-tenths of its words. Where one order copies another, the source's English was taken over and corrected wherever the German differs. Each witness is dated as Sehling edits it, not by the year of its record in `eko.db`, which is wrong for several of them.

The sheets of the workbook.

- The Compare sheet sets the orders side by side, petition by petition.
- The Prayers sheet gives every witness's own text.
- The Archetypes sheet and four Critical sheets collate each family's witnesses into one text for each category, with every variant in square brackets.
- Four Representative sheets give one clean text for each family and category. Chapter 6 prints these, family by family.

What counts as the general prayer

Included. The prayer of intercession for all estates and needs in the chief Sunday service. It is normally after the sermon, from the pulpit. In family L it is in the Mass itself, and in Norden 1528 (Reformed) it stands in the place of the Prone. The following count as part of it:

- an exhortation or preface to it;
- confession and absolution, when the order places them inside the prayer;
- the Our Father, the Creed or the Decalogue, when printed as its close.

Two orders that prescribe the contents of the prayer in indirect speech are also included: Magdeburg 1562 and Osnabrück 1543.

Excluded, deliberately:

- Collect banks, even when they supply the texts for the prayer: Wittenberg 1536, Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533, Mansfeld 1562, Lippe 1566, Grubenhagen, Hoya, the Prussian collects and Hanau-Lichtenberg's "XII Collecten".
- The Litany. It is often the alternative form, and it is a genre of its own.
- Prayer-day, occasional and emergency prayers, such as the three prayers of the Wild- and Rhinegraves and the variant in the Nassau Agende of 1618.
- Afternoon, weekday and Vespers forms, such as the afternoon forms of Henneberg, Strasbourg 1598 and Kurpfalz 1563 (Reformed).
- Orders that only mention the prayer, or give it by reference: Strasbourg 1577, Hessen 1574 (Philippist), Mecklenburg 1552, Sponheim 1590, Emden 1594 (Reformed; free prayer), Saxony 1539 (Luther's paraphrase, by reference only), and the references to Veit Dietrich's collects.
- Orders that Sehling prints only as variants of another order. Kurpfalz 1601 (Reformed) is identical to 1563.

Representative texts

The representative texts give one clean text for each family and category, with no brackets. They are built from the same collation as the critical texts, by five rules.

1. Layout. A representative cell is filled exactly where the critical cell is.

2. Majority. A petition is kept if at least half the family's witnesses to that category have it. Within a petition, a rubric, bid or prayer is kept if at least half its witnesses have it. Word by word:

    - a variant replaces the parent's reading only if at least half the witnesses to that text have it, and more have it than have the parent's reading;
    - an addition is kept if at least half the witnesses to that text have it.

3. Moved words. A transposition appears in the collation as an omission at one place and an addition at another. Both are decided by the votes above, so the order that more witnesses have wins. On a tie the parent's order is kept: an addition that exactly half the witnesses have is dropped when its words already stand in the parent close by.

4. Consistent openings and endings. Within each family one pattern is applied, taken from the family's own majority:

    - A (Brenz): bids end "Bittend also:" (Pray ye thus:). Collects end bare, as in Schwäbisch Hall 1526. The mediation formula and Amen that two collects carry are removed.
    - B1 (Württemberg long form): bids end "Bittend also:". Collects end "durch unsern Herrn Jesum Christum, Amen." (through our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.) wherever they carry a mediation formula or lack a closing Amen.
    - L (Brandenburg): collects end "durch deinen son Jesum Christum, amen." (through thy Son Jesus Christ. Amen.), in place of the abbreviation "durch unsern herrn etc.".

    The other families' texts are continuous prayers or exhortations whose openings and endings are already consistent.

5. Divergent texts. Where no reading has half the witnesses, the parent's reading stands. The parent is the earliest witness: the archetype, or, for an added petition, the earliest witness that has it. The same applies when no petition, or no group of related texts, has half the witnesses.

The English is not voted on separately. Each English variation takes the reading of the witnesses whose reading the original chose at the same place. Where only the English varies, as when two translations render the same words, the parent's English is kept. The original and the English therefore give the same text. Sehling's editorial brackets are removed.

What the comparison shows

- Civil authority is the one universal intention. It appears in all 57 orders, and in some it is prayed for twice. The Lüneburg family (J) has one petition for the Emperor and all magistrates, and another for the princess of the land and the young lordship.
- The Church, then the magistrates, is the normal Lutheran sequence. It comes from Brenz 1526 through Württemberg 1553, and so reaches roughly half the orders. The typical series is: exhortation > the Church > magistrates > the afflicted > peace > enemies > women with child > fruits of the earth > the Our Father. The Reformed Heidelberg prayer begins elsewhere: confession > thanksgiving > the Word > magistrates > all men > the persecuted > the afflicted. Its petition for all men (1 Tim. 2) is a Reformed and Upper German feature. It occurs only in Heidelberg (R1, with the Lutheran Schaumburg 1614, which borrows the Heidelberg prayer), in Calvin (R3) and in Augsburg 1537 (Moderate Reformed).
- The Word and its fruit is named in almost every family except the Brenz and Württemberg line. There it is folded into the petition for the Church, and only two witnesses of that line add it: Pfalz-Veldenz 1574 (long form) and Magdeburg 1562. It opens the prayer in the Nürnberg exhortation (D), in Bugenhagen and Osnabrück (H), in the Lower Saxon notel (J) and in Heidelberg (R1, R2; Reformed).
- Women with child are prayed for almost everywhere. They are named in 42 of the 57 orders: in a petition of their own in the Brenz and Württemberg long forms, and within the petition for the afflicted in the short form and most other families. They are absent from the Mass intercessions (L); from Calvin, à Lasco and the Heidelberg paraphrase (all Reformed); from Veit Dietrich's exhortation (Nürnberg 1545 and Waldeck 1556); and from Osnabrück, Magdeburg, Leipzig, Hessen (Moderate Reformed), Worms and Norden (Reformed).
- Brandenburg 1540 and its followers (family L) put the intercessions in the Mass, under the Sanctus. These are collects for the ministers, the magistrates and peace, standing where the Roman Canon had its prayers of intercession (Sehling's note on Pfalz-Neuburg 1543). They are the closest evangelical survival of the Canon's intercessions in the corpus.

- The Württemberg short form is the most copied prayer in the corpus. Its 17 witnesses run from 1553 to 1618 and reach Electoral Saxony (1580), Magdeburg, Strasbourg and the Wetterau counts. Their local changes include the name of the ruling house, heretics among the enemies, the fallen-away and daily bread.

These conventions hold throughout the book.

Citations and references

- Sehling. Citations are in the form "Sehling volume, page", for example "(Sehling 8, p. 245)". The half-volumes of the edition are written 6/1, 6/2, 7/1, 7/2.1, 7/2.2, 17/1, 17/2, 19/1, 19/2, 20/1 and 20/2, following the digitized volumes. Where a passage comes from the editor's introduction, notes or apparatus rather than from the text of an order, this is said.
- Orders are named by place, title and date as Sehling's running heads give them, for example "Hessen, Kirchenordnung, 1566". These names sometimes differ from the headings of the records in `eko.db` (Introduction; see, for example, §8.2.3).
- Doc in the tables and concordances is the number of the record in `eko.db` that holds the page cited (Introduction). Each quotation is preceded by a note, invisible in print, that names the record it was checked against.
- Sections are numbered within their chapter, with the chapter number first: §2.3.2 is section 3.2 of Chapter 2. Appendices are lettered: Appendix 4.A has the sections 4.A.1, 4.A.2 and so on. In Chapter 6 the petitions of each family keep the family's own numbering (A.1, B1.13) under the numbered family sections. Every reference to a section or a chapter is a link.
- Concordances. Each chapter ends with a concordance of the orders it quotes or cites. Its "§" or "Quoted in §" column gives the sections where each order is cited, and each number is a link. In Chapters 4 and 5, "A" in that column means the chapter's appendix.

Quotations

- Every quotation is the text of Sehling or his successors as it stands in `eko.db`, the database built from the digitized edition (Introduction). A block quotation is followed by its English translation.
- Left out: footnote numbers, sigla, folio markers, the editor's dates in square brackets (such as "[25. Dez.]"), "[Noten]" marks and the like, and apparatus interleaved by the OCR.
- Kept: the editor's own supplied words and letters in square brackets (as in Nemen[t]), "[!]", "[sic]" and his other signs, and the bracketed alternatives that some orders print themselves. Words supplied in this book to complete a sentence cut by a page break or a footnote are also in square brackets.
- Spelling and punctuation are as printed, including plain OCR errors such as "heilaut" for "heiland", "hemehck" for "hemelick", "Gorpus" for "Corpus" or "heiser" for "keiser". In some chapters a few plain OCR errors are corrected, as "Mariae" for the printed "Marfae". In Chapter 7 the notes say where.
- Omissions. "[…]" marks an omission. In Chapter 7 it also stands for a hymn or lesson that the order prints in full, or for text given in another section.
- Checking. Every quotation from the corpus has been checked against the database text, allowing for OCR noise: at least 90 per cent of its words must be found there in order. Its page has been checked against the edition's page markers.
- The Canon texts (Chapter 7) are Sehling's base text, with his footnote numbers, sigla, variant apparatus and page and folio markers removed. Line-break hyphens are joined. A cross (✠) marks where the print has a sign of the cross over the elements, and rubrics are in italics. The Roman comparison texts are the standard texts of the late-medieval and Tridentine Ordo Missae. The diocesan missals of the 1520s–40s differ in small details. Where a German text follows a wording that the Tridentine missal does not have, this is noted, but the wording is not attributed to a particular missal.
- The general-prayer texts (Chapter 6) are Sehling's text with his apparatus removed. "N." stands where the order leaves a name to be filled in, and "etc." where it gives only the opening of a well-known text, such as the Our Father or the Creed. Each petition is given as its rubric (a heading or direction printed with it), its bid (the words addressed to the people, "Let us pray for …") and its prayer (the words addressed to God). The witnesses are the orders that carry a family's text, named by place and year as in the workbook (Introduction).

- Texts from outside Sehling. Where a German collect renders a prayer of the Missal (Chapter 5), the Latin is given from the Roman Missal of the period. The Latin tropes of the Kyrie fons bonitatis and the Kyrie magnae Deus potentiae, which the orders name but do not print, are given in §8.6.4.7 from Analecta Hymnica Medii Aevi 47 (1905), marked as such: they are the only block quotations not taken from `eko.db`. Where Sehling's editors identify the source, this is said, and where the identification is this book's own, that is said too. The English of the Common Service and the later American Lutheran books, given in §3.4.5 for comparison, is not set as a quotation and has not been checked against the corpus.

Translations

- The English is formal-equivalence, in the idiom of the Authorized Version (thee and thou, -eth). Word order and clause structure are kept where English allows, and nothing is smoothed away. Words the translation supplies are in square brackets.
- Liturgical names keep their customary Latin or English forms: Kyrie, Gloria, Et in terra, Patrem, Sanctus, Benedicamus, Matins, Lauds, Prime, Vespers, Benedictus, Magnificat, Te Deum, the Our Father. Stock liturgical phrases are given in their familiar English: Vere dignum et iustum est is "It is very meet and right", and Oremus and "Last uns bitten" are "Let us pray". Scripture quoted in a prayer is given in the wording of the Authorized Version where the German follows the same text.
- Book titles are given in their usual English form ("the Augsburg Confession", "the Smalcald Articles"). Corpus doctrinae and norma doctrinae are left in Latin.
- A hymn named in a translation is given its title in the English Lutheran hymnals, as the Lutheran Hymn Index has it (The Lutheran Hymn Index), in quotation marks. Thus "Nun bitten wir den heiligen Geist" is "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray", and "Erhalt uns, Herr, bei deinem Wort" is "Lord, Keep Us Steadfast in Your Word". A hymn that the index does not have is translated literally: "Erbarm dich mein, o Herre Gott" is "Have mercy on me, O Lord God". Where an order quotes more of a hymn than its opening line, or names one of its stanzas, the words are translated as they stand. In the running text the German incipit is used.
- Stock terms are rendered the same way throughout:

Traditions and the Interim

Most of the orders cited are Lutheran, and they are not marked. Every order of another tradition is marked where it is cited, by its name in brackets after the order, as "Kurpfalz 1563 (Reformed)" or "Hesse 1566 (Moderate Reformed)". Orders made under or for the Augsburg Interim of 1548 are marked as Interim orders. The traditions and the Interim orders are those of the inventory in Chapter 1 (§1.3, §1.4):

- Reformed: the Swiss, Calvinist and Heidelberg churches, among them the German territories that turned Reformed after 1560 and the French and Dutch stranger churches;
- Moderate Reformed: the Bucerian and related orders that stood between the Lutheran and the Swiss Reformed: Bucer's Strasbourg and the Upper German cities before the Interim, Philip of Hesse's church to 1566, Hermann von Wied's Cologne order, Rothmann's Münster, East Frisia under John a Lasco, and Colmar after 1578;
- Philippist: the churches that held to Melanchthon's later teaching and his Corpus doctrinae and refused the Formula of Concord: the joint Hessian synods and orders of 1568–1598, Bremen 1556–1575, Nassau-Dillenburg 1575 and Anhalt 1590–1594;
- Anglican: the English exile congregation at Frankfurt;
- Bohemian Brethren (Hussite): the Unity of the Brethren in Greater Poland;
- Sandomierz consensus: the Polish synods at which Lutherans, Reformed and Brethren met together;
- Roman Catholic humanist: the Erasmian orders of Jülich-Cleves-Berg, which reform the old church without leaving it;
- Roman Catholic: the Bishop of Münster's edict of 1534 against the Anabaptists;
- Radical Reformation: Thomas Müntzer's Allstedt orders;
- Anabaptist: the Münster council's mandate of January 1534, which tolerated the Anabaptists;
- Reformed–Lutheran treaty: the East Frisian settlements of 1595 and 1599;

- Multi-confessional: the decrees of the Transylvanian diets, which received the Catholic, Lutheran, Reformed and Unitarian religions side by side. The Transylvanian Saxons' own orders, chapters and synods are Lutheran.

The mark follows the order cited, not the territory, since a territory could change its tradition:

- Strasbourg is Moderate Reformed until the Interim of 1548 and Lutheran after it. Its German Masses of 1524–1525 are Moderate Reformed, and Marbach's order of 1553 is Lutheran.
- Kurpfalz is Lutheran in 1546 and 1556 and under Ludwig VI (1576–1583), and Reformed in 1563–1576 and from 1583. Johann Casimir's Pfalz-Lautern stayed Reformed under Ludwig VI.
- Hesse is Moderate Reformed under Philip (to 1566) and Philippist under his sons. After the division, Hessen-Kassel turned Reformed (1605) and Hessen-Darmstadt stayed Lutheran.
- Bremen is Philippist from 1556 to 1575 and Reformed from 1582.
- Nassau-Dillenburg is Lutheran to 1570, Philippist in 1575 and Reformed from 1581.
- Anhalt is Philippist in 1590–1594 and Reformed from 1596.
- Pfalz-Zweibrücken is Lutheran until 1588, and Pfalz-Simmern until it fell to the Electoral Palatinate in 1598.

Where an order could be counted either Moderate Reformed or Philippist, it is counted Moderate Reformed. Some further distinctions:

- "Philippist" also names a party within the Lutheran churches, as in Electoral Saxony before 1574. An order is marked " (Philippist)" only where the inventory counts it so.
- The family names of the Mass in Chapter 2 (§2.4) are names of liturgical shape. "Upper German" there means the south-western Lutheran service of Württemberg and its copies, not the Moderate Reformed Upper German Reformation of Bucer's circle.
- The orders that took over Müntzer's German propers (Erfurt 1525, Calenberg-Göttingen 1542, Lippe 1571) are Lutheran. Only Müntzer's own Allstedt orders are marked.
- Some Lutheran orders took the Reformed line on images, vestments or vessels: Lichtenberg 1579, Sponheim 1590/91, the Upper Palatine visitation of 1579 and Nassau-Weilburg 1617. They are Lutheran orders, and the text says where they agree with the Reformed.
- Swiss sources outside the corpus (Zürich 1525, Basel 1526, Geneva) are Reformed.

Abbreviations

- Confessional writings (Chapter 17 and elsewhere): CA = the Augsburg Confession (1530); CA variata = Melanchthon's altered edition of 1540; Apol = the Apology of the Augsburg Confession; SA = the Smalcald Articles; SC and LC = Luther's Small and Large Catechisms; FC = the Formula of Concord (1577); BoC = the Book of Concord (1580); CPhil = the Corpus doctrinae Philippicum (1560); KO = Kirchenordnung, church order.
- The parts of the Mass, in the tables of Chapter 2: Intr. (the introit, or the hymn in its place), Ky. (Kyrie), Gl. (Gloria), Coll. (collect), Ep. (epistle), Grad. (gradual, alleluia, sequence, or the hymn after the epistle), Gosp. (gospel), Cr. (creed), Serm. (sermon), Exh. (exhortation to the communicants), Pref. (Preface), San. (Sanctus), PN (Lord's Prayer), Verba (Words of Institution), Agn. (Agnus Dei), Comm. (distribution), Thanks. (postcommunion collect or thanksgiving), Bl. (blessing). Brackets mark a part that the order allows but does not require, and "→" separates the parts.
- Traditions, in the tables of Chapter 1: L = Lutheran; R = Reformed; MR = Moderate Reformed (Bucerian and Upper German); PH = Philippist; A = Anglican; H = Hussite (Unity of the Bohemian Brethren); C = Sandomierz consensus (Lutheran, Reformed and Brethren together); R/L = Reformed and Lutheran (treaty between the two); RCH = Roman Catholic humanist (Erasmian reform); RC = Roman Catholic; RAD = Radical Reformation (Müntzer); ANA = Anabaptist (civic toleration of the Anabaptists); T = multi-confessional diet decree (Catholic, Lutheran, Reformed and Unitarian received side by side).

The inventory tables of Chapter 1

- No. is the number Sehling, or the later editor, gives the text within its territory. Volumes 1–5 number their registers in their own way, and their numbers are given as they stand.
- Order is the title as Sehling's tables of contents give it. For volumes 1–5 the titles come from the chronological register at the end of each volume. Long titles are shortened, and "…" marks the cut. Spelling is as printed, including OCR errors.

- Date is the year in the title or in the register. A few undated texts are dated from the text or from the editor's introduction or notes, as the notes column says. "n.d." means no single year is known.
- Sehling gives the volume and the page where the text begins. For volume 14 it is sometimes the introduction page where Sehling only describes the order.
- Doc is the record in `eko.db` that holds that page (Introduction).
- Kind is assigned from the words of the title (§1.2.4).
- Trad. gives the tradition, in the codes listed under Abbreviations.
- Interim / notes marks the Interim orders and texts tied to the Interim (§1.4), and adds notes such as the reigning prince.

Chapter 1. The Church Orders: An Inventory by Tradition

This chapter lists every order that Sehling's Die evangelischen Kirchenordnungen des XVI. Jahrhunderts prints, volume by volume and territory by territory: 2,581 texts in 24 volumes (30 parts). For each order it gives:

- its number in Sehling, its title, and its date;
- the page in Sehling and the `eko.db` document that holds the text;
- what kind of order it is (church order, agenda, visitation order, mandate, and so on);
- the confessional tradition it belongs to: Lutheran, Reformed, Moderate Reformed (Bucer's circle and the Upper German cities), Philippist, Anglican, Hussite, and a few others;
- whether it is an Interim order, or otherwise tied to the Augsburg Interim of 1548.

Confessional traditions and Interim orders

Sehling's title calls these the evangelical church orders, and most of them are Lutheran: 1,950 of the 2,581 texts. The rest belong to other traditions:

- Reformed (340): the Swiss, Calvinist and Heidelberg churches, among them the German territories that turned Reformed after 1560 and the French and Dutch stranger churches;
- Moderate Reformed (198): the Bucerian and related orders that stood between the Lutheran and the Swiss Reformed: Bucer's Strasbourg and the Upper German cities before the Interim, Philip of Hesse's church to 1566, Hermann von Wied's Cologne order, Rothmann's Münster, East Frisia under John a Lasco, and Colmar after 1578;
- Philippist (33): the churches that held to Melanchthon's later teaching and his Corpus doctrinae and refused the Formula of Concord: the joint Hessian synods and orders of 1568-1598, Bremen 1556-1575, Nassau-Dillenburg 1575 and Anhalt 1590-1594;
- a few others: Anglican (the English exile congregation at Frankfurt), the Bohemian Brethren (Hussite), the Sandomierz consensus of Lutherans, Reformed and Brethren in Poland, the Roman Catholic humanist orders of Jülich-Cleves-Berg, Thomas Müntzer's orders (Radical Reformation), one Roman Catholic and one Anabaptist-toleration text from Münster, two Reformed-Lutheran treaties in East Frisia, and the multi-confessional Transylvanian diet decrees.

A territory's tradition can change from one order to the next: Kurpfalz is Lutheran in 1556 and Reformed in 1563, and Strasbourg Moderate Reformed before the Interim of 1548 and Lutheran after it. This chapter gives the tradition of every order (§1.3 defines them). Where an order could be counted either Moderate Reformed or Philippist, it is counted Moderate Reformed. The chapter also lists the few Interim orders and the texts tied to the Augsburg Interim (§1.4).

The other chapters mark every order of another tradition, and every Interim order, where they cite it (Conventions).

Layout

- §1.1 summarizes the findings.
- §1.2 sets out the scope, the method and the cautions.
- §1.3 defines the traditions and says where each is found.
- §1.4 lists the Interim orders and the other texts tied to the Interim.
- §1.5 is a table of the territories at a glance.
- §§1.6-1.35 are the inventory itself, one section per volume. Each territory has a short note on its confessional history, followed by a table of its orders.

The columns of the inventory tables and the codes for the traditions are explained in the Conventions.

1.1 Summary of findings

1. The set holds 2,581 orders. Sehling took "church order" in the widest sense (§1.2.1). The set therefore includes far more than the great church orders and agendas:

Kind	Texts
Church order	333

Kind	Texts
Agenda / liturgy	271
Visitation	346
Mandate / decree	436
Consistory / synod / government	265
Discipline / police	178
Marriage	90
Poor relief	82
School / university	65
Catechism / instruction	44
Monastery / chapter	46
Appointment / oath	59
Treaty / agreement	77
Articles / statutes	45
Local order	59
Confession / doctrine	31
Property / endowment	6
Other	148

The full church orders (333) and the agendas and other liturgical orders (271) together make up about a quarter of the set. Many of the rest are visitation orders, mandates, consistory and synod orders, and orders on marriage, discipline, schools and the poor.

2. Most of the orders are Lutheran. By tradition:

Tradition	Code	Texts
Lutheran	L	1950
Reformed	R	340
Moderate Reformed (Bucerian and Upper German)	MR	198
Philippist	PH	33
Anglican	A	1
Hussite (Unity of the Bohemian Brethren)	H	3
Sandomierz consensus (Lutheran, Reformed and Brethren together)	C	6
Reformed and Lutheran (treaty between the two)	R/L	2
Roman Catholic humanist (Erasmian reform)	RCH	18
Roman Catholic	RC	1
Radical Reformation (Müntzer)	RAD	3
Anabaptist (civic toleration of the Anabaptists)	ANA	1
Multi-confessional diet decree (Catholic, Lutheran, Reformed and Unitarian received side by side)	T	25

- Lutheran (1,950): Saxony, Brandenburg, Prussia, Pomerania, the Baltic, Mecklenburg, the Hanse towns, Lower Saxony, Franconia, Württemberg, Hohenlohe and most of the imperial cities after 1552.
- Reformed (340): above all the Electoral Palatinate (from 1561/63) and the "Second Reformation" counties of the Wetterau and the Rhine (Nassau-Dillenburg, Hanau-Münzenberg, Ysenburg, Solms-Braunfels, Sayn, Wied, Wittgenstein, Moers, Bentheim-Tecklenburg), Pfalz-Zweibrücken (1588), Pfalz-Simmern (1598, under the Electoral Palatinate), Hessen-Kassel (1600/1605), Lippe (1600), Anhalt (1596), Bremen (from 1580), Emden and the East Frisian Reformed congregations, the London Dutch church, Mülhausen (Mulhouse), and the French refugee churches of Frankfurt, Wetzlar and the Lebertal.
- Moderate Reformed (198): Bucer's Strasbourg and the Upper German cities before the Interim (Konstanz, Ulm, Esslingen, Augsburg, Memmingen, Lindau, Isny, Biberach, Gengenbach, Landau, Worms, early Frankfurt); Philip's Hesse to 1566; Hermann von Wied's Cologne Reformation (1543-1546); Rothmann's Münster (1532/33); East Frisia under Countess Anna; Colmar after 1578, whose pastors came from Basel.
- Philippist (33): the joint Hessian synods and orders of 1568-1582 and the Hessian orders that followed them to 1598; Bremen (1556-1575); Nassau-Dillenburg (1575); Anhalt (1590-1594).
- Anglican (1): the order of the English exile congregation at Frankfurt, the "Old Discipline" and "New Discipline" of 1557 (§1.3.4).
- Hussite (3): the order of the Unity of the Bohemian Brethren (synod of Zerawitz, 1616) and the privileges for the Brethren's congregations at Ostroróg (1569) and Lissa (1580), in Greater Poland (§1.3.5). Six more Polish texts belong to the Sandomierz consensus of 1570, in which Lutherans, Reformed and Brethren joined.
- Others, each labelled with its own affiliation (§1.3.6):
  - Roman Catholic humanist (Erasmian) (18): the church orders of Jülich-Cleves-Berg;
  - Roman Catholic (1): the Bishop of Münster's edict against the Anabaptists (1534);
  - Radical Reformation (3): Thomas Müntzer's Allstedt orders;
  - Anabaptist (1): the Münster council's mandate of January 1534 that let each keep his faith and so recognized the Anabaptists;
  - Multi-confessional (25): the decrees of the Transylvanian diets;
  - Reformed and Lutheran (2): two East Frisian treaties between the Lutheran count and Reformed Emden.
- Not in the set: no order of the Waldensians, Lollards, Utraquists, Schwenckfelders, Hutterites, Mennonites or Antitrinitarians. Anabaptists, Schwenckfelders, Davidjorists, Mennonites and "Sakramentierer" appear only as the targets of some thirty mandates, which are coded by the authority that issued them.

3. Almost no Interim orders. Sehling deliberately left out the orders made under the Augsburg Interim of 1548 (§1.2.2). Only four Interim orders proper are in the set (§1.4):

- the Brandenburg-Ansbach "Mehrung der vorigen kirchenordnung" (the "Auctuarium") of 1548, printed "because of its special importance";
- the East Frisian Interim order of 16 July 1549, printed in the editor's introduction;
- the Württemberg Interim mandate of 1548;
- the Biberach council's mandate after accepting the Interim (1548).

16 further texts are tied to the Interim in other ways: issued under it, about it, or ending it (§1.4).

4. Tradition followed the ruler, and changed with him. Many territories changed tradition within the century, and their orders change with them:

- Electoral Palatinate: Lutheran → Reformed (1561/63) → Lutheran (1577) → Reformed (1583).
- Upper Palatinate: Lutheran → Reformed (1559) → Lutheran (1577) → Reformed (1583).
- Nassau-Dillenburg: Lutheran → Philippist (1573) → Reformed (1578).
- Bremen: Lutheran → Philippist (1562) → Reformed (1580).
- Hanau-Münzenberg (1595), Sayn (1605), Lippe (1600), Pfalz-Zweibrücken (1588), Wittgenstein (about 1574), Moers (1578) and Bentheim-Tecklenburg (1580s): Lutheran → Reformed.
- Ysenburg: Ronneburg-Kelsterbach was Reformed 1584-1597, then Lutheran again; Birstein became Reformed in 1596.
- The Upper German cities: Upper German before the Interim, Lutheran afterwards.

1.2 Scope, sources and cautions

1.2.1 What Sehling counted as a church order

Sehling took the term in its widest sense, to cover every ordinance that regulated church affairs. Sehling, preface to vol. 1, 1902 (Sehling 1, p. VIII):

> Wir fassen daher für unsere Sammlung den Begriff „Kirchen-Ordnung“im weitesten Sinne des Wortes und verstehen darunter alle zur Regelung der kirchlichen Verhältnisse bestimmten Verfügungen (mit Ausnahme natürlich der nur vorübergehenden Einzelzwecken dienenden Anordnungen).

We therefore take the term "church order" for our collection in the widest sense of the word, and understand by it all ordinances made for the regulation of church affairs (excepting, of course, those orders that served merely passing and particular ends).

1.2.2 What he left out: half measures and the Interim

Sehling also excluded orders that were never in force, and the "half measures" of wavering rulers. Sehling, preface to vol. 1, 1902 (Sehling 1, p. XV):

> Ferner werden nur die wahrhaft evangelischen Kirchen-Ordnungen gebracht werden. Ausgenommen sind die halben Massregeln, wie sie schwankende Obrigkeiten zur Beschwichtigung der Gemüther, oder wohl auch im Bestreben, Reformen einzuführen, getroffen haben, ohne dass es jedoch eigentlich evangelische Ordnungen geworden wären. Insonderheit gedenke ich nicht abzudrucken die Interims-Kirchen-Ordnungen.

Furthermore, only the truly evangelical church orders will be given. Excepted are the half measures that wavering authorities made to calm men's minds, or perhaps in an effort to bring in reforms, without their ever becoming truly evangelical orders. In particular I do not intend to print the Interim church orders.

He held to this for Saxony, where the great Interim agenda of 1549 is only described. Sehling, introduction to Albertine Saxony (Sehling 1, p. 102):

> Die Zeit des Interims wird in unserer Sammlung nur gestreift, und es wird daher auch die in diese Zeit fallende grosse Ordnung, die, ein Produkt der Noth und der Nachgiebigkeit, nicht als eine rein evangelische Ordnung bezeichnet werden kann, hier nicht weiter behandelt.

The period of the Interim is only touched on in our collection, and so the great order that falls in that period is not treated further here either: a product of necessity and of yielding, it cannot be called a purely evangelical order.

His successors kept the rule, with one deliberate exception. Brandenburg-Ansbach-Kulmbach, editor's introduction (Sehling 11, p. 291):

> Obwohl im allgemeinen Interimsordnungen in diese Ausgabe nicht aufgenommen werden sollen, wird diese ihrer besonderen Bedeutung wegen doch als Nr. IV 4 zum Abdruck gebracht.

Although Interim orders are in general not to be taken into this edition, this one is nevertheless printed as no. IV 4 because of its special importance.

Later volumes also print Reformed, Erasmian and multi-confessional orders: the Reformed Palatinate and the Wetterau counties, the Jülich orders, the Transylvanian diets. The inventory follows the volumes as they stand.

1.2.3 How the list was made

- The list of texts. It is taken from each volume's own table of contents (volumes 6-24) or chronological register (volumes 1-5).
  - Where the scanned contents page is unusable, the titles were read from the running heads of the texts. This applies to Oldenburg and Jever in vol. 7/2.1.
  - The registers of volumes 1-5 list orders printed "ganz oder theilweise", in whole or in part. They therefore include some orders printed only in extract within an introduction.

    - Volume 14 (Kurpfalz) lists, among its texts, some orders that Sehling only describes in his introduction. These are marked "described in the introduction only".
    - Introductions, registers and editorial chapters are left out.
- Tradition. It is assigned by territory and date, following the editors' introductions. Each territory's note in §§1.6-1.35 gives its confessional history and the dates of change; each order takes the tradition of its territory at its date. Where an order belongs to a group with another tradition, it is marked individually. Examples:
    - a refugee congregation in a Lutheran city;
    - Hessen-Darmstadt orders within divided Hesse;
    - Solms-Braunfels within Solms;
    - the Lemgo recess of 1617, which guaranteed the town's Lutheran confession within Reformed Lippe.
- Interim. Texts are marked from their titles and from the editors' introductions (§1.4).

1.2.4 Kinds

The Kind column sorts the orders by the main word of the title. The kinds are:

- Church order: Kirchenordnung, Agenda das ist Kirchenordnung, Reformation, ordinatio;
- Agenda / liturgy: Agende, Messe, Gottesdienst, Taufe, Trauung, Abendmahl, Gesang, Gebet, Litanei, Vesper, Beichte, Busse, Ordination;
- Visitation: visitation orders and recesses, general articles;
- Consistory / synod / government: consistory, synod, church council, superintendent, classis, presbytery, ministerium, church officers;
- Marriage, School / university, Poor relief, Monastery / chapter, Appointment / oath, Confession / doctrine, Catechism / instruction, Treaty / agreement, Property / endowment;
- Articles / statutes: articles, instructions, leges, statutes;
- Discipline / police: Zucht, Polizei, Sonntag, Feiertag, Täufer, Landordnung;
- Mandate / decree: Mandat, Edikt, Befehl, Ausschreiben, Verordnung;
- Local order: an "Ordnung für" a town or village without further description;
- Other.

Large church orders contain agendas, catechisms and much else besides. The Kind column gives only the leading character of the title. Search the text in `eko.db` for the parts of a large order.

1.2.5 Cautions

- Coding by territory. The tradition codes follow the territory and its ruler. They do not judge each text's theology; a Lutheran territory's marriage or poor-law order is coded L.

- Moderate Reformed and Philippist. The orders that stood between the Lutheran and the Reformed are divided into two groups (§1.3.3):

    - Moderate Reformed: Bucer's Strasbourg and the Upper German Zwinglian-Bucerian cities; Philip of Hesse's church, which stood within the Wittenberg Concord but bore Bucer's stamp; Hermann von Wied's Cologne order; and the other orders of Bucer's sphere;
    - Philippist: the churches that held to Melanchthon's later teaching and his Corpus doctrinae and would not accept the Formula of Concord: the joint Hessian synods, Bremen, Nassau-Dillenburg and Anhalt, each on its way to the Reformed.

    Where an order could be placed in either group, it is counted as Moderate Reformed. Use the territory notes for the finer distinctions.

- Early orders (1522-1530) come before the confessional lines were fixed. They are coded by what the territory became; Müntzer's orders are coded as radical.

- Pages and dates. Some come from OCR of contents pages and registers. Where a register's page was plainly wrong, it was checked against the text; a few may still be out by a page or two.

- Doc is the `eko.db` document holding the start page. One database record may hold several orders, and one order may run over several records.

1.3 The traditions

1.3.1 Lutheran (L)

Orders of territories and cities that held to the Augsburg Confession in its Lutheran reading, from the Wittenberg orders of the 1520s to the Formula of Concord and after. 1,950 texts. Volumes 3, 5, 6/1, 6/2, 7/2.1, 11, 15, 16 and 23 are wholly Lutheran, and volume 1 is too, save Müntzer's three orders. Lutheran orders are a minority only in volumes 8 (Hesse, coded Moderate Reformed and Philippist), 10 (Nassau, Hanau, Ysenburg), 14 and 19/2 (Kurpfalz), 20/1 (Strasbourg) and 20/2 (Alsace).

1.3.2 Reformed (R)

Orders of churches that took the Reformed (Swiss, Calvinist or Heidelberg) confession. Most belong to the "Second Reformation" of German territories that turned from Lutheran to Reformed after 1560. The rest are refugee and stranger churches (French, Dutch, Walloon) and the Swiss-allied city of Mülhausen.

- Principality of Anhalt (Sehling 2, §1.7): 3 texts, 1596-1599.
- Greater Poland (Posen): synods, the Bohemian Brethren and the towns (Sehling 4, §1.9): 3 texts, 1560-1561.
- East Frisia: Reformed orders of limited range (Norden, Emden, Leer, Lütetsburg; London) (Sehling 7/1, §1.13): 15 texts, 1528-1606.
- City of Bremen (Sehling 7/2.2, §1.15): 13 texts, 1582-1616.
- Divided Hesse (1582-1618) (Sehling 9, §1.17): 11 texts, 1600-1618.
- County of Solms (Sehling 9, §1.17): 7 texts, 1582-1616.
- Imperial city of Frankfurt (Sehling 9, §1.17): 2 texts, 1554-1585.
- Imperial city of Wetzlar (Sehling 9, §1.17): 2 texts, 1586-1596.
- Nassau-Dillenburg (Sehling 10, §1.18): 14 texts, 1581-1618.
- County of Hanau-Münzenberg (Sehling 10, §1.18): 24 texts, 1596-1614.
- County of Ysenburg (Sehling 10, §1.18): 12 texts, 1580-1614.
- Upper Palatinate (Electoral Palatinate) (Sehling 13, §1.21): 13 texts, 1566-1615.
- Electoral Palatinate (Kurpfalz) (Sehling 14, §1.22): 67 texts, 1561-1615.
- Duchy of Pfalz-Zweibrücken (Sehling 18, §1.27): 13 texts, 1588-1617.
- County of Sayn (Sehling 19/1, §1.28): 3 texts, 1606-1619.
- County of Wied (Sehling 19/1, §1.28): 8 texts, 1564-1619.
- Electoral Palatinate (supplement to vol. 14) (Sehling 19/2, §1.29): 65 texts, 1577-1610.
- Principality of Pfalz-Simmern (Sehling 19/2, §1.29): 2 texts, 1598.
- Lordship of Rappoltstein (Sehling 20/2, §1.31): 10 texts, 1558-1569.
- Imperial city of Mülhausen (Mulhouse) (Sehling 20/2, §1.31): 27 texts, 1523-1582.
- County of Lippe (Sehling 21, §1.32): 1 text, 1600.
- Archbishopric of Cologne (Sehling 22, §1.33): 2 texts, 1583.
- County of Wittgenstein (Sehling 22, §1.33): 10 texts, 1579-1611.
- County of Moers (Sehling 22, §1.33): 3 texts, 1581-1603.
- County of Bentheim-Tecklenburg (Sehling 22, §1.33): 10 texts, 1601-1619.

1.3.3 Moderate Reformed (MR) and Philippist (PH)

Between the Lutheran and the Swiss Reformed stood two groups of orders. They are coded apart, and where an order could belong to either, it is counted as Moderate Reformed.

Moderate Reformed (MR), 198 texts: the Bucerian and Upper German orders, and others close to them:

- the Upper German Reformation of Bucer, Capito, Blarer and Zwick in the southern imperial cities before the Interim;

- Philip of Hesse's church, which bore Bucer's stamp. Bucer had a decisive share in the orders of 1539, and Philip's testament gave the Wittenberg Concord, Bucer's work, almost confessional weight. The editors place the Kirchenordnung of 1566 in the Strasbourg sphere;
- Hermann von Wied's Cologne order (written by Bucer and Melanchthon);
- a few early evangelical orders that moved toward Zurich (Rothmann's Münster) or took their pastors from Basel and ended Reformed (Colmar after 1578), and East Frisia under Countess Anna and John a Lasco.
- East Frisia: comital orders (Sehling 7/1, §1.13): 1 text, 1545.
- Landgraviate of Hesse under Philip (to 1567) (Sehling 8, §1.16): 21 texts, 1526-1566.
- Imperial city of Frankfurt (Sehling 9, §1.17): 4 texts, 1530-1533.
- Imperial city of Augsburg (Sehling 12, §1.20): 13 texts, 1523-1548.
- Imperial city of Lindau (Sehling 12, §1.20): 3 texts, 1533-1539.
- Imperial city of Memmingen (Sehling 12, §1.20): 4 texts, 1528-1542.
- Imperial city of Konstanz (Sehling 17/1, §1.25): 19 texts, 1524-1548.
- Imperial city of Isny (Sehling 17/1, §1.25): 2 texts, 1533-1544.
- Imperial city of Gengenbach (Sehling 17/1, §1.25): 8 texts, 1538-1545.
- Imperial city of Ulm (Sehling 17/2, §1.26): 15 texts, 1528-1544.
- Imperial city of Esslingen (Sehling 17/2, §1.26): 34 texts, 1531-1547.
- Imperial city of Biberach an der Riß (Sehling 17/2, §1.26): 3 texts, 1531-1548.
- Imperial city of Landau (Sehling 19/1, §1.28): 5 texts, 1526-1554.
- Imperial city of Worms (Sehling 19/1, §1.28): 3 texts, 1524-1543.
- Imperial city of Strasbourg (Sehling 20/1, §1.30): 46 texts, 1523-1548.
- Imperial city of Colmar (Sehling 20/2, §1.31): 12 texts, 1578-1615.
- Archbishopric of Cologne (Sehling 22, §1.33): 1 text, 1546.
- City of Münster (Sehling 22, §1.33): 4 texts, 1532-1533.

Philippist (PH), 33 texts: churches that held to Melanchthon's later teaching and his Corpus doctrinae of 1560, and would not accept the Formula of Concord. Most of them later turned Reformed:

- the joint synods of the Hessian landgraviates (1568-1582), which took the Wittenberg Corpus doctrinae as their norm, and the Hessian orders that followed to 1598;
- Bremen, from Albert Hardenberg's dispute (1556) to the Reformed turn of 1580;
- Nassau-Dillenburg's Agende of 1575, which binds the pastors to the Augsburg Confession and the Examen of Philip Melanchthon;
- Anhalt under Prince Johann Georg before the Reformed turn of 1596.
- Principality of Anhalt (Sehling 2, §1.7): 2 texts, 1590-1594.
- City of Bremen (Sehling 7/2.2, §1.15): 9 texts, 1556-1575.
- The Hessian landgraviates: joint synods and orders (1567-1582) (Sehling 8, §1.16): 16 texts, 1568-1582.

- Divided Hesse (1582-1618) (Sehling 9, §1.17): 5 texts, 1574-1598.
- Nassau-Dillenburg (Sehling 10, §1.18): 1 text, 1575.

1.3.4 Anglican (A)

One order in the set is Anglican: the "Old Discipline" and "New Discipline" of the English exile congregation at Frankfurt (1557). It was founded in 1554 by Marian exiles under Whittingham and John Knox. In 1555 a second group under Richard Cox, loyal to the Book of Common Prayer, took the lead and drove Knox out. Frankfurt, editor's introduction (Sehling 9, p. 492):

> Obwohl die englische Gemeinde nach Wegzug der Knox'schen Fraktion durchweg anglikanischen Charakter besaß, lässt die New Discipline innerhalb des bestehenden Rahmens des Second Book of Common Prayer Züge gemeindlicher Weiterentwicklung erkennen.

Although, after the departure of Knox's faction, the English congregation was thoroughly Anglican in character, the New Discipline shows traits of congregational development within the existing framework of the Second Book of Common Prayer.

- Imperial city of Frankfurt (Sehling 9, §1.17): 1 text, 1557.

Sehling calls the congregation "englisch-reformiert". It is coded A here because the editor shows that its order was framed within the Prayer Book.

Two related orders are coded R:

- the order of John a Lasco's Dutch stranger church in London under Edward VI, in Micron's German abridgement (Sehling 7/1, p. 579);
- the French Reformed congregation's Liturgia sacra of 1554 at Frankfurt (Sehling 9, p. 562). Frankfurt also required the English congregation to use it.

1.3.5 Hussite: the Bohemian Brethren (H), and the Sandomierz consensus (C)

The Hussite tradition reaches the set through the Unity of the Brethren (Unitas Fratrum) in Greater Poland. Greater Poland, Sehling's introduction (Sehling 4, p. 248):

> In Polen verbreitete sich sowohl die lutherische als auch die reformirte Lehre gleichzeitig. Daneben entstanden Gemeinden der böhmischen Brüder in grösserer Zahl.

In Poland both the Lutheran and the Reformed teaching spread at the same time. Alongside them arose congregations of the Bohemian Brethren in large numbers.

The Brethren had united with the Little Polish Reformed at Koźminek in 1555. In 1570, at Sandomierz, they joined with the Reformed and the Lutherans in a common Consensus. Sehling prints the Ostroróg privilege because of the town's place in the Unity. Greater Poland, Sehling's introduction (Sehling 4, p. 254):

> Da Ostrorog die Hauptgemeinde der Unität war und Sitz des Seniors, soll dieses Privileg nach einer mir gütigst zur Verfügung gestellten Übersetzung abgedruckt werden.

Since Ostroróg was the chief congregation of the Unity and the seat of the senior, this privilege shall be printed from a translation kindly placed at my disposal.

The Brethren (H):

- Greater Poland (Posen): synods, the Bohemian Brethren and the towns (Sehling 4, §1.9): 3 texts, 1569-1616.
  - Kirchenordnung der Böhmischen Brüder (1616; Sehling 4, p. 273).
  - Privileg für Lissa (1580; Sehling 4, p. 298).
  - Privileg für Ostrorog (1569; Sehling 4, p. 299).

The Sandomierz consensus and its general synods (C):

- Synode von Sendomir (1570; Sehling 4, p. 257).

- Synode von Posen (1570; Sehling 4, p. 258).
- Synode von Krakau (1573; Sehling 4, p. 260).
- Synode von Petrikau (1578; Sehling 4, p. 262).
- Synode von Wladislaw (1583; Sehling 4, p. 263).
- Synode von Thorn (1595; Sehling 4, p. 265).

The synods of Xions (1560) and Pińczów (1561) belong to the Little Polish Reformed church united with the Brethren, and are coded R. The Lutheran synod of Gostyń (1565) and the town orders of Fraustadt are coded L.

The Brethren's order of 1616 was adopted by their general synod at Zerawitz in Moravia; Sehling prints it for the Polish congregations. No Utraquist order is in the set.

1.3.6 Others

- Roman Catholic humanist, Erasmian reform (RCH). The church orders of Duke Johann III of Jülich-Cleves-Berg (1532/33) and their successors. They reform the old church on humanist lines without leaving it (Sehling 21; §1.32.1).
- Multi-confessional diet decrees (T). The decrees of the Transylvanian diets (1552-1619) regulate a principality that received the Lutheran, Reformed, Unitarian and Catholic religions side by side. The Transylvanian Saxons' own orders are Lutheran. The Consensus doctrinae of 1557 is also coded L (Sehling 24; §1.35).
- Radical Reformation (RAD). Thomas Müntzer's German church office, German evangelical Mass and order of the German service at Allstedt (1523/24). They are coded apart from the Lutheran orders around them in vol. 1.
- Anabaptist (ANA). The Münster council and guild masters' mandate of 31 January 1534, three weeks before the Anabaptist council was elected. It bound the citizens to let each keep his faith, and so recognized the Anabaptists as a religious group in the city (Sehling 22, p. 363). It is not an order made by Anabaptists: no Anabaptist church order is in the set.
- Roman Catholic (RC). Bishop Franz von Waldeck's edict of 3 February 1534 against the "verdampte ketterye unnde secte der wedderdoep" (Sehling 22, p. 364).
- Groups with no order in the set. There are no orders of the Waldensians (named only in passing, by Luther and in the editors' notes), the Lollards, the Utraquists, the Schwenckfelders, the Hutterites, the Mennonites or the Antitrinitarians. Mandates against Anabaptists, Schwenckfelders, Davidjorists, Mennonites and "Sakramentierer" are coded by the authority that issued them: Lutheran, Reformed, Moderate Reformed or, in Jülich, Roman Catholic humanist.
- Treaty (R/L). The East Frisian Delfzijl settlement of 1595 and the Concordats of 1599, between the Lutheran count and Reformed Emden.

1.4 The Interim orders

The Augsburg Interim of 1548 imposed a largely Catholic order on the Protestant estates until a final council, allowing only the chalice and clerical marriage. The Leipzig Interim (1548/49) was Electoral Saxony's milder version. As §1.2.2 shows, Sehling meant to print no Interim orders. Those in the set fall into four groups:

- Interim order: an order made to put the Interim into effect, or to adapt a territory's order to it;
- under the Interim: a text issued while the Interim was in force, not itself an Interim order;
- on the Interim: a text about the Interim, such as a response, a settlement or a protest;
- after the Interim or end of the Interim: a text that ends or repairs it.

Several orders of the set are described but not printed because they are Interim orders:

- the Saxon (Leipzig) Interim agenda of 1549 (Sehling 1, p. 102; Sehling 2, pp. 501-505);
- the planned Hamburg Interim church order (Sehling 5, p. 484);
- the Brandenburg Interim order (Sehling 3, pp. 12, 177);
- the Göttingen "KO unter dem Interim" of 1550 (Sehling 6/2, p. 904);
- the Nuremberg Interim agenda (Sehling 11, pp. 328, 482);
- the Augsburg Interim forms (Sehling 12, p. 28);
- the draft of a Prussian church order "auf der Grundlage des Interims" (Sehling 4, p. 22).

Some cities kept Interim usages long after 1552. Schwäbisch Hall kept its Interim order until 1559 (Sehling 17/1, p. 34), and in Ansbach-Kulmbach the Mass vestment stayed "als Rest der Interimszeit" (Sehling 11, p. 292).

1.15.3 City of Bremen

- Tradition: Lutheran; Philippist from 1562; Reformed from 1580.
- Note: Lutheran from 1525; the dispute over Albert Hardenberg, a pupil of Melanchthon (1556-1562), led to a Philippist church (1562-1579) and from 1580 to the 'Second Reformation'.
- Texts by tradition: Lutheran 16, Reformed 13, Philippist 9.

1.16 Volume 8: Hesse I

37 texts.

1.16.1 Landgraviate of Hesse under Philip (to 1567)

- Tradition: Moderate Reformed.
- Note: Philip's church stood within the Wittenberg Concord but bore Bucer's stamp (Ziegenhain and Kassel, 1539), and the Kirchenordnung of 1566 belongs to the Strasbourg sphere; here counted as Moderate Reformed.

1.29.2 Principality of Pfalz-Simmern

- Tradition: Lutheran; Reformed from 1598. Duke Reichard held to the Augsburg Confession until his death on 14 January 1598, when the principality fell to the Electoral Palatinate. The two mandates of 1598 were issued from Heidelberg under Elector Frederick IV, and the first ordered the churches cleared "im reformierten Sinne" (Sehling 19/2, p. 656).

Chapter 2. The Order of the Mass

This chapter compares the order of the Mass (ordo missae, Ordnung des Amts, Ordnung des Nachtmahls) in the evangelical church orders printed in Emil Sehling's Die evangelischen Kirchenordnungen des XVI. Jahrhunderts. Other chapters of this book treat the parts of the Mass one by one. This chapter puts them back together. It asks:

- The whole ordo. What sequence of parts did each order prescribe, from the opening to the dismissal? Which orders kept the shape of the Roman Mass, and which built a new service around the sermon?
- Families. Which orders copied which? Where do the main types of evangelical Mass come from?
- The ordinaries. What happened to the fixed parts (the Kyrie, Gloria, Creed, Sanctus and Agnus Dei), and to the fixed dialogues and formulas around them (the salutation, the Preface dialogue, the Pax, the Ite missa est)? In particular:
  - Was the Kyrie sung three, four or nine times? Were the old seasonal Kyrie chants kept?
  - Who intoned the Gloria and the Creed? Which creed was sung?
  - Was the Sanctus sung with or without the Benedictus, and where did it fall?
  - How many times was the Agnus Dei sung, and how did it end?
  - What took the place of the Ite missa est?
- The service without communicants. What remained of the Mass when nobody came to the Lord's Table?

How the chapter is laid out.

- §2.1 summarizes the findings, and §2.2 sets out the scope, the method and what was not found.
- §2.3 sets the baselines: the Roman ordo, and Luther's Formula missae (1523) and Deutsche Messe (1526).
- §2.4 describes the families of evangelical ordo, and §2.5 compares them in a table.
- §§2.6–2.13 take the ordinaries and fixed formulas in order: Kyrie (§2.6), Gloria (§2.7), salutation, collect and Pax (§2.8), Creed (§2.9), Preface and Sanctus (§2.10), the Lord's Prayer and the Words of Institution (§2.11), Agnus Dei (§2.12), and the dismissal and blessing (§2.13).
- §2.14 deals with the Sunday service when nobody communicated.
- §2.15 gathers the ceremonial: the sign of the cross, kneeling, bowing, hats, hands, turning, places at the altar, the kiss of peace and incense.
- §2.16 is a concordance of the orders quoted.

Related chapters. This chapter refers to the others constantly. They hold the detail:

- the opening versicles, the confession and absolution, and the exhortation to communicants: Chapter 3;
- the introit, the lessons, the gradual, alleluia and sequence, the offertory, the Proper Prefaces and the communion chant: Chapter 4;
- the collect, the secret and the postcommunion: Chapter 5;
- the hymns sung in each slot, including the German, troped and paraphrased ordinaries ("Allein Gott", "Wir glauben all", "Jesaia dem Propheten", "Christe du Lamm Gottes"): Chapter 8, §§8.6–8.15;
- the canon, the Words of Institution and the elevation, order by order, in the early German Masses and their successors: Chapter 7;
- the sermon, its place and its length: Chapter 11;
- the general prayer of the church: Chapter 6;
- the Litany and the bidding prayers at the Mass: Chapter 13, §13.21;
- the organ in alternation with the choir: Chapter 9, §9.3;
- vestments, lights and the elevation as marks of the feast: Chapter 14 and Chapter 12, §12.10.

2.1 Summary of findings

1. Two baselines, not one (§2.3). Luther left two Masses, and the orders descend from both.

- The Formula missae (1523): the Latin Mass with the offertory and canon cut and the Words of Institution sung in the Preface; the ordinaries kept "with various melodies for the various seasons"; Benedicamus for Ite missa est.
- The Deutsche Messe (1526): German hymns for the introit and the chants; the Kyrie three times "and not nine"; no Gloria; a paraphrase of the Lord's Prayer and an exhortation for the Preface; the bread and cup given separately after their words.

2. Seven families of ordo (§2.4).

- Saxon (Wittenberg 1533, Saxony 1539, 1580): the Latin school Mass with German pieces grafted on; Preface only on feasts or not at all.
- Bugenhagen's northern Mass (Braunschweig 1528 to Mecklenburg 1552): Latin and German side by side; Preface, Sanctus and exhortation optional; "after the Amen nothing more is sung".
- Franconian (Nürnberg 1533, Hof 1592): no Preface; the epistle and gospel read as chapters in course; the Sanctus after the Words of Institution, then the Lord's Prayer and the Pax.
- Prussian (1525): the Words of Institution sung in the Preface; Kyrie in three tongues; Agnus Dei twice.
- The Latin frame (Brandenburg 1540, Pfalz-Neuburg 1543, the Palatinate 1546, Breslau 1557): Preface dialogue, Pax and threefold Agnus kept; Breslau even kept Ite missa est.
- Upper German (Württemberg 1553, Strasbourg 1598, both Lutheran): the sermon service with the Supper added; no Kyrie, Gloria, Preface, Sanctus or Agnus.
- Reformed (Palatinate 1563, Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588, both Reformed): the Supper form read at the table, the Apostles' Creed, the breaking of bread.

3. Kyrie: three, four or nine; never seven (§2.6.1). Luther's "three times and not nine" became the parish norm. Nine survived for feasts and choirs (Wittenberg 1533; Pomerania 1542). A fourfold Kyrie (Kyrie, Christe, Kyrie, Kyrie) comes from Müntzer (1524, Radical Reformation) and survives in Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 and the Hessian Agende of 1574 (Philippist). Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel (1543) allows "three times, four times or nine times" in figured music "at the schoolmaster's pleasure", but three plainly "in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost". No sevenfold Kyrie is found.

4. The seasonal Kyrie chants survived (§2.6.2). The orders with Latin schools kept the medieval cycle by name: dominicale, angelicum, paschale, Fons bonitatis, Magne Deus, summum, minus summum, apostolicum, de martyribus, de virginibus (Buxtehude 1565; Pomerania 1542; Nördlingen 1544; Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557; Hof 1592, with the matching Gloria, Sanctus and Agnus "of the season").

5. Gloria: the festal companion of the Kyrie (§2.7). Not after "the plain Kyrie" (Wittenberg 1533); "at times and not always" (Pomerania 1535). Where kept, the priest intoned, the scholars sang Et in terra "and no more", the people sang "Allein Gott", and the scholars and organ finished the Latin (Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1543).

6. Creed: three layers, and two creeds (§2.9). The priest intoned Credo in unum Deum, the scholars sang the Latin Patrem, and the people "Wir glauben all" (Wittenberg 1533 and most Saxon and northern orders). Prussia (1525) forbade the priest's intonation. Which creed (§2.9.4):

- Nicene only: the Saxon, Bugenhagen and Franconian orders, in Latin, in German verse by verse (Braunschweig 1528, Hamburg 1529), or as "Wir glauben".
- Apostles' only:
  - Strasbourg 1524 (Moderate Reformed), sung after the sermon, "the great Patrem … sung by some";
  - the Goslar foundation 1534;
  - the Upper German pulpit (Württemberg 1553);
    - the Reformed Supper (Frankfurt's French church 1554 and the Palatinate 1563, both Reformed).
- A free choice: Hesse 1574 (Philippist; the Apostles' Creed, Luther's paraphrase, or the Nicene); Kurland 1570.
- By occasion:
  - Hesse 1566 (Moderate Reformed): the Apostles' Creed every Sunday, the Nicene or Athanasian on the feasts of Christ;
  - Rothenberg 1618: "Wir glauben" on Sundays, the Apostles' Creed on other feasts;
  - Prussia 1568 and Feuchtwangen 1563: the Latin Nicene and the German creed on alternate Sundays.

7. The Preface was optional; the Sanctus moved (§2.10). The Preface was required in only a few orders, festal or optional in most, absent in the Deutsche Messe, Nürnberg, Albertine Saxony 1580 and Württemberg. The Sanctus stood in five places: before the Verba, after the Verba with or without a Preface, during the distribution, or nowhere. The Latin Sanctus kept its Benedictus; Luther's "Jesaia dem Propheten" lost it; the Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel Trinitarian Sanctus kept it with the Hebrew Hosianna.

8. The Lord's Prayer and the Verba in seven sequences (§2.11): the Lord's Prayer before the Verba, after them, paraphrased in the exhortation, sung as a hymn before the confession, or said inside a prayer before the creed. The bread and cup were given separately after their own words in the Deutsche Messe, Prussia 1544 and the Saxon villages.

9. Agnus Dei: three, two or one (§2.12). Three, as of old (Brandenburg 1540; Regensburg; Luther's German "Christe du Lamm Gottes" with "Gib uns deinen Frieden" the third time). Two in Prussia 1525 and Livonia 1533, "for brevity's sake", the first ending miserere nobis and the second dona nobis pacem. Once in the Albertine Cellische Ordnungen (1545). It stood before, during or after the distribution.

10. No Ite missa est; Benedicamus or nothing; Aaronic, Trinitarian or both (§2.13).

- The *Ite missa est: kept only at Breslau (1557, beside the Benedicamus) and in the Ansbach visitation of 1536.
- The *Benedicamus, in its place:
    - in Latin, in the Formula missae and the Franconian, Pfalz-Neuburg, Regensburg, Hohenlohe, Henneberg and Transylvanian orders;
        - in German, in the early German Masses (Müntzer (Radical Reformation), Erfurt, Lippe, Worms and Strasbourg (both Moderate Reformed)) and at Hof in 1592.
- Neither: the Deutsche Messe and most Saxon, Bugenhagen and Upper German orders end with the collect and the blessing.
- The blessing:
    - the Aaronic blessing is the rule;
        - Worms and Strasbourg (1524, both Moderate Reformed) and Regensburg (1542) used a Trinitarian blessing alone;
        - Strasbourg (1524, Moderate Reformed) put both together;
    - Brandenburg-Nürnberg (1533) offered four forms (Numbers 6, Psalm 67 and two Trinitarian), a set copied by a dozen orders;
    - Prussia (1525) sang Psalm 67 on feasts and the Aaronic blessing on ordinary days;
    - Strasbourg (1598) closed the sermon with the Trinitarian blessing and the Supper with both.

11. Without communicants, no Mass (§2.14). The service stopped after the sermon with a psalm, a collect and the blessing (Pomerania 1535; Mecklenburg 1552; Saxony 1580), or fell back to an office of psalm, chapter, creed and suffrages (Transylvania 1547). Hof kept a Mass-shaped daily service for its schoolboys, with the Kyrie, Sanctus and Agnus of the season and no communion.

12. Few rubrics, and kneeling the chief gesture (§2.15).

- Sign of the cross. It was still printed in the early German Masses: over bread and cup at Allstedt 1523 (Müntzer, Radical Reformation), and at the greeting and the blessing at Strasbourg 1524 (Moderate Reformed). Hof printed it at the Pax and the blessing in 1592. Elsewhere it was let go: "so many crosses" at Hannover 1536, and "without all papistical crossing" at Danzig 1557.
- Kneeling, never genuflection. No order knows the Roman genuflection. The priest kneels at the preparation and after communion. The people kneel at the Kyrie (Schwäbisch Hall 1527), at the Lord's Prayer before the Verba (Hall 1535) and at the thanksgiving. Communicants kneel at the altar. The Polish synods of the Sandomierz consensus (1578, 1583) allowed standing or kneeling but forbade sitting. Calvinizing Nassau (1575, Philippist) warned against "folded hands and bending of the knee" as to an idol.
- Other gestures.
    - Bows survive only in the Latin canons (Brandenburg 1540).
        - Men are bareheaded and women covered (Hesse 1566, Moderate Reformed).
    - Nothing is said of the celebrant's hands beyond what they hold.
    - The minister turns to the altar to pray and to the people to read, greet and exhort. Döber (1525) said everything toward the people.
- Not found. No epistle or gospel horn, no turn over the right shoulder, no orans or joined hands, no kiss of altar, book or deacon, no biretta rubric, no incense and no Lavabo. Strasbourg (1542, Moderate Reformed) replaced the kiss of peace with a reading on reconciliation.

2.2 Scope, sources and method

2.2.1 Sources and searches

The chapter draws on the full text of the Sehling edition in `eko.db`. Two searches were made:

- Full ordos. Every passage was found in which, within about 5,000 characters, the order names at least thirteen of the parts of the Mass (introit, Kyrie, Gloria, collect, epistle, gradual or sequence, gospel, creed, sermon, exhortation, Preface, Sanctus, Lord's Prayer, Words of Institution, Agnus Dei, distribution, thanksgiving, blessing). These passages, about forty in all, were read in full, and the representative ones are compared in §§2.4–2.5.
- The ordinaries. The corpus was searched for:
  - the Kyrie near the words for numbers (drei, dreimal, neun, vier, sieben, ter, novies, semel, einmal), and for runs of printed acclamations, which were counted;
  - the named Kyrie chants (dominicale, angelicum, paschale, Fons bonitatis, Magne Deus, summum, apostolicum, de martyribus and the rest);
  - the Agnus Dei near the same number words and near dona nobis pacem, miserere nobis, gib uns deinen Frieden;
  - Benedictus qui venit, Osanna, Hosianna;
  - Ite missa est, Benedicamus;
  - symbolum apostolicum, Nicenum, Athanasii near the Mass and its parts.

Pages were checked against Sehling's running heads, which often correct the database's record headings. One attribution was corrected in the course of the work: the Breslau account of the Sunday Mass and of the hours of the Passion is a report of 1557, not an order of 1550 (Sehling 3, pp. 404–405), and Chapter 10 has been amended accordingly.

2.2.2 What was not found

- No sevenfold Kyrie. The counts in the corpus are three, four and nine (§2.6.1). No order prescribes seven or six acclamations.
- No order that kept the offertory or the canon as the priest's prayer of sacrifice. What the Latin-frame orders kept is described in Chapter 7.
- No evangelical Mass without communicants (§2.14), except the Hof schoolboys' daily exercise, which has no consecration.
- No fixed Lutheran ordo. Even within a family the orders allow the minister to drop the Gloria, the Preface, the Sanctus or the exhortation "when it will grow too long". The tables give the full form each order prescribes; few churches will have sung all of it every Sunday.

2.3 The baselines: the Roman ordo and Luther's two Masses

2.3.1 The Roman ordo in outline

What the reformers inherited. The orders measure themselves against the late medieval Roman Mass, which they call die messe, das ampt or die hohe messe. In outline it ran:

1. the priest's preparation at the altar (Introibo, Psalm 43, Confiteor);
2. introit, Kyrie (nine acclamations), Gloria;
3. salutation and collect(s);
4. epistle, gradual, alleluia or tract, sequence;
5. gospel, Nicene Creed (intoned by the priest, continued by the choir);
6. offertory and offertory prayers, the secret;
7. Preface dialogue (Dominus vobiscum, Sursum corda, Gratias agamus), Preface, Sanctus with Benedictus;
8. the canon, with the Words of Institution said silently and the elevation;
9. Lord's Prayer with its introduction (Praeceptis salutaribus) and embolism (Libera nos), the fraction, the Pax (Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum), Agnus Dei (three times, the third ending dona nobis pacem);
10. communion, communion chant, postcommunion;
11. Ite missa est (or Benedicamus Domino when there was no Gloria), blessing.

The sermon had no fixed place in the Roman Mass. Every evangelical order gave it one.

2.3.2 Formula missae, 1523: the Latin Mass purged

Keep the ordinaries, cut the sacrifice. Luther's Latin order of 1523 kept almost everything before the creed "because it is ours and free". It cut the offertory and the canon, and moved the Words of Institution into the Preface. The ordinaries stayed, sung by the choir "with various melodies for the various seasons". Wittenberg, Luther, Formula missae, 1523 (Sehling 1, p. 5):

> Secundo, kyrieleison, ut hactenus celebratum est, variis melodiis pro diversis temporibus amplectimur cum sequenti hymno angelico ‘Gloria in excelsis, tamen in arbitrio stabit episcopi, quoties illum omitti voluerit.

Secondly, the Kyrie eleison, as it hath been celebrated hitherto, with various melodies for the various seasons, we embrace, together with the angelic hymn following, Gloria in excelsis; yet it shall stand in the bishop's judgment how often he will have it left out.

The rest of the order is described in Chapter 7, §7.3. In outline (Sehling 1, pp. 5–6):

- introit, Kyrie, Gloria, one collect, epistle;
- a gradual of two verses with the alleluia; no sequences but Grates nunc omnes, Sancti Spiritus and Veni sancte Spiritus, at the bishop's pleasure;
- gospel, the Nicene Creed ("not displeasing" if sung, but at the bishop's choice), and the sermon either after the creed or before the introit;
- the preparation of bread and wine "during the creed or after" (sub symbolo vel post), in the accustomed manner;
- Dominus vobiscum, Sursum corda, the Preface, and the Words of Institution sung in the Preface tone;
- the Sanctus, with the elevation during the Benedictus;
- the Lord's Prayer, without the Libera nos, the fraction or the commixture, then at once Pax Domini, "a kind of public absolution";
- the communion during the Agnus Dei; the postcommunion Quod ore sumpsimus or Corpus tuum;
- Benedicamus Domino for Ite missa est, and the blessing.

The last item is Luther's replacement for the dismissal. Wittenberg, Luther, Formula missae, 1523 (Sehling 1, p. 6):

> Loco ‘Ite missa’ dicatur: ‘Benedicamus domino’, adiecto (ubi et quando placet) alleluia in suis melodiis. Vel ex vespertinis ‘Benedicamus’ mutuentur. VIII. Benedictio solita detur. Vel accipiatur illa Numeri 6. quam ipse dominus digessit, d.: ‘Benedicat nos dominus et custodiat nos, ostendat nobis faciem suam et misereatur nostri, convertat dominus faciem suam ad nos et det nobis pacem.’ Vel illa psal. 96.: ‘Benedicat nos deus deus noster, benedicat nos deus et metuant eum omnes fines terrae. Amen.

In the place of Ite missa let Benedicamus Domino be said, with alleluia added (where and when it pleaseth) in its melodies; or let the Benedicamus be borrowed from Vespers. Eighthly, let the accustomed blessing be given. Or let that of Numbers 6 be taken, which the Lord himself set in order, saying: "The Lord bless us and keep us, the Lord show us his face and have mercy upon us, the Lord turn his face unto us and give us peace." Or that of Psalm 96 [67]: "God, even our own God, shall bless us; God shall bless us, and all the ends of the earth shall fear him. Amen."

2.3.3 Deutsche Messe, 1526: the German Mass for the people

Three Kyries, German hymns, the Verba with the distribution. The Deutsche Messe made a different shape, for the parishes. A German psalm or hymn stood for the introit; the Kyrie was cut to three acclamations; the Gloria was gone; a German hymn followed the epistle and "Wir glauben all" the gospel; the Preface was replaced by a paraphrase of the Lord's Prayer and an exhortation; the Words of Institution were sung, the bread given after the words over the bread and the cup after the words over the cup, with German hymns during each; and the service ended with a collect and the Aaronic blessing (Sehling 1, pp. 14–16). Of the Kyrie it says. Wittenberg, Luther, Deutsche Messe und ordnung gottis diensts, 1526 (Sehling 1, p. 14):

> Darauf! kyrie eleison, auch im selben thon, drei mal und nicht neun mal, wie folget. Kyrie eleison.

Thereupon the Kyrie eleison, also in the same tone, three times and not nine times, as followeth: Kyrie eleison.

The German Sanctus "Jesaia dem Propheten" and "Christe du Lamm Gottes" belong to the distribution and its close (§§2.10, 2.12; Chapter 8, §§8.12, 8.15).

2.3.4 The three side by side

Part	Roman Mass	Formula missae 1523	Deutsche Messe 1526
Opening	Introibo, Confiteor	(priest's private preparation, unregulated)	—
Introit	Latin antiphon and psalm	Latin, Sunday and feast introits	German psalm or hymn
Kyrie	ninefold, seasonal chant	"various melodies for various seasons"	threefold, "not nine times"
Gloria	Sundays and feasts	kept; bishop may omit	omitted
Collect	one or more	one only	one, in German
Epistle	sung	sung	read facing the people
Between the readings	gradual, alleluia, tract, sequence	gradual of two verses, alleluia; few sequences	German hymn
Gospel	sung	sung	read facing the people
Creed	Nicene, Latin	Nicene, at the bishop's choice	"Wir glauben all"
Sermon	—	after the creed or before the introit	after the creed
Offertory, secret	yes	cut	cut
Preface	yes	yes, with the Verba in the Preface tone	replaced by paraphrase of the Lord's Prayer and exhortation
Sanctus	with Benedictus, before the canon	after the Verba, elevation during Benedictus	German Sanctus during the distribution
Canon	yes	cut	cut
Lord's Prayer	after the canon	after the Sanctus	paraphrased before the Verba
Pax	before the Agnus	after the Lord's Prayer, as absolution	—
Agnus Dei	three times, before communion	during communion	German Agnus after the cup
Postcommunion	yes	Quod ore or Corpus tuum	German collect
Dismissal	Ite missa est	Benedicamus Domino	—
Blessing	yes	usual, or Num 6, or Ps 67	Num 6

2.4 The families of evangelical ordo

Seven shapes. The orders fall into families. Within each, later orders copy earlier ones, often word for word. The families differ less in what they cut than in where they put what they kept: the sermon, the Preface and Sanctus, the Lord's Prayer and the Words of Institution.

2.4.1 The Saxon Mass: Latin and German together

Wittenberg and the Albertine orders. The Wittenberg town order of 1533, Duke Henry's order of 1539 and the Albertine Kirchenordnung of 1580 keep the Latin Mass of the Formula missae for the school and graft the German pieces of the Deutsche Messe on to it. The common pattern:

- introit (Latin, or a German psalm), Kyrie, Gloria with the Latin Et in terra;
- a German collect, the epistle sung or read in German facing the people;
- an alleluia, sequence or German hymn;
- the gospel in German; the priest intones Credo in unum Deum, the scholars sing the Latin Patrem, and the people "Wir glauben all";
- the sermon; then, for the communicants, the paraphrase of the Lord's Prayer and the exhortation from the Deutsche Messe (Saxony 1539, 1580), or the Lord's Prayer sung (Wittenberg 1533);
- the Words of Institution sung in German;
- the distribution, with the Latin Agnus Dei and the German Sanctus, "Jesus Christus unser Heiland", "Gott sei gelobet" and Psalm 111;
- "Christe du Lamm Gottes", a German collect, the Aaronic blessing.

The Preface survives here only for the feasts. At Wittenberg "the Preface may well often be left out, that we may the more diligently attend to the Lord's Supper, for that alone is the matter" (Sehling 1, p. 704). Duke Henry's order allows a Latin Preface "on the feasts, and now and then on Sundays" (Sehling 1, p. 274). The Albertine order of 1580 has none (Sehling 1, pp. 368–369). On the Saxon Kyrie and Creed see §§2.6, 2.9.

2.4.2 Bugenhagen's northern Mass

Braunschweig, Hamburg, Lübeck, Pomerania, Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel, Mecklenburg. Bugenhagen's orders (Braunschweig 1528, Hamburg 1529, Lübeck 1531, Pomerania 1535, Denmark 1537, Schleswig-Holstein 1542, Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1543) and the Mecklenburg order of 1552 make the Mass of the northern towns. Its marks:

- a confession and absolution, or a prayer at the altar, before the introit (Mecklenburg 1552, Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1543: Chapter 3, §3.4);
- Kyrie and Gloria in Latin or German, the Gloria "at times and not always" (Pomerania 1535);
- the creed intoned by the priest, the Latin Patrem sung "dominicaliter, in full", then "Wir glauben" (Pomerania 1535, Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1543, Mecklenburg 1552);
- the sermon, with the general prayer at its end;
- a Preface and Sanctus that are allowed but not required;
- the exhortation to the communicants, the Lord's Prayer and the Words of Institution sung together;
- the distribution with "O Lamm Gottes", "Jesus Christus", "Gott sei gelobet" or Psalm 111; "Christe du Lamm Gottes" after it; a collect and the Aaronic blessing.

The Pomeranian order puts the Preface, the Sanctus and the exhortation at the minister's discretion, and allows him to go straight from the sermon hymn to the Lord's Prayer "as is also done at Wittenberg". Pomerania, Kirchenordnung, 1535 (Sehling 4, p. 341):

> Denne singet me de prefatio latinisch överst nicht alle tidt, sunder went me will, sunderlick to den hogen festen, mit dem sanctus latinisch eder düdesch, unde dar na list men de exhortation dat sacrament betrepende mit korte. Lange singent dar etlike prestere lust to hebben, schal ut orsake vormeeden werden, dat sulke christlike unde heelsamen ceremonien dem volke lüstich bliven, unde nicht vordreetlick werden, dat me ock dat volk vormane, gern dar to blivende bet tor lesten benedictien eder segen. Dar umme wen dat volk na der predikie dat düdesche leed gesungen hefft, mach wol de prester to tiden unde vakene dat andere alto male staen laten, ock des exhortatio eder confessio, dat dit nicht to lank unde vordreetlick werde, unde lieven balde an: Lat uns beden, Vader unse etc., alse ock to Wittemberch wert geholden.

Then the Preface is sung in Latin, but not always, rather when one will, especially at the high feasts, with the Sanctus in Latin or German; and thereafter the exhortation concerning the sacrament is read, briefly. Long singing, wherein some priests have pleasure, shall for this cause be avoided: that such Christian and wholesome ceremonies may remain pleasant to the people and not grow wearisome, and that the people also be exhorted to remain there gladly until the last benediction or blessing. Therefore, when the people after the sermon have sung the German song, the priest may at times and often let all the rest stand over, even the exhortation or confession, that this be not too long and wearisome, and begin straightway: Let us pray, Our Father, etc., as is also kept at Wittenberg.

The Mecklenburg order of 1552 is the fullest of the family, and gives the Latin text and notes of the creed and the Preface (§§2.9, 2.10).

2.4.3 The Franconian Mass: Nürnberg and Brandenburg-Ansbach

A Mass without a Preface. The Brandenburg-Nürnberg order of 1533 and its descendants (the Nürnberg agendas, Hof 1592) keep the Latin ordinaries for the schools but make the communion its own action, "the order of the Lord's Supper", after the sermon. Its marks:

- the priest says a Confiteor privately and reads the introit, the Kyrie and the Et in terra, which the scholars sing in Latin or the people in German;
- Dominus vobiscum and one or more German collects;
- the epistle and gospel read as chapters in course, "the first chapter of the epistle to the Romans" and so on, not the Sunday pericopes (Chapter 4, §4.5);
- the Credo sung in Latin by the scholars, or "Wir glauben" by the people; the sermon;
- no Preface: the exhortation, then the Words of Institution sung;
- the Sanctus after the Words of Institution, then the Lord's Prayer with its old Latin introduction, and the Pax;
- the distribution during the Agnus Dei; collect; Benedicamus; one of several blessings.

Brandenburg-Nürnberg, Kirchenordnung, 1533 (Sehling 11, pp. 196–197):

> Darnach folgt das Sanctus lateinisch oder teutsch. Darauf alsbald: Oremus preceptis salutaribus moniti et divina institutione formati audemus dicere: Pater noster. […] Darnach als bald: Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum etc. oder aber teutsch, wie es hernach notiert ist Thereafter followeth the Sanctus in Latin or German. Thereupon straightway: Oremus, praeceptis salutaribus moniti et divina institutione formati, audemus dicere: Pater noster. […] Thereafter straightway: Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum, etc., or else in German, as it is noted hereafter.

The order of Hof (1592) keeps the Franconian shape, but moves the Lord's Prayer and the Pax before the Words of Institution, and sings the Sanctus and Agnus Dei of the season during the distribution (Sehling 11, pp. 425–426).

2.4.4 The Prussian Mass of 1525: the Words of Institution in the Preface

The Formula missae in German. The Prussian articles of 1525 follow the Formula missae in setting the Words of Institution inside the Preface, sung in German, with the elevation, the Sanctus after it, and the Pax as an absolution. They add three peculiarities: the Kyrie sung in Greek, Latin and German, the creed not intoned by the priest, and the Agnus Dei sung only twice (§§2.6, 2.9, 2.12). Prussia, Artikel der ceremonien und anderer kirchen ordnung, 1525 (Sehling 4, p. 32):

> Volgt die prefation, welche der priester deütsch singet samt den evangelischen worten der gebenedeiung oder consecration oder brod und wein (den offertorium, secret, canon minor und maior werden notwendig ausgelassen). Auf die volendeten prefation und consecration gibt man ein zeichen mit der schellen, darnach so bald elevirt der priester beideteil des sacraments ane mittel nacheinander. Unter des und so bald die prefation samt der evangelischen benediction aus ist, singet der chor sanctus deütsch oder lateinisch nach gelegenheit, mit wenig noten.

Then followeth the Preface, which the priest singeth in German, together with the evangelical words of the blessing or consecration of bread and wine (for the offertory, the secret, the lesser and greater canon are of necessity left out). When the Preface and consecration are ended, a sign is given with the bell; then straightway the priest elevateth both parts of the sacrament, one after the other, without delay. Meanwhile, and as soon as the Preface together with the evangelical benediction is ended, the choir singeth the Sanctus in German or Latin as occasion serveth, with few notes.

The Livonian towns took over the Prussian order at Wolmar in 1533 (Sehling 5, pp. 15–16).

2.4.5 The Mass that kept the Latin frame

Brandenburg, Pfalz-Neuburg, the Palatinate before 1556. A group of orders of the 1540s kept more of the Latin Mass than Wittenberg did: the Preface dialogue, the Pax, the Agnus Dei three times, even the old prayers before communion. The Brandenburg order of 1540 and the Pfalz-Neuburg order of 1543 are treated in Chapter 7, §§7.12, 7.14. The provisional order of the Palatinate (1546, Lutheran; not an Interim order) even kept the tail of the secret, per omnia saecula, before the Preface dialogue. Palatinate, Gemaine maß, die kirchen- und gottesdinst anzurichten, 1546 (Sehling 14, pp. 96–97):

> Nach der predig soll geschehen ein ermanung an die communicanten aus hertzog Ottheinrichs kirchenordnung oder dergleichen vor dem altar und hebt alsdann an zu singen: per omnia secula, chorus: amen, der prister: Dominus vobiscum, chorus: et cum spiritu tuo, priester: sursum corda, corus: habemus ad Dominum, prister: gratias agamus domino Deo nostro, chorus: dignum et iustum est, prister: vere dignum et iustum est etc. Und uf den hohen festen singt der priester die gantze prefation, der chor das noch das sanctus bis uf das agnus Dei, darnach hebe der prister an zu singen teutsch das vaterunser in gemeinem thon

After the sermon there shall be made an exhortation to the communicants out of Duke Ottheinrich's church order, or the like, before the altar; and then [the priest] beginneth to sing: Per omnia saecula; the choir: Amen; the priest: Dominus vobiscum; the choir: Et cum spiritu tuo; the priest: Sursum corda; the choir: Habemus ad Dominum; the priest: Gratias agamus Domino Deo nostro; the choir: Dignum et iustum est; the priest: Vere dignum et iustum est, etc. And on the high feasts the priest singeth the whole Preface, and the choir thereafter the Sanctus as far as the Agnus Dei; thereafter the priest beginneth to sing in German the Our Father in the common tone.

The Breslau churches went further still. A report of 1557 says that the Sunday high Mass was sung by a chaplain "in his habit, as of old", through the gospel and the Patrem; then came the sermon; "the sermon ended, the chaplain singeth the Preface; after the sermon he elevateth the sacrament"; and the Mass closed with the Sanctus, Agnus Dei and communion chant, the postcommunion, "and with the Benedicamus or Ite missa est" (Sehling 3, p. 404).

2.4.6 The Upper German preaching service with communion

Württemberg, Baden, Strasbourg and their neighbours. These are Lutheran orders: "Upper German" here names the south-western shape of service, not the Moderate Reformed tradition. The Württemberg order of 1553 (and its copies in Baden 1556, Mömpelgard 1560 and the Palatinate of 1556) has no introit, Kyrie, Gloria, epistle, Preface, Sanctus or Agnus Dei. The service is the sermon service of every Sunday, to which the communion is added:

1. a German hymn ("Komm heiliger Geist", "Nun bitten wir" or a psalm "agreeable to the season");
2. the sermon, which on communion days includes "a short instruction" on the Supper;
3. the creed sung in German;
4. the exhortation to the communicants, read at the altar;
5. the general prayer, then "the church shall sing the Our Father in German together";
6. the public confession and absolution;
7. the Words of Institution read "with loud, understandable voice";
8. the distribution, with "Gott sei gelobet", "Jesus Christus unser Heiland" or another hymn;
9. a thanksgiving prayer and the blessing, in one of three forms.

(Sehling 16, pp. 252–255.) The opening rubric is quoted in Chapter 8, §8.3.4. Strasbourg in 1598 keeps the same shape: the ordinary Sunday service "until the hymn after the sermon"; then the pastor goes to the altar while the church sings the German Grates nunc omnes, and reads the Württemberg exhortation (Sehling 20/1, pp. 611–612).

2.4.7 The Reformed Supper

The Palatinate after 1563. The Palatine order of 1563 (Reformed), and the Reformed orders that copied it (Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588, Ysenburg-Birstein 1598), keep nothing of the ordinaries. After the sermon on the Supper and the Sunday prayer, the minister reads at the table the "Form for holding the holy Supper":

- the Words of Institution from 1 Corinthians 11, with the self-examination and the list of those excluded;
- the doctrine of the Supper; a prayer ending in the Lord's Prayer;
- the Apostles' Creed, "with mouth and heart";
- a lifting up of hearts "into heaven, where Christ Jesus is", in place of the Sursum corda;

- the breaking of the bread with the words of 1 Corinthians 10:16;
- singing, or the reading of John 14–18 or Isaiah 53, during the distribution;
- a thanksgiving from Psalm 103 and a closing prayer. Bentheim-Tecklenburg (Reformed) adds: "After all this the psalm is sung, and thereafter the blessing of the Lord spoken" (Sehling 22, p. 275).

The breaking replaced the distribution formula. Palatinate, Kirchenordnung, 1563 (Reformed; Sehling 14, p. 386):

> Hie soll der kirchendiener einem jeden vom brodt des herrn brechen und im darreichen sprechen: Das brodt, das wir brechen, ist die gemeinschaft des leibs Christi. Und der ander kirchendiener im darreichen deß kelchs sprechen: Der kelch der dancksagung, damit wir dancksagen, ist die gemeinschaft des bluts Christi

Here shall the minister of the church break of the bread of the Lord to every one, and in giving it say: The bread which we break is the communion of the body of Christ. And the other minister of the church, in giving the cup, [shall] say: The cup of thanksgiving, wherewith we give thanks, is the communion of the blood of Christ.

The Bentheim-Tecklenburg order of 1588 (Reformed) has the same form and the same words (Sehling 22, pp. 271–275).

2.4.8 The early German Masses

Before the territorial orders. The German Masses of 1522–1526 (Kantz at Nördlingen, Müntzer at Allstedt (Radical Reformation), the Strasbourg and Worms Masses (Moderate Reformed), Volprecht and Döber at Nürnberg, the Low German Masses of Bremen, Lippe and Kiel) are compared part by part in Chapter 7, §§7.2–7.11. They keep the Roman shape and translate it, the canon included, before the Deutsche Messe set the pattern for the parishes. Two of their ordinaries recur below: Müntzer's fourfold Kyrie (§2.6.1) and Volprecht's Benedicamus "and never Ite missa est" (§2.13).

2.5 The ordos compared

How to read the table. Each row gives the sequence of the Sunday Mass with communicants, in the shorthand set out in the Conventions. Brackets mark a part the order allows but does not require. "→" separates the parts. Details of each ordinary are in §§2.6–2.13; the propers, hymns and prayers in the chapters named at the head of this chapter.

What the table shows.

- Everyone kept the readings, the sermon, the Verba and a closing blessing. The epistle and gospel (or chapters in course), a sermon, the Words of Institution, a distribution with singing, a thanksgiving and a blessing are in every row.
- The ordinaries divide the families. The Saxon, Bugenhagen, Franconian, Prussian and Latin-frame orders keep Kyrie, Gloria and Creed, and some form of Sanctus and Agnus Dei. The Upper German (Lutheran) and Reformed orders keep only a creed: the German "Wir glauben" in Württemberg, the Apostles' Creed in the Reformed Palatinate.
- The Preface was the first casualty. Only the Prussian, Franconian-Hof, Latin-frame and Transylvanian orders require it. The Saxon and Bugenhagen orders make it optional or festal; the Deutsche Messe, Albertine Saxony 1580, Nürnberg 1533 and Württemberg drop it (§2.10).
- The Verba and the Lord's Prayer travel. The Lord's Prayer comes before the Verba (Saxony, Bugenhagen, Transylvania, Hof), after them (Formula missae, Prussia, Nürnberg 1533, Brandenburg 1540), as a paraphrase in the exhortation (Deutsche Messe, Saxony 1539, 1580), as a hymn before the confession (Württemberg), or inside the prayer before the creed (Palatinate, Reformed) (§2.11).
- The sermon has two homes. It follows the gospel and creed almost everywhere. The Formula missae allowed it before the introit, and Transylvania (1547) held the first sermon after Matins, before the Mass began (Sehling 24, p. 244).

2.6 The Kyrie

The hymns sung as or with the Kyrie, the troped German Kyries and the Kyrie in three tongues are treated in Chapter 8, §8.6. This section asks how many acclamations were sung, and which of the old Kyrie chants survived.

2.6.1 Three, four or nine

The medieval norm was nine. The Roman Kyrie had nine acclamations: Kyrie three times, Christe three times, Kyrie three times. The Hannover order of 1536 repeats the common attribution: "To sing the Kyrie eleison nine times, Gregory the Great set up in the Roman church, as Platina writeth; yet it came first from the Greek church" (Sehling 6/2, p. 1005).

Luther: three, not nine. The Deutsche Messe cut the Kyrie to three acclamations, "three times and not nine times" (§2.3.3). The threefold Kyrie became the norm of the German parish service:

- Duke Henry's Saxony (1539): "on ordinary Sundays and in the villages one may sing it plain … only three times" (Sehling 1, p. 274);
- the visitation articles for Gnandstein (1539) and the Gemeine Artikel for the see of Wurzen (1542): "Kyrie eleison three times" (Sehling 1, p. 564; 2, p. 98);
- Prussia (1525, 1544 and 1568): "since it is sung three times", in three tongues (1525); "the Kyrie eleison only three times, according to the former order" (1544, 1568) (Sehling 4, pp. 32, 64, 81);
- the Palatinate (1546): "the Kyrie eleison, each only once" (Sehling 14, p. 96);
- the Henneberg parishes of Suhl (1562) and Obermaßfeld (1563): "the German Kyrie three times" (Sehling 2, pp. 352, 346);
- Waldeck (1556): "a Kyrie eleison three times" (Sehling 9, p. 247).

Nine on the feasts. The ninefold Kyrie survived where there was a choir, and especially on feasts. At Wittenberg the plain threefold Kyrie was "the right Kyrie", the ninefold the festal one (Sehling 1, p. 704; quoted in §2.7.1). The Pomeranian order of 1542 gives the Sunday Kyrie "three or nine times, or the Kyrie of the feast" (Sehling 4, p. 358). The Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel order of 1543 gives the reason for three, and leaves the festal number to the schoolmaster. Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel, Christlike kerken-ordeninge, 1543 (Sehling 6/1, p. 54):

> Id is nicht van nöden, negen mal dat eleison edder Kyrie tho repetirende, yd is genoch dremal im namen des Vaders und des Sons und des hilgen Geistes tho singende ane orgelen. Doch mögen de scholere in festis wol ein ander Kyrie singen, besundern, wenn se in figurativis singen, dremal, veermal edder ock negenmal na gevallen des scholemeisters, also doch, dat man yd mit dem singen und orgelen nicht tho lange make, dat de predike darmede nicht vorhindert werde.

It is not needful to repeat the eleison or Kyrie nine times; it is enough to sing it three times, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, without the organ. Yet the scholars may well sing another Kyrie on the feasts, especially when they sing in figured music, three times, four times or nine times, at the schoolmaster's pleasure; yet so that one make it not too long with the singing and the organ, that the sermon be not hindered thereby.

Four. A fourfold form, Kyrie, Christe, Kyrie, Kyrie, appears in three places:

- Müntzer's Deutsch evangelisch Messe of 1524 (Radical Reformation): "Kyrie leyson, Christe leyson, kyrie leyson, kyrie leyson" (Sehling 1, p. 499);
- the German Masses of the Calenberg-Göttingen order of 1542, which take the chants of Müntzer (Radical Reformation): some have the fourfold form, others the threefold (Sehling 6/2, pp. 812, 817, 825, 827, 829; three: pp. 820, 823, 832);
- the song appendix of the Hessian Agende of 1574 (Philippist), after the German introit for Trinity: "Kyrie eleison. Christe eleison. Kyrie eleison. Kyrie eleison" (Sehling 8, p. 465).

The fourth acclamation is the closing Kyrie of the chant, sung to its own melody, kept when the middle repetitions were cut. Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel's "four times" in figured music (above) is the same shape set polyphonically.

One, by three choirs. At Hof (1592) the German Kyrie was divided among three choirs, one acclamation each: "the first choir singeth Kyrie eleison in German, the second Christe eleison, the third, or the girls' choir, Kyrie eleison". In figured music the organ played each of the three before the choir answered; otherwise the organ "preludeth once only before the Et in terra" (Sehling 11, p. 425).

Not found. No order prescribes a sevenfold Kyrie, and none a sixfold one. The counts in the corpus are three, four and nine, with the "each once" of the Palatinate (1546) amounting to three.

2.6.2 Which Kyrie: the seasonal chants

The old melodies kept. The Formula missae kept the Kyrie "with various melodies for the various seasons" (§2.3.2). The northern and Franconian orders name the chants they meant, by their medieval titles. Pomerania, Kirchenordnung, 1542 (Sehling 4, p. 356):

> Darup dat kyrie dominicale, efft me mach ock up die sondage, kyrie angelicum, de martiribus, effte confessoribus, efft virginibus, ' wo man sie genomet hefft singen, dominicale im advent und in der vasten, dat paschale tuschen pingsten > und paschen, dat summum up die hohern fest, effte dat minus summum.

Thereupon the Kyrie dominicale; or one may also sing on the Sundays the Kyrie angelicum, de martyribus, or confessoribus, or virginibus, as they have been named; the dominicale in Advent and in Lent, the paschale between Easter and Whitsun, the summum on the higher feasts, or the minus summum.

The fullest scheme is the Hof order of 1592, for the boys' daily Mass-shaped service sung from the "great missal". Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592 (Sehling 11, p. 472):

> Mox II. ex missali magno canitur Kyrie certi temporis vel angelicum in Adventu Domini vel Kyrie Magnae Deus potentiae de Nativitate Christi, cui Et in terra angelicum subiicitur, vel Kyrie dominicale maius post dominicam Septuagesimae usque ad Pascha vel Kyrie paschale vel Kyrie Fons bonitatis cum Et in terra angelico vel Kyrie dominicale minus post festum Trinitatis vel de apostolis, martyribus etc., prout tempus requirit et libri ordo monstrat.

Next, secondly, there is sung out of the great missal the Kyrie of the proper season: either the angelicum in the Advent of the Lord, or the Kyrie Magne Deus potentiae of the Nativity of Christ, to which the angelic Et in terra is joined; or the greater dominicale from the Sunday Septuagesima until Easter; or the paschale; or the Kyrie Fons bonitatis with the angelic Et in terra; or the lesser dominicale after the feast of Trinity; or that of the apostles, martyrs, etc., as the season requireth and the order of the book showeth.

The same order assigns, Sunday by Sunday, a "Kyrie angelicum seu feriale" in Advent, a "Kyrie paschale" from Easter to the Ascension, and a "Kyrie dominicale" from the fourth Sunday after Trinity to Advent, with the Sanctus and Agnus Dei of the same set (Sehling 11, pp. 432–450).

Other lists.

- Buxtehude 1565: a table of the Kyries by occasion: "In summis festivitatibus et dominica Trinitatis … Minus summum", "In festis beatae virginis Mariae", "Kyrie paschale", "Dominicale", "In Adventu Domini", "Angelicum", "Kyrie apostolicum" (Sehling 7/1, p. 123).
- Nördlingen 1544: German Kyries "according to the season, of which we have three at this time": the paschale from Easter to Whitsun, Fons bonitatis from Whitsun to Christmas, Magne Deus from Christmas to Easter; and the "Kyrie summum with the Et in terra" at Whitsun and Trinity, with the "Sanctus summus" (Sehling 12, pp. 318, 321–322).
- Mecklenburg, Ordeninge der misse, 1540/1545: the Kyrie "according to the season, as hath been kept hitherto"; in the villages the pastors are to teach the people "the German Kyrie summum, Ach vader, alder högeste godt" (Sehling 5, p. 151).
- Schleswig-Holstein 1542: "The Kyrie eleison may be sung with manifold notes according to the difference of the season, as hath been kept hitherto" (Sehling 23, p. 90).
- Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557: the song index lists a Kyrie paschale, a Kyrie "in adventu domini", an angelicum and an apostolicum, each with its Gloria (Sehling 18, p. 255). The hymn plan of 1565 marks "the second Kyrie" for ordinary Sundays (Sehling 18, p. 337).
- Schweinfurt 1576: the organ begins "the Latin Kyrie dominicale, which the choir repeateth" (Sehling 11, pp. 647–648).
- Nördlingen 1579: the Latin Kyries of the weekday office: the Fons bonitatis in Advent, the Magne Deus at Christmas and in Lent, the dominicale from Septuagesima and at Pentecost, the paschale from Easter, and on the other Sundays the Kyrie "without the text" (Sehling 12, pp. 377–380; Chapter 8, §8.6.4.7).

So the old cycle of Kyrie chants, Lux et origo (paschale), Fons bonitatis, Magne Deus, Cunctipotens (apostolicum), Orbis factor (dominicale) and the rest, survived in the Lutheran churches that had Latin schools, assigned to the seasons as before. Where the orders print a text, it is the plain Kyrie, or a new German trope set to the old melody. The old Latin tropes are named by their opening words (Nördlingen 1579), or left out by Sehling's editor (Buxtehude 1565), and are printed in full only once, in Hof's Holy Week office. The Latin texts of the Fons bonitatis and the Magne Deus are given from outside the corpus in Chapter 8, §8.6.4.7.

2.6.3 Which language

Latin, German, Greek. The Kyrie is the one ordinary the orders most often leave untranslated. The Homberg synod of 1526 (Moderate Reformed) kept "these accustomed little words, Kyrie eleyson, Hallelujah, Hosiannah, Sabaoth, Amen", to be explained to the people (Sehling 8, p. 45). Bugenhagen defended the Greek at length (Braunschweig 1528, Sehling 6/1, p. 438; Chapter 8, §8.6.3). Prussia sang it in three languages, "since it is sung three times". Prussia, Artikel der ceremonien und anderer kirchen ordnung, 1525 (Sehling 4, p. 32):

> Von dem kyrieleyson ist fur gut angesehen, dieweil es dreimal gesungen wirt, das es in dreien zungen, wie man auch alhier pfleget, krichisch, lateinisch und deütsch gefangen werde. Gloria in excelsis, und et in terra, mögen deutsch oder lateinisch nach bequemigkeit gesungen werden.

Of the Kyrie eleison it is thought good, since it is sung three times, that it be sung in three tongues, as is the custom here also: Greek, Latin and German. Gloria in excelsis and Et in terra may be sung in German or Latin, as is convenient.

The Livonian towns took the same rule in 1533 (Sehling 5, p. 15). Neuenrade (1564) prints such Kyries, in Greek, Latin and Low German, to several melodies (Sehling 22, pp. 527–528; Chapter 8, §8.6.2).

2.7 The Gloria

The German Gloria hymns ("Allein Gott in der Höh", "All Ehr und Lob"), the alternation of Latin and German Sunday by Sunday, and the omission of the Gloria in Advent, Lent and winter are treated in Chapter 8, §8.7. Three further points belong to the ordo.

2.7.1 The Gloria belongs to the festal Kyrie

Not after the plain Kyrie. In the medieval Mass the Gloria went with a festal Kyrie and was silent on ferias and penitential days. Wittenberg kept the rule. Wittenberg, Kirchen-Ordnung für die Stadt Wittenberg, 1533 (Sehling 1, p. 704):

> Darnach das rechte kyrie dreimal, oder zu zeiten, besondern uf die feste, ein anders neunmal, wie gewonlich. Auf das schlechte kyrie singet man nicht gloria in excelsis deo, sondern auf andere, wenn man will, und sonderlich uf die feste.

Thereafter the right Kyrie three times; or at times, especially on the feasts, another one nine times, as is customary. After the plain Kyrie one singeth not the Gloria in excelsis Deo, but after the others, when one will, and especially on the feasts.

The Brandenburg order of 1540 ties the two together: the Kyrie "according to occasion", then the Gloria, "which together with the Et in terra belongeth to the Kyrie" (Sehling 3, p. 68). The Formula missae left it to the bishop "how often he will have it left out" (§2.3.2), and the Deutsche Messe left it out altogether.

2.7.2 Intonation, Et in terra, and the divided Gloria

The priest intones. Where the Gloria was sung, the priest (or a deacon, or at Hof a boy) intoned Gloria in excelsis Deo, and the choir continued Et in terra pax. In the German orders the priest sang "Ehre sei Gott in der Höhe" and the people answered with "Allein Gott". The orders of the north divided the Latin Gloria between the scholars, the people and the organ. Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel, Christlike kerken-ordeninge, 1543 (Sehling 6/1, p. 55):

> Na dem Kyrie singet de prester: Gloria in excelsis Deo. Dat scholerchor antwerdet und singet: Et in terra pax, hominibus bona voluntas, nicht mehr. Balde singet de ganze kercke: Alleine Got in der höged sy ehr etc. vul uth.

After the Kyrie the priest singeth: Gloria in excelsis Deo. The scholars' choir answereth and singeth: Et in terra pax hominibus bonae voluntatis, no more. Straightway the whole church singeth "All Glory Be to God on High," etc., in full.

The scholars and the organ then continue the Latin Laudamus te "in full" (Sehling 6/1, p. 55). So the Gloria was sung twice over: once in its Latin form, divided between the priest, the scholars and the organ, and once as Decius's hymn by the people. The Pomeranian order of 1542 allows either half to be dropped "when it will grow too long" (Sehling 4, p. 356).

At Hof, the minister intoned a Gloria "suited to the Mass and answering to the season"; the organ began the Et in terra, "divided into certain portions", which the three choirs finished in alternation with the organ. In the hardest frost the organ only began it and the choir sang the rest (Sehling 11, p. 425).

2.7.3 The Gloria and the Kyrie as one piece

One unit. Because the Gloria followed the Kyrie and shared its chant, several orders treat the two as a single piece: "the Kyrie and the Et in terra" (Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533; Kurpfalz 1546; Transylvania 1547; Nördlingen 1544), "Kyrie eleison with the Gloria in excelsis et in terra pax, as it is put into German and printed in the song-books" (Hesse 1566, Moderate Reformed, Sehling 8, p. 239). The Hof order of 1592 assigns to each seasonal Kyrie its own Et in terra: "the Kyrie Magne Deus potentiae … to which the angelic Et in terra is joined" (§2.6.2). In East Frisia (1535) the Kyrie and Gloria together were sung "as it is sung in the song Allein Gott in der Höh sei Ehr" (Chapter 8, §8.6.5).

2.8 Salutation, collect and Pax

The collect and postcommunion are treated in Chapter 5. Here the fixed formulas around them.

The salutation. Dominus vobiscum before the collect survived in most of the Latin-shaped orders, often given in German beside the Latin:

- Mecklenburg 1552: "Dominus vobiscum, or Der herr sei mit euch. Chorus: Et cum spiritu tuo, or Und mit deinem geiste" (Sehling 5, p. 198);
- Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533: "Dominus vobiscum or Der Herr sei mit euch" (Sehling 11, p. 188);
- Hof 1592: "Der Herr sei mit euch! Chorus: Und mit deinem geist", sung "either chorally or figurally" (Sehling 11, p. 425);
- Transylvania 1547: before the Preface and again before the postcommunion collect (Sehling 24, p. 244).

Bugenhagen's Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel order dropped it: "Dominus vobiscum, or De Here sy mit ju, is not needful to say" (Sehling 6/1, p. 55). The Deutsche Messe and the Württemberg and Reformed orders have no salutation.

The Pax. The Formula missae kept Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum after the Lord's Prayer as "a kind of public absolution from sins … the one and most worthy preparation for the Lord's Table" (Sehling 1, p. 6). The Pax stayed where the Lord's Prayer stayed near the altar:

- Prussia 1525: "the priest turneth to the people and giveth them the evangelical absolution, or the peace, and singeth in German Pax domini" (Sehling 4, p. 32);
- Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533, after the Lord's Prayer: "Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum, or else in German" (§2.4.3);
- Brandenburg 1540: "Der fried des herren sei mit euch allen. Let all the people say Amen" (Sehling 3, p. 69);
- the Palatinate 1546, after the Verba: "der fride deß herrn sei mit euch allen. The choir answereth: Amen" (Sehling 14, p. 97);
- Hof 1592: "Der frid des Herren sei mit euch allen" (Sehling 11, p. 426).

The Deutsche Messe, the Saxon orders of 1539 and 1580, the Pomeranian and Mecklenburg orders and Württemberg have no Pax.

The Preface dialogue is treated with the Preface (§2.10).

2.9 The Creed

The German creed-hymn "Wir glauben all" and its places in the service are treated in Chapter 8, §8.9. This section asks which creed was used, and who began it.

2.9.1 Intoned by the priest, sung by the choir, then by the people

Three layers. In the Saxon and Bugenhagen orders the creed was sung three times over: the priest intoned the Nicene Creed in Latin at the altar, the scholars sang the Latin Patrem to the end, and the people then sang "Wir glauben all". Wittenberg, Kirchen-Ordnung für die Stadt Wittenberg, 1533 (Sehling 1, p. 704):

> Darnach singt der priester das evangelium zum volk gewandt, darnach widerumb zum altar credo in unum deum. Darauf singen die schuler patrem lateinisch, alsdan mit dem volk wir gleuben alle an einen gott. Oft aber liebt der schulmeister bald auf das evangelium an wir gleuben etc. um der kurz willen.

Thereafter the priest singeth the gospel turned toward the people, thereafter, [turned] again toward the altar, Credo in unum Deum. Thereupon the scholars sing the Patrem in Latin, then with the people "We All Believe in One True God". But often the schoolmaster beginneth "We All Believe in One True God", etc., straight after the gospel, for brevity's sake.

The same three layers are in Pomerania 1535 ("the Patrem in full, dominicaliter"), Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1543, Duke Henry's Saxony 1539 ("the Latin Patrem in full, after the common notes"), Mecklenburg 1552 (with the Latin text and notes), the Palatinate 1546 and Saxony 1580 (Sehling 4, p. 341; 6/1, p. 55; 1, p. 274; 5, p. 198; 14, p. 96; 1, p. 368). Brandenburg (1540) sang the Latin Patrem "in cathedrals and foundations", and "Wir glauben" in the parishes (Sehling 3, p. 68).

Not intoned. Prussia (1525) abolished the priest's intonation: "The Credo or creed the priest shall not begin as heretofore, but it shall be sung in German by the choir and the people" (Sehling 4, p. 32).

2.9.2 Nicene, Apostles' or Athanasian

The Nicene Creed in the Lutheran Mass. The Latin Credo of the Mass is the Nicene Creed, and "Wir glauben all" is Luther's paraphrase of it. Sangerhausen (1555) calls the people's German creed "the customary Symbolum Nicaenum in German" (Sehling 1, p. 658). Weissenfels (1578) sometimes sang "the Symbolum Nicenum" in figured music before the German creed (Sehling 1, p. 693).

The Apostles' Creed in Hesse and the Reformed orders. The Hessian order of 1566 (Moderate Reformed) put the Apostles' Creed in the Mass, sung by everyone every Sunday, and kept the Nicene and Athanasian Creeds for the feasts of Christ. Hesse, Kirchenordnung, 1566 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 8, pp. 242–243):

> Es wird aber dies symbolum und bekentnus des glaubens von der ganzen kirchen allen sontag mit heller stim nach der lection des evangelii gesungen und dasselbige aus volgenden ursachen […] Auf die feirtage aber Christi mag man singen oder lesen das symbolum Nicenum oder Athanasii, welche dann sehr nütz sein zur sterkung unsers glaubens und zu widerstehen den ketzern, so uf mancherlei weis die ehr und die zwo naturen Christi, des Sohns Gottes angefochten und gelestert haben

But this creed and confession of faith is sung by the whole church every Sunday with clear voice after the reading of the gospel, and that for the following causes […] But on the feasts of Christ one may sing or read the Nicene Creed or that of Athanasius, which are very profitable for the strengthening of our faith and for withstanding the heretics who in manifold ways have assailed and blasphemed the honour and the two natures of Christ, the Son of God.

The Palatine order of 1563 (Reformed) has the communicants confess the Apostles' Creed "with mouth and heart" inside the Supper form (§2.4.7). Nördlingen (1579) had "an article of the Apostles' Creed with the short exposition of Luther's catechism" read before the German creed on feast days (Sehling 12, p. 366).

The Athanasian Creed was read or sung on Trinity Sunday in some places: as the text of the early sermon at Schweinfurt (1543) and at Altenburg (1554) (Sehling 11, p. 638; 1, p. 519). Its place was otherwise the morning office (Chapter 10, §10.7).

2.9.3 Where the creed fell

After the gospel nearly everywhere; after the sermon in Württemberg, where the creed was sung "in German" when the sermon was over (Sehling 16, p. 252); and inside the Supper form in the Reformed Palatinate. The places of the creed-hymn as offertory, as cover for the preacher's movement to the pulpit, and as a substitute for "Nun bitten wir" are in Chapter 8, §§8.9.1–8.9.4.

2.9.4 Which creed, order by order

Four practices. A search of the corpus for the creeds named in or near the Mass (Credo in unum Deum, Patrem, symbolum Nicenum, symbolum apostolicum, Credo in Deum Patrem, "Ich glaub in Gott Vater", Athanasii) gives four practices:

- The Nicene Creed only, in Latin, in German verse by verse, or as Luther's "Wir glauben all". This is the rule of the Saxon, Bugenhagen and Franconian orders.
- The Apostles' Creed only, sung or said: Strasbourg (1524, Moderate Reformed), the foundation Mass at Goslar, the Upper German pulpit, the Reformed Supper.
- A choice left open, Nicene or Apostles', Latin or German, with no rule for when.
- A choice by occasion: one creed on Sundays, another on feasts.

Strasbourg: the Apostles' Creed sung, the Nicene by some. The Strasbourg German Mass of 1524 (Moderate Reformed) prints the Apostles' Creed with notes after the sermon, in Matthäus Greiter's setting, and leaves the Nicene to those who want it. Strasbourg, Ordenung und inhalt Teutscher Mess, 1524 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 20/1, p. 138):

> Folget die Predig Darnach der Glaub Ich glaub in Got Vater, den almechtigen, schöpffer himmels und der erden [...] Das groß Patrem, das man nennt Symbolum Nicenum, würt von etlichen gesungen

Then followeth the sermon. Thereafter the Creed: "I believe in God the Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth" [...] The great Patrem, which is called the Nicene Creed, is sung by some.

The earlier Strasbourg Mass of Theobald Schwarz (1524, Moderate Reformed) had the Nicene Creed in German, "Ich glaub in ein Gott, den almechtigen vattern" (Sehling 20/1, p. 121).

By occasion: Sundays and feasts. Hesse (1566, Moderate Reformed) gave the Apostles' Creed to every Sunday and the Nicene or Athanasian to the feasts of Christ (§2.9.2). The Rothenberg ministers of 1618 reversed the scheme: "Wir glauben" on Sundays, the Apostles' Creed word for word on the other feasts. Rothenberg, Christliche vereinigung of the ministers, 1618 (Sehling 13, p. 548):

> Nach abtretung der knaben, sing man die sontäg den gewöhnlichen glauben: Wir glauben all an einen Gott etc. Die andern feiertäg aber das symbolum apostolicum deutsch von worts zu worts: Ich glaub in Gott Vater, allmechtigen etc.

After the boys have stepped down, let the customary creed be sung on the Sundays: "We All Believe in One True God", etc. But on the other holy days the Apostles' Creed in German, word for word: "I believe in God the Father Almighty", etc.

A free choice of three. The Hessian Agende of 1574 (Philippist) lets the Apostles' Creed, Luther's creed-hymn or the Nicene be sung after the gospel. On occasion the Nicene or the Athanasian Creed might instead be read aloud at the altar. Hesse, Agende, 1574 (Philippist; Sehling 8, p. 411):

> Auf verlesung des evangelii wird gesungen das symbolum apostolicum teutsch, von wort zu wort, oder wie es Doctor Luther paraphrastice in gesangsweise gestelt hat, oder das symbolum Nicenum teutsch. Man mag auch je bisweilen nach dem evangelio das teutsch Grates nunc omnes, oder einen andern kurzen gesang singen und darauf das symbolum Nicenum oder Athanasianum mit klarer stimm dem volk für dem altar fürlesen

Upon the reading of the gospel is sung the Apostles' Creed in German, word for word, or as Doctor Luther hath set it in the manner of a song by way of paraphrase, or the Nicene Creed in German. One may also now and then, after the gospel, sing the German Grates nunc omnes, or another short song, and thereupon read the Nicene or Athanasian Creed with a clear voice to the people before the altar.

The Hessian Agende (Philippist) counts "Wir glauben all" as a paraphrase of the Apostles' Creed, not of the Nicene. The Corvey order for Bruchhausen (1603) does the same: "the Apostles' Creed, as Dr Luther set it in German in the manner of a song", where Sehling's editors identify the song as "Wir glauben all" (Sehling 21, p. 244). Most orders, and the modern editors, take it as the Nicene.

What the table shows.

- The Nicene Creed, sung in Latin by the choir and in German by the people, is the Lutheran norm north and east.
- The Apostles' Creed entered the Mass from three directions:
  - the Upper German sermon service (Strasbourg 1524, Moderate Reformed; Schwäbisch Hall and Württemberg's pulpit, Lutheran);
  - the Reformed Supper (Frankfurt's French church, the Palatinate; both Reformed);
  - Hesse (Moderate Reformed), where it was the creed of the whole congregation every Sunday.
- The Athanasian Creed was never the Sunday creed. It was read on the feasts of Christ in Hesse (Moderate Reformed) and on Trinity Sunday in a few places (§2.9.2), and otherwise belonged to the morning office.
- The weekday offices of Naumburg (1537) and Nördlingen (1544, 1579) gave the Nicene Creed its own day, Friday or Thursday, in a weekly round of canticles (Sehling 2, p. 72; 12, pp. 326, 377); that is office, not Mass.

2.10 The Preface and the Sanctus

The Proper Prefaces, their texts and the days they were used, are in Chapter 4, §4.8 and Appendix 4.A; the German Sanctus hymns ("Jesaia dem Propheten", the Trinitarian "Heilig ist Gott der Vater") in Chapter 8, §8.12.

2.10.1 The Preface: required, optional, festal or gone

Four answers. The orders give four answers to the question whether the Preface was sung:

- Required. The Formula missae, Prussia 1525, Brandenburg 1540, Transylvania 1547 and the Breslau Mass of 1557 have it in the ordo, with the dialogue (§§2.4.4–2.4.5).
- If time allows. Mecklenburg (1552) makes it the priest's choice "if the time permit".
- Festal. Wittenberg 1533 (feasts, and Trinity on Sundays "if one will"), Duke Henry's Saxony 1539 ("on the feasts and now and then on Sundays"), Pomerania 1535 ("not always … especially at the high feasts"), the Palatinate 1546 (the whole Preface "on the high feasts", the dialogue always) and the boys' daily service at Hof (from Lossius's book "on the chief festivals") (Sehling 1, pp. 704, 274; 4, p. 341; 14, p. 97; 11, p. 473).
- Gone. The Deutsche Messe, Nürnberg 1533, Albertine Saxony 1580, Württemberg and the Reformed orders. The Palatinate's Reformed form (1563) keeps only the idea of the Sursum corda, as an exhortation to lift up the heart "into heaven, where Christ Jesus is" (§2.4.7).

The Mecklenburg rubric shows the whole Preface section made optional. Mecklenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1552 (Sehling 5, p. 199):

> So es denn die zeit leidet, mag der priester die prefation singen, deudsch oder latinisch, anzufahen mit diesen worten: Dominus vobiscum, oder Der herr sei mit euch. Und findest die prefationes auch hernach an irem ort bei sammen mit den gewönlichen noten verzeichnet. Darauf wird das sanctus latinisch gesungen, wie es auch nach der teglichen prefation gesatzt, oder deudsch Esaia dem propheten das geschach, wie es im gesangbüchlin stehet. So man zeit hat, mag der priester auch eine vermanung und unterricht vom hochwirdigen sacrament dem volk furlesen. Wie auch nach den prefationibus verzeichnet. Nach der vermanung, oder wenn um kurz der zeit willen, die vermanung und prefation unterlassen werden, alsbald nach der predigt singe der priester

If then the time permit, the priest may sing the Preface, in German or in Latin, beginning with these words: Dominus vobiscum, or "The Lord be with you". And thou findest the Prefaces also set down together hereafter in their place with the customary notes. Thereupon the Sanctus is sung in Latin, as it is also set after the daily Preface, or in German, "Isaiah, Mighty Seer in Days of Old", as it standeth in the song-book. If there be time, the priest may also read to the people an exhortation and instruction concerning the most worthy sacrament, as is also set down after the Prefaces. After the exhortation, or, when for shortness of time the exhortation and Preface are left out, straightway after the sermon, let the priest sing [the Our Father and the Words of the Testament].

2.10.2 Where the Sanctus fell

Five places. The Sanctus is the ordinary that moved most:

1. After the Preface, before the Verba (the Roman place): Mecklenburg 1552, Pomerania 1535, Brandenburg 1540, the Palatinate 1546, Transylvania 1547.
2. After the Verba, which were sung in the Preface: the Formula missae ("with the elevation during the Benedictus") and Prussia 1525 (§2.4.4).
3. After the Verba, without a Preface: Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533, followed by the Lord's Prayer and the Pax (§2.4.3).
4. During the distribution, in German: the Deutsche Messe, Duke Henry's Saxony 1539, Albertine Saxony 1580, Mecklenburg 1552 (as an alternative), Hof 1592 (the Latin Sanctus and Agnus "of the season" sung during the communion), Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1543 ("at another time, or at all times, under the communion").
5. Nowhere: Württemberg and the Reformed orders.

2.10.3 With or without the Benedictus

The Latin Sanctus kept its Benedictus. Where the Latin Sanctus was sung, it was sung whole, with the Benedictus qui venit and its Hosanna. The Formula missae had the elevation "under the singing of the Benedictus" (Sehling 1, p. 6). The Palatinate order of 1546 has the choir sing "the Sanctus as far as the Agnus Dei", that is, through the Benedictus (Sehling 14, p. 97), and the Amberg hospital church in 1544 "the Sanctus as far as the Agnus Dei" before the German Lord's Prayer (Sehling 13, p. 283).

Luther's German Sanctus dropped it. "Jesaia dem Propheten" paraphrases Isaiah 6 only, and so has no Benedictus and no Hosanna. Where it replaced the Latin Sanctus, the Benedictus went with it.

The other German Sanctus kept it. The prose German Sanctus of the early German Masses, and the Trinitarian Sanctus of Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel, keep the Benedictus and the Hebrew Hosianna:

- Kantz (Nördlingen 1522): "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Sabaoth; full are heaven and earth of thy glory. Hosanna in the highest! Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord. Luck and salvation in the highest!" (Sehling 12, p. 286), with Hosanna rendered Glück und heil;
- Bremen 1525, in Low German, the same (Sehling 7/2.2, p. 406);
- Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1543: "Holy is God the Father, holy is God the Son, holy is God the Holy Ghost … Hosianna in the highest. Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord. Hosianna in the highest" (Sehling 6/1, p. 59);
- Dortmund 1554, Low German, with the gloss "Hosianna (ah, make us blessed)" (Sehling 21, p. 211);
- the Neuenrade order of 1564 prints two Low German Sanctus texts, both with "Gelovet sy, de da kümt im namen des Heren" (Sehling 22, p. 532);
- Volprecht and Döber at Nürnberg (1524–1525) rendered Hosanna "Mach uns selig in der höhe", "make us blessed in the highest" (Sehling 11, pp. 41, 54; Chapter 7, §§7.7–7.8).

2.11 The Lord's Prayer and the Words of Institution

The Words of Institution, their wording, their chant and the elevation are treated order by order in Chapter 7; the people's Lord's Prayer hymn in Chapter 8, §8.13. This section compares their order.

Seven sequences.

Sequence	Orders
Preface with Verba → Sanctus → Lord's Prayer → Pax → communion	Formula missae 1523; Prussia 1525 (with the Agnus before the Pax)
Exhortation → Verba → Sanctus → Lord's Prayer → Pax → communion	Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533

Sequence	Orders
Preface → Sanctus → Verba → Lord's Prayer → Pax → Agnus → exhortation → communion	Brandenburg 1540
(Preface → Sanctus →) Lord's Prayer → Verba → communion	Wittenberg 1533; Pomerania 1535; Mecklenburg 1552; Transylvania 1547; Palatinate 1546 (Verba → Pax); Hof 1592 (Lord's Prayer → Pax → Verba)
Paraphrase of the Lord's Prayer + exhortation → Verba → communion	Deutsche Messe 1526; Duke Henry's Saxony 1539; Albertine Saxony 1580; Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1543 (at times)
Lord's Prayer hymn → confession → Verba read → communion	Württemberg 1553
Prayer ending in the Lord's Prayer → creed → breaking of bread	Palatinate 1563; Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588 (both Reformed)

The bread and the cup apart. The Deutsche Messe gave the bread after the words over the bread and the cup after the words over the cup. Albertine Saxony (1580) required this "in the villages, where this sacrament is given out by one person only" (Sehling 1, p. 369), and Prussia (1544) followed it (Sehling 4, pp. 65–66). Elsewhere both words were said or sung before the distribution.

The elevation. Kept with the Verba in the Formula missae, Prussia 1525, Wittenberg 1533, Brandenburg 1540 and Breslau 1557; abolished in the Palatinate 1546 and in Mecklenburg 1552, "that the inequality bring not contention" (Sehling 5, p. 199). See Chapter 7 and Chapter 12, §12.10.6.

2.12 The Agnus Dei

The German Agnus hymns ("Christe du Lamm Gottes", "O Lamm Gottes unschuldig") and their place after the communion are in Chapter 8, §§8.14–8.15.

2.12.1 How many times

Three, as of old. The Latin Agnus Dei three times, the third ending dona nobis pacem, is printed in full in Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 and Brandenburg 1540 (Sehling 13, p. 75; 3, p. 69). Regensburg had the schoolmaster sing it "three times slowly" during the distribution, and more songs if the three were not enough (1542 and 1553: Sehling 13, pp. 393, 420). Luther's German "Christe du Lamm Gottes" kept the threefold form: "Christe, du lamb gottes … erbarm dich unser. The third time thus: gib uns deinen friden, amen" (Wittenberg 1533, Sehling 1, p. 705). Hamburg (1529) and Neuenrade (1564) say the same in Low German (Sehling 5, p. 529; 22, p. 532). Hof sang "O Lamm Gottes unschuldig" three times, "the last time with these words added: Gib uns dein fride, o Jesu" (Sehling 11, p. 429). Müntzer's Allstedt (Radical Reformation) order had the people sing the Baptist's witness "three times", the third ending "Give us thy peace" (Sehling 1, p. 506).

Twice. The Prussian order of 1525 cut the Agnus Dei to two, "for brevity's sake", so that the people's hymns during the communion should have more room. Prussia, Artikel der ceremonien und anderer kirchen ordnung, 1525 (Sehling 4, p. 32):

> Bald darauf singet der chor das agnus dei, mit wenig noten deütsch oder lateinisch nach gelegenheit, doch von kürz wegen allein zweimal, damit die nachfolgenden christlichen gesenge der gemeine so vil bas stad haben, und das erste mahel mit dem miserere nobis, zum andern mit dem dona nobis pacem zubeschliessen.

Straightway thereupon the choir singeth the Agnus Dei with few notes, in German or Latin as occasion serveth, yet for brevity's sake only twice, that the Christian songs of the congregation following may have the more room; and to conclude the first time with the miserere nobis, the second with the dona nobis pacem.

The Livonian towns copied it: "the Agnus Dei with few notes, twice … first, Be gracious to us; second, Give us thy peace" (Wolmar 1533, Sehling 5, p. 16).

Once. The Albertine Cellische Ordnungen of 1545 had the choir sing the Latin Agnus Dei once, after the communion, while the people knelt and gave thanks. Albertine Saxony, Die Cellischen Ordnungen, 1545 (Sehling 1, p. 301):

> so sol der chor anheben, das lateinische agnus dei nur ein mal singen, in des kniet das volk und thut seine danksagung zu got.

then shall the choir begin to sing the Latin Agnus Dei only once; meanwhile the people kneel and make their thanksgiving to God.

The single German strophe "Christe du Lamm Gottes … erbarm dich unser. Gib uns deinen Frieden", printed once as the close of the communion, is the form of Duke Henry's Saxony (1539) and the Calenberg-Göttingen Masses (1542) (Sehling 1, p. 275; 6/2, pp. 819, 824), and Kantz's Mass of 1522 has one strophe combining both endings (Sehling 12, p. 286).

2.12.2 Where it fell

Before or during the communion. In the Roman place, before the communion, in Prussia 1525 and Brandenburg 1540; during the distribution in the Formula missae, Nürnberg 1533, Pomerania 1535, Mecklenburg 1552, Transylvania 1547, Albertine Saxony 1580 and Hof 1592.

After the communion. The German Agnus "Christe du Lamm Gottes" after the communion as its close in Wittenberg 1533 ("when the communion is ended"), Hamburg 1529 ("when they have all communicated and are in their places"), Pomerania 1535 and Mecklenburg 1552. Pomerania limits the Latin Agnus and the hymns during the communion: "but not longer than the communion lasteth" (Sehling 4, p. 341).

2.13 The dismissal and the blessing

The Roman Mass ended with Ite missa est (or Benedicamus Domino in Masses without the Gloria), and then the priest's blessing, Benedicat vos omnipotens Deus, Pater et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus, a Trinitarian blessing (Sehling 11, p. 42, note 21). The evangelical orders changed both. The Benedicamus in the offices, its seasonal melodies and its German forms are treated in Chapter 8, §§8.16.8–8.16.10; the closing hymns in §8.15 of the same chapter.

2.13.1 Ite missa est, Benedicamus, or neither

Three practices. A search of every Ite missa est and every Benedicamus near the end of the Mass gives three practices:

- The Ite kept. Only two places:
  - the Breslau report of 1557: "with the Benedicamus or Ite missa est the Mass is closed" (Sehling 3, p. 404);
  - the Brandenburg-Ansbach visitation of 1536, which kept the old order "from the Confiteor to the end of the Mass, Ite missa est", so far as it was not against Scripture (Sehling 11, p. 326). The Ansbach Auctuarium of 1548, an Interim order, then put "the Benedicamus for the Ite missa" (Sehling 11, p. 327).
- The Benedicamus in its place, in Latin or in German (lists below).
- Neither. Luther's Deutsche Messe and most Saxon, Bugenhagen, Upper German and Reformed orders end with the thanksgiving collect and the blessing, and at most a hymn after it. Pomerania (1535): "after the Amen nothing more is sung" (Sehling 4, p. 341).

Never Ite missa est. Volprecht's Nürnberg Mass makes the rule explicit. Nürnberg, Deutsche Messe of the Prior Volprecht, 1524 (Sehling 11, p. 39):

> Benechctio: ista dicitur et nunquam dicitur Ite missa est; loco ejus dicitur Benedicamus Domino Responsio: Deo gratias.

The blessing: this is said, and never is Ite missa est said; in its place is said Benedicamus Domino; response: Deo gratias.

The Latin Benedicamus:

- Luther, Formula missae (1523): in the place of the Ite, "with alleluia added (where and when it pleaseth)", or with the vesper melodies (§2.3.2; Sehling 1, p. 6);
- Nürnberg, Form und Ordnung einer christlichen Messe (1525): "Benedicamus Domino, dominicaliter", then "Es woll uns Gott genädig sein" (Sehling 11, p. 57);
- Goslar (1528): the collect "with the Benedicamus" sung by the boys in the choir after the distribution (Sehling 7/2.2, p. 242);

- Brandenburg-Nürnberg (1533), followed by the blessing (quoted below, Sehling 11, p. 198);
- Regensburg (1542): the gospeller sings Deo dicamus gratias; Regensburg (1553): the second minister sings Benedicamus Domino, the choir Deo dicamus gratias (Sehling 13, pp. 393, 421);
- Pfalz-Neuburg (1543): sung by the priest or the deacons "in the tone in which the Kyrie was sung", the choir answering in the same tone Deo dicamus gratias (Sehling 13, p. 76);
- Transylvania (1547): Dominus vobiscum, collect and Benedicamus, all concluded "with the blessing of the people in the name of the Holy Trinity" (Sehling 24, pp. 223, 244);
- Hohenlohe (1553): "the collect with Benedicamus Domino", then the Aaronic blessing (Sehling 15, p. 73); the Öhringen foundation (1556) prints its melody with the Mass (Sehling 15, p. 104);
- Suhl in Henneberg (1562): "Collect. Benedicamus. The blessing out of Moses" (Sehling 2, p. 351);
- Wolfstein (1574): "the thanksgiving, the Benedicamus, the choir answereth Deo gratias, and the blessing" (Sehling 13, p. 577);
- Chemnitz (1578): "the collect which is called the complenda, and the Benedicamus together with the benediction, as is customary" (Sehling 1, p. 542).

The German Benedicamus. The early German Masses put the versicle into German, and Hof kept it with its own melody in 1592:

- Müntzer, Allstedt (1524, Radical Reformation): each German Mass ends with a prayer and the Benedicamus, "Last uns gesegnen den herren, alleluia. Got sei ewiglich dank" (Sehling 1, pp. 497, 502);
- Erfurt, Deutsches Kirchenamt (1525), after Müntzer (Radical Reformation): "Lasst uns gesegnen den herren. Gott sei ewiglich dank", then the Aaronic blessing (Sehling 2, p. 380);
- Lippe (1525), in Low German: "Ladt uns benedyen den hern, Gade sy ewich danck", then the Aaronic blessing (Sehling 22, p. 569);
- Volprecht's German Mass (1524), after the blessing: "Last uns den Herrn lob und dank sagen! Antwort: Gott sei gedankt" (Sehling 11, p. 42);
- Worms (1524, Moderate Reformed): "Last uns gott gebenedeien", then a Trinitarian blessing (quoted below);
- Strasbourg (1524, Moderate Reformed): "Sagen danck dem herren", then the blessing (Sehling 20/1, pp. 133, 139);
- Hof (1592): the deacon "addeth the German Benedicamus": "Last uns gebenedeien den Herren. Chorus: Gott sei gedankt", then the Aaronic blessing (Sehling 11, pp. 426–427).

Before or after the blessing. In most orders that kept it the Benedicamus came before the blessing, as in the Roman Mass. Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1528 put it after: "for the conclusion the benediction of Numbers 6 in German, thereafter Benedicamus Domino sung" (Sehling 11, p. 137). So did Volprecht's German Mass, and Nürnberg 1525, where the Benedicamus is followed by a hymn.

2.13.2 The blessing: Aaronic, Trinitarian, or both

Five practices. The blessings at the end of the Mass were searched in every form: Numbers 6, Psalm 67, the Trinitarian formulas ("Gott Vater, Sohn und heiliger Geist", Benedicat vos … Pater et Filius), and 2 Corinthians 13:13. They give five practices:

- The Aaronic blessing alone. This is the rule, from the Formula missae onward. It is in the singular ("Der Herr segne dich") in the Deutsche Messe and the Saxon orders, and in the plural ("Der Herr gesegen euch") in Nürnberg and the south. Examples:
  - Luther's Deutsche Messe (1526);
  - Wittenberg (1533);
  - Pomerania (1535);
  - Mecklenburg (1552);
  - Albertine Saxony (1580);
  - Volprecht (1524) and Döber (1525) at Nürnberg;
  - Lippe and Erfurt (1525);
  - Weißenburg and Brandenburg-Nürnberg (1528);
  - Hohenlohe (1553);
  - Suhl (1562);
  - Hof (1592);

    - the Palatinate's Sunday service (1563, Reformed, Sehling 14, p. 391).
- A Trinitarian blessing alone: the early German Masses of Worms and Strasbourg (1524, both Moderate Reformed), and Regensburg (1542), all quoted below. Transylvania (1547) blesses "in the name of the Holy Trinity" without printing the words (Sehling 24, p. 223).
- The Aaronic and the Trinitarian together, the second following the first: Strasbourg's Ordenung und inhalt Teutscher Mess (1524, Moderate Reformed): "Gesegne euch der herr … Der segen Got, des vatters und des suns etc." (Sehling 20/1, p. 140); and the Strasbourg Supper of 1598 (quoted below).
- A choice of forms: the Brandenburg-Nürnberg set of four, and its descendants (below).
- Different blessings for different occasions: Prussia (1525) and Strasbourg (1598) (below).

The Nürnberg set of four. Brandenburg-Nürnberg gave four blessings to choose from: Numbers 6; a paraphrase of Psalm 67; and two Trinitarian forms. Brandenburg-Nürnberg, Kirchenordnung, 1533 (Sehling 11, p. 198):

> Benedicamus Domino. Deo gracias. Darnach segne er das volk also: Der Herr gesegen euch und behüte euch! Der Herr erleuchte sein angesicht über euch und sei euch gnedig! Der Herr erhebe sein angesicht auf euch und gebe euch fride! Amen. Oder also: Gott sei uns gnedig und barmherzig und gebe uns seinen götlichen segen! Er laß uns sein angesicht leuchten und gebe uns seinen frid! Amen. Oder also: Gesegen und behüte uns, Gott der Vater und der Sune und der Heilig Gaist! Amen. Oder also: Der segen Gott des Vaters und des Suns und des Heiligen Gaists sei mit euch und bleib allezeit mit uns allen! Amen.

Benedicamus Domino. Deo gratias. Thereafter let him bless the people thus: "The Lord bless you and keep you! The Lord make his face shine upon you and be gracious unto you! The Lord lift up his countenance upon you and give you peace! Amen." Or thus: "God be gracious and merciful unto us and give us his divine blessing! May he cause his face to shine upon us and give us his peace! Amen." Or thus: "Bless and keep us, God the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost! Amen." Or thus: "The blessing of God the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost be with you and abide alway with us all! Amen."

The set passed, whole or shortened, into these orders:

Order	Sehling	Forms offered
Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533	11, p. 198	Aaronic; Ps 67; "Gesegne und behüte uns, Gott der Vater …"; "Der Segen Gottes des Vaters …"
Pfalz-Neuburg 1543	13, p. 76	the same four
Schwäbisch Hall 1543	17/1, p. 135	Aaronic; the two Trinitarian forms
Strasbourg 1553 (Marbach)	20/1, p. 415	the same four
Württemberg 1553	16, p. 255	Aaronic (singular); Ps 67; "Gesegne und behüte uns, Gott …"
Kurpfalz 1556	14, p. 150	as Württemberg, in the plural
Worms, Agendbüchlein, 1560	19/1, p. 210	the same four
Leiningen-Westerburg 1566	19/1, p. 253	Aaronic; Ps 67; "Gesegne und behüte uns, Gott …"
Regensburg 1567	13, p. 463	Aaronic (singular), or "Es segne und behüte euch Gott der Vater, Gott der Son und Gott der Heilig Geist"
Hanau-Lichtenberg 1573	20/2, p. 67	Aaronic; Ps 67; "Gesegne und behüte uns, Gott …"
Oldenburg 1573	7/2.1, p. 1145	Aaronic (singular); Ps 67; the two Trinitarian forms

Pfalz-Veldenz 1574; Lützelstein 1605	18, pp. 504, 607	Aaronic with "Gehet hin, der Geist des Herrn geleite euch zum ewigen Leben", or "Der Segen Gottes, des Vaters und des Sohns und des heiligen Geistes … und sein heiliger Geist stärke und erhalte uns zum ewigen Leben"

A Trinitarian blessing alone. The first German Mass of Worms (Moderate Reformed) closed with a German Benedicamus and the Trinitarian blessing only. Worms, Deutsche Messe, 1524 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 19/1, p. 129):

> Last uns gott gebenedeien. Danck, lob, ere unnd preiß sei gott durch Christum, unsern herren, Amen. Benedictio: Der segen des Almechtigen gottes, vatters, suns und heyligen geyst, sei mit euch und bleib alweg bei euch. Amen.

Let us bless God. Thanks, laud, honour and praise be to God through Christ our Lord, Amen. The blessing: "The blessing of Almighty God, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, be with you and abide alway with you. Amen."

The Nunc dimittis followed. The two Strasbourg Masses of 1524 (Moderate Reformed) by Theobald Schwarz and in the Teutsche Meß und Tauff end the same way: "Der segen Gott, des vatters [+] und des suns [+] und des heiligen geists [+], sey mit uns und bleib alweg", with three signs of the cross (Sehling 20/1, pp. 123, 133). At Regensburg in 1542 the priest blessed with the Trinitarian form alone. Regensburg, Wahrhaftiger Bericht, 1542 (Sehling 13, p. 393):

> Darnach kert sich der priester umb gegen dem volk und segnet dasselbig mit disen worten: Es gesegne und behüte uns Gott der Vater, Sone und Heiliger Geist. Amen

Thereafter the priest turneth about toward the people and blesseth them with these words: "Bless and keep us God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Amen."

By occasion: feasts and weekdays. Prussia assigned a sung blessing from Psalm 67 to the feasts, and the Aaronic blessing to ordinary days, at the end of matins, vespers and the Mass alike. Prussia, Artikel der ceremonien und anderer kirchen ordnung, 1525 (Sehling 4, pp. 37–38):

> Volgen die benediction oder beschluss gesang am encl der metten, vesper und mess. Diebus Festivis. Es wol uns gott seinen segen geben, unser got segen uns. [p. 38] […] Responsio. Und es sollen ihn ferchten alle ende der welt amen. Quotitiana benedictio. Der herr erleuchte sein angesicht über uns und sei uns gnedig

There follow the benediction or closing chant at the end of matins, vespers and Mass. On feast days: "God give us his blessing, our God bless us." Response: "And all the ends of the world shall fear him, Amen." The daily benediction: "The Lord make his face shine upon us and be gracious unto us."

By occasion: the sermon and the Supper. Strasbourg in 1598 closed the plain preaching service with the Trinitarian blessing alone, "Die Benedeiung Gottes, des Vatters, des Sohns und des heiligen Geistes, seie jetzt und zu allen zeiten mit uns allen" (Sehling 20/1, p. 589). It closed the Supper with the Aaronic and the Trinitarian together. Strasbourg, Kirchenordnung, 1598 (Sehling 20/1, p. 613):

> Der Herr segne Euch und behüte Euch. Der Herr laß sein Angesicht leuchten uber Euch und sei Euch gnädig. Der Herr hebe sein Angesicht uber Euch und geb Euch den Frieden. Die Benedeihung Gottes, des Vaters, des Sohns und des heil. Geistes, seie jetzt und zu allen zeiten mit uns allen, Amen. Gehet hin im Frieden des Herren

"The Lord bless you and keep you. The Lord make his face shine upon you and be gracious unto you. The Lord lift up his countenance upon you and give you peace. The benediction of God, of the Father, of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, be now and at all times with us all, Amen." Go hence in the peace of the Lord.

2 Corinthians 13:13. The apostolic blessing, "Die gnad unsers Herrn Jesu Christi und die liebe Gottes, sampt der gemeinschaft des heiligen Geistes", appears in two places:

- Hesse (1566, Moderate Reformed) gives it as the alternative to Numbers 6 when the minister dismisses the congregation (Sehling 8, p. 248);
- Nördlingen (1579) closes the pulpit prayers with it (Sehling 12, p. 368).

Psalm 67 stands beside the blessing in three forms:

- Luther's third option in the Formula missae;
- the second form of the Nürnberg set;
- the sung feast-day blessing of Prussia.

Where it was sung as Luther's hymn, "Es wolle uns Gott genädig sein", it closed the service after the blessing: Nürnberg 1525 (Sehling 11, p. 57), Strasbourg 1525 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 20/1, p. 147), and Hoya 1571, in a service without the Supper (Sehling 6/2, p. 1152; Chapter 8, §8.15).

After the blessing.

- Pomerania (1535) ended there (Sehling 4, p. 341).
- Mecklenburg (1552) added "Erhalt uns, Herr, bei deinem Wort" or "Verleih uns Frieden" (Sehling 5, p. 199).
- Duke Henry's Saxony (1539) added "Gott sei gelobet", "and so go home" (Sehling 1, p. 275).

2.14 When nobody communicated

The Mass without the Supper. No evangelical order allowed a Mass without communicants. When nobody had announced himself for the Supper, the Mass stopped after the sermon. What was left was the first half of the ordo, closed with prayers. The postcommunion substitutes and the Litany in this place are treated in Chapter 5, §5.6, and Chapter 13, §13.21; the change of vestments in Chapter 14, §14.7.

The forms.

- Pomerania 1535: "everything is sung, as is ordered, until the sermon; but after the sermon one or two German psalms" (Sehling 4, p. 341).
- Mecklenburg 1552: confession and absolution; a German psalm or two, or "Allein Gott"; collect; epistle; psalm; gospel; Patrem; "Wir glauben"; the sermon with the prayer (Sehling 5, p. 199).
- Albertine Saxony 1580: "after the sermon, or a chapter of holy Scripture read, it shall be concluded with a Christian collect and the customary benediction" (Sehling 1, p. 369).
- Transylvania 1547: no Mass, but a German psalm, collect, sequence or tract, a chapter of the New Testament in course, "Wir glauben", and the suffrages.

The Transylvanian rubric shows how far the service fell back toward the office. Transylvania, Kirchenordnung (German), 1547 (Sehling 24, p. 244):

> Wo aber zu diesem ampt keine communicanten vorhanden sein, wird keine meß nit gehalten, sonder an stat singt man zum ersten einen Deutschen psalmen, darauff die collect, meer ein Christliche sequentz oder tract oder was die zeit mit bringt. Darnach wird gelesen vom anfang des newen testaments biß zum ende nach der ordnung allweg ein Deutsch capitel, allein das man in der fasten die Deutsch episteln und evangelien behelt, wie sie nach den tagen verordnet sein. Nach der lection desselbigen capitels singt man: Wir gleuben all, mit dem versikel und collecten von der heiligen Dreifeltigkeit. Darnach folgen auch die andere suffragia, nemlich für den könig, umb vergebung der sunden und umb frieden mit iren versikeln und collecten, welches auch mit dem Benedicamus und segen des volcks beschlossen wirdt.

But where there are no communicants for this office, no Mass at all is held; but in its stead there is sung first a German psalm, thereupon the collect, further a Christian sequence or tract, or what the season bringeth. Thereafter is read, in order from the beginning of the New Testament to the end, always one chapter in German; only that in Lent the German epistles and gospels are kept, as they are appointed for the days. After the reading of the same chapter is sung "We All Believe in One True God", with the versicle and collect of the Holy Trinity. Thereafter follow also the other suffrages, namely for the king, for the forgiveness of sins and for peace, with their versicles and collects; which also is concluded with the Benedicamus and the blessing of the people.

The boys' daily Mass at Hof. One order kept a Mass-shaped service with no communion at all, as a school exercise. At Hof (1592) the boys' "actus diurnus" ran: the seasonal Kyrie and Et in terra from the great missal; the gospel in Latin; sequence, tract or gradual; the gospel in German; "the Sanctus of the season", with the Preface on the chief feasts; the Lord's Prayer sung by a boy "in the deacon's place"; "the Agnus Dei of the season"; and a collect (Sehling 11, pp. 472–473).

2.15 Ceremonial: gestures, postures and places

Several gestures are treated elsewhere:

- where the minister stands, and whether he faces the people: Chapter 14, §14.5.2;
- vestments: Chapter 14, §14.7;
- the elevation, the signs of the cross printed over the elements, and the bows of the Latin-frame canons: Chapter 7 (e.g. §§7.12.3, 7.12.8);
- the priest kneeling at the preparation and after the Mass: Chapter 3, §§3.3.2–3.3.4, 3.6.3;
- kneeling during Veni sancte Spiritus, "Nun bitten wir" and the hymn in the place of the offertory: Chapter 8, §§8.4.1, 8.11.3, 8.13.2;
- deacons, subdeacons and ministrants at the altar: Chapter 16, §16.4.2.

This section gathers what the orders prescribe for the body during the Mass, gesture by gesture.

2.15.1 What the orders say, and what they do not

The searches. The corpus was searched, near the Mass and the Supper, for each of the following:

- the sign of the cross ("creutz machen", signum crucis, "segnen", and the † and [+] marks the editions print in the text);
- genuflection (genuflexio, "kniebeugen", flexis genibus);
- kneeling, bowing (inclinatio, "neigen", "bücken") and standing or sitting;
- hats and bare heads ("hut", "baret", capite aperto, "bloßes haupt");
- the hands (manibus iunctis, extensis, "gefaltene hände", "aufgehobene hände");
- turning ("kert sich zum volk", conversus ad populum), the sides and horns of the altar (cornu, "rechte seite", "epistelseite");
- the kiss and the pax, incense and the washing of hands.

Few rubrics. The orders prescribe little. Where they say anything, it is usually one of three things:

- kneeling, for prayer and for communion;
- turning, toward the altar to pray and toward the people to read, greet and exhort;
- a warning against the old gestures.

Much was left to custom. Nassau (1575, Philippist) keeps "the customary old form of the administration" of the Supper, but drops the "rites and gesticulations" (Sehling 10, p. 151).

Not found. No order in the corpus prescribes any of the following:

- the Roman genuflection on one knee. Flexis genibus and "mit gebogenen knien" always mean kneeling;
- the epistle and gospel horns of the altar, or carrying the book from one side to the other;
- turning over the right shoulder, or any rule for the direction of a turn;
- the hands of the celebrant joined, raised in the orans position, or extended toward the people;
- the kiss of the altar, of the book, of the paten, or of the deacon's hand. Nor are there any honours paid to the deacon;
- the celebrant's biretta, or taking it off and putting it on at the altar;
- incense at the Mass;
- the Lavabo.

2.15.2 The sign of the cross

Kept in the early German Masses. The first German Masses still print the crosses:

- Allstedt (Radical Reformation). Müntzer's Ordnung und berechnunge des teutschen ampts (1523) marks the bread and the cup at the Words of Institution: "gesegnete † das und brach es", "gesegnete † den". The minister raises his hand at "Das ist mein leichnam" (Elevando manu), and turns to the people with the cup (Sehling 1, p. 506).
- Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed). In Schwarz's German Mass of 1524 the places "where the cross is to be made" are marked [+], according to the editors (Sehling 20/1, p. 120). The priest, turned to the people, says "Gott begnade unnd erbarme sich uber uns alle [+]" at the beginning. He blesses with three crosses at the end, "Der segen Gott, des vatters [+] und des suns [+] und des heiligen geists [+]" (Sehling 20/1, pp. 120, 123). The Teutsche Meß und Tauff and the Ordenung und inhalt of 1524 do the same (pp. 130, 133, 137).

- Hof. As late as 1592 the order prints a † after the deacon's Pax, "Der frid des Herren sei mit euch allen. †", and after the blessing (Sehling 11, pp. 426–427).

The Latin-frame orders keep the signs over the elements at the Verba. They are printed in Chapter 7 with ✠.

Rejected. Hannover (1536) lets go of what is not needful, among it "so many crosses" and "such gestures" (Sehling 6/2, pp. 1007–1008). Danzig (1557), as Sehling quotes it, makes the point at the Words of Institution. Danzig, first order of the Sunday Mass, 1557 (Sehling 4, p. 168):

> nimpt der priester die paten mit der geordenten hostien in die hand ohn alles papistisches creuzigen und andere geberde, also auch, wenn er die worte singt: nam er den kelch, nimmt er den kelch in die hand

The priest taketh the paten with the appointed host into his hand without all papistical crossing and other gestures; so also, when he singeth the words "he took the cup", he taketh the cup into his hand.

Outside the Mass. The sign of the cross stayed in baptism, at the exorcism ("Nim das zeichen des heiligen creutzs", Luther's Taufbüchlein, Sehling 1, p. 18). It also stayed in the household prayers of the Small Catechism: "In the morning … thou shalt bless thyself with the holy cross and say: The will of God, Father, Son and Holy Ghost be done" (Kurpfalz 1556, Sehling 14, p. 141).

2.15.3 Kneeling, not genuflecting

The priest kneels. The priest kneels at these points:

- for his preparation or Confiteor at the foot of the altar (Pfalz-Neuburg, Mecklenburg, Regensburg, Hildesheim and others; Chapter 3, §§3.3.2–3.3.4). At Solms (1603) he does so "on the stool" before the altar (Sehling 9, p. 359);
- for the Kyrie and the prayers at Schwäbisch Hall (1535, below);
- through "Nun bitten wir" at Soest (1609), where the pastor "remains sitting on his knees" (Sehling 22, p. 489);
- after communion. At Hildesheim (1544) he kneels again before the altar and "thanketh God secretly for himself" (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 855). In Mecklenburg (1540/1545) the priest kneels before the altar and "the whole congregation shall do likewise", and they sing "Erhalt uns, Herr, bei deinem Wort" (Sehling 5, p. 155).

The congregation kneels. The Brenz order for Schwäbisch Hall makes the whole church kneel at the Kyrie, and says why. Schwäbisch Hall, Kirchenordnung, 1527 (Sehling 17/1, p. 49):

> Nach dem psalmen sol gesungen werden das Kirieleyson wie vor gewonhait, doch dieweyl es ein ernstlich, diemutig gebet ist, sol die gantz kirch darzu knien, nit das es etwas gegen got an dem knien lieg, sonder das doch in der kirchen ein gemein Zucht sey und ein igklichs sein ordnung

After the psalm the Kyrie eleison shall be sung, as hath been customary. But since it is an earnest, humble prayer, the whole church shall kneel thereto; not that anything toward God lieth in the kneeling, but that there may be a common discipline in the church, and every thing its order.

The Hall draft of 1535 kneels everyone for the Lord's Prayer before the Verba, and lets the pastor alone stand up to say them. Schwäbisch Hall, draft order of service, 1535 (Sehling 17/1, p. 102):

> Am ende der Annunctiation soll beschlossen werden mit eim Vatter unser, das bette yederman heimlich, auch nider kniend. Nach dem gebett steht der pfarrer allain auff und spreche die wort Consecrationis: Dan in der nacht, do der HERR etc. uberlaut, teutsch

At the end of the announcement it shall be concluded with an Our Father, which every man shall pray secretly, kneeling down also. After the prayer the pastor alone standeth up and saith the words of consecration, "For in the night in which the LORD," etc., aloud, in German.

Other orders kneel the congregation at these points:

- from the Lord's Prayer to the end of the communion: Hatzkerode (1534): "the whole church shall kneel devoutly until the end of the communion" (Sehling 2, p. 587);
- at the Lord's Prayer of the preparation for the Supper, after the examination and the declaration of forgiveness: the Palatinate (1563, Reformed): "Kniet nider und betet, wie uns der herr gelehret hat: Unser vater" (Sehling 14, p. 383). The Palatine order of 1601 (Reformed) copied the preparation but struck the kneeling out ("Getilgt ist das Knien beim Gebet", Sehling 14, p. 574);
- at the thanksgiving: Heilbronn (1543): "Knieend nieder und hebt ewere hertzen zu gott" (Sehling 17/1, p. 316); Lützelstein (1605): "Kniet und thut die Dancksagung" (Sehling 18, p. 606);
- at the prayers: in the penitential service of Wittgenstein (1555) the ministers kneel and bid the people "also sit upon their knees" (Sehling 22, p. 139); Ulm (1556): the preachers asked that the people, who sat through the common prayer "out of the convenience of the pews", be taught to kneel, "as is customary in other churches" (Sehling 17/2, p. 213);
- in the place of the offertory: Celle (1545) and Anhalt (1548) (Chapter 8, §8.11.3).

Boys kneeling before the altar. The singers of certain pieces knelt:

- Da pacem, three times, in the Pomeranian Mass (1569, Sehling 4, p. 438);
- "Kom, heiliger Geist" at Corvey's Bruchhausen (1603, Sehling 21, p. 244);
- the litany at Marggrabowa in Prussia (1581, Sehling 4, p. 149);
- Veni sancte Spiritus and "Nun bitten wir" at Hof, with the whole choir kneeling (Chapter 8, §8.4.1).

At "and was made man". One custom is reported only later. At Mansfeld, as a memorial against the Flacian error of Cyriacus Spangenberg, four choirboys knelt before the altar during the Creed. They sang alone "ist ein wahrer Mensch geboren" and touched the altar steps with their foreheads; the custom lasted into the eighteenth century (Sehling 2, p. 183, after Leopold's chronicle of 1817).

Communicants kneel. Most orders that say how communion was received have the communicants kneel at the altar:

- Regensburg (1542): the men on the right of the altar, the women on the left, "that at the end of the Patrem they kneel down there" (Sehling 13, pp. 392–393);
- Hohenlohe (1553): two honourable men set out a silk cloth and "little benches, on which the communicants kneel" (Sehling 15, p. 71);
- Lippe (1566): the men on one side, the women on the other (Sehling 21, p. 388);
- Marienhafe in East Frisia (1593): "kneeling, at one end of the altar or table the blessed bread, at the other the cup" (Sehling 7/1, p. 710);
- Solms (1603): the communicants kneel in the choir while the pastor, turned toward them, reads the exhortation (Sehling 9, p. 361);
- Ermsleben (1564): "they kneel down devoutly; then I pray before them, and they pray after me secretly; thereafter I do the consecration" (Sehling 2, p. 485).

After receiving, the communicants in Bugenhagen's orders went back to their places and "sit on their knees or stand, until the last blessing" (Hamburg 1529, Sehling 5, p. 529; Wolfenbüttel 1543, Sehling 6/1, p. 58).

Standing allowed, sitting forbidden. In Poland the Lutheran, Reformed and Brethren churches of the Sandomierz consensus had to settle the posture together. Synod of Petrikau, 1–3 June 1578 (Sandomierz consensus; Sehling 4, p. 263):

> ceremonias libertati christianae donamns, ac permittimus, ut stantes vel genua flectentes pii sacramentum corporis et sanguinis Christi sumant. Sessionis vero ad mensam domini, quia, praeter ritus in omnibus per Europam evangelicis ecclesiis vulgo consuetos, illi inter nos primi autores extiterunt, qui […] a nobis ad arrianismum perfidi transfugae facti sunt […] ceremoniam rejicimus

We grant the ceremonies to Christian liberty, and permit that the godly receive the sacrament of the body and blood of Christ standing or kneeling. But the sitting at the Lord's table, since, besides the rites commonly used in all evangelical churches throughout Europe, those were the first authors of it among us who […] became faithless deserters from us to Arianism […] we reject as a ceremony.

The synod of 1583 repeated the rule. Communion was to be given "to those standing or kneeling (with a protestation against the bread-worship customary among the papists)" (Sehling 4, p. 264). The Bohemian Brethren (Hussite) received kneeling. Their Ordo ecclesiasticus, as Sehling prints it, explains that their forebears had brought in standing in 1494 and gave it up under persecution (Sehling 4, p. 284). In Reformed Emden a Lasco still received kneeling over a towel; the custom was abolished by 1546 at the latest (editors' note, Sehling 7/1, p. 377).

Reverence, not adoration. The Calvinizing Nassau order of 1575 (Philippist) warned the people off the old gestures. Nassau-Dillenburg, Agende, 1575 (Philippist; Sehling 10, p. 151):

> Darbeneben soll man das vo[l]ck abmanen, das sie woll zuchtig und ehrerbietig, aber nicht als mit gefaltenen henden unnd kniebauw einen abgott (wie im bapstum geschicht und etliche der unsern noch gewohnet seint) anbetten wollen, ertzeigen sollen. Nach verlessener vermanung: Ir allerliebsten in Gott etc., sollen die kirchendiener also mit zugewentem angesicht zum volck stehen pleiben

Moreover the people shall be exhorted that they show themselves modest and reverent indeed, but not as though they would worship an idol with folded hands and bending of the knee (as is done in the papacy, and some of ours are still wont). After the exhortation "Dearly beloved in God", etc. has been read, the ministers shall remain standing thus with their face turned toward the people.

2.15.4 Bowing

Only in the Latin canons. The bows that survive are the priest's, in the orders that kept a Latin canon:

- Brandenburg (1540) lifts the host "with a slight bow" (Hic modica inclinatione, leva illud reverenter in altum), and has the priest bow for the ablution prayer Corpus tuum, Domine (Deinde inclinet se et dicat) (Sehling 3, pp. 69–70);
- Pfalz-Neuburg (1543) copies the second (Sehling 13, p. 76).

The texts are in Chapter 7, §§7.12.3, 7.12.8.

The name of Jesus. No order prescribes a bow at the name of Jesus. The words of Philippians 2:10, "Im namen Jesu sollen sich biegen alle knie", are sung as the introit of the Passion Mass by Müntzer (Radical Reformation) and those who copied him (Sehling 1, p. 502; 6/2, p. 825; 2, p. 379), but no rubric turns them into a gesture.

2.15.5 Hats and heads

Men uncovered, women covered. Hesse (Moderate Reformed) puts the old rule of 1 Corinthians 11 into the church order. Hesse, Kirchenordnung, 1566 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 8, p. 231):

> Es gehört auch zum wolstand und christlicher zucht, daß in der gemeinen versamlung der christen die weiber mit bedecktem haupt, die menner aber mit bloßen heuptern erscheinen, davon der apostel Paulus 1. Cor. 11

It belongeth also to seemliness and Christian discipline, that in the common assembly of the Christians the women appear with covered head, but the men with bare heads, whereof the apostle Paul [speaketh], 1 Corinthians 11.

A bare head appears elsewhere as a mark of humility:

- the public penitent at Limpurg (1596) sits through the whole sermon "with bare head" on a stool set before the altar or pulpit (Sehling 16, p. 609);
- at an ordination the superintendent lays his hand "on the bare head" of the new pastor (Württemberg 1559, Sehling 16, p. 356).

No order regulates the clergy's caps at the altar. Clerical caps appear only as dress outside the service (Chapter 14, §14.8).

2.15.6 Hands

No rule for the celebrant's hands. The orders say only what the hands hold:

- Müntzer (Radical Reformation): "raising the hand" at the bread (Elevando manu), and taking the cup "before the people" (Sehling 1, p. 506);
- Brandenburg (1540): "take the chalice with both hands" (calicem accipe cum ambabus manibus) (Sehling 3, p. 69);

- Transylvania (1547): the minister, turned to the people, says the Lord's Prayer and then the Verba "from the book over the bread and the wine, holding each in turn in his hands" (per vices utrunque tenens in manibus) (Sehling 24, p. 223).

Folded hands. Folded hands appear only for children at the table prayers (Sayn, Solms), and in Nassau's warning against folded hands (1575, Philippist) before the sacrament (above). The laying on of hands belongs to ordination, confirmation, absolution and the reconciliation of penitents, outside the Mass.

2.15.7 Turning: toward the altar, toward the people

The common rule. Where the minister stood at an altar against the wall, the orders turn him to the altar to pray and to the people to read, greet and exhort. Wittenberg (1533) sets the pattern: "the priest readeth a German collect turned toward the altar, and singeth the epistle turned toward the people"; the gospel "turned toward the people", then "again toward the altar" for Credo in unum Deum (Sehling 1, p. 704). Other orders follow it:

- Prussia (1544): "the priest turneth to the people and singeth: Der herre sei mit euch, and turneth again to the altar" for the collect (Sehling 4, p. 66);
- Mecklenburg (1552): the collect "toward the altar", then "he turneth himself again toward the people" for the epistle (Sehling 5, p. 202), followed by Lüneburg (1564, Sehling 6/1, p. 553);
- Schwarzburg (1574): the gospel toward the people, the creed toward the altar (Sehling 2, pp. 132–133);
- Osnabrück (1613): the salutation toward the people, the collect and the thanksgiving toward the altar (Sehling 7/1, pp. 268, 270).

Turned for the Pax. The minister turns to the people for the Pax:

- Regensburg (1542): "he turneth about toward the people and singeth: Pax vobiscum" (Sehling 13, p. 393);
- Pfalz-Neuburg (1543): "Darnach wende er sich zum volk" (Sehling 13, p. 75);
- Hof (1592): Diaconus spectans populum (Sehling 11, p. 426).

Turned for the Verba, or away. The orders divided over the Words of Institution:

- toward the people:
  - Müntzer (Radical Reformation; Vertens se minister … coram vulgo);
  - Transylvania (minister conversus ad populum);
  - Nassau (1575, Philippist, above). Brandenburg (1540) turns to the people for the exhortation and the thanksgiving (vertens se ad populum, Sehling 3, pp. 69–70);
- toward the altar:
  - Limpurg (1610): "he turneth himself toward the altar and saith with distinct voice the words or institution of the Supper" (Sehling 16, p. 620);
  - Sponheim (1607): the minister is to face the people always, "except when, in the action of the Holy Supper, they speak the words of blessing over the elements standing on the altar and pray the Our Father"; then they turn to the altar. But where the altar allows it, he shall stand behind it and say the whole preface, prayer and consecration there, facing the people (Sehling 18, p. 674).

Everything toward the people. Döber's German Mass at the Nürnberg hospital went furthest. Nürnberg, Deutsche Messe of Andreas Döber, 1525 (Sehling 11, p. 51):

> Mit ersten, wenn der priester über altar kumbt und den kelch aus dem sack geton hat, kert er sich zum volk und spricht laut, wie hernach volgt (auch alle wort, die in der ganzen meß sind), so das er doch verstentlich sei den zuhörer

First, when the priest cometh to the altar and hath taken the chalice out of the bag, he turneth himself to the people and speaketh aloud as followeth (also all the words that are in the whole Mass), so that he be understood by the hearers.

Heilbronn's draft of 1532 has the minister standing at the altar "by the cross", not in the Mass vestment, turn to the people to read the German collect (Sehling 17/1, p. 301). Hesse (1566, Moderate Reformed) has the collect read "after he hath turned himself to the people" (Sehling 8, p. 239). The visitations that rebuilt altars so that the minister should face the people throughout, and the condemnation of standing behind the table, are in Chapter 14, §14.5.2.

2.15.8 Places at the altar

No horns. The orders do not speak of the epistle and gospel sides. The sides of the altar appear instead as the places of the communicants and of the two elements:

- Men right, women left. Regensburg 1542 (above), Wertheim about 1555 (Sehling 11, p. 713), Frankfurt 1530 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 9, p. 497).
- Bread at one side, cup at the other. The orders differ on which side:
  - the Palatinate (1546): the communicants "receive the sacrament of the body of Christ on the left side of the altar, and the sacrament of the blood on the right side" (Sehling 14, p. 97);
  - Hatzkerode (1534) has it the other way round: the body "on the right side from the hand of the pastor", the blood "on the left side from the deacon", with silk cloths held under on both sides (Sehling 2, p. 587);
  - Neckarbischofsheim (1560): the communicants "go round the altar on the right side to the pastor, to receive the blood of the Lord" (Sehling 16, p. 684);
  - Marienhafe 1593: bread at one end, cup at the other (above).
- At the cross-altar. Heilbronn (1530): after the creed "the preacher turneth over the cross altar with his two deacons in surplices toward the people" and proclaims the Lord's death (Sehling 17/1, p. 285).

2.15.9 The Peace, the kiss and incense

The kiss of peace replaced by a reading. Luther made the Pax an absolution (§2.8). Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed) replaced the kiss with a text. Strasbourg, Gottesdienstordnung, 1542 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 20/1, p. 330):

> Deinde, quia apud veteres in distributione coenae dominicae osculum pacis fuit usitatum reconciliationis mutuae signum, legat minister loco illius textum aliquem de reconciliatione fraterna admonendo

Then, since among the ancients at the distribution of the Lord's Supper the kiss of peace was in use as a sign of mutual reconciliation, let the minister in the stead of it read some text of brotherly reconciliation, admonishing [them].

No order keeps a pax-board.

Incense. None of the orders prescribes incense at the Mass:

- the Formula missae leaves lights and incense at the gospel free (Sehling 1, p. 5);
- Hannover (1536) lets go of "censing" with the other unneeded gestures (Sehling 6/2, p. 1007).

Ablutions. In the sick communion of Brandenburg (1540) and Pfalz-Neuburg (1543) the priest rinses his fingers over the chalice and gives the ablution to the sick person (Sehling 3, p. 80; 13, p. 88). The Latin ablution prayers of the Mass are in Chapter 7, §7.12.8.

2.15.10 Summary

Gesture	Prescribed	Rejected or absent
Sign of the cross	over bread and cup (Allstedt 1523, Radical Reformation); at the greeting and blessing (Strasbourg 1524, Moderate Reformed); at the Pax and blessing (Hof 1592); over the elements in the Latin canons	"so many crosses" let go (Hannover 1536); "without all papistical crossing" (Danzig 1557); "rites and gesticulations" avoided (Nassau 1575, Philippist)
Genuflection	none	flexis genibus means kneeling
Kneeling	priest at the preparation, the Kyrie and after communion; people at the Kyrie (Hall 1527), the Lord's Prayer (Hall 1535, Palatinate 1563 (Reformed)), the whole communion (Hatzkerode 1534), the thanksgiving (Heilbronn 1543, Lützelstein 1605); communicants at the altar; boys at Da pacem, the litany, Veni sancte	folded hands and kneeling "as to an idol" (Nassau 1575, Philippist); kneeling at prayer struck out (Palatinate 1601, Reformed); sitting at communion forbidden (Petrikau 1578)
Bowing	at the elevation and the ablution prayer (Brandenburg 1540, Pfalz-Neuburg 1543); boys' foreheads to the step at "Mensch	no bow at the name of Jesus

Gesture	Prescribed	Rejected or absent
	geboren" (Mansfeld, later report)
Head	men bareheaded, women covered (Hesse 1566, Moderate Reformed)	no rubric for the celebrant's cap
Hands	raise the hand at the bread (Allstedt, Radical Reformation); the chalice with both hands (Brandenburg); bread and cup held in turn (Transylvania)	no orans, joined hands or extended hands
Turning	to the altar for collects and creed, to the people for readings, salutation, Pax and exhortation (Wittenberg 1533 and most); everything toward the people (Döber 1525)	no direction of turn, no right shoulder
Places	men right, women left; bread and cup at two sides or ends	no epistle or gospel horn
Kiss	a text on reconciliation in its place (Strasbourg 1542, Moderate Reformed)	no kiss of altar, book or deacon; no pax-board
Incense	free at the gospel (Formula missae)	"censing" let go (Hannover 1536); prescribed nowhere

2.16 Concordance of the orders quoted

The concordance. Every order quoted in a block quotation is listed below in date order, with the volume and pages of Sehling, the `eko.db` document that holds the text, and the sections where it is quoted. Orders cited only in the text and tables can be found through the table in §2.5 and the section on each ordinary.

Chapter 3. Mass Preliminaries

This chapter covers the parts of the evangelical Mass that are neither Ordinary nor Proper, in the church orders of the sixteenth century printed in Emil Sehling's Die evangelischen Kirchenordnungen des XVI. Jahrhunderts. It asks:

- Opening versicles and preliminaries. What stood before the Introit, and into what families do the orders fall?
- The exhortation. Where does the exhortation to the communicants fall, and what does it say?
- The Confiteor, Misereatur, Indulgentiam and absolution. Where are they? Does the priest say them alone, with his ministrants or sexton, or with the people? Are they said privately before Mass, at the beginning of Mass, or in the communion rite? Are the old texts kept or new ones written? Is the absolution optative, declaratory or indicative, and how does it compare with the modern Common Service?
- Before and after the service. Do the vesting prayers survive? Are the Benedicite and Ps 150 appointed after Mass, and who says them? Are there prayers before and after the sermon, on entering or leaving church, or for the communicants?

How the chapter is laid out.

- §3.1 summarizes the findings, and §3.2 sets out the scope and sources.
- §3.3 covers the opening versicles and preliminaries, by family.
- §3.4 covers the confession and absolution: placement, the chancel party, old and new texts, the form of the absolution, and the descent of the Common Service's confession.
- §3.5 covers the exhortation to the communicants: where it falls, and the families of text, each collated against its archetype, which is printed in full with a translation.
- §3.6 covers what comes before and after the service: vesting, the priest's private prayers, the Benedicite and Ps 150, prayers about the sermon, and prayers on entering church and at communion.
- §3.7 is a table by order, and §3.8 a concordance of every order quoted.

The Canon, the Words of Institution and the prayers around communion are treated in Chapter 7. Several texts printed there are only cross-referenced here: Kantz 1522, Döber's exhortation, the Kiel Mass and Bugenhagen's preparatory prayer.

Related chapters. Several subjects are treated more fully elsewhere and are only cited here:

- the whole order of the Mass, and where the preliminaries fall in it: Chapter 2, §§2.4–2.5;
- private confession and absolution, and the examination of communicants: Chapter 13, §13.17;
- the hymns at the opening of the service: Chapter 8, §8.4;
- the prayers and notices around the sermon: Chapter 11, §11.10;
- confession and communion as duties of the laity: Chapter 15, §15.8.3;
- fasting before communion: Chapter 12, §12.13.6;
- vestments: Chapter 14, §14.7.

3.1 Summary of findings

1. The Roman preparation was broken up. No evangelical order keeps the whole of the priest's preparation: Introibo, Ps 43 Iudica me, Confiteor, Misereatur, Indulgentiam and Aufer a nobis. The one order that keeps most of it is Müntzer's Allstedt Mass (1523/1524; Radical Reformation): Ps 43 said by priest and people, then the Confiteor, the Misereatur, Deus, tu conversus and Aufer a nobis, all in German and aloud; Introibo survives there only as a verse of the psalm (§3.3.8). Elsewhere Iudica me disappears, and Aufer a nobis survives only in the Cellische Ordnungen of 1545 (after the sermon) and, on the editor's reading, at Regensburg 1542. Adiutorium nostrum (Ps 124:8) is the one versicle that survives widely. The German missals' Confitemini Domino quoniam bonus survives in Döber and Mecklenburg 1540 (§3.3.1).

2. The preliminaries fall into seven families (§3.3.1):

    - A. The priest's private Confiteor at the altar during the Introit (Brandenburg-Nürnberg, Brandenburg, Pfalz-Neuburg, Hohenlohe, Regensburg, Amberg, Buxtehude, Bergedorf, Schleswig-Holstein).
    - B. Bugenhagen's kneeling prayer with the sexton: the Our Father and Domine, non secundum (Wolfenbüttel, Hildesheim).

- C. The public confession of Döber (Nürnberg 1525), carried north to Lippe, Kiel and Mecklenburg and back south to Amberg, Pfalz-Zweibrücken and Pfalz-Veldenz. Amberg 1555 puts the confession in the plural, "Wir armen, sündige menschen" (§3.3.4).
- D. The medieval Offene Schuld of the preaching service moved into the Mass (Kantz, Bremen 1525, Volprecht, Naumburg, Nördlingen).
- E. The Strasbourg and Reformed opening: confession and comfortable word (Strasbourg 1537, Moderate Reformed; Palatinate 1563, Reformed).
- F. A hymn, a German psalm, or Veni Sancte Spiritus with its versicle and collect, the last a recasting of the medieval accessus as a preparation of the congregation (Luther 1526, Amberg 1544, Verden 1606, Transylvania 1547).
- G. Müntzer's German Stufengebet at Allstedt (Radical Reformation), with Ps 43 said by priest and people (§3.3.8).

3. The confession stands in four places (§3.4.1): privately before the Introit; publicly before the Introit; after the sermon (Bugenhagen 1528, Amberg 1550, the Palatinate); and in the communion rite after the exhortation (Kantz, Württemberg 1536, Nürnberg after 1569). Mecklenburg 1552 and Nördlingen 1544 have it twice.

4. The chancel party (§3.4.2):

   - Families A and B. The priest prays alone or with his ministrants (Brandenburg 1540, Pfalz-Neuburg), or with the second ministrant in dialogue (Regensburg). In the north the sexton is the server: he kneels with the priest (Bugenhagen, Mecklenburg 1540), says the Misereatur (Kiel), or reads the absolution (Kiel, Hadeln).
   - Family C. In Mecklenburg 1552 and Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557 "another minister or the custos" kneels beside the priest and says the prayer for forgiveness, and the choir answers the versicle.
   - The people keep silence and confess in their hearts (Mecklenburg), repeat the words after the priest (Döber, Bugenhagen's pulpit confession, Amberg's weekday prayer), or answer "Ja" (Palatinate 1563, Reformed).

5. Before Mass. The priest's Confiteor is said at the altar, not in the sacristy. The communicant's real preparation is private confession on the Saturday or before the service. The Brandenburg and Pfalz-Neuburg orders forbid a "gemeine beicht" (common confession) in its place (§3.4.6).

6. No Roman text is kept in public. The Latin Confiteor survives only as the priest's private prayer, unprinted (Hohenlohe: "das reine Confiteor lateinisch"). Every public confession is a new text, in five families of wording (§3.4.3). The Misereatur survives by name at Kiel; as a prayer for "us" in Döber; and as the second minister's collect in Mecklenburg 1552. The Indulgentiam survives in Kantz's "Der allmechtig, barmherzig Gott vergeb euch euer sünd!" and in Döber's "Der almechtich, barmherzig Got hat sich unser erbarmet".

7. Five kinds of absolution (§3.4.4):

   - optative ("wöl sich unser erbarmen");
   - declaration of grace in the first person plural ("hat sich unser erbarmet … Das verleihe uns Got allen");
   - indicative ("sag euch frei, ledig und los"; "vorgebe ich euch"; "entbind ich euch");
   - conditional declaration with retention (Strasbourg 1537, Moderate Reformed; Palatinate 1563, Reformed);
   - none, only a word of comfort (Bugenhagen 1528).

   At the beginning of Mass the declaration of grace prevails; in the communion rite, the indicative.

8. The Common Service descends from Mecklenburg (§3.4.5). The Common Service's preparation is Döber's 1525 sequence by way of Mecklenburg 1552 and Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557. That sequence is the address "Beloved in the Lord", Adiutorium, the confession "by nature sinful and unclean", the prayer "O most merciful God", and the declaration "Almighty God … hath had mercy upon us … Grant this, O Lord, unto us all". The prayer "O most merciful God" was the second minister's Misereatur; the declaration is a declaration of grace, not an indicative absolution. The indicative form of later American books ("Upon this your confession … I forgive you all your sins") has its counterpart in Naumburg 1537.

9. The exhortation (§3.5) falls in six places:

   - after the sermon, from the pulpit or altar (Luther 1526, left free);
   - at the altar before the Verba (Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533, moved there at Luther's suggestion; Württemberg; the Palatinate 1563, Reformed);

- before the Preface, as the "true Preface" (Bugenhagen);
- after the Preface and Sanctus (Mecklenburg 1552; Naumburg 1537 before the Sanctus);
- after the Verba and Our Father (Nürnberg 1524–1525, Osiander's original place);
- after communion (Memmingen 1528, Moderate Reformed; Marienhafe 1593).

There are eleven families of text, each collated word by word against its archetype (§3.5.2): Luther 1526; Osiander 1524, with the Braunschweig recension of the north; Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533; Württemberg 1536, revised 1553; Bugenhagen 1528, in Low and High German; Naumburg 1537; Mecklenburg 1552, which contains an absolution; the Palatinate 1563 (Reformed), with its Lower Rhine recension (Reformed); Pfalz-Veldenz 1574; the Basel text (Reformed) of Memmingen 1528 (Moderate Reformed) and Neckarbischofsheim 1560; and Strasbourg 1525 (Moderate Reformed). Augsburg 1530 (Moderate Reformed), Buxtehude 1565 and Micron (Reformed) each have an exhortation of their own (§3.5.14). Every archetype is given in full with a translation.

10. No vesting prayers (§3.6.1). None of the prayers in the Lutheran Missal Project's Vesting Prayers occurs in any order: the preparatory psalms, the antiphon Ne reminiscaris, the preces and collects, and the prayers at the washing of hands and at each vestment. Vestments are "frei" (indifferent). The priest vests in silence, at Hadeln during the Te Deum "nicht alse nödig" (not as needful). The Stufengebet alone of the medieval priest's three preparations survives. The accessus survives only as the congregation's Veni Sancte Spiritus.

11. After Mass (§3.6.3). The Benedicite and Ps 150 are never appointed after Mass. They occur only as the canticle and psalms of Sunday Lauds, sung by the schoolboys under the cantor or by the canons (Pomerania 1535, Schleswig-Holstein 1542, Ansbach 1533). The priest's private thanksgiving survives only at Hildesheim 1544 and in Schleswig-Holstein 1542: he unvests during the closing hymn, kneels, and "danket Godde hemelick vor sick sülvest" (thanketh God secretly for himself), with no text given.

12. Sermon, church door and communion (§§3.6.4–3.6.5):

    - The sermon is framed by a bidding to prayer, the Our Father or a hymn of the Holy Ghost, and the general prayer after it. All are led by the preacher, with the people praying and the schoolboys singing.
    - No order prints a prayer for the worshipper on entering or leaving church, or private prayers for the communicant. Their place is taken by the opening hymn "wann man in die Kirche kompt" (Sayn 1590), the prayers the minister says for the communicants (Pfalz-Veldenz 1574), and the hymns during the distribution.
    - The nearest thing to a hymnal devotion is the Pfalz-Zweibrücken Gesangbuch of 1571/1587, which prints the Mecklenburg confession and absolution for the people's use "vor der Predig am Sontag" (before the sermon on Sunday).

3.2 Scope, sources and method

Scope. The chapter covers the evangelical (Lutheran, Upper German and Reformed) orders printed in Sehling's volumes 1–24. It deals with what the orders set before the Introit, the confession and absolution wherever they fall, the exhortation to the communicants, and the prayers before and after the service. It does not treat:

- the Ordinary and Propers (see Chapter 4);
- the collects (see Chapter 5);
- the general prayer (see Chapter 6);
- the Canon and the communion devotions (see Chapter 7);
- private confession (see Chapter 13 §13.17).

Sources. The quotations come from the `eko.db` database. Candidate passages were found by searching the whole corpus for:

- the Latin incipits Confiteor, Misereatur, Indulgentiam, Introibo, Adiutorium, Confitemini, Ne reminiscaris, Quam dilecta, Benedicite and Laudate;
- the German and Low German words for open confession and absolution (offene beicht, offene schuld, gemeine beicht, bicht, absolutio);
- the words for the exhortation (vermanung, vormaninge, exhortatio, ermanung), together with the address formulas ("Mein allerliebsten", "Lieben freunde", "Myne allerlevesten", "Ir geliebten");

- the words for vesting, the sacristy and the preparation (ornat, messgewand, angekledet, praeparatio ad missam, Rüsthandlung);
- prayers before and after the sermon, on entering church, and before and after communion.

Each hit was read in context. Editor's notes that identify a source or a medieval model are quoted where they bear on the question.

Method and limits.

- Pages. Each order is cited by Sehling's running head. Pages were checked against the page markers in the database.
- Dates. Some orders are dated differently in the database's record headings. Hadeln is printed by Sehling as the "Hadelner Kirchenordnung von 1526" within a record headed 1590. Verden's order is the Kirchenordnung of 1606 within a record headed 1612. Döber's Mass of 1525 lies within the record of the Nürnberg parish churches of 1524.
- Coverage. The exhortations were found by scanning every document in the corpus for wording shared with a known exhortation, and every witness found was collated against the archetype of its family (§3.5.2).
- Negative findings. That a form "does not occur" (vesting prayers, Ne reminiscaris, prayers on entering church) means that searches of the whole corpus for its Latin incipits and German equivalents found nothing. OCR damage can hide a passage, so such findings are strong but not absolute.

3.3 Opening versicles and preliminaries

3.3.1 What the Roman Mass had, and what became of it

The medieval preparation. Before the Introit, the Roman Mass of the later Middle Ages had three layers of preparation for the priest:

1. The *accessus (Akzess): a private office of psalms and prayers said before Mass.
2. The *praeparatio ad missam in the sacristy: the washing of hands and a prayer at the putting on of each vestment.
3. The prayers at the foot of the altar (Stufengebet), said by the priest and server in dialogue:
    - the invocation, and Introibo ad altare Dei with Ps 43 Iudica me;
    - Adiutorium nostrum in nomine Domini (Ps 124:8);
    - the Confiteor, said first by the priest and then by the server;
    - the Misereatur ("May almighty God have mercy upon thee …"), said by each for the other;
    - the Indulgentiam ("May the almighty and merciful Lord grant us pardon, absolution and remission of our sins");
    - the versicles Deus, tu conversus, and the prayers Aufer a nobis and Oramus te.

Many German diocesan missals also had the versicle Confitemini Domino quoniam bonus / Quoniam in saeculum misericordia eius (Ps 118:1) before the Confiteor.

What became of it. No evangelical order in Sehling keeps the whole of this. One order keeps a large part of it: Thomas Müntzer's German Mass for Allstedt (1523, printed 1524; Radical Reformation). There Ps 43 Iudica me is said by the priest and the whole people, and is followed by German forms of the Confiteor, the Misereatur, Deus, tu conversus and Aufer a nobis. Introibo ad altare Dei survives there only as the fourth verse of the psalm, not as an antiphon (§3.3.8). Elsewhere only fragments remain:

- Aufer a nobis is sung in Latin after the sermon in the Cellische Ordnungen of 1545, and Sehling's editor takes the collect after the Confiteor at Regensburg 1542 to be the same prayer (§3.3.8).
- The Mass form of the Confiteor is said by the priest with a deacon or fellow minister at Regensburg 1542 and Nördlingen 1544 (§3.3.2, §3.3.8).
- Sehling's editor prints the Bremen missal's Stufengebet, with Introibo and Iudica, as the background to the pastor's kneeling prayer at Buxtehude and Bergedorf (§3.3.2).

What survives falls into the families set out below:

Family	Form	Who says it	Where	Orders (§)
A	The priest's own Confiteor (or "what his devotion bids") at the altar, while the choir sings the Introit	The priest, sometimes with a ministrant or a fellow minister	Before or during the Introit	Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533, Brandenburg 1540, Pfalz-Neuburg 1543, Hohenlohe 1553, Regensburg 1553, Amberg 1550, Buxtehude 1552, Nördlingen 1544, Schleswig-Holstein 1542 (3.3.2)
B	Bugenhagen's kneeling prayer: Our Father and the tract Domine, non secundum	The priest and the sexton, alternately	During the opening psalm	Wolfenbüttel 1543, Hildesheim 1544 (3.3.3)
C	A public confession in the people's hearing, with Adiutorium and Confitemini, a recast Misereatur and a declaration of grace	The priest kneeling, with the sexton or a second minister; the people silently or repeating	At the very beginning of Mass	Döber 1525, Lippe [1525–1538], Kiel [after 1526], Mecklenburg 1540 and 1552, Amberg 1555, Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557, Pfalz-Veldenz 1574, Hadeln (3.3.4)
D	The Offene Schuld moved into the Mass, with an indicative absolution	The priest to the people	Before the Introit, or before the Sacrament	Kantz 1522, Bremen 1525, Volprecht 1524, Naumburg 1537, Nördlingen 1544 (3.3.5)
E	The Upper German and Reformed opening of the preaching service: confession of sins and a comfortable word	The minister for the congregation	At the beginning of the service, or after the sermon	Strasbourg 1537 (Moderate Reformed), Palatinate 1563 (Reformed), Wertheim 1524 (3.6; and §3.4)
F	A hymn, a German psalm, or Veni Sancte Spiritus with its versicle and collect	Choir, schoolboys or congregation; the priest the collect	Before the Introit	Luther 1526, Amberg 1544, Verden 1606, Transylvania 1547, Buxtehude 1552, Mecklenburg villages, Sayn 1590 (3.3.7)
G	Ps 43 Iudica me, the Confiteor, the Misereatur, Deus, tu conversus and Aufer a nobis, in German	The priest and the whole people	Before the Introit	Müntzer, Allstedt 1523 and 1524 (Radical Reformation) (3.3.8)

The versicles that survive.

- Adiutorium nostrum (Ps 124:8) is the one Roman versicle that survives widely: Kantz 1522, Döber 1525, Lippe, Mecklenburg 1540 and 1552, Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557 and Poullain's French liturgy at Frankfurt (Reformed; Sehling 9, p. 563) all have it.
- Confitemini Domino quoniam bonus (Ps 118:1) survives in Döber, Lippe and Mecklenburg 1540, but is dropped in Mecklenburg 1552.
- In Verden 1606 the versicle is Emitte Spiritum tuum (Ps 104:30), which belongs with Veni Sancte Spiritus.

3.3.2 Family A: the priest's own Confiteor at the altar

The commonest form in the south and in Brandenburg is a private preparation of the priest. He comes to the altar in his vestments, kneels and says the Confiteor or some other prayer of his own while the choir sings the Introit. The people take no part, and the text is not printed. The model is the Brandenburg-Nürnberg order. Brandenburg-Nürnberg, Kirchenordnung, 1533 (Sehling 11, p. 188):

> Ordnung der meß, wie die gehalten soll werden. Zum ersten, wenn der Priester zum altar kumbt, mag er das Confiteor oder, was ine sein andacht erinnert, sprechen, darnach den introitum lesen, doch das er aus der heiligen schrift > genummen sei. Dieweil sollen die schuler, wo man schul hat, den introitum auch singen lateinisch. Wo man aber als in dörfern zu solichem lateinischen gesang nicht leut hette, soll man ein christenlich teutsch gesang nach gelegenheit jedes orts singen.

Order of the Mass, how the same shall be held. First, when the priest cometh to the altar, he may say the Confiteor, or what his devotion putteth him in mind of, and thereafter read the Introit, provided that it be taken out of the holy Scripture. Meanwhile the scholars, where there is a school, shall also sing the Introit in Latin. But where, as in villages, there were not people for such Latin singing, a Christian German hymn shall be sung, according to the occasion of each place.

The Mark Brandenburg adds the ministrants. Brandenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1540 (Sehling 3, pp. 67–68):

> Erstlich sol der priester, so die mess helt, samt seinen ministranten in iren gewönlichen kirchenornaten, nach gewonheit einer jeden kirchen zu dem altar gehen, anfenglich das confiteor sprechen; darnach soll der gewönlich introitus, folgend das kyrieeleison, nach gelegenheit, darauf das gloria in excelsis, welches sampt dem et in terra zu dem kyrie gehöret, gesungen werden

First, the priest that holdeth the Mass, together with his ministrants, in their accustomed church ornaments, according to the custom of each church, shall go to the altar and at the beginning say the Confiteor. Thereafter shall be sung the accustomed Introit, then the Kyrie eleison, as occasion serveth, and upon that the Gloria in excelsis, which together with the Et in terra belongeth to the Kyrie.

Pfalz-Neuburg copies Brandenburg, but makes the priest kneel and allows a penitential psalm instead. Pfalz-Neuburg, Kirchenordnung, 1543 (Sehling 13, p. 70):

> Erstlich soll der priester, so die meß halten will, sampt seinen ministranten, wo und wann man dieselben zu gebrauchen pflegt, in iren gewonlichen kirchenornaten nach gewonheit einer jeden kirchen zu dem altar gehn und anfenglich darvor kniend das Confiteor oder ein feinen bußpsalm sprechen.

First, the priest that will hold the Mass, together with his ministrants (where and when they are wont to be used), shall go to the altar in their accustomed church ornaments, according to the custom of each church, and at the beginning, kneeling before it, say the Confiteor or a goodly penitential psalm.

Hohenlohe insists on the Latin text of the Missal. Hohenlohe, Kirchenordnung, 1553 (Sehling 15, p. 68):

> Zum ersten soll der pfarrherr in seinem ornat und kirchengewand vor deim altar kommen, niderknyen und das reine Confiteor lateinisch betten. Indes soll der schulmaynster sampt den schulern denn introitum lateinisch singen de tempore, aber allein die, so der heyligen geschrift gemeß sind.

First, the parson shall come before the altar in his ornament and church vesture, kneel down, and pray the pure Confiteor in Latin. Meanwhile the schoolmaster with the scholars shall sing the Introit de tempore in Latin, but only those that are agreeable to the holy Scripture.

Editor's note (p. 68). "Confiteor ist das Sündenbekenntnis als Teil des Stufengebetes … Hier ist das Stück aus der Messe gemeint, während in der Brand. KO 1533 (Sehling 11, 188) nur ein entsprechendes Stück gefordert war." (The Confiteor is the confession of sins that is part of the prayers at the foot of the altar. Here the piece from the Mass itself is meant, whereas the Brandenburg-Nürnberg order of 1533 required only a corresponding piece.) What "reine" (pure) is meant to exclude is not said; presumably the invocation of the Virgin and the saints.

At Regensburg the Confiteor is said in dialogue with the second of two ministrants. Regensburg, Kirchenordnung under Justus Jonas, 1553 (Sehling 13, pp. 419–420):

> so kombt der priester (das ist der minister, welcher, wie obstehet, wochner ist) sambt zwaien ministranten oder diaconen fur den altar und […] betet also mit dem einen ministranten (der dazumal secundus ist) das Confiteor kniend. Unterdes singt der chor den introitum de tempore lateinisch und die Kyrie eleison zu dreien malen.

then cometh the priest (that is, the minister who, as is said above, is hebdomadary) together with two ministrants or deacons before the altar, and prayeth thus with the one ministrant (who is for that time the second) the Confiteor kneeling. Meanwhile the choir singeth the Introit de tempore in Latin and the Kyrie eleison three times.

At Amberg the choir sings an antiphon of the season or Veni Sancte over the priest's Confiteor, and the priest then sings a collect. Amberg, Kirchenordnung, 1550 (Sehling 13, p. 285):

> Die meß würd bei uns schier durchaus wie von alters herkommen mit gewonlicher kleidung, liechtern, gesengen und anderen ornaten aufs zierlichist gehalten; den erstlich betet der briester vor dem altar knieend das Confiteor. Unter disem singet der chor Haec est dies oder Veni, Sancte und der briester darauf Oremus und collectam. Darauf singet der chorus den introitum von der dominica und fürfallenden ordenlichen festen.

The Mass is held with us almost throughout as it hath come down of old, with the accustomed vesture, lights, chants and other ornaments, most seemly; for first the priest prayeth the Confiteor kneeling before the altar. During this the choir singeth Haec est dies or Veni Sancte, and the priest thereupon Oremus and the collect. Thereupon the choir singeth the Introit of the Sunday and of the ordinary feasts that fall.

Editor's note (p. 285): "Wahrscheinlich nicht das im Wechsel mit dem Ministranten gesprochene der Messe, sondern wie auch 1533 (Sehling 11, 188) ein stilles Gebet." (Probably not the Confiteor of the Mass said in alternation with the ministrant, but, as also in 1533, a silent prayer.)

In the north the same private prayer appears at Buxtehude. Buxtehude, Kirchenordnung, 1552 (Sehling 7/1, p. 74):

> Under dem introitu schall der preister, mit gewontliken missengewande ahngetagen, vor dat altar gahn unde vor des altares vote syn gebedt und confessie dohn.

During the Introit the priest, clad in the accustomed Mass vestment, shall go before the altar and at the altar's foot make his prayer and confession.

Sehling's editor sets this against the Bremen missal of 1511. Buxtehude, Kirchenordnung, 1552, editor's note (Sehling 7/1, p. 74):

> Das Stufengebet des Pastors, dort vor dem Introitus vorgesehen, da der Pastor den Introitus mitsingen muß, erwähnt Aepin in seiner Bergedorfer KO von 1544; vgl. Sehling V, 387. […] Stufengebet nach dem Missale eccl. Brem. 1511: Ante altare sacerdos dicat: Introibo ad altare Dei… [Ps 43, 4]. Ps. Iudica me Deus etc. [Ps 43]. Deinde dicat confessionem [Confiteor, Sündenbekenntnis]. Et introibo etc.

The pastor's prayer at the foot of the altar, appointed there before the Introit because the pastor must sing the Introit with [the choir], is mentioned by Aepinus in his Bergedorf church order of 1544. […] The prayers at the foot of the altar according to the Bremen missal of 1511: Before the altar let the priest say: Introibo ad altare Dei. The psalm Iudica me Deus, etc. Then let him say the confession. Et introibo, etc.

The Bergedorf order to which the note refers has the same private prayer, before the opening psalm or Introit. Bergedorf, Kirchenordnung, 1544 (Sehling 5, p. 387):

> In der misse schall desse ordenunge gehalden werden. Die pastor mit gewöntlichen missgewande edder klederen angetagen, schall anfencklich up dem voth vor dem altare nedder knien unde sein gebeth tho gott dahn, wenn he up steith, schall he mit einem duideschen psalmo, edder ahn den festen mit einem lateinischen introitu de trinitate edder spiritu sancto (so he huilpe hefft, de ock singen konnen) anheven unde singen.

In the Mass this order shall be kept. The pastor, clad in the accustomed Mass vestment or clothes, shall first kneel down at the foot before the altar and make his prayer to God; when he standeth up, he shall begin and sing with a German psalm, or on the feasts with a Latin Introit of the Trinity or of the Holy Ghost (if he have help, that can also sing).

Neither order says what the prayer is. Nothing in Sehling shows that Introibo and Iudica were said there; the editor gives the missal's form for comparison.

In Schleswig-Holstein 1542 the priest falls on his knees before the altar and reads the Confiteor "by sick" (to himself), with an intercession for the preachers, the king and the duchies (Sehling 23, p. 89; quoted in full in Chapter 7 §7.15.3).

Nördlingen 1544: the private and the public confession side by side. Kaspar Löner's order keeps both. The celebrant first receives absolution from a fellow minister on his own Confiteor, while two choirs, the school and the people, sing Kum, heiliger

Geist or Nun bitten wir in alternation. Then he turns to the people and says the open confession and the absolution for them. Nördlingen, Kirchenordnung of Kaspar Löner, 1544 (Sehling 12, pp. 311–312):

> An hohen festen soll der pfarrer selbs das hohe ampt halten, an den andern aber und suntagen der alte pfarrer in seiner geburlichen kleidung fur den alter kumen, alda die absolution von einem seiner mitdiener empfahen auf sein Confiteor hin. Indes sollen zwen chore - einer der schulen, der ander des volks - an hohen festen singen umb einander Kum, hailiger Geist, alle drei gesetze aus. An andern festen aber und sonntagen Nun bitten wir den Heiligen Gaist mit allen seinen gesetzen. Wen das aus ist, sol der celebrant sich zu dem volk wenden oder, so man je wollt im chor bleiben, […] herausgen fur den alter, alldau das Confiteor oder offne beicht dem volk fursprechen und darauf die absolution.

On high feasts the pastor himself shall hold the high office, but on the others and on Sundays the old pastor shall come before the altar in his due vesture, and there receive the absolution from one of his fellow ministers upon his Confiteor. Meanwhile two choirs, the one of the school, the other of the people, shall on high feasts sing "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord" in turn, all three stanzas out; but on other feasts and Sundays "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray" with all its stanzas. When that is out, the celebrant shall turn to the people, or, if they would needs remain in the choir, come out before the altar, and there say before the people the Confiteor or open confession, and thereupon the absolution.

Editor's notes (pp. 311–312). On the celebrant's Confiteor (p. 311):

> Hiemit ist also eine nur für den Geistlichen und seinen Ministranten bestimmte Rüsthandlung gemeint wie Brandenburg 1540 (Sehling 3, 67f.) und Pfalz-Neuburg 1542 […] oder - auf den Geistlichen beschränkt — Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533 (Sehling 11, 188) und in V. Dietrichs Agendbüchlein 1543 (Sehling 11, 495). Ob sie sich nur auf das Confiteor und das Misereatur samt dem Indulgentiam im engsten Sinn bezieht oder ob damit das ganze Stufengebet, das übrigens in den Meßbüchern vor 1570 nicht enthalten ist, sondern anderweit bekannt sein muß […], der Messe gemeint ist, läßt sich nicht entscheiden

What is meant here, then, is a preparation appointed only for the clergyman and his ministrant, as in Brandenburg 1540 and Pfalz-Neuburg 1542, or, restricted to the clergyman, in Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533 and in V. Dietrich's Agendbüchlein 1543. Whether it refers only to the Confiteor and the Misereatur together with the Indulgentiam in the narrowest sense, or whether the whole prayers at the foot of the altar of the Mass are meant (which, moreover, are not contained in the missals before 1570, but must have been known from elsewhere), cannot be decided.

On the open confession to the people (p. 312):

> Die Offene Schuld ist hier ein allgemein gottesdienstlicher Rüstgottesdienst für die Gemeinde wie etwa auch bei Volprecht (Sehling 11, 39f.) und Döber (Sehling 11, 51), nicht ein Ersatz für die Beichte oder deren Wiederholung wie bei Kantz (unsere Nr. VIII 1) oder in Nürnberg (Sehling 11, 498 Anm. 5)

The Open Confession is here a general preparatory service of worship for the congregation, as also with Volprecht and Döber; not a substitute for confession, or its repetition, as with Kantz or in Nürnberg.

What family A shows.

- No text. The orders do not print the Confiteor they mean. Brandenburg-Nürnberg leaves the choice to the priest's "andacht"; Hohenlohe alone demands the "pure" Latin Confiteor of the Missal.
- Who. The priest alone (Brandenburg-Nürnberg, Hohenlohe, Amberg, Buxtehude, Schleswig-Holstein), with his ministrants (Brandenburg 1540, Pfalz-Neuburg), with the second ministrant in dialogue (Regensburg), or with a fellow minister who absolves him (Nördlingen).
- When. At the altar, kneeling, during the Introit or the opening hymn. It is never said in the sacristy, and never before the bells.
- The people do not hear it. It is the evangelical remnant of the Stufengebet.

3.3.3 Family B: Bugenhagen's kneeling prayer with the sexton

Bugenhagen's later orders replace the Confiteor with the Our Father and the tract Domine, non secundum peccata nostra (Ps 103:10; Ps 79:8–9). The priest kneels with the sexton and prays "vor sick und vor dat volk und vor alle nött der christenheit" (for himself and for the people and for all the need of Christendom). The sexton answers each versicle. This is the form in Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1543 (Sehling 6/1, pp. 54–55) and Hildesheim 1544 (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 852). Both texts, with translations and the full versicles, are in Chapter 7 §§7.15.1–7.15.2.

Note.

- The prayer is said aloud but at the altar, during the opening German psalm, so that in practice the people would not have followed it.
- The versicle Domine, ne memineris iniquitatum nostrarum antiquarum (Ps 79:8) is the nearest thing in the corpus to the antiphon Ne reminiscaris of the Missal's preparation (Tobit 3:3), which does not occur (§3.6.2).

3.3.4 Family C: Döber and the Mecklenburg public confession

The form. This is the most important family, because it is the source of the modern Lutheran confession of sins (§3.4.5). It keeps the shape of the Roman Stufengebet but speaks it aloud, in German, in the people's hearing:

1. an address to the people: "My dearly beloved in God, open your hearts …";
2. the priest kneels; Adiutorium nostrum and Confitemini Domino;
3. a new confession in the first person singular ("I, poor sinful man …"), said by the priest for all;
4. a prayer for forgiveness in the plural, in the place of the Misereatur;
5. a declaration of God's mercy, in the place of the Indulgentiam, ending "Das verleihe uns Got allen" (God grant this unto us all).

It begins in Nürnberg with Andreas Döber's Mass for the New Hospital. Nürnberg, Andreas Döber, Von der evangelischen meß … im Newen Spital, 1525 (Sehling 11, p. 51):

> Mit ersten, wenn der priester über altar kumbt und den kelch aus dem sack geton hat, kert er sich zum volk und spricht laut, wie hernach volgt (auch alle wort, die in der ganzen meß sind), so das er doch verstentlich sei den zuhörern: Mein aller liebsten in Got, eroffent eur herzen und last uns Got unser sünd bekennen, und sprecht mir nach mit herzlicher begird im namen des Vaters und des Suns und des Heilgen Geists! Amen. In dem kniet der priester nider für den altar und spricht fein lanksam wie hernach volgt. Unser hilf sei im namen des Herren, der erschaffen hat himel und erden! Bekennet dem Herren; dann er ist gut und sein barmherzigkeit ist ewich. Und ich armer, sündiger mensch bekenn Got dem allmechtigen, meinem schöpfer und erlöser, das ich nit allein gesündiget hab mit gedanken, worten oder werken sonder auch in sünden empfangen und geborn, also das alle mein natur und wesen vor seiner gerechtigkeit streflich und verdamlich ist. Darumb fleuhe ich zu seiner grundlosen barmherzigkeit, such und bite genad. Herr, bis genedich mir armen sünder! Der barmherzig Got wöl sich unser erbarmen und uns unsere sünd verzeihen und den Heiligen Geist geben, […] das wir durch in seinen götlichen willen erfüllen und das ewig leben empfangen. Amen. Die absolution. Spricht der priester: Neigt eur herz zu Got! Der almechtich, barmherzig Got hat sich unser erbarmet und seinen einigen Sun für unser sünd in tod geben und umb seinet willen uns verzihen, auch allen den, die an seinen heiligen namen glauben, Gottes kinder zu werden gewalt geben und den Heiligen Geist verheißen. Wer glaubt und getauft würt, der sol selig sein. Das verleihe uns Got allen. Amen. Und einem jglichen geschehe nach seinem glauben! In dem, do er spricht: Bit Got für mich, desselben gleichen will ich auch tun! stehet er auf für den altar und spricht für das volk (auch mag das volk mit im beten) also: Kum, Heiliger Geist, erfülle die herzen deiner glaubigen und entzünde in ihnen das feuer deiner götlichen lieb, der du durch mancherlei zungen hast gesammelt die völker der ganzen welt in einigkeit des glaubens! Got sei gelobet!

First, when the priest cometh to the altar and hath taken the chalice out of the bag, he turneth to the people and speaketh aloud, as hereafter followeth (and so also all the words that are in the whole Mass), so that he may yet be understood of the hearers: My dearly beloved in God, open your hearts, and let us confess our sins unto God, and say after me with hearty desire, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost! Amen. Therewith the priest kneeleth down before the altar and saith full slowly as hereafter followeth. Our help be in the name of the Lord, who hath made heaven and earth! Confess unto the Lord, for he is good, and his mercy is everlasting. And I, poor sinful man, confess unto God almighty, my Creator and Redeemer, that I have sinned not only in thoughts, words or works, but was also conceived and born in sins, so that all my nature and being is before his righteousness punishable and damnable. Therefore I flee unto his bottomless mercy, seek and pray for grace. Lord, be merciful to me a poor sinner! The merciful God vouchsafe to have mercy upon us, and forgive us our sins, and give us the Holy Ghost, that through him we may fulfil his divine will and receive everlasting life. Amen. The absolution. The priest saith: Incline your heart to God! The almighty, merciful God hath had mercy upon us, and hath given his only Son unto death for our sins, and for his sake forgiven us; and to all them also that believe on his holy name he hath given power to become the children of God, and hath promised the Holy Ghost. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. God grant this unto us all. Amen. And unto every one be it done according to his faith! As he saith: Pray God for me, the same will I also do for you! he standeth up before the altar and saith for the people (and the people also may pray with him) thus: Come, Holy Ghost, fill the hearts of thy faithful and kindle in them the fire of thy divine love, who through divers tongues hast gathered the peoples of the whole world in the unity of the faith! God be praised!

Note.

- The Roman skeleton. Adiutorium and Confitemini are the versicles of the German missals. "Der barmherzig Got wöl sich unser erbarmen …" is the Misereatur, now in the plural ("unser", us) and said by the priest for priest and people together. "Der almechtich, barmherzig Got hat sich unser erbarmet …" stands where the Indulgentiam stood, and its opening words echo it.
- The Orate fratres. "Bit Got für mich, desselben gleichen will ich auch tun" is the Roman request for the people's prayers, moved here from the offertory.
- The absolution is a declaration in the perfect tense ("hat sich unser erbarmet", hath had mercy) that ends in a wish ("Das verleihe uns Got allen", God grant this unto us all). It is neither the indicative "I absolve you" nor the optative Misereatur; see §3.4.4.
- Sehling's editor notes that the Form und Ordnung einer christlichen meß (Sehling 11, pp. 56 ff.) takes over this beginning, headed "Das Confiteor".

The Low German Mass of Lippe follows Döber. The choir sings the Introit or Veni Sancte Spiritus while the priest reads the confession. Lippe, Deutsche Messe, [c. 1525–1538] (Sehling 22, p. 565):

> Thom ersten lest de prester den confiteor. De confiteor Unse hulpe sy in dem namen des heren, de gheschapen heyfft hemmel und erden. Bekennet dem heren, wente he ys gudt und syne barmharticheit ys ewich. Unde ik arme sündige mynsche bekenne Gade dem almechtigen, mynen schepper und vorloser, dat ik nicht allene ghesündiget hebbe myt dancken, worden edder wercken, sunder ok yn sünden entfangen und gebaren byn, also dat all myne natür und wesent vor syner barmharticheit strafflick und vordomlick ys, darumme flee ik tho syner grundelosen barmharticheit, soke und bydde gnade. Here, wes my armen sünder barmhartich. De absolutio De almechtige, barmhertige Godt, de vor unse sünde synen eynygen sone in den doet ghegeven heyfft, wolde syck unser erbarmen und uns umme synent wyllen unse sünde vorgeven und den hilligen geist vorlenen allen, de an en loven, dat wy dorch en synen godtliken wyllen vorvullen unde dat ewyghe levent entfangen, amen. […] Dewyle averst de prester den confiteor lest, synget dat choer den introitum der misse.

First the priest readeth the Confiteor. The Confiteor. Our help be in the name of the Lord, who hath made heaven and earth. Confess unto the Lord, for he is good, and his mercy is everlasting. And I, poor sinful man, confess unto God almighty, my Creator and Redeemer, that I have sinned not only in thoughts, words or works, but was also conceived and born in sins, so that all my nature and being is before his mercy punishable and damnable; therefore I flee unto his bottomless mercy, seek and pray for grace. Lord, be merciful to me a poor sinner. The absolution. The almighty, merciful God, who for our sins hath given his only Son unto death, vouchsafe to have mercy upon us, and for his sake forgive us our sins, and grant the Holy Ghost unto all that believe on him, that through him we may fulfil his divine will and receive everlasting life, amen. […] But while the priest readeth the Confiteor, the choir singeth the Introit of the Mass.

Note. Here the optative prayer ("wolde syck unser erbarmen", vouchsafe to have mercy) is itself headed "De absolutio". Döber's declaration is missing.

The Kiel Mass takes Döber's address and confession, but its absolution is Kantz's indicative form, and it is read by the sexton. Schleswig-Holstein, Deutsche Messe (Kiel), [after 1526] (Sehling 23, p. 55):

> De Confiteor Myne alderlevesten yn Godt, opent iwe harte unde latet uns Gade unße sunde bekennen unde spricket my na myt bogerlykem hartenn: Im namen des vaders unde des sones unde des hilgen gestes. Amen. Ick arme, sündige mynsche bokenne my Gade, dem almechtigen, myneme scipper unde varrloßer, dat ik nycht allene gesundyget hebbe myt danken, worden edder warken, ßunder ock yn sunden entfangen unde gebaren bynn, alßo dat al myne natur unde wesenth vann syner rechtferdicheyt strafflich unde vordomlyck ys. Darumme hebbe yck thoflucht tho syner gruntloßenn barmharticheyt, ßoke und bogere gnade: Here, wes gnedich my arme sunder. De barmehertyge Godt wolde syck unßer > vorbarmen unde uns unße ßunde vorgevenn unde den hilgen ghest vorlenen, dat wy dorch en ßynen godelykenn wyllen erfüllen unde dat ewyge leven entfangen. Amen.

The Confiteor. My dearly beloved in God, open your hearts and let us confess our sins unto God, and say after me with desirous heart: In the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Amen. I, poor sinful man, confess myself unto God almighty, my Creator and Redeemer, that I have sinned not only in thoughts, words or works, but was also conceived and born in sins, so that all my nature and being is before his righteousness punishable and damnable. Therefore have I refuge unto his bottomless mercy, seek and desire grace: Lord, be merciful to me a poor sinner. The merciful God vouchsafe to have mercy upon us, and forgive us our sins, and grant the Holy Ghost, that through him we may fulfil his divine will and receive everlasting life. Amen.

There follow the Misereatur, read by minister and sexton, and an absolution read by the sexton: "Unde yck, uth bevele unßes heren Jesu Christi, segge jwe … frigh, leddich unde loß alle jwe sunde" (And I, by the commandment of our Lord Jesus Christ, say unto you … free, quit and loosed of all your sins; Sehling 23, p. 55; full text in Chapter 7 §7.11.1). "Ick hebbe thoflucht" (I have refuge) is the reading that Mecklenburg and the later orders keep.

Mecklenburg 1540: the country Mass. The Low German Ordeninge der misse puts the confession at the head of every communion Mass. The sexton, "or another Christian", kneels with the priest and says the prayer for forgiveness. Mecklenburg, Ordeninge der misse, 1540/1545 (Sehling 5, pp. 150–151):

> Eine gemene misse vor dejenen, de sick willen laten berichten, schall des sondages unde up ander festdage, in gewontliken missegewande geholden werden up enem altare, dat dar to beredet und gedecket sin schall. De prester, wenn he sick hefft angekledet, wende he sick vor dem altare umme . und segge to dem volke: Mine alder levesten in godt, eröpent juwe herte, latet uns gade unse sünde bekennen, unde spreket mi na mit hertlikem begere. Im namen des vaders, des söns unde des hilligen geistes, amen. Denne valle he up sine knee vor dem altare, und de koster edder ein ander christen bi eme, denne segge aver lut de kerckhere. Unse hülpe si im namen des heren. Antwort. De geschapen hefft hemmel unde erde. De prester. Bekennet dem heren, wente he is gut. Antwort. Unde sine barmherticheit is ewich. De prester. Unde ick arme sündige minsche, bekenne gade dem almechtigen, minem schepper unde vorloeser, dat ick nicht allene gesündiget hebbe mit gedanken , worden edder werken, sonder ock in sünden entfangen und gebaren bin, also, dat alle min natur unde wesent vor siner gerechticheit straflich unde vordömlick is. Darumme flehe ick to siner grundlosen barmherticheit, söke und begere gnade, here wes gnedich mi armen sünder. De dener antwerdet dit gebet. De almechtige barmhertige godt, de vor unse sünde sinen enigen söne in den dodt gegeven hefft, wolde sick unser erbarmen, unde uns umme sinent willen unse sünde vorgeven, und den hilligen geist vorlenen, dat wy dorch en sinen gödtliken willen erfüllen, unde dat ewige levent entfangen, amen. De prester spreckt hirna dese absolution. De barmhertige godt hefft sick unser erbarmet, unde vor uns sinen enigen söne in den dot gegeven, unde uns umme sinent willen unse sünde vorgeven. Ock alle den, de an sinen hiligen namen gelöven gades kinder to werden gewalt gegeven, unde den hilligen geist vorheten. Wol gelövet unde gedöfft wert, de schall salich werden. Dat vorlene uns godt allen, amen. Wenn desse bicht van dem prester gespraken wert, schall de ganze kercke stille sin, unde desse bicht anhören, ock mit dem prester also ere sünde bekennen, unde dat bedt mit der absolution leren, to der tidt, und ock sunst yo vaken vor gade reden. Hirna schall in den steden de cantor edder scholmester den introitum anfangen to latin, effte singen under tiden enen düdeschen psalm.

A common Mass for them that will be communicated shall be held on Sundays and other feast days in the accustomed Mass vestment, upon an altar that shall be prepared and covered for the purpose. The priest, when he hath vested himself, let him turn about before the altar and say to the people: My dearly beloved in God, open your hearts, let us confess our sins unto God, and say after me with hearty desire. In the name of the Father, of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, amen. Then let him fall upon his knees before the altar, and the sexton or another Christian by him; then let the parson say aloud: Our help be in the name of the Lord. Answer: Who hath made heaven and earth. The priest: Confess unto the Lord, for he is good. Answer: And his mercy is everlasting. The priest: And I, poor sinful man, confess unto God almighty, my Creator and Redeemer, that I have sinned not only in thoughts, words or works, but was also conceived and born in sins, so that all my nature and being is before his righteousness punishable and damnable. Therefore I flee unto his bottomless mercy, seek and desire grace; Lord, be merciful to me a poor sinner. The minister answereth this prayer: The almighty, merciful God, who for our sins hath given his only Son unto death, vouchsafe to have mercy upon us, and for his sake forgive us our sins, and grant the Holy Ghost, that through him we may fulfil his divine will and receive everlasting life, amen. The priest saith hereafter this absolution: The merciful God hath had mercy upon us, and hath given his only Son unto death for us, and for his sake forgiven us our sins; and to all them also that believe on his holy name he hath given power to become the children of God, and hath promised the Holy Ghost. Whoso believeth and is baptized, he shall be saved. God grant this unto us all, amen. When this confession is spoken by the priest, the whole church shall be still and hear this confession, and also confess their sins with the priest in like manner, and learn the prayer with the absolution, [to say it] at that time, and also otherwise right often before God. Hereafter in the towns the cantor or schoolmaster shall begin the Introit in Latin, or sing at times a German psalm.

The church order of 1552 puts the same form into High German and makes it the beginning of every Mass. The wording of the confession changes here into the form the later orders keep. Mecklenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1552 (Sehling 5, pp. 197–198):

> Mess oder communio, Die sol, wie vorhin in diesem lande geordnet und im brauch ist, mit der gemeinen oder öffentlichen beicht, gebet und absolution, durch den priester angefangen werden. Nemlich also. Der priester wende sich fur dem altar um gegen dem volk, und spreche. Mein allerliebsten in gott, eröffnet euere herzen, last uns gott unsere sünden bekennen, und um vergebung, im namen unsers herrn Jesu Christi bitten. Sprecht mir nach mit herzlichem begeren zu gott, im glauben an den herrn Jesum Christum, durch den heiligen geist. Denn kniet der priester nieder, fur den altar, und ein ander kirchendiener oder custos neben in, und spricht der priester mit lauter stimme. Unser hülf stehet im namen des herrn. Antwort der Chor. Der geschaffen hat himel und erden. Der priester. Ich armer sündiger mensch, bekenne fur dir, o allmechtiger gott, meinem schöpfer und erlöser, das ich gesündiget hab, nicht alleine mit gedanken, worten und werken, sondern das ich auch von natur sündig und unrein bin, in sünden empfangen und geboren. Ich hab aber zuflucht zu deiner grundlosen barmherzigkeit, suche und begere gnade, um des herrn Jesu Christi willen. Herr sei gnedig mir armen sünder. Der ander diener antwort dieses gebet. O allmechtiger barmherziger gott, der du deinen eingebornen son für uns in den tod gegeben hast, wollest dich unser erbarmen, und um desselben deines geliebten sons willen, uns alle unsere sünd vergeben. Auch deinen heiligen geist uns geben, der in uns wares erkentnis deines göttlichen wesens und willens, dazu waren gehorsam gegen dir anzünde und vermehre. Uff das wir das ewige leben, durch deine gnad, um des herrn Jesu Christi willen erlangen, amen. Der priester spricht hernach diese absolution. Der allmechtige barmherzige gott hat sich unser erbarmet, vergibt uns warhaftiglich alle unsere sünd, um seines lieben sons willen, den er um unsert willen hat in den tod gegeben, und hat macht gegeben, gottes kinder zu werden, allen, die an seinen namen gleuben, gibet uns dazu seinen heiligen geist, wer gleubt und getauft wird, sol selig werden. Das verleihe uns gott allen, amen. Dieweil diese beicht, gebet und absolution, gesprochen wird, sol die ganze kirch stille sein und solchs anhören, auch mit dem priester also bekennen, beten, und die absolution zu herzen fassen, wol lernen, und fur gott oft desgleichen sprechen. Ernach singet der chor den introitum de dominica oder festo.

Mass or communion. The same shall be begun, as heretofore ordained and in use in this land, with the common or public confession, prayer and absolution, by the priest; namely thus. The priest shall turn about before the altar toward the people, and say: My dearly beloved in God, open your hearts, let us confess our sins unto God, and pray for forgiveness in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Say after me with hearty desire unto God, in faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, through the Holy Ghost. Then the priest kneeleth down before the altar, and another minister of the church or the custos beside him, and the priest saith with a loud voice: Our help standeth in the name of the Lord. The choir answereth: Who hath made heaven and earth. The priest: I, poor sinful man, confess before thee, O almighty God, my Creator and Redeemer, that I have sinned not only in thoughts, words and works, but that I am also by nature sinful and unclean, conceived and born in sins. But I have refuge unto thy bottomless mercy, seek and desire grace, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake. Lord, be merciful to me a poor sinner. The other minister answereth this prayer: O almighty, merciful God, who hast given thine only-begotten Son unto death for us, vouchsafe to have mercy upon us, and for the sake of the same thy beloved Son forgive us all our sins; and also give us thy Holy Ghost, who may kindle and increase in us true knowledge of thy divine being and will, and thereto true obedience toward thee; to the end that we may obtain everlasting life through thy grace, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, amen. The priest saith hereafter this absolution: The almighty, merciful God hath had mercy upon us, forgiveth us truly all our sins for the sake of his dear Son, whom for our sakes he hath given unto death, and hath given power to become the children of God to all that believe on his name, giveth us moreover his Holy Ghost; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. God grant this unto us all, amen. While this confession, prayer and absolution is spoken, the whole church shall be still and hear it, and also with the priest likewise confess, pray, and take the absolution to heart, learn it well, and often say the like before God. After this the choir singeth the Introit de dominica or de festo.

Note.

- "wie vorhin in diesem lande geordnet" points back to 1540.
- What changes from 1540.

    - The Confitemini versicle is dropped. The choir, not the sexton, answers Adiutorium.
    - The confession turns from the third person ("bekenne gade", confess unto God) to the second ("bekenne fur dir, o allmechtiger gott", confess before thee, O almighty God).
    - It adds "von natur sündig und unrein" (by nature sinful and unclean) and "Ich hab aber zuflucht zu deiner grundlosen barmherzigkeit" (But I have refuge unto thy bottomless mercy).
    - The second minister's prayer becomes a collect with a relative clause ("der du …") and asks for "wares erkentnis … dazu waren gehorsam" (true knowledge … and true obedience).
    - The absolution gains "vergibt uns warhaftiglich alle unsere sünd" (forgiveth us truly all our sins), in the present tense.
- The people. In 1540 and 1552 the people are told to keep silence, confess with the priest in their hearts, and learn the text. They do not say it aloud, despite the "Sprecht mir nach" (say after me) of the address. The address keeps the phrase from Döber.
- Pfalz-Zweibrücken copies 1552 word for word (below).

Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557 and Pfalz-Veldenz 1574: the Mecklenburg form in the Palatinate. The Zweibrücken order prints the 1552 form whole, after an opening hymn to the Holy Ghost sung "until the church gathers". Pfalz-Zweibrücken, Kirchenordnung, 1557 (Sehling 18, p. 187):

> So denn das Abendmal Christi auff ein Sontag oder andern Feirtag in der Kirchen zu halten fürgenommen wirdt, soll anfengklich das gesang, Komm heyliger Geyst etc., Nun bitten wir den heyligen Geyst etc. oder sonst ein Teutscher Psalm oder geystlich lied, sonderlich der zeyt gemeß, gesungen werden, biß die Kirch zusammen kombt. […] Denn kniet der Priester nider für dem Altar, und ein ander Kirchendiener oder Custos neben im, und spricht der Priester mit lauter stimme: Unser hilffe stehet im namen des Herrn. Antwort der Chor: Der geschaffen hat himel und erden.

When, then, the Supper of Christ is purposed to be held in the church on a Sunday or other holy day, there shall first be sung the hymn "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord", etc., "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray", etc., or else a German psalm or spiritual song, especially one agreeable to the season, until the church cometh together. […] Then the priest kneeleth down before the altar, and another minister of the church or the custos beside him, and the priest saith with a loud voice: Our help standeth in the name of the Lord. The choir answereth: Who hath made heaven and earth.

Editor's notes (p. 187). The section from here to the Words of Institution is "aus KO Mecklenburg 1552". The Zweibrücken hymnal of 1571/1587 reprints it under the heading "Beicht, Gebett und Absolutio vor der Predig am Sontag" (Confession, prayer and absolution before the sermon on Sunday), that is, as the opening of every Sunday service, communion or not.

Pfalz-Veldenz takes over the Zweibrücken text with one change that matters: the second minister has gone, and the minister says the confession, the prayer for forgiveness and the absolution himself, kneeling for the first two and standing for the third. Pfalz-Veldenz, Kirchenordnung, 1574 (Sehling 18, pp. 498–499):

> Wann man, das Abendtmahl zuhalten, bey einander versamlet ist, soll erstlich der Tisch des herrn, wölchen man sonnst den altar nennet, mit einem rainen, weissen thuch gedeckhet, mit Brodt und Wein beraith sein, als dann fahet man an zu singen, knüehendt: Nun bitten wir den heiligen Geist. Oder: Khom, heiliger Geist etc. Darauff vermahnet der Pfarrer zur bekantnus der sünden und hertzlichem gebett umb verzeyhung derselbigen, ungefarlich mit solchen wortten: Meine aller liebsten in dem herrn, lasset uns Gott unnsere Sünde bekhennen und umb vergebung in dem Namen unnsers herrn Jesu Christi bitten, Eröffnet derhalben ewere hertzen und sprecht mir nach mit hertzlichen begehren zu Gott im glauben an den herrn Christum durch den heiligen Geist. […] Dann kniehet der dhiener nider und spricht dem volckh für mit lautter Stimme: Ich armer sündiger Mensch bekhenn vor dir, o allmechtiger Gott, meinem Schöpffer und Erlöser, das ich leider vil gesündiget hab, nicht allein mit gedanckhen, wortten und werckhen, sonder das ich von Natur sündig und unrein bin, in sünden Empfangen und geborn. Ich hab aber zuflucht zu deiner grundtlosen Barmhertzigkheit, suche und begehre gnade umb des herrn Jesu Christi willen; herr, sey gnedig mir armen sünder. Allmechtiger, barmhertziger Gott, der du deinen Eingebornen Sohn für uns in den Todt gegeben hast, wöllest dich unnser erbarmen unnd umb desselbigen, deines geliebten Sohns, willen uns all unnser Sünden verzeyhen, auch deinen heiligen Geist geben, der in uns wahre erkantnus deines göttlichen wesens unnd willens, darzu wahren gehorsam gegen dir anzünde und vermehre, uff das wir diß unnser leben nach allem deinem wolgefallen hinbringen und hernach das ewige leben durch dein gnadt umb des herrn Jesu Christi willen erlangen etc. Absolutio würdt gesprochen von dem dhiener, wann er auffgestanden: Der allmechtig, barmhertzig Gott hat sich unnser erbarmet, vergibt uns warhafftig all unnsere sünde und Missethat umb seines geliebten Sohns willen, den er umb unsert willen hat in den todt gegeben, und hat macht geben, khinder Gottes > zuwerden, allen, die an seinen Namen glauben, gibt unns darzu seinen heiligen Geist, der uns erleucht und in alle warheit leitte, das wir seelig werden, das verleyhe uns Gott allen, durch Jesum Christum, unnsern hailandt. Amen.

When they are assembled together to hold the Supper, the table of the Lord, which is otherwise called the altar, shall first be covered with a clean white cloth and be made ready with bread and wine; then they begin to sing, kneeling: "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray", or "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord", etc. Thereupon the pastor exhorteth to the confession of sins and to hearty prayer for the forgiveness of the same, about with such words: My dearly beloved in the Lord, let us confess our sins unto God and pray for forgiveness in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ; open therefore your hearts and say after me with hearty desire unto God, in faith in the Lord Christ, through the Holy Ghost. [...] Then the minister kneeleth down and saith before the people with a loud voice: I, poor sinful man, confess before thee, O almighty God, my Creator and Redeemer, that I have, alas, sinned much, not only in thoughts, words and works, but that I am by nature sinful and unclean, conceived and born in sins. But I have refuge unto thy bottomless mercy, seek and desire grace for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake; Lord, be merciful to me a poor sinner. Almighty, merciful God, who hast given thine only-begotten Son unto death for us, vouchsafe to have mercy upon us, and for the sake of the same, thy beloved Son, forgive us all our sins; also give thy Holy Ghost, who may kindle and increase in us true knowledge of thy divine being and will, and thereto true obedience toward thee, to the end that we may pass this our life according to all thy good pleasure, and hereafter obtain everlasting life through thy grace, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, etc. The absolution is spoken by the minister when he hath stood up: The almighty, merciful God hath had mercy upon us, forgiveth us truly all our sins and misdeeds for the sake of his beloved Son, whom for our sakes he hath given unto death, and hath given power to become the children of God to all that believe on his name, giveth us moreover his Holy Ghost, who enlighteneth us and leadeth us into all truth, that we may be saved; God grant this unto us all, through Jesus Christ, our Saviour. Amen.

Amberg 1555: the confession in the plural. The Amberg order of 1555 takes the Mecklenburg form for its Mass on feast days. Sehling's editor notes that the section is taken "ganz aus Mecklenburg 1552". But it changes the priest's confession from the singular to the plural, so that it is no longer "Ich armer sündiger mensch" but "Wir armen, sündige menschen". Amberg, Kirchenordnung, 1555 (Sehling 13, p. 290):

> Erstlich soll der chor das Veni, Sancte, nachmals der priester in dem gewonligen ornat Adjutorium nostrum in nomine [Ps. 124,8] singen. Darauf respondir der chor Qui fecit celum et terram [Ps. 124,8]. Alsdann soll er sich vor dem altar gegen dem volk wenden und mit lauter stimm sprechen: Mein allerliebsten in Got! Eröffnet eure herzen, laßt uns vur Got unsere sunden bekennen und umb vergebung im namen unsers Herren Jesu Christi bitten! Sprecht mir nach mit herzligem begern zu Got im glauben an den Herren Jesum Cristum durch den Heiligen Geist! Dann knie der priester nider fur den altar und ein anderer kirchendiener neben ine und spreche mit lauter stimb: Wir armen, sündige menschen bekennen fur dir, o allmechtiger Got, unserm schöpfer und erlöser, daß wir gesundigt haben nicht allein mit gedanken worten und werken, sondern daß wir auch von natur sundig und verdamt sind, in sunden empfangen und geboren. Wir haben aber zuefluecht zu deiner grundlosen barmherzigkeit, suchen und begern gnad umb des Herren Jesu Christi willen. Herr, sei gnedig uns armen sundern! Der ander kierchendiener antwort dises gebet: O almechtiger, barmherziger Got, der du deinen eingebornen Sune fur uns in den tod gegeben hast! Wollest dich unser erbarmen und umb desselben deines geliebten Suns willen uns alle unsere sunde vergeben, auch deinen Heiligen Geist uns geben, der in uns wares erkentnus deines göttlichen wesens und willens, darzue waren gehorsam gegen dir anzunde, mehre und erhalte, uf daß wir das ebige leben durch dein gnad umb des Herren Jesu Christi willen erlangen! Amen. Der priester stee alsdann auf und spreche hernach diese absolution gegen dem volk und soll der ander kirchendiener alleweil kniend bleiben: Der almechtig, barmherzig Got hat sich unser erbarmet, vergibt uns warhaftiglich alle unsere sunde umb seines lieben Sons willen, den er umb unserentwillen hat in den tod gegeben, und hat macht gegeben, Gottes kinder zu werden, allen, die an seinen namen glauben, gibt uns darzue seinen Heiligen Geist. Wer glaubt und getauft wierd, soll selig werden. Das verleihe uns Got allen! Amen. Und, alldieweil dise peicht, gebet und absolution gesprochen wird, soll die ganze kirchen still sein und solchs anhören, auch mit dem priester also bekennen, beten und die absolution zu herzen fassen, wol lernen und fur Got oft desgleichen sprechen.

First shall the choir sing the Veni, Sancte, and afterward the priest, in the accustomed vestment, Adjutorium nostrum in nomine [Ps 124:8]. Thereupon the choir respondeth Qui fecit celum et terram [Ps 124:8]. Then shall he turn before the altar toward the people and say with a loud voice: My dearly beloved in God! Open your hearts, let us confess our sins before God and pray for forgiveness in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ! Say after me with hearty desire unto God, in faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, through the Holy Ghost! Then let the priest kneel down before the altar, and another minister of the church beside him, and say with a loud voice: We poor, sinful men confess before thee, O almighty God, our Creator and Redeemer, that we have sinned not only with thoughts, words and works, but that we are also by nature sinful and damned, conceived and born in sins. But we have refuge unto thy bottomless mercy, and seek and desire grace for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake. Lord, be merciful to us poor sinners! The other minister of the church answereth this prayer: O almighty, merciful God, who hast given thine only-begotten Son unto death for us! Vouchsafe to have mercy upon us, and for the sake of the same, thy beloved Son, forgive us all our sins, and give us also thy Holy Ghost, who may kindle, increase and preserve in us true knowledge of thy divine being and will, and thereto true obedience toward thee, that we may obtain eternal life through thy grace, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake! Amen. Let the priest then stand up and thereafter speak this absolution toward the people, and the other minister of the church shall remain kneeling the while: The almighty, merciful God hath had mercy upon us, forgiveth us truly all our sins for his dear Son's sake, whom for our sakes he hath given unto death, and hath given power to become the children of God to all that believe on his name, and giveth us moreover his Holy Ghost. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. God grant this unto us all! Amen. And while this confession, prayer and absolution are spoken, the whole church shall be still and hear it, and also with the priest so confess, pray and take the absolution to heart, learn it well, and often say the like before God.

Note. The plural confession and the instruction that the church shall "mit dem priester also bekennen" (with the priest so confess) bring Amberg nearer than any other sixteenth-century witness to the Common Service, whose confession begins "Almighty God, our Maker and Redeemer, we poor sinners confess unto Thee" (§3.4.5). Sehling's apparatus shows that the text it calls the Bericht reads "unrein" (unclean), as Mecklenburg does, where the order of 1555 has "verdamt" (damned).

Hadeln: the confession sung, the sexton absolving. The Hadeln order, which Sehling dates 1526, has the priest vest during the Te Deum at the end of Matins and kneel for Veni Sancte Spiritus. He then sings the confession on the same tone, and the sexton answers and reads the absolution. Hadeln, Kirchenordnung "von 1526" (Sehling 5, pp. 467–468):

> Under des dat men singet Te Deum, schal sick de prester kleden mit gewantlickem missgewant, nicht alse nödig, sundern als ein düchtig erbarlich zirath, und nicht darinne de saligkeit soken. Des gelicken schal men ein edder twe wasslichte ansticken (dewile idt des heren aventmahl ist), und up dem altare brennen laten, bet de misse uthe is. Wenn denn de collecta der metten gesungen ist, so schall de prester demödig up de knee sitten gahn, und singen mit dem chore Veni sancte spiritus latinisch edder dudesch. Finita collecta blifft de prester sitten, und hevet lude mit demsulvigen thono de confession an, und bi ehme de köster antwordet, und list de absolution. Alss den singet men einen psalmum vor dem Introitu de dominica edder trinitate edder de Spiritu sancto vel pasche, edder wat der schrift nicht tho weddern ist.

While the Te Deum is being sung, the priest shall clothe himself with the accustomed Mass vestment, not as needful, but as a seemly and honest ornament, and not seek salvation therein. Likewise one or two wax lights shall be lit (since it is the Lord's Supper) and be let burn upon the altar until the Mass is out. When then the collect of Matins hath been sung, the priest shall go humbly to kneel upon his knees and sing with the choir Veni sancte spiritus in Latin or German. The collect being ended, the priest remaineth kneeling and beginneth aloud the confession on the same tone, and the sexton by him answereth and readeth the absolution. Then a psalm is sung before the Introit, of the Sunday or of the Trinity or of the Holy Ghost or of Easter, or whatever is not contrary to Scripture.

Note. One manuscript (Sehling's VIII, 65) adds the remark: "Nb. dat Confiteor mit des costers absolution ist gefallen" (Nota bene: the Confiteor with the sexton's absolution has fallen [away]; Sehling 5, p. 468). The sexton's absolution was given up at some later date.

3.3.5 Family D: the Offene Schuld moved into the Mass

The Offene Schuld. The late medieval Offene Schuld ("open guilt") was a general confession, with a declaratory absolution, recited by the preacher after the sermon in the vernacular preaching service. It was never part of the Mass. The first evangelical Masses carry it into the Mass, as an absolution of the communicants. Sehling's editor sets out the development under Volprecht 1524 (Sehling 11, p. 39):

> Wie schon die deutsche Messe des Kaspar Kantz in Nördlingen 1522 (Smend 74), die Straßburger deutsche Messe 1524 (Smend 126) und die Messe Döbers (siehe unten S. 57) nach mittelalterlichem Vorbild erst im Predigtgottesdienst (Surgant f. 84ff.), dann aber auch nach der Predigt im Meßgottesdienst (Jungmann 1, 631ff.). Bei diesem Übergang aus dem Predigtgottesdienst in die Messe wandelte sich aber, wie diese ihre Verwendung zeigt, die Offene Schuld für das Volksempfinden aus einem Predigtanhängsel in eine Rüsthandlung für den Sakramentsteil.

As already the German Mass of Kaspar Kantz in Nördlingen 1522, the Strasbourg German Mass 1524, and Döber's Mass, after the medieval model, first in the preaching service, but then also after the sermon in the Mass. In this passage out of the preaching service into the Mass, however, the Open Confession was changed, as this use of it shows, in the feeling of the people from an appendage of the sermon into a preparation for the Sacrament.

Kantz, Nördlingen 1522. The earliest form opens with an exhortation, then gives the absolution with no confession text at all: "Der allmechtig, barmherzig Gott vergeb euch euer sünd! Und ich, us bevelch unsers Herren Jesu Christi an statt der heiligen kirchen, sag euch frei, ledig und los aller euer sünden …" (The almighty and merciful God forgive you your sins! And I, by the commandment of our Lord Jesus Christ, in the stead of the holy Church, pronounce you free, quit and loosed of all your sins …; Sehling 12, p. 285). Sehling's editor calls it a fusion of the Indulgentiam with the absolution of private confession. The full text, with Adiutorium and the recast Orate fratres, is in Chapter 7 §7.2.1.

Bremen 1525. The Low German Evangelische Misse printed at Bremen in 1525 translates Kantz's address and absolution: "De almechtige, barmhertige Got vorgeve iw iwe sunde. Unde ick, uth bevel unses heren Jesu Christi, in de stede der hilligen kercken, vorkundige iw fry, ledich unde los to syn van al iwen sunden" (The almighty, merciful God forgive you your sins. And I, by the commandment of our Lord Jesus Christ, in the stead of the holy Church, proclaim you to be free, quit and loosed of all your sins; Sehling 7/2.2, p. 405). It heads the priest's request for the people's prayer "Bicht des presters" (the priest's confession), and keeps Kantz's Adiutorium and Veni Sancte Spiritus. The address is printed in §3.5.14.1.

Volprecht, Nürnberg 1524. The prior of the Augustinians at Nürnberg says an offene beicht "anstatt des Confiteor" before the Introit, addressed to God and to "brothers and sisters". The absolution that follows is headed "Absolutio, das Misereatur".
Nürnberg, Deutsche Messe of the prior Volprecht, 1524 (Sehling 11, pp. 39–40):

> Wenn der briester will lesen ein teutsche meß, spricht er vor die offene beicht anstatt des Confiteor: Ich armer, elender, sündiger maensch bekenn mich Gott meinem himlischen Vater und meinem Herren Jesu Christo meinem seligmacher, euch brüder und schwester und der ganzen christlichen versamlung, das ich leider oft und dick wieder Gott, meinen Herrn, gesündigt hab mit unglauben und mißtrauen, in nit geliebt uber alle ding und meinen nechsten als mich selbes. Das ist mir vest und ser laid von grund meines herzens. O Herr Gott, allmechtiger Vater, ich armer sunder ermahn dich deiner gnadenreichen zusagung und versprechung, da du verheist vergebung der sund durch das blut deines Suns Jesu Christi, der fur uns gestorben ist und sein blut zu vergebung der sund fur uns vergossen hat. Derselbig mein Herr […] Jesus Christus hat auch durch sein heiligen mund gesprochen, wo zwen oder drei in seinern namen versamelt sein, da sei er in irer mitte, und, was sie von dir in seinem namen bitten, das sollen sie gewert sein. So bitten wir verzeihung unser sund in seinen namen. Herr Gott, sprich zu uns: Nach deinem glauben geschech dir! Gee hin in frid! Sundige nit meer! Deine sund sein dir vergeben, verziehen und nachgelassen. Absolutio, das Misereatur: Mein lieber bruder und schwester, Gott hat sich unser erbarmet und hat uns verzihen alle unser sund und will uns geben das ewig leben. Amen.

When the priest will read a German Mass, he saith beforehand the open confession instead of the Confiteor: I, poor, wretched, sinful man, confess myself unto God my heavenly Father and unto my Lord Jesus Christ my Saviour, unto you, brothers and sisters, and unto the whole Christian congregation, that I have, alas, often and much sinned against God my Lord with unbelief and mistrust, not loved him above all things, and my neighbour as myself. That is sore and grievous unto me from the bottom of my heart. O Lord God, almighty Father, I, a poor sinner, put thee in mind of thy gracious pledge and promise, wherein thou promisest forgiveness of sins through the blood of thy Son Jesus Christ, who died for us and shed his blood for us for the forgiveness of sins. The same my Lord Jesus Christ hath also spoken by his holy mouth: where two or three are gathered together in his name, there is he in the midst of them; and what they ask of thee in his name, that shall be granted them. So we pray for the pardon of our sins in his name. Lord God, say unto us: According to thy faith be it unto thee! Go in peace! Sin no more! Thy sins are forgiven, pardoned and remitted thee. Absolution, the Misereatur: My dear brother and sister, God hath had mercy upon us, and hath pardoned us all our sins, and will give us everlasting life. Amen.

Note.

- "euch brüder und schwester" keeps the Confiteor's "et vobis, fratres" (and to you, brethren), with the saints left out.
- The absolution is in the first person plural ("unser", us), so the priest includes himself; it is a declaration, not a sentence of loosing.

Naumburg 1537: an indicative absolution at the start of Mass. At St. Wenzel's in Naumburg the choir sings Kom heiliger geist herre gott, and the priest then reads "das confiteor zum volk". It is a bidding to prayer, a confession said by all, and an absolution in the first person singular. Naumburg, Kirchen-Ordnung for St. Wenzel's, 1537 (Sehling 2, pp. 77–78):

> Darauf list der priester das confiteor zum volk wie volget. Lieben freunde, dieweil wir itzunt alle in dem dienst gottes des almechtigen zu hören sein heiliges gotliches wort vorsamlet sein, so wollen wir erstlichen den herrn umb seine gnade anrufen und bitten, das er uns unsere herzen zu dem warhaftigem Vorstand seines gütlichen Worts eröffnen wolle [...] Dieweil wir aber alle sunder sein, so last uns erstlichen unsere sunde bekennen und dieselben gott dem almechtigen abbitten und sprecht. Ich armer sunder bekenne dir o almechtiger gott und barmherziger vater fur dieser ganzen gemein alle meine sunde und missethat, dardurch ich dich so mannichfeltig zu zorn vorursacht und bit dich durch deine grundlose barmherzigkeit, und durch das bittere leiden und sterben deines lieben sohns JESU CHRISTI du wollest gnedig sein mir armen sundern. Absolutio. Auf solch euer bekentnus aus bevel des herrn Jesu Christi anstat der heiligen christlichen kirchen vorgebe ich euch all eure sunde im namen des vaters und des sons und des heiligen geistes. Amen. Der fried des herrn Jesu Christi sei mit euch allen. Amen. Hierauf singt der ganze chor das kyrie eleison

Thereupon the priest readeth the Confiteor to the people, as followeth. Dear friends, forasmuch as we are now all gathered in the service of God the almighty to hear his holy, godly word, we will first call upon the Lord for his grace and pray him that he would open our hearts to the true understanding of his divine word [...] But forasmuch as we are all sinners, let us first confess our sins and beg pardon for the same of God the almighty, and say: I, poor sinner, confess unto thee, O almighty God and merciful Father, before this whole congregation all my sins and misdeeds, whereby I have so manifoldly provoked thee to wrath; and I pray thee, through thy bottomless mercy and through the bitter passion and death of thy dear Son JESUS CHRIST, that thou wouldest be gracious to me, poor sinner. Absolution. Upon this your confession, by the command of the Lord Jesus Christ, in the stead of the holy Christian Church, I forgive you all your sins, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Amen. The peace of the Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen. Thereupon the whole choir singeth the Kyrie eleison.

Note. "Auf solch euer bekentnus … anstat der heiligen christlichen kirchen vorgebe ich euch all eure sunde" is the formula of private confession, used here over the whole congregation. Compare the Brandenburg and Pfalz-Neuburg prohibitions of a "gemeine beicht" (§3.4.6).

3.3.6 Family E: the Upper German and Reformed opening

In Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed, before the Interim) and the Reformed orders the service begins with the minister's call to confession, a prayer of confession in the first person plural, and a comfortable word as absolution. This is the Offene Schuld of the preaching service, kept at its head. Strasbourg, Agende, 1537/1541 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 20/1, p. 270):

> Das Confiteor oder offene schuld: Bekennen Gott, dem Herren, und verjehen mitt mir ein jedes seine sünd und missethat: Almechtiger, ewiger Got und vatter, wir bekennen und verjehen dir, das wir inn ungerechtigkeiten empfangen, voller sünd und ubertrettung sein inn allem unserm leben, als die, so deinem wort nit volkomen glauben noch deinen heiligen gebotten nach kommen. Wir bitten dich, sihe an dein güte, und umb deins namens willen seie genedig und verzeihe unserer missethat, die leider gros ist. Ein absolution oder trostspruch, I. Timothei I: Das ist gewislich war unnd ein theur werdes wort: Christus Jesus ist kommen inn die welt, die sünder selig zu machen. Ein jedes bekenne sich in warheit mit dem H. Paulo in seinem hertzen und glaube inn Christum, so versprich ich euch in seinem namen verzeihung aller ewer sünden und sage euch derselbigen los auff erden, das ir iren auch im himel los seien in ewigkeit, Amen. Etwan nimet er andere sprüch, die uns der verzeihung der sünden unnd bezalung Christi für unsere sünd getrüsten, Als: Joannis am III.: Also hat Got die welt geliebt, das er seinen einigen Sun gab, auff das alle, die an in glauben, nit verloren werden, sondern das ewig leben haben.

The Confiteor or open confession: Confess unto God the Lord, and acknowledge with me, every one, his sins and misdeeds: Almighty, everlasting God and Father, we confess and acknowledge unto thee that we were conceived in iniquities, and are full of sin and transgression in all our life, as they that neither believe thy word perfectly nor follow thy holy commandments. We pray thee, look upon thy goodness, and for thy name's sake be gracious and pardon our misdeed, which, alas, is great. An absolution or comfortable word, 1 Timothy 1: This is a true saying and a precious word: Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners. Let every one confess himself in truth with Saint Paul in his heart, and believe in Christ; so I promise you in his name the pardon of all your sins, and pronounce you loosed of the same on earth, that ye may be loosed of them also in heaven for ever, Amen. Sometimes he taketh other sayings that comfort us with the pardon of sins and Christ's payment for our sins, as John 3: God so loved the world, that he gave his only Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

Note.

- The name. "Das Confiteor oder offene schuld": in Strasbourg (1537, Moderate Reformed) the open confession is the Confiteor.
- The absolution is conditional on each one's confession and faith ("Ein jedes bekenne sich … und glaube … so versprich ich euch"). Further comfortable words follow: John 3:35–36, Acts 10:43 and 1 John 2:1–2 (p. 271).
- A second Confiteor follows: "Almechtiger, ewiger Gott und vatter, wir bekennen und verjehen, das wir leider in sünden empfangen und geboren sind unnd daher geneigt zu allem argen unnd treg zu allem guten …" (Almighty, everlasting God and Father, we confess and acknowledge that we were, alas, conceived and born in sins, and therefore inclined to all evil and slothful to all good …; p. 271). The Palatinate editor names this "other Confiteor" among the sources of the Palatinate prayer below.

The Palatinate 1563 (Reformed). The Reformed order of Elector Frederick III opens the Sunday morning service with a prayer of confession before the sermon, and puts the confession, absolution and retention after the sermon (§3.4.4). The prayer before the sermon begins Palatinate, Kirchenordnung, 1563 (Reformed; Sehling 14, p. 388):

> Für der predig, insonderheyt an den Son- und feyertagen morgens und an bettagen, soll diß nachvolgend gebet dem volck fürgesprochen werden, in welchem die christlich gemein des menschhchen elendts außtrücklich erinnert und die heilsame gnade Gottes begert wirdt, auf daß die hertzen zur demut bereit werden und das wort der gnaden desto begierlicher annemen. Gnad, fried und barmhertzigkeyt etc. Himmlischer vater, ewiger und barmhertziger Gott, wir bekennen und verjehen für deiner göttlichen majestet, daß wir arme, elende sünder seind, empfangen und geboren in aller boßheyt und verderbnuß, geneigt zu allem bösen, unnütz zu einigem guten, und daß wir mit unserm sündlichen leben ohne underlaß deine heilige gebot ubertreten

Before the sermon, especially on Sundays and holy days in the morning, and on days of prayer, this following prayer shall be spoken before the people, wherein the Christian congregation is expressly reminded of man's misery, and the wholesome grace of God is desired, to the end that hearts may be made ready unto humility and receive the word of grace the more desirously. Grace, peace and mercy, etc. Heavenly Father, eternal and merciful God, we confess and acknowledge before thy divine majesty that we are poor, wretched sinners, conceived and born in all wickedness and corruption, inclined to all evil, unprofitable to any good, and that with our sinful life we transgress thy holy commandments without ceasing

Note.

- The opening is the apostolic greeting "Gnad, fried und barmhertzigkeyt" (Grace, peace and mercy) in the place of the versicles. The prayer ends with the Our Father (p. 389).
- The editor traces the prayer to Geneva 1563 and Frankfurt 1555 (both Reformed) and "Straßburg … (das andere Confiteor)", the second Strasbourg confession above (Moderate Reformed).
- Poullain and Micron (both Reformed). The French stranger church at Frankfurt opens with Adiutorium nostrum in nomine Domini and a Confessio peccatorum, "Domine Deus, Pater aeterne …" (Sehling 9, p. 563). Micron's Dutch order for London, also used at Emden, has an open confession with a conditional declaration (Sehling 7/1, p. 602).

Wertheim 1524: the confession after the sermon. The earliest report of a Mass after the sermon is Franz Kolb's letter to Luther. Wertheim, Franz Kolb to Luther, 27 August 1524 (Sehling 11, p. 707):

> primum convenimus omnes ad concionem; facta concione, statim omissis ornatibus huc usque usitatis, paratis pane et vino, flexis ante altare genubus, alta et teutonica voce dico Confiteor brevissimum, deinde Pater noster, pro tertio Credo in Deum; statim surgo, consecro panem nudis Christi verbis et calicem, et sine omni adhortatione communico fratrem meum capellanum cum aliis fratribus et sororibus.

First we all come together to the sermon; the sermon being done, straightway, the ornaments hitherto used being laid aside, bread and wine being made ready, with knees bowed before the altar, I say with a loud voice and in German a very short Confiteor, then the Pater noster, thirdly the Credo in Deum; straightway I rise, consecrate the bread with the bare words of Christ, and the cup, and without any exhortation communicate my brother the chaplain with the other brethren and sisters.

3.3.7 Family F: a hymn, a psalm or Veni Sancte Spiritus at the beginning

Luther. The Formula missae (1523) begins with the Introit. The Deutsche Messe (1526) begins with a German hymn or psalm, followed directly by the Kyrie. Wittenberg, Luther, Deudsche messe und ordnung gottis diensts, 1526 (Sehling 1, p. 14):

> Zum anfang aber singen wir ein geistlich lied oder einen deudschen psalmen in primo tono auf die weise wie folget. „Ich will den Herrn loben alle zeit." (Psalm 34, 1 —23). Darauf kyrie eleison, auch im selben thon, drei mal und nicht neun mal

But at the beginning we sing a spiritual song or a German psalm in the first tone, after the manner as followeth: "I will bless the Lord at all times" (Psalm 34:1–23). Thereupon Kyrie eleison, also in the same tone, three times and not nine times.

Luther's Mass has no confession and no versicles before the Introit or the opening psalm.

The Holy Ghost before the Introit. Several orders recast the medieval accessus as a congregational preparation of the Holy Ghost. At the Amberg hospital church the schoolmaster and boys sing Veni Sancte, and the priest sings a German collect with the versicle. Amberg, Ordnung der kirchen … im spital, 1544 (Sehling 13, p. 282):

> Zum ersten, soe der priester in seinem habitu nach altem gebrauch der kirchen uber den altar tritt, singt unser schulmeister mit den knaben das lateinisch Veni, Sancte..., darauf der priester ein deutsche collecten sampt dem versikel, umb gnad des Hailigen Gaistes bittende. Nachmals singt der chor den introitum missae de S[ancta] Trinitate oder sonst de tempore

First, when the priest in his habit, according to the old use of the church, goeth up to the altar, our schoolmaster singeth with the boys the Latin Veni, Sancte …; thereupon the priest a German collect together with the versicle, praying for the grace of the Holy Ghost. Afterward the choir singeth the Introit of the Mass of the Holy Trinity, or else de tempore.

Editor's note (p. 282). This is "eine Rüsthandlung für die Gemeinde anstatt des Stufengebetes (mit dem Confiteor)" (a preparation for the congregation in place of the prayers at the foot of the altar, with the Confiteor), probably a form of the accessus. The note is quoted in full in §3.6.1. The collect is presumably the Pentecost collect Deus, qui corda fidelium, and the versicle Cor mundum crea in me, Deus, which Luther used at his ordinations (WA 38, 424).

At Verden the choir sings Veni Sancte Spiritus, the priest sings Emitte Spiritum tuum, and the collect Deus, qui corda fidelium follows. Verden, Kirchenordnung, 1606 (Sehling 7/1, pp. 155–156):

> Erstlich, wann der priester oder pfarrer vor den altar getretten, so soll der chor die antiphen Veni, sancte Spiritus anfahen. Darnach soll der priester singen: Emitte Spiritum et creabuntur. Der chor soll antworten: Et renovabis faciem terrae […] Ferner soll der priester singen: Oremus. Deus, qui corda fidelium. Darauf soll der introitus de tempore, Kyrie eleison, Gloria in excelsis Deo, item Et in terra pax gesungen werden

First, when the priest or pastor hath stepped before the altar, the choir shall begin the antiphon Veni, sancte Spiritus. Thereafter the priest shall sing: Emitte Spiritum et creabuntur. The choir shall answer: Et renovabis faciem terrae […] Further the priest shall sing: Oremus. Deus, qui corda fidelium. Thereupon shall be sung the Introit de tempore, Kyrie eleison, Gloria in excelsis Deo, and Et in terra pax.

Editor's note (p. 155): "Unsere Liturgie bis zum Introitus ist eine 'praeparatio ad missam'. Im späteren Mittelalter hatte man aus dem privaten priesterlichen Vorbereitungsoffizium (Akzeß) manchmal eine Hore der Kleriker und gleichsam ein 'officium de Spiritu sancto' gestaltet" (Our liturgy up to the Introit is a praeparatio ad missam. In the later Middle Ages the private preparatory office of the priest, the accessus, had sometimes been made into an hour of the clergy, as it were an "office of the Holy Ghost").

The same pattern stands in other orders:

- Kantz 1522 and Döber 1525: Veni Sancte Spiritus, said by the priest for the people after the absolution (§3.3.4).
- Buxtehude 1552: on weekdays a German psalm before the Introit, "alse Kum, hilliger Geist" (Sehling 7/1, p. 74).
- Naumburg 1537, Nördlingen 1544, Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557 and Pfalz-Veldenz 1574: Kom heiliger geist herre gott or Nun bitten wir den heiligen Geist, sung by the choir or congregation, at Pfalz-Veldenz kneeling.
- Hadeln: Veni sancte spiritus, priest kneeling with the choir (§3.3.4).
- Hof 1592: Veni Sancte Spiritus "ante introitum" at the Monday office in the monastery church, sung in three parts (Sehling 11, p. 464).

The Benedictus at Hermannstadt. The Transylvanian order sings Zechariah's canticle in German before the Introit on Sundays, in place of the abolished procession. Transylvania, Kirchenordnung, 1547, Latin version (Sehling 24, p. 223):

> Dominicis diebus pro abrogato circuitu, ante Introitum, canitur Germanicum canticum Zachariae: Benedictus Dominus aut si quibus magis tunc placeant litaniae, tempore Paschali: Salve festa dies. Aliis diebus festis haec praetermittimus, initium missae sumentes ab introitu de tempore aut alio simili, si non repugnet scripturae.

On Sundays, in place of the abolished procession, before the Introit, there is sung in German the canticle of Zacharias, Benedictus Dominus; or, if the litany please any better at that time; in Eastertide, Salve festa dies. On other feast days we leave these out, taking the beginning of the Mass from the Introit de tempore or another like it, if it be not contrary to Scripture.

In the villages. Where there was no Latin choir, a German psalm or hymn stood in place of the Introit:

- Mecklenburg 1540: "Up den dörperen schal men stedes einen düdeschen psalm singen vor den introitum" (in the villages a German psalm shall always be sung before the Introit; Sehling 5, p. 151).
- Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533: "ein christenlich teutsch gesang" (§3.3.2).
- Sayn 1590: "Erstlich, wann man in die Kirche kompt, soll man einen Teutschen Psalm singen. Darnach soll der Pfarrherr ein Collect lesen" (First, when one cometh into the church, a German psalm shall be sung; thereafter the pastor shall read a collect; Sehling 19/1, p. 412).

3.3.8 Family G: Müntzer's Allstedt Mass; Iudica me and Aufer a nobis elsewhere

Müntzer keeps the Stufengebet. Thomas Müntzer's German Masses (Radical Reformation) for Allstedt are the one place in Sehling where Ps 43 Iudica me survives as the preparation for Mass. In the order of 1523 the Mass begins "So man zuvorn vorm altar gemeine beicht thut" (when the general confession has first been made before the altar; Sehling 1, p. 504). The Deutsch evangelisch Messe of 1524 prints it. Ps 43 (the Vulgate's 42nd) is said by the priest and the whole people; it includes, as its fourth verse, the Introibo ad altare Dei that the Roman Mass uses as its antiphon. Then come the priest's confession, the people's Misereatur, the versicle Deus, tu conversus, and the prayer Aufer a nobis, all in German, all aloud, and all before the Introit.
Allstedt, Thomas Müntzer, Deutsch evangelisch Messe, 1524 (Radical Reformation; Sehling 1, p. 499):

> Ampt von der menschwerdung Christi unsers heilandes. Der 42. psalm wird gesprochen mit dem ganzen volk, ehe man gemeine beicht thut. 1. O got, urteil mich und sunder mich ab von der gottlosen art, und errette mich von dem hinterlistigen schalke. 2. Dan du bist ein gott meiner sterke. Warumb hast du mich vorlassen? Ich ging wie ein trauriger, do mich zwang der gottlose mensche. 3. Schick aus dein licht und warheit, dass sie werden mich furen zum heiligen berge und deinem lager. 4. Do werde ich kommen zum altar gottis, zu gotte, der meine jugent erfrauet. O gott, mein gott, do bekenne ich dein lob auf der harfen. 5. O meine seele, warumb rimpfestu dich? warumb machstu mich traurig? erwarte des herrn; dann ich bekenn ihn. Er ist ein heil meins angesichts, und er ist mein gott. 6. Ere sei dem vater und dem sone und dem heiligen geiste. Als es war im anfang, itzt und immer und von ewickeit zu ewickeit. — Do antwort das gemein volk: Amen. Die beicht thut der priester mit klaren worten vor allem volk, sagende: O milder gott vater, ich bekenne dir und deinem zarten sohne, Jesu Christ, und dem tröster, dem heiligen geist, vor allen gottfürchtigen, das ich elender sunder mein lebenlang wider deinen willen (der durchs gesetz erklert wirt) gehandelt habe, mit hinlessigem zuvorsicht und mit ungeübtem glauben und mit unbeflissner liebe stat gegeben hab den sunden; dieselbigen mit begir, worten und werken nit abgewant durch gottis werk und wort. Darumb bit ich euch umbstehenden auserwelten freunde gottis helfen zu bitten vor mich mit ganzem herzen, gemüt und kreften, auf das die geheim göttliches bundes eröffnet werden durch meine rede und durch eur gehöre. Das gemeine volk sagt darauf: Got sei dir gnedig, lere dich von tag zu tage, alle seines willens und werks uns zu gute warnemen mit thun und lassen. Der priester sagt darauf: Amen. Und sobald saget er diesen vers: O gott, wende dich zu uns wie ein getreuer unterweiser. Do antwort das volk darauf: Auf das wir, dein volk, mügen in dir frölich sein. Darnach saget der priester: O herr, nicht uns, nicht uns. Resp.: Sundern gib den preis deinem namen. Der priester saget: Last uns bitten: O herr, nimm von uns unser missethat, das wir mit rechtschaffenem gemüt deiner heiligen göttlichen kraft mügen gewertig sein im gezeugnis zukünftiger wort durch Jesum Christum, unsern herrn. Amen.

The Office of the Incarnation of Christ our Saviour. The 42nd psalm is said with the whole people, before the general confession is made. 1. O God, judge me and sever me from the ungodly kind, and deliver me from the deceitful knave. 2. For thou art the God of my strength. Why hast thou forsaken me? I went as one that mourneth, when the ungodly man oppressed me. 3. Send out thy light and truth, that they may lead me to the holy hill and to thy dwelling. 4. There will I come to the altar of God, to God, who maketh glad my youth. O God, my God, there will I confess thy praise upon the harp. 5. O my soul, why art thou cast down? Why makest thou me sad? Wait for the Lord; for I confess him. He is the health of my countenance, and he is my God. 6. Glory be to the Father and to the Son and to the Holy Ghost. As it was in the beginning, is now and ever, and from eternity to eternity. Then the common people answer: Amen. The priest maketh the confession with clear words before all the people, saying: O mild God, Father, I confess to thee and to thy tender Son, Jesus Christ, and to the Comforter, the Holy Ghost, before all them that fear God, that I, a wretched sinner, have all my life long done against thy will (which is declared by the law), and with negligent confidence, unexercised faith and unstudious love have given place to sins, and have not turned them away in desire, words and works through God's work and word. Therefore I pray you, the chosen friends of God that stand about, to help to pray for me with all your heart, mind and strength, that the secret of the divine covenant may be opened through my speech and through your hearing. The common people saith thereupon: God be gracious unto thee, and teach thee from day to day to heed all his will and work for our good, in doing and in leaving undone. The priest saith thereupon: Amen. And straightway he saith this verse: O God, turn thee unto us as a faithful instructor. The people answer thereupon: That we, thy people, may be joyful in thee. Thereafter the priest saith: O Lord, not unto us, not unto us. Answer: But give the glory unto thy name. The priest saith: Let us pray: O Lord, take from us our iniquity, that with an upright mind we may wait upon thy holy, divine power in the witness of the words to come, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

What Müntzer keeps, and what he changes.

Roman Stufengebet	Müntzer 1524
Introibo ad altare Dei (antiphon)	Not said as an antiphon; kept only as verse 4 of the psalm, "Do werde ich kommen zum altar gottis"
Ps 43 Iudica me, priest and server in alternation, with Gloria Patri	Ps 43 in German, "mit dem ganzen volk", with Gloria Patri; the people answer Amen
Adiutorium nostrum	Not present
Confiteor of the priest, asking the bystanders to pray for him	A new confession by the priest "vor allem volk", asking "euch umbstehenden auserwelten freunde gottis" to pray for him
Misereatur of the server	"Got sei dir gnedig, lere dich von tag zu tage …", said by the people
Confiteor of the server and the priest's Misereatur and Indulgentiam	Not present; there is no absolution
Deus, tu conversus vivificabis nos / Et plebs tua laetabitur in te	"O gott, wende dich zu uns wie ein getreuer unterweiser" / "Auf das wir, dein volk, mügen in dir frölich sein"
(not in the Roman form)	"O herr, nicht uns, nicht uns" / "Sundern gib den preis deinem namen" (Ps 115:1)
Aufer a nobis	"O herr, nimm von uns unser missethat …", recast to look forward to the "zukünftiger wort" (words to come)

The Roman versicles Ostende nobis and Domine, exaudi, the Dominus vobiscum and Oramus te are gone. The server's part has passed to the whole congregation.

Elsewhere, Aufer a nobis alone. Outside Allstedt the prayer Aufer a nobis appears in one order for certain, and in another by the editor's conjecture:

- The Cellische Ordnungen of 1545 sing it in Latin after the sermon, as the first of three verses during which the people kneel and pray "an stadt des offertorii" (in place of the offertory). Its petition to enter "ad sancta sanctorum" (into the holy of holies) here leads into the Preface. Albertine Saxony, Die Cellischen Ordnungen, 1545 (Sehling 1, p. 300):

> Nach der predigt. Sal man erstlich das dominus vobiscum singen, darnach dise drei versus anheben. 1 Aufer a nobis domine cunctas iniquitates nostras, ut mereamur puris mentibus introire ad sancta sanctorum. Alleluja. 2 Miserere, miserere, miserere, populo tuo quem redemisti, Christe, sanguine tuo ne in eternum irascaris nobis. Alleluja. 3 Exaudi, exaudi, exaudi, domine, preces nostras o Jesu Christe, intercede pro nobis Alleluja.

After the sermon. One shall first sing the Dominus vobiscum, and thereafter begin these three verses. 1. Take away from us, O Lord, all our iniquities, that we may be worthy to enter with pure minds into the holy of holies. Alleluia. 2. Have mercy, have mercy, have mercy upon thy people, whom thou hast redeemed, O Christ, with thy blood, that thou be not angry with us for ever. Alleluia. 3. Hear, hear, hear, O Lord, our prayers, O Jesus Christ; make intercession for us. Alleluia.

- Regensburg 1542. During the litany, before the Introit, "betet der priester sambt dem evangelier das Confiteor" (the priest, together with the gospeller, prayeth the Confiteor); after the litany the priest sings "ein collecten anstat der ganzen kirchen" (a collect in the name of the whole church; Sehling 13, pp. 391–392). Sehling's editor takes this collect to be "Wohl das Gebet Aufer a nobis der Messe, nicht mehr aber das evangelisch unmögliche sich daran anschließende Oramus te" (probably the prayer Aufer a nobis of the Mass, but no longer the Oramus te that follows it, which was impossible for evangelicals). He adds that of the south German orders only Regensburg kept a prayer at this place, apart from the early Amberg form (Sehling 13, p. 392); but at Amberg 1550 he judges the collect "Kaum das noch zum Confiteor gehörige Gebet Aufer a nobis" (hardly the prayer Aufer a nobis that still belongs to the Confiteor; Sehling 13, p. 285).

The Mass form of the Confiteor. On Regensburg 1542 the editor also notes that Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533, Dietrich's Agendbüchlein of 1543 and Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 knew "nur ein vom Geistlichen allein gesprochenes 'Confiteor oder was ine sein andacht erinnert'" (only a "Confiteor, or what his devotion bids him", said by the clergyman alone), whereas Regensburg's priest says it with the deacon; and that "In ähnlicher Weise wie in Regensburg wurde aber das Meß-Confiteor auch 1544 in Nördlingen (Sehling 12, 311) gebraucht" (in a similar way as at Regensburg, however, the Mass Confiteor was also used in 1544 at Nördlingen; Sehling 13, p. 391). For Nördlingen see §3.3.2.

The verdict. Introibo as an antiphon and Ps 43 as the priest's preparatory psalm disappear from every order in Sehling except Müntzer's (Radical Reformation). Aufer a nobis survives at the beginning of Mass only at Allstedt and, if the editor is right, at Regensburg 1542; in the Cellische Ordnungen it moves to the offertory. Ps 43 itself remains in the Lutheran orders as the Introit of Judica Sunday (e.g. Nördlingen 1579, Sehling 12, p. 379).

3.4 Confession and absolution: what the orders did with the Confiteor

3.4.1 Where it falls

The confession of sins stands in four different places in the orders, and a few orders have it in two:

Place	Form	Orders
Before the Introit, privately	The priest's Confiteor or other prayer at the altar, during the Introit	Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533, Brandenburg 1540, Pfalz-Neuburg 1543, Hohenlohe 1553, Regensburg 1542 and 1553, Amberg 1550, Buxtehude 1552, Bergedorf 1544, Schleswig-Holstein 1542, Nördlingen 1544; Bugenhagen's kneeling prayer at Wolfenbüttel 1543 and Hildesheim 1544 (§§3.3.2–3.3.3)
Before the Introit, publicly	Address, confession and absolution in the people's hearing	Müntzer 1523/1524 (Radical Reformation; with Ps 43, no absolution; §3.3.8); Volprecht 1524, Döber 1525, Lippe, Kiel, Mecklenburg 1540 and 1552, Amberg 1555, Naumburg 1537, Nördlingen 1544, Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557, Pfalz-Veldenz 1574, Hadeln; Strasbourg 1537 (Moderate Reformed); Palatinate 1563 (Reformed; prayer before the sermon) (§§3.3.4–3.3.6)
After the sermon	Open confession from the pulpit, or at the altar before the Sacrament	Bugenhagen, Brunswick 1528; Wertheim 1524 (§3.3.6); Kurpfalz 1556; Palatinate 1563 (Reformed); Amberg 1550 (§3.4.4)
In the communion rite	Confession and absolution after the exhortation, before the Verba	Kantz 1522 and Bremen 1525; Augsburg 1530 (Moderate Reformed; the absolution inside the second exhortation); Regensburg c. 1544 and 1567; Hohenlohe 1553 (from the pulpit); Württemberg 1536 and its followers, among them Kurpfalz 1556 and Hanau-Lichtenberg 1573; Nürnberg after 1569; Mecklenburg 1552 (the absolution inside the exhortation); Marienhafe 1593 (a prayer of confession without absolution) (§§3.4.4, 3.5)

Mecklenburg 1552 has it twice: the public confession at the beginning of every Mass (§3.3.4), and an absolution inside the exhortation before communion (§3.5.9). Nördlingen 1544 has it twice at the beginning: the celebrant's own Confiteor, absolved by a fellow minister, and then the open confession to the people (§3.3.2).

The Palatinate moves it. Kurpfalz 1556 sets the order "die predigt, offen beicht und gemeines gebet" (the sermon, open confession and common prayer; Sehling 14, p. 165). In 1563, now Reformed, the confession and absolution follow the Sunday morning sermon, and the Supper has its own examination by questions (§3.4.4).

3.4.2 Who says it, and does the chancel party pray it together?

- The priest alone. In family A the priest says the Confiteor by himself at the altar, silently or "by sick" (Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533, Hohenlohe 1553, Amberg 1550, Schleswig-Holstein 1542).
- The priest and the ministrants. Brandenburg 1540 and Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 have the priest go to the altar "samt seinen ministranten". At Regensburg 1553 the priest prays the Confiteor kneeling with "dem einen ministranten (der dazumal secundus ist)", that is, in the Roman dialogue with the server.
- The priest and the sexton. In the north the sexton is the server:
  - Bugenhagen's prayer is said by the priest kneeling "mit dem köster" (Wolfenbüttel) or "mit dem oppermanne" (Hildesheim), who answers each versicle.
  - In Mecklenburg 1540 the sexton "edder ein ander christen" (or another Christian) kneels with the priest and says the prayer for forgiveness.
  - At Kiel the sexton reads the Misereatur and the absolution, and the priest says "Amen".
  - At Hadeln the sexton answers the priest's sung confession and reads the absolution. One manuscript notes that this "ist gefallen" (has been given up).
- The priest and a second minister. Mecklenburg 1552 and Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557: "ein ander kirchendiener oder custos" (another minister of the church, or the custos) kneels beside the priest; "der ander diener" says the prayer for forgiveness; the choir answers Adiutorium. At Nördlingen 1544 a fellow minister absolves the celebrant.
- The people. The people take one of four parts:
  - They say it after the priest: "sprecht mir nach" (say after me; Döber 1525) and "spreket de bicht mit my" (say the confession with me; Bugenhagen 1528).
  - They confess silently with him: Mecklenburg 1540 and 1552, "sol die ganze kirch stille sein … auch mit dem priester also bekennen" (the whole church shall be still … and also confess likewise with the priest).
  - They confess in their hearts: Strasbourg 1537 (Moderate Reformed), "Ein jedes bekenne sich … in seinem hertzen" (let every one confess himself … in his heart).
  - They answer "Ja" to questions: Palatinate 1563 (Reformed; §3.4.4).

Is it done privately before Mass? In two senses, yes:

- The priest. His Confiteor (family A) is private, but it is said at the altar at the beginning of Mass, not in the sacristy beforehand.
- The communicants. The usual Lutheran preparation was not a general confession at all, but each communicant's private confession, examination and absolution on the Saturday or before the service. The general confession was never allowed to replace it in Brandenburg (§3.4.6; the private rite is treated in Chapter 13 §13.17).

3.4.3 Old texts or new?

The Latin Confiteor. No evangelical order in Sehling prints the Roman Confiteor. Where it is kept it is the priest's private prayer, and the text is assumed (§3.3.2). Hohenlohe 1553 wants "das reine Confiteor lateinisch" (the pure Confiteor in Latin); Brandenburg-Nürnberg allows "das Confiteor oder, was ine sein andacht erinnert" (the Confiteor, or what his devotion puts him in mind of).

New confessions. Every public confession in the corpus is a new text. There are five families of wording:

Family	Incipit	Orders
Döber–Mecklenburg	"Und ich armer, sündiger mensch bekenn Got dem allmechtigen, meinem schöpfer und erlöser, das ich nit allein gesündiget hab mit gedanken, worten oder werken …"	Döber 1525, Lippe, Kiel, Mecklenburg 1540, 1552, Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557, Pfalz-Veldenz 1574

Family	Incipit	Orders
Volprecht	"Ich armer, elender, sündiger maensch bekenn mich Gott meinem himlischen Vater … euch brüder und schwester …"	Volprecht 1524
Naumburg	"Ich armer sunder bekenne dir o almechtiger gott und barmherziger vater fur dieser ganzen gemein alle meine sunde und missethat …"	Naumburg 1537
Württemberg	"Ich armer sünder bekenn mich Gott, meinem himelischen vatter, das ich leider schwerlich und manigfalt gesündet hab, nit allein mit eusserlichen, groben sünden, sonder vil mer mit innerlicher angeborner plindtheit …"	Württemberg 1536; Kurpfalz 1556; Palatinate 1563 (Reformed; in the second person, "für dir, meinem Gott und schöpfer")
Strasbourg	"Almechtiger, ewiger Got und vatter, wir bekennen und verjehen dir, das wir inn ungerechtigkeiten empfangen …"	Strasbourg 1537 (Moderate Reformed); Palatinate 1563 (Reformed; prayer before the sermon); Poullain and Micron (Reformed)

Bugenhagen's Brunswick confession of 1528 is a sixth, unique form: a confession against the Creed and the two tables of the law, with a pause for each to name his own sin (§3.4.4).

The confession's two points. The Döber family confesses actual sin "mit gedanken, worten oder werken" (in thoughts, words or works: the cogitatione, verbo et opere of the Confiteor) and original sin, "in sünden empfangen und geborn" (conceived and born in sins). Württemberg confesses "innerlicher angeborner plindtheit, unglauben, zweifelung" (inward inborn blindness, unbelief, doubt). Both make original sin and unbelief the matter of the confession.

What became of the Misereatur. The Roman Misereatur tui omnipotens Deus ("Almighty God have mercy upon thee") is said by the server for the priest and by the priest for the server. In the orders:

- Kept by name. At Kiel: "Minister legit: Myseriator. De coster list: Miseriator" (the minister reads the Misereatur; the sexton reads the Misereatur). The text is not given.
- Recast as a prayer for us all. Döber: "Der barmherzig Got wöl sich unser erbarmen …" (The merciful God vouchsafe to have mercy upon us …). Lippe heads this same prayer "De absolutio".
- Given to the second minister. In Mecklenburg 1540 "De dener antwerdet dit gebet" (the minister answereth this prayer), as the server answered the priest's Confiteor with the Misereatur. In 1552 it becomes a full collect, "O allmechtiger barmherziger gott, der du deinen eingebornen son für uns in den tod gegeben hast, wollest dich unser erbarmen …" (O almighty, merciful God, who hast given thine only-begotten Son unto death for us, vouchsafe to have mercy upon us …).
- The name given to a declaration. Volprecht heads his absolution "Absolutio, das Misereatur" (§3.3.5).

What became of the Indulgentiam. The Roman Indulgentiam, absolutionem et remissionem peccatorum nostrorum tribuat nobis omnipotens et misericors Dominus is a wish in the first person plural. Two orders keep its opening words:

- Kantz 1522: "Der allmechtig, barmherzig Gott vergeb euch euer sünd!" (The almighty and merciful God forgive you your sins!), in the second person, followed by the indicative absolution.
- Döber 1525: "Der almechtich, barmherzig Got hat sich unser erbarmet …" (The almighty, merciful God hath had mercy upon us …), recast as a declaration in the perfect tense.

3.4.4 Optative, declaratory or indicative?

The absolutions fall into five types. The modern Common Service declaration of grace is type 2.

Type	Formula	Orders
1. Optative (a wish or prayer)	"Der barmherzig Got wöl sich unser erbarmen und uns unsere sünd verzeihen …" (vouchsafe to have mercy upon us and forgive us)	Döber 1525 (the Misereatur); Lippe and Kiel; Mecklenburg 1540; Mecklenburg 1552 and Pfalz-

Type	Formula	Orders
		Zweibrücken 1557 (as the second minister's prayer)
2. Declaration of grace (first person plural, no "I")	"Der almechtich, barmherzig Got hat sich unser erbarmet … Das verleihe uns Got allen" (hath had mercy upon us … God grant this unto us all)	Döber 1525; Mecklenburg 1540 and 1552; Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557; Pfalz-Veldenz 1574; Volprecht 1524 ("Gott hat sich unser erbarmet")
3. Indicative (the minister, by Christ's command, looses)	"ich, us bevelch unsers Herren Jesu Christi an statt der heiligen kirchen, sag euch frei, ledig und los" (I, by the commandment of our Lord Jesus Christ, in the stead of the holy Church, pronounce you free, quit and loosed)	Kantz 1522; Kiel (read by the sexton); Naumburg 1537; Württemberg 1536; Nürnberg after 1569; Mecklenburg 1552 (in the exhortation)
4. Conditional declaration, with retention	"Sovil nun euer sein, die … denselbigen … verkündige ich … Soviel aber under euch seind, die noch einen gefallen haben an iren sünden …" (As many of you as … to them I declare … But as many among you as still have pleasure in their sins …)	Strasbourg 1537 (Moderate Reformed; without retention); Micron and Palatinate 1563 (Reformed)
5. No absolution, only a word of comfort	"Jesus Christus is unse salicheit ewichlick" (Jesus Christ is our salvation for ever)	Bugenhagen, Brunswick 1528; Palatinate 1563 (Reformed; Supper examination)

Type 2 and type 3. The declaration of grace (type 2) is the commonest form at the beginning of the Mass. The indicative (type 3) is the commonest form in the communion rite, where it comes out of private confession. The orders do not argue over the difference. Württemberg 1536 offers both, and in the second person singular.

Württemberg 1536: the open confession and three absolutions. After the exhortation the pastor says the confession for all, then one of three absolutions; the congregation then sings the Our Father "als ein offenlich beicht" (as a public confession). Württemberg, Kirchenordnung, 1536 (Sehling 16, pp. 108–109):

> Nach der vermanung soll er inen vorsagen die offenliche beicht unnd nachvolgends die offenliche absolution, ungevarlich auff nachvolgende weis: Ich armer sünder bekenn mich Gott, meinem himelischen vatter, das ich leider schwerlich und manigfalt gesündet hab, nit allein mit eusserlichen, groben sünden, sonder vil mer mit innerlicher angeborner plindtheit, unglauben, zweifelung, kleinmütigkeit, ungedult, hochfart, bösen lüsten, heimlichen neyd unnd hass, mißvergünstig etc., wie das mein Herr Gott an mich erkendt und ich leider so volnkommenlich nit erkennen kan, also rewen sie mich und seind mir leid, beger gnad von Gott. Absolutio: Der allmechtig Got hat sich dein erbarmet und durch verdienst des allerheiligsten leidens, sterbens und aufferstehns unsers Herren Jesu Christi, seines geliebten suns, vergibt er dir all dein sünd, unnd ich, als ein verordneter diener der Christenlichen kirchen, verkündige dir aus bevelch unsers Herren Jesu Christi solche vergebung aller deiner sünd in namen des vatters und des suns und des heyligen geists, Amen. Gee hin im frid, dir geschech, wie du glaubest. Oder also: Der allmechtig und barmhertzig Gott vergibt dir dein sünd, und ich, aus bevelch unnsers Herren Jesu Christi, an stat der heiligen kirchen, sag dich frey, ledig und los aller deiner sünd in namen des vatters und des suns unnd des heiligen geists, Amen, Gee hin unnd sündige nicht mer, sonder besser dich one underlas; das helff dir Gott. Oder also: In der einsatzung des predig ampts des heiligen Evangelions hat Jesus Christus zu seinen Aposteln gesagt: Wer euch höret, der höret mich, und welchen ir die sünde erlassen, den seind sie erlassen, unnd welchen ir sie behaltet, den sind sie behalten. Aus vermög diser wort und bevelch Christi verkündige ich euch, das alle ewere sünd durch Jesum Christum gebüsset sein und erlasse euch als ein ordenlicher diener des heiligen Evangelions aller ewer mißthat in dem namen des vatters, des suns und des heiligen geists, Amen. Auff das singe die kirch das vatter unser teutsch, dieweil es ein sonderlich hertzlich gebett und auch darzu ein offenlich beicht ist.

After the exhortation he shall say before them the public confession, and afterward the public absolution, about after this manner: I, poor sinner, confess myself unto God my heavenly Father, that I have, alas, grievously and manifoldly sinned, not only with outward, gross sins, but much more with inward, inborn blindness, unbelief, doubting, faint-heartedness, impatience, pride, evil lusts, secret envy and hatred, grudging, etc., as my Lord God knoweth of me, and I, alas, cannot so perfectly know; therefore they repent me and are grievous unto me; I desire grace of God. Absolution: The almighty God hath had mercy upon thee, and through the merit of the most holy passion, death and resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ, his beloved Son, he forgiveth thee all thy sins; and I, as an appointed minister of the Christian Church, declare unto thee, by the command of our Lord Jesus Christ, such forgiveness of all thy sins, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, Amen. Go in peace; be it unto thee as thou believest. Or thus: The almighty and merciful God forgiveth thee thy sin, and I, by the command of our Lord Jesus Christ, in the stead of the holy Church, pronounce thee free, quit and loosed of all thy sins, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, Amen. Go, and sin no more, but amend thyself without ceasing; God help thee thereto. Or thus: In the institution of the preaching office of the holy Gospel, Jesus Christ said to his apostles: He that heareth you heareth me; and whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted, and whose soever ye retain, they are retained. By virtue of these words and command of Christ I declare unto you that all your sins are atoned through Jesus Christ, and I remit you, as an ordained minister of the holy Gospel, all your misdeeds, in the name of the Father, of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, Amen. Thereupon let the church sing the Our Father in German, for it is a singularly hearty prayer, and therewith also a public confession.

Note.

- The second person singular. The first two absolutions are in the singular ("dir", thee), as in private confession. Sehling's editor refers both to the absolution of private confession in Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533 (Sehling 11, p. 187). Only the third is in the plural.
- The confession passes, almost word for word, into the Kurpfalz order of 1556 and from it into the Reformed Palatinate order of 1563 (below).
- The Our Father sung after the absolution is called "ein offenlich beicht" because of its fifth petition.

Nürnberg after 1569: the Offene Schuld appended to the exhortation. Veit Dietrich's Agendbüchlein, in the editions from 1569, ends the exhortation with an invitation to confess and an absolution that is both conditional and indicative. Nürnberg, Veit Dietrich, Agendbüchlein, edition of 1569, from Sehling's apparatus (Sehling 11, p. 498):

> Und dieweil wir alle gesündiget haben und der genaden Gottes bedörfen, so demütiget eure herzen vor Gott dem Herren, bekennet eure sünde und gebrechen mit herzlicher lieb und begirde seiner götlichen gnaden und hilf, mit festem glauben und vertrauen auf sein genedig zusagen und vergebt von herzen ein jeder seinem nechsten, auf das euer himlischer Vater eure sünd und missetaten auch vergeb! So ir solches tut, entbind ich euch an stat der heiligen christlichen kirchen und aus befelch und zusagen unsers Herren Jesu Christi, da er sprach: „Weme ir die sünde vergebt, dem sein sie vergeben“ (Joh. 20, 23), von allen euren sünden im namen des Vaters und des Sons und des Heiligen Geistes. Amen.

And forasmuch as we have all sinned and have need of the grace of God, humble your hearts before God the Lord, confess your sins and infirmities with hearty love and desire of his divine grace and help, with firm faith and trust in his gracious promise, and forgive from the heart every one his neighbour, that your heavenly Father may also forgive your sins and misdeeds! If ye do this, I loose you, in the stead of the holy Christian Church and by the command and promise of our Lord Jesus Christ, when he said, "Whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them" (John 20:23), from all your sins, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Amen.

Editor's note (p. 498, note 5). The Offene Schuld "war nach dem Vorbild mittelalterlicher Predigtgottesdienstformen … im Winter 1524/1525 … angefügt" (had been appended in the winter of 1524/25 on the model of the medieval preaching service). Osiander left it out when the exhortation was taken into the church order of 1533; "auf den Wunsch der Gemeinde" (at the congregation's wish) it was quickly taken back, and "Osiander führte jetzt gegen sie einen heißen, aber vergeblichen Kampf" (Osiander now waged a hot but vain battle against it). The wording disputed in 1533 came from Wenzel Linck.

Bugenhagen, Brunswick 1528: the confession from the pulpit. After the sermon the preacher leads the people in the Creed and a confession of sins, without an absolution. The general prayer follows. Brunswick, Christlike ordeninge of Johannes Bugenhagen, 1528 (Sehling 6/1, p. 443):

> Exhortatio edder vormaninge up dem predickstole na der predige: Leven frunde in Christo, spreket mit my den loven. Ick love in Got den Vader, almechtigen etc. Spreket de bicht mit my unde bekennet Gade jue sunde, dat uns Got gnedich sy. Got sy gnedich my arme sunder. Id feylet my an deme loven, dat ick Got mynen Heren nicht van ganzeme herten leve, my nicht ganzlick up em vorlate in anvechtingen unde aller nöt lives unde der selen. Ick scholde alleyne Got fruchten unde in allen dingen vor ogene hebben, nu fruchte ick my vor de lüde, de my umme der gerechticheit willen konen bose dohn. Ick fruchte vor myn gut, ere, fruntschop unde lyff to vorlesende. Ick sorge vor de neringe unchristlick unde söke in > allen dingen dat myne unde nicht, wat Gades is. Ock stelle ick nicht ganz myne salicheit in Jesum Christum, synen eyngebarn Sone, vor uns gegeven. Id feylet my ock an der leve, dat ick mynen negesten nicht leve alse my sulvest, sonder handele wedder en' mit bosen vordechtnissen, mit achterkosen, mit worden, mit werken unde kan nicht eyn wort van em wedder mick liden. Ick swige denne mehr unde kan em nicht van herten vorgeven unde bun doch sulcks schuldich to dohn. Besundergen hebbe ick eyne beswerde conscientie in disser anvechtinge: N., in disser sunden: N. (Eyn jewelick klage Gade syne heymelike beswerlike sunde tor beteringe). Darumme, almechtige Got, leve Vader, vorgiff my alle myne sunde unde erlüchte myn herte mit dyner warheit, dat ick dick: mach holden vor mynen gnedigen Vader unde mynen negesten vor mynen broder ane alle ergernisse nach dyneme worde dorch unsen Heren Jesum […] Christum. (spreket:) Amen. Jesus Christus is unse salicheit ewichlick. (spreket:) Amen.

Exhortation or admonition on the pulpit after the sermon: Dear friends in Christ, say the Creed with me. I believe in God the Father almighty, etc. Say the confession with me, and confess your sins unto God, that God may be gracious unto us. God be merciful to me a poor sinner. I fail in faith, in that I love not God my Lord with my whole heart, nor rely wholly upon him in temptations and in all need of body and soul. I should fear God alone and have him before mine eyes in all things; now I fear the people that can do me evil for righteousness' sake. I fear to lose my goods, honour, friendship and life. I am careful for my living unchristianly, and seek in all things mine own and not what is God's. Also I set not my salvation wholly in Jesus Christ, his only-begotten Son, given for us. I fail also in love, in that I love not my neighbour as myself, but deal against him with evil suspicions, with backbiting, with words, with works, and cannot suffer one word from him against me. Much more I keep silence, and cannot forgive him from the heart, and yet am bound so to do. In especial I have a burdened conscience in this temptation: N., in this sin: N. (Let every one complain to God of his secret grievous sin, for amendment.) Therefore, almighty God, dear Father, forgive me all my sins, and enlighten my heart with thy truth, that I may hold thee for my gracious Father and my neighbour for my brother, without all offence, according to thy word, through our Lord Jesus Christ. (Say:) Amen. Jesus Christ is our salvation for ever. (Say:) Amen.

Note.

- "N." marks a silent pause in which each hearer names his own temptation and sin to God.
- The ending. There is no absolution: the preacher's "Jesus Christus is unse salicheit ewichlick" (Jesus Christ is our salvation for ever) stands in its place.

Amberg 1550: the open confession with the general prayer. In the Upper Palatinate the open confession follows the sermon on Sundays, together with the general prayer, and comes before the offertory and the exhortation. At weekday morning prayer the people say it after the priest. Amberg, Kirchenordnung, 1550 (Sehling 13, pp. 286–287):

> Darauf volget die predig, welche gemeiniklich mit dem glauben oder mit andern deutschen psalm oder gesange von hohen festen wurd angefangen. Nach der predig wurdt allezeit die offene beicht und das gemein gebete fur geistlich und weltlich und sonst für alle obligende not der christlichen kirchen gesprochen. […] Briester liset vor dem altar gegen dem volk ein ganzes capitel aus der bibl und einer kurzen summarien oder auslegung, darnach die offene beicht und das gemeine gebet mit dem morgensegen, weliches das volk im nachsprechen, zuletzt ein collectam und ein deutschen psalmen.

Thereupon followeth the sermon, which is commonly begun with the Creed or with another German psalm or hymn of the high feasts. After the sermon there is always spoken the open confession and the common prayer for spiritual and temporal [estates], and else for all the pressing need of the Christian Church. […] The priest readeth before the altar, toward the people, a whole chapter out of the Bible, with a short summary or exposition; thereafter the open confession and the common prayer, with the morning blessing, which the people [say] after him; lastly a collect and a German psalm.

The Palatinate 1563: confession, absolution and retention after the sermon. The Reformed order puts the confession after the Sunday morning sermon. Its confession is Württemberg's, and its absolution is a conditional declaration with a retention of sins. Palatinate, Kirchenordnung, 1563 (Reformed; Sehling 14, p. 389):

> Am Sontag nach der morgenpredig soll der kirchendiener sprechen: Ir geliebten in dem herrn, Dieweil wir in den geboten Gottes gleich als in einem spiegel sehen, wie groß und vielfältig unser sünden sind, durch welche wir zeitliche und ewige straf verdienen, so laßt uns diesselbige von hertzen unserm getreuen vater bekennen, sprecht derhalben mit mir also: Ich armer sünder bekenn für dir, meinem Gott und schöpfer, daß ich leider schwerlich und mannigfältig wider dich gesündiget hab, nit allein mit eusserlichen groben sünden, sonder vilmehr mit innerlicher angeborner blindheyt, > unglauben, zweifelung, kleinmütigkeyt, ungedult, hoffart, bösem geitz, heimlichen neid, haß und mißvergunst, auch andern bösen dücken, wie du, mein herr und Gott, an mir erkennest und ich leider nit gnugsam erkennen kan, die reuen mich und sind mir leid und beger von hertzen gnad, durch deinen lieben son Jesum Christum. Darauf soll er den gläubigen die vergebung der […] sünden und den unbußfertigen das urtheil Gottes verkündigen und also sprechen: Nun höret an den gewissen trost der gnaden Gottes, welche er allen gläubigen in seinem evangelio verheisset. Also spricht der herr Christus Johan. am 3.: Also hat Gott die welt geliebt, daß er seinen eingebornen son gab, auf daß alle, die an in glauben, nicht verlorn werden, sonder das ewig leben haben. Sovil nun euer sein, die an ihnen selbst und an iren sünden ein mißfallen haben und vertrauen, daß sie inen durch den verdienst Jesu Christi allein gantz und gar vergeben sind, und den fürsatz haben, je lenger je mehr von sünden abzustehen und dem herrn in warer heiligkeyt und gerechtigkeyt zu dienen, denselbigen (dieweil sie glauben in den son des lebendigen Gottes) verkündige ich aus dem befelch Gottes, daß sie von allen iren sünden (wie er in seinem heiligen evangelio verheißt) in dem himmel entbunden seind durch die volkommene genugthuung des allerheiligisten leidens und sterbens unsers herrn Jesu Christi, Amen. Soviel aber under euch seind, die noch einen gefallen haben an iren sünden und schanden oder in sünden wider ir gewissen beharren, denselbigen verkündige ich auß befelch Gottes, daß der zorn und das urtheil Gottes uber inen bleibt und daß alle ire sünden im himmel gehalten seind und sie von der ewigen verdamnuß nit entbunden mögen werden, biß daß sie sich bekehren.

On Sunday after the morning sermon the minister of the church shall say: Ye beloved in the Lord, forasmuch as we see in the commandments of God, as in a glass, how great and manifold our sins are, whereby we deserve temporal and eternal punishment, let us confess the same from the heart unto our faithful Father; say therefore with me thus: I, poor sinner, confess before thee, my God and Creator, that I have, alas, grievously and manifoldly sinned against thee, not only with outward gross sins, but much more with inward inborn blindness, unbelief, doubting, faint-heartedness, impatience, pride, evil covetousness, secret envy, hatred and grudging, and other evil tricks, as thou, my Lord and God, knowest of me, and I, alas, cannot sufficiently know; they repent me and are grievous unto me, and I desire grace from the heart, through thy dear Son Jesus Christ. Thereupon he shall declare unto the faithful the forgiveness of sins, and unto the impenitent the judgment of God, and speak thus: Now hear the sure comfort of the grace of God, which he promiseth to all the faithful in his Gospel. Thus saith the Lord Christ, John 3: God so loved the world, that he gave his only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. As many of you, then, as have displeasure in themselves and in their sins, and trust that they are wholly and altogether forgiven them through the merit of Jesus Christ alone, and have the purpose more and more to abstain from sins and to serve the Lord in true holiness and righteousness, to them (since they believe in the Son of the living God) I declare by the command of God that they are loosed in heaven from all their sins (as he promiseth in his holy Gospel) through the perfect satisfaction of the most holy passion and death of our Lord Jesus Christ, Amen. But as many among you as still have pleasure in their sins and shame, or persevere in sins against their conscience, to them I declare by the command of God that the wrath and judgment of God abideth upon them, and that all their sins are retained in heaven, and that they cannot be loosed from eternal damnation until they be converted.

Note.

- The editor's sources. "Fast wörtlich aus Kurpfalz 1556" (almost word for word from Kurpfalz 1556) for the confession, and London 1565 (à Lasco and Micron's order, Reformed) for the address.
- John 3:16 is the Strasbourg Trostspruch (1537, Moderate Reformed; §3.3.6). Kurpfalz 1556 uses it as the absolution in the communion of the sick (Sehling 14, p. 171).
- The verbs. "verkündige ich … daß sie … in dem himmel entbunden seind" (I declare … that they are loosed in heaven) is a declaration, not a loosing: the minister announces what God has done, as in type 2, but to a defined class of hearers, with a retention for the rest.

The Palatinate's Supper examination. Before the Supper the Reformed Palatinate (1563) puts three questions (on sin, redemption and thankfulness), each answered "Ja", and closes with an assurance in place of an absolution. Palatinate, Kirchenordnung, 1563 (Reformed; Sehling 14, p. 383):

> Alle, die nun in ihrem hertzen diß befinden, die sollen nicht zweifelen, daß sie durch das heilig leiden und sterben Christi vergebung aller irer sünden schon haben und gewißlich behalten, so lang sie in diesem fürnemen beharren, unangesehen das noch viel ubrige schwachheiten in inen seind, welche doch mit demselben leiden und sterben Jesu Christi bedeckt sein. Darauf sprech ein jeder, der solchs von hertzen begert: Amen. Kniet nider und betet, wie uns der herr gelehret hat: Unser vater etc. Nach dem gebet spreche der kirchendiener. Der Gott des friedens heilige euch gantz > und gar, und euer gantzer geist, seel und leib werde unsträflich biß auf die zukunft unsers herrn Jesu Christi behalten. Getreu ist, der euch rüfet, der wirdt es auch thun, Amen.

All, then, that find this in their heart, let them not doubt that through the holy passion and death of Christ they already have the forgiveness of all their sins and surely keep it, so long as they persevere in this purpose, notwithstanding that there are yet many remaining infirmities in them, which nevertheless are covered with the same passion and death of Jesus Christ. Thereupon let every one that desireth this from the heart say: Amen. Kneel down and pray as the Lord hath taught us: Our Father, etc. After the prayer let the minister of the church say: The God of peace sanctify you wholly, and your whole spirit, soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it, Amen.

3.4.5 The public confession and the modern Common Service

The Common Service of 1888, and the American Lutheran books that followed it, open the service with a confession of sins and a declaration of grace. Their texts descend directly from the Mecklenburg family (§3.3.4). The English below is quoted from the Common Service as printed. It is not in Sehling, and is given here for comparison only, so it is not set as a verified quotation.

Mecklenburg 1552 / Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557	Common Service (1888)
"Mein allerliebsten in gott, eröffnet euere herzen, last uns gott unsere sünden bekennen, und um vergebung, im namen unsers herrn Jesu Christi bitten."	"Beloved in the Lord! Let us draw near with a true heart, and confess our sins unto God our Father, beseeching Him, in the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ, to grant us forgiveness."
"Unser hülf stehet im namen des herrn. Antwort der Chor. Der geschaffen hat himel und erden."	"Our help is in the Name of the Lord. R. Who made heaven and earth."
(Döber, Mecklenburg 1540: "Bekennet dem heren, wente he is gut. Antwort. Unde sine barmherticheit is ewich.")	"I said, I will confess my transgressions unto the Lord. R. And Thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin." (Ps 32:5)
"Ich armer sündiger mensch, bekenne fur dir, o allmechtiger gott, meinem schöpfer und erlöser, das ich gesündiget hab, nicht alleine mit gedanken, worten und werken, sondern das ich auch von natur sündig und unrein bin … Ich hab aber zuflucht zu deiner grundlosen barmherzigkeit, suche und begere gnade, um des herrn Jesu Christi willen."	"Almighty God, our Maker and Redeemer, we poor sinners confess unto Thee, that we are by nature sinful and unclean, and that we have sinned against Thee by thought, word, and deed. Wherefore we flee for refuge to Thine infinite mercy, seeking and imploring Thy grace, for the sake of our Lord Jesus Christ."
Der ander diener: "O allmechtiger barmherziger gott, der du deinen eingebornen son für uns in den tod gegeben hast, wollest dich unser erbarmen, und um desselben deines geliebten sons willen, uns alle unsere sünd vergeben. Auch deinen heiligen geist uns geben, der in uns wares erkentnis deines göttlichen wesens und willens, dazu waren gehorsam gegen dir anzünde und vermehre. Uff das wir das ewige leben, durch deine gnad … erlangen"	"O most merciful God, who hast given Thine Only-begotten Son to die for us, have mercy upon us, and for His sake grant us remission of all our sins; and by Thy Holy Spirit increase in us true knowledge of Thee, and of Thy will, and true obedience to Thy Word, to the end that by Thy grace we may come to everlasting life; through Jesus Christ our Lord."
Der priester: "Der allmechtige barmherzige gott hat sich unser erbarmet, vergibt uns warhaftiglich alle unsere sünd, um seines lieben sons willen, den er um unsert willen hat in den tod gegeben, und hat macht gegeben, gottes kinder zu werden, allen, die an seinen namen gleuben, gibet uns dazu seinen heiligen geist, wer gleubt und getauft wird, sol selig werden. Das verleihe uns gott allen"	"Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, hath had mercy upon us, and hath given His Only Son to die for us, and for His sake forgiveth us all our sins. To them that believe on His Name, He giveth power to become the sons of God, and bestoweth upon them His Holy Spirit. He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved. Grant this, O Lord, unto us all."

What the comparison shows.

- The order of the Common Service preparation (address, Adiutorium, a second versicle, confession, prayer for forgiveness, declaration of grace) is Döber's order of 1525, by way of Mecklenburg.

- The prayer for forgiveness ("O most merciful God …") is the old Misereatur. In Mecklenburg 1552 it belonged to the second minister or custos kneeling beside the priest. That is the server's place in the Roman Stufengebet.
- The declaration of grace ("Almighty God … hath had mercy upon us … Grant this, O Lord, unto us all") is type 2 (§3.4.4): God's mercy declared in the third person, with no "I absolve", and closed with a wish. It is not an indicative absolution, and not the optative Misereatur either. Its final wish goes back to Döber's "Das verleihe uns Got allen".
- The confession passes from the priest's "Ich armer sündiger mensch" to "we poor sinners". The step is already taken at Amberg in 1555, where the priest, kneeling with another minister, says "Wir armen, sündige menschen bekennen fur dir, o allmechtiger Got, unserm schöpfer und erlöser" (We poor, sinful men confess before thee, O almighty God, our Creator and Redeemer; Sehling 13, p. 290; §3.3.4). Marienhafe in East Frisia has a plural prayer of confession too, "wir arme, sundige minschen beichten und klagen dir mit wemutigen herzen unsre vielvaltige sunden und mißtatt" (we poor, sinful men confess and lament unto thee with sorrowful hearts our manifold sins and misdeeds; Sehling 7/1, p. 712), but it comes from another line, the Offene Schuld of the Engerhafe liturgy, and stands before communion. In the sixteenth-century orders the priest says it alone while the people keep silence and confess in their hearts; the Common Service gives it to the congregation.
- The second versicle. The Common Service's second versicle (Ps 32:5) is not in Sehling's Mecklenburg texts. Its place is taken in Döber and Mecklenburg 1540 by Confitemini Domino.

The indicative absolution in American Lutheran books. The other common form in American Lutheran books, "Upon this your confession, I, by virtue of my office, as a called and ordained servant of the Word, announce the grace of God unto all of you, and in the stead and by the command of my Lord Jesus Christ I forgive you all your sins …", has its sixteenth-century counterpart in Naumburg 1537: "Auf solch euer bekentnus aus bevel des herrn Jesu Christi anstat der heiligen christlichen kirchen vorgebe ich euch all eure sunde" (§3.3.5). Its confession is also close to the one that goes with this absolution in those books: "O almighty God, merciful Father, I, a poor, miserable sinner, confess unto Thee all my sins and iniquities … and I pray Thee of Thy boundless mercy and for the sake of the holy, innocent, bitter sufferings and death of Thy beloved Son, Jesus Christ, to be gracious and merciful to me". Compare Naumburg's "bit dich durch deine grundlose barmherzigkeit, und durch das bittere leiden und sterben deines lieben sohns JESU CHRISTI du wollest gnedig sein mir armen sundern". Württemberg's "als ein verordneter diener der Christenlichen kirchen" (as an appointed minister of the Christian Church) is the sixteenth-century form of "a called and ordained servant of the Word".

3.4.6 General confession against private confession

The Brandenburg-Nürnberg tradition was wary of the general confession. The Brandenburg order forbids the people to replace private confession with a confession said together. Brandenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1540 (Sehling 3, p. 60):

> Desgleichen der misbrauch, so an etlichen orten furgenomen, das auf einen haufen etliche personen zugleich ein gemeine beicht thun und offentliche absolution empfahen, und es denn dabei wenden lassen, sol nicht gestattet, sondern ein jeder in sonderheit notturftiglich gehört und absolvirt werden. Und auf das es nu ordenlich und recht zugehe und alle misbreuch soviel möglich verhütet werden, sol man dem volk ansagen, wer das heilig sacrament wolle empfahen, das er sich des abends zuvor oder wo es ferre des wegs oder anderer zufell halben nicht sein kond, des morgens vor der messzeit dem pfarrer […] anzeige

Likewise the abuse that hath been taken up in some places, that several persons together in a crowd make a common confession and receive a public absolution, and let it rest there, shall not be suffered; but every one shall be heard and absolved severally, as need requireth. And that it may now go orderly and rightly, and all abuses be prevented as far as possible, the people shall be told that whoso will receive the holy sacrament shall [announce himself] the evening before, or, where that could not be by reason of the distance of the way or other chances, in the morning before the time of Mass, to the pastor […].

Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 repeats the rule: the pastors shall "nicht gestatten, das ir vil miteinander ein gemeine beicht tuen, sonder ein jeder sol für sich selbst sein beicht tun und absolution begern" (not suffer many of them to make a common confession together, but every one shall make his confession for himself and desire absolution; Sehling 13, p. 57).

The point of the prohibition. It is not aimed at a confession in the Mass. Brandenburg 1540 itself has the priest's Confiteor at the altar (§3.3.2). It is aimed at groups of communicants confessing together on the Saturday and taking that for private confession. In the Nürnberg tradition, the general absolution in the Mass was itself contested in 1533 (§3.4.4). Where both exist, as in Mecklenburg, the public confession at the start of the Mass is a preparation for all, and the private confession on the Saturday is the condition of admission to communion.

3.5 The exhortation to the communicants: the families collated

3.5.1 Where it falls, and what it is for

What it is. Every Lutheran order with a communion rite has an exhortation (Vermahnung, vormaninge, exhortatio) addressed to the communicants. Bugenhagen calls it "de rechte prefatie, dat is eyne vohrrede" (the true Preface, that is, a foreword; Brunswick 1528, Sehling 6/1, p. 440). It does four things:

- it teaches what the Sacrament is;
- it calls the communicants to examine themselves (1 Cor 11:28);
- it rehearses or paraphrases the Words of Institution;
- it calls for thanksgiving and love of the neighbour.

It never replaces the Words of Institution, which are always sung or said after it. In Nürnberg, where the exhortation itself rehearsed the Verba, Sehling notes that once the Verba were sung aloud the exhortation "doubled" them.

Placement. The exhortation stands in five places:

Place	Orders
After the sermon, in the pulpit or at the altar, before the Our Father and Verba	Luther, Deutsche Messe 1526 (pulpit or altar left free); Saxony 1539 and 1580; Mansfeld 1562; Grubenhagen 1581; Henneberg 1582
At the altar after the sermon, before the Verba	Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533 (moved there "auf Luthers Anregung"); Württemberg 1536 and its family; Pfalz-Neuburg 1543; Hohenlohe; Verden 1606; Palatinate 1563 (Reformed; at the table)
At the altar after the sermon, before the Preface (as its "true" form)	Bugenhagen, Brunswick 1528, Hamburg 1529, Wolfenbüttel 1543, Hildesheim 1544; Kantz 1522
After the Preface and Sanctus, before the Our Father and Verba	Mecklenburg 1552 ("so man zeit hat", if there is time); Osnabrück 1543; Naumburg 1537 (before the Sanctus)
After the Verba and Our Father, before communion	Nürnberg 1524, Döber 1525, Form und Ordnung 1525 (Osiander's original place)
After communion	Memmingen 1528 (Moderate Reformed) and Marienhafe 1593 (a short exhortation to love and thanksgiving)

Editor's note on the move. Sehling's editor comments on Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533 (Sehling 11, p. 195): "Die gegen dort erfolgte Umstellung vor den Beginn des Sakramentsteiles geht auf Luthers Anregung in seiner Deutschen Messe (1526) zurück" (the transposition, compared with 1524, to before the beginning of the sacramental part goes back to Luther's suggestion in his Deutsche Messe).

Who reads it. The priest, facing the people, from the altar (most orders), or the preacher from the pulpit (Luther's option; Bugenhagen's pulpit exhortation; Micron, Reformed). In Nürnberg 1525 "der priester oder ministrant" (the priest or the minister) may read it.

3.5.2 The families and their witnesses

How the collation was made. Every exhortation in the corpus was located by scanning all 2,368 documents for passages that share wording with a known exhortation. The match tolerates the spelling differences between High German, Low German and the several regional spellings. Each witness found was then aligned word by word against the archetype of its family, and every difference longer than a spelling variant was listed and read. Sehling's apparatus and footnotes, which the database prints inside the running text, were set aside by hand.

What "archetype" means here. For each family the archetype is the earliest full text printed by Sehling from which the others descend. Where a later recension was copied more widely than the archetype (Württemberg 1553, the Braunschweig recension of Osiander), its changes are set out in full.

The families. There are eleven families with more than one witness, and a handful of exhortations that occur in one order only:

§	Family (archetype)	Incipit	Witnesses in Sehling
3.5.3	Luther, Wittenberg 1526	"Lieben freunde Christi, weil wir hie versamlet sind …"	Saxony 1539 (abridged in print), Prussia 1544 and 1568 (in place of the Preface), Albertine Saxony 1580, Mansfeld 1562, Grubenhagen 1581, Lindau 1573, Wertheim c. 1555 (as a prayer), Frankfurt 1543 and the French church at Frankfurt 1585 (Reformed; paraphrase only), Henneberg 1582 (admonition only, rewritten)
3.5.4	Osiander, Nürnberg 1524	"Ir allerliebsten in Got! Dieweil wir jetzo das abentessen …"	Volprecht 1524, Nürnberg parish churches 1524, Döber 1525, Form und Ordnung 1525; the Braunschweig recension: Lüneburg 1564, Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1569, Buxtehude 1565 (Low German, cited), Lippe 1571, Lüneburg 1575 (cited), Verden 1606, Waldeck (revised text B)
3.5.5	Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533	"Ir allerliebsten in Got, dieweil wir jetzo das heilig abentmal …"	Brandenburg 1540, Calenberg-Göttingen 1542, Regensburg c. 1544 (rewritten 1567), Dietrich's Agendbüchlein 1543 (cited), Pfalz-Neuburg 1543, Schwäbisch Hall 1543, Hohenlohe 1553 and 1578, Strasbourg 1553 (Marbach), Nassau-Dillenburg 1575 (Philippist; cited), Erbach 1587, Ysenburg-Birstein 1588
3.5.6	Württemberg 1536, revised 1553	"Ir allerliebsten in Christo Jesu, dieweil wir yetzund das gnadreich abentmal …"	1536 text: Worms 1560. 1553 text: Kurpfalz 1556, Worms 1560, Leiningen-Westerburg 1566, Lindau 1573, Hanau-Lichtenberg 1573, Nassau-Weilburg 1576 (in its Agende of 1618), Ysenburg-Ronneburg 1582, Strasbourg 1598, Isny c. 1600, Solms-Laubach 1603, Wild- und Rheingrafschaft 1603
3.5.7	Bugenhagen, Brunswick 1528	"Myne allerlevesten, uns wert stedes dorch de predige des evangelii …"	Low German: Hamburg 1529, Lübeck 1531 (cited), Hadeln (cited), Wolfenbüttel 1543, Osnabrück 1543 (cited), Hildesheim 1544 (cited), Buxtehude (cited), Hamburg 1556 (cited). High German: Frankfurt 1543 (free paraphrase), Lüneburg 1564, Hildesheim 1561 (cited), Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1569, Lippe 1571 (twice), Verden 1606, Osnabrück 1613 (abridged)
3.5.8	Naumburg 1537	"Lieben freunde, dieweil ihr itzund das testament unsers lieben herrn Jesu Christi …"	Nördlingen 1579 (and, according to Sehling's editor, Nördlingen 1544)
3.5.9	Mecklenburg 1552	"Lieben freunde, ir als christliche menschen, die ir zuvor bericht habt von gott …"	Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557, Nassau-Weilburg 1576, Sayn 1590 (abridged); its prayer in Pfalz-Veldenz 1574
3.5.10	The Palatinate 1563 (Reformed)	"Ir geliebten in dem herrn Jesu Christo, höret an die wort der einsatzung …"	Ysenburg-Birstein 1598; the Lower Rhine recension: Moers 1581, Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588/1619 (all Reformed)
3.5.11	Pfalz-Veldenz 1574	"Ir geliebten in dem herrn Christo. Euch als	Lützelstein 1605

		Christen ist auß Gottes wortt …"
3.5.12	Zürich and Basel (Reformed)	"Lieben brüder! Ir habt gehört die unaussprechlich barmherzigkait Gottes …"	Memmingen 1528 (Moderate Reformed; from Zürich 1525), Neckarbischofsheim 1560 (from Basel 1526)
3.5.13	Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed)	"Lieben brüder und schwester, ir wöllen ein jedes bey im bedencken …"	the early Strasbourg agendas; its second half in Memmingen 1528 (both Moderate Reformed)

The exhortations that belong to no family (Kantz 1522 and the Bremen Mass of 1525, Augsburg 1530 (Moderate Reformed), Buxtehude 1565, Micron 1554/1565 (Reformed), Marienhafe 1593, and the Saturday exhortations of Hohenlohe 1578) are treated in §3.5.14.

Not reproducible. Mecklenburg 1540/45 has three Low German exhortations, "van düssen dren vormaninge eine tor tidt to lesende" (one of these three exhortations to be read at a time). Sehling does not print them: "[Es folgen jetzt drei Vermahnungen zum Abendmahle, von denen die zweite frei nach der einzigen in der niederdeutschen Ausgabe der Brandenburg-Nürnberger Kirchenordnung … gestaltet ist.]" (There follow three exhortations to the Supper, the second of which is freely shaped after the only one in the Low German edition of the Brandenburg-Nürnberg order; Sehling 5, p. 154.) Weißenburg 1528 meant to print the Nürnberg exhortation but, as the editor notes, "Sie zu bringen wurde dann aber vergessen" (it was then forgotten to include it; Sehling 11, p. 659).

3.5.3 The Luther family: Wittenberg, Deutsche Messe, 1526

Luther joins a paraphrase of the Our Father to a short admonition on the testament, and leaves it free whether it is read from the pulpit or at the altar. Wittenberg, Luther, Deudsche messe und ordnung gottis diensts, 1526 (Sehling 1, p. 15):

> Nach der predigt sol folgen eine offentliche paraphrasis des vater unsers und vermanung an die so zum sacrament gehen wollen, auf die oder besser weise, wie folget: Lieben freunde Christi, weil wir hie versamlet sind in dem namen des hern, sein heiliges testament zu empfahen, so vermane ich euch aufs erste, das ihr eur herze zu got erhebt, mit mir zu beten das vater unser, wie uns Christus unser herr geleret und erhorung trostlich zugesagt hat. Das gott unser vater im himel uns seine elende kinder auf erden barmherziglich ansehen wolte und gnade verleihen, das sein heiliger name unter uns und in aller welt geheiliget werde durch reine, rechtschaffne lere seines worts und durch brunstige liebe unsers lebens, wolte gnediglich abwenden alle falsche lere und boses leben, darin sein werder name gelestert und geschendet wird. Das auch sein reich zu kome und gemehret werde, alle sunder, verblendte und vom teufel in sein reich gefangen zur erkentnis des rechten glaubens an Jhesum Christ, seinen son, bringen und die zal der christen gross machen. Das wir auch mit seim geist gesterkt werden, seinen willen zu thun und zu leiden, beide im leben und sterben, im guten und bosen, allzeit unsern willen brechen, opfern und todten. Wolt uns auch unser teglich brod geben, fur geiz und sorge des bauchs behueten, sondern uns alles guts gnug zu ihm versehen lassen. Wolt auch uns unser schuld vergeben, wie wir denn unsern schuldigern vergeben, das unser herz ein sicher frolich gewissen fur ihm habe und fur keiner sunde uns nimmer furchten noch erschrecken. Wolt uns nicht ein furen in anfechtunge, sondern helfe uns durch seinen geist das fleisch zwingen, die welt mit ihrem wesen verachten und den teufel mit allen seinen tücken uberwinden. Und zu letzt uns wolt erlosen von allem ubel, beide leiblich und geistlich, zeitlich und ewiglich. Wilche das alles mit ernste begeren, sprechen von herzen: ‘Amen’, on allen zweifel glaubend, es sei ja und erhoret im himel, wie uns Christus zusagt: 'Was ihr bittet, gleubt, das ihrs haben werdet, so sols geschehen'. Amen. Zum andern vermane ich euch in Christo, das ihr mit rechtem glauben des testaments Christi warnehmet und allermeist die wort, darinnen uns Christus sein leib und blut zur vergebung schenkt, im herzen feste fasset, das ihr gedenkt und dankt der grundlosen liebe, die er uns bewisen hat, da er uns durch sein blut von gots zorn, sund, todt und helle erloset hat, und darauf eusserlich das brod und wein, das ist seinen leib und blut, zur sicherung und pfand zu euch nemet. Dem nach wollen wir in seinem namen und aus seinem > befehl durch seine eigene wort das testament also handeln und brauchen. Ob man aber solche paraphrasin und vermanung wolle auf der canzel flux auf die predigt thun oder fur dem altar, las ich frei eim iglichen seine wilkore. Es sihet, als habens die alten bis her auf der cantzel gethan, daher noch blieben ist, das man auf der cantzel gemein gebet thut oder das vater unser fur spricht. Aber die vermanung zu einer offentlichen beicht worden ist.

After the sermon shall follow a public paraphrase of the Our Father and an admonition to them that will go to the sacrament, after this or a better manner, as followeth: Dear friends of Christ, forasmuch as we are here gathered together in the name of the Lord to receive his holy testament, I admonish you first that ye lift up your heart to God, to pray with me the Our Father, as Christ our Lord hath taught us and hath comfortably promised us a hearing. That God our Father in heaven would mercifully look upon us his wretched children on earth, and grant grace that his holy name may be hallowed among us and in all the world, through the pure and upright teaching of his word and through the fervent love of our life; would graciously turn away all false teaching and evil life, whereby his worthy name is blasphemed and put to shame. That his kingdom also may come and be increased; that he would bring all sinners, the blinded, and them that are taken captive by the devil in his kingdom, to the knowledge of the right faith in Jesus Christ his Son, and make the number of Christians great. That we also may be strengthened with his Spirit to do and to suffer his will, both in life and in death, in good and in evil, always breaking, offering up and slaying our own will. That he would also give us our daily bread, keep us from covetousness and care for the belly, but let us look to him for enough of all good things. That he would also forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors, that our heart may have a sure and joyful conscience before him, and never fear nor be afraid of any sin. That he would not lead us into temptation, but help us by his Spirit to subdue the flesh, despise the world with all its ways, and overcome the devil with all his wiles. And lastly, that he would deliver us from all evil, both bodily and spiritual, temporal and eternal. Whoso earnestly desire all this, let them say from the heart: "Amen", believing without all doubt that it is yea and heard in heaven, as Christ promiseth us: "What ye ask, believe that ye shall have it, and it shall be done." Amen. Secondly, I admonish you in Christ that ye give heed with right faith to the testament of Christ, and above all hold fast in your heart the words wherein Christ giveth us his body and blood for forgiveness; that ye remember and give thanks for the bottomless love which he hath shown us, when he redeemed us by his blood from God's wrath, sin, death and hell; and thereupon take outwardly unto you the bread and wine, that is, his body and blood, for assurance and pledge. Accordingly we will, in his name and by his command, through his own words, so handle and use the testament. But whether this paraphrase and admonition be done in the pulpit straight after the sermon, or before the altar, I leave free to every one's choice. It seemeth that the ancients have done it hitherto in the pulpit, whence it hath still remained that the common prayer is made in the pulpit, or the Our Father said before [the people]. But the admonition hath become a public confession.

Note.

- The two parts. The paraphrase is a prayer, said by the minister, to which the people answer "Amen". The admonition proper is the second paragraph.
- The pulpit. Luther's last sentences give the history: the medieval pulpit office (Prone) had a bidding prayer, the Our Father, and an admonition that "zu einer offentlichen beicht worden ist" (has become a public confession), the Offene Schuld of §3.3.5.

Order	Sehling	Form
Saxony (Albertine), Kirchenordnung, 1539	1, p. 274	Full, but Sehling prints only incipit and explicit, "Lieben freunde Christi, weil wir hier versamlet … das testament also handeln und gebrauchen"; headed "Vermanung zum gebet vor der communio". The Our Father and Verba may be sung in its place.
Prussia, Kirchenordnung, 1544	4, p. 65	Read "an stat der prefation, welche abgethan und ausbleiben sölle" (in place of the Preface, which shall be done away); paraphrase as Luther, only lacking "gnade"; admonition rewritten (below)
Prussia, Kirchenordnung und ceremonien, 1568	4, pp. 81–82	The 1544 form, printed in full, again in place of the Preface
Wertheim, Kirchenordnung, c. 1555	11, pp. 713–714	Paraphrase turned into a prayer to God in the second person (below)

Order	Sehling	Form
Mansfeld, Kirchenordnung, 1562	2, p. 227	Verbatim; optional
Lindau, Kirchenordnung, 1573	12, pp. 209–210	Verbatim, modernized optatives ("wölle" for "wolte"); said at the altar after the Württemberg exhortation from the pulpit (§3.5.6)
Oldenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1573	7/2.1, pp. 1090–1091	Verbatim; "für dem altar", or a Latin Preface instead
Albertine Saxony, Kirchenordnung, 1580	1, pp. 368–369	Verbatim; headed "Vermanung zum gebet vor der communion", read "für dem altar"
Grubenhagen, Kirchenordnung, 1581	6/2, p. 1075	Verbatim, with "sein heiliges theuerbares" added in the admonition
Henneberg, Kirchenordnung, 1582	2, p. 308	Admonition only, rewritten (below)
Frankfurt, Agende for baptism and the communion of the sick, 1543	9, pp. 521, 553	Paraphrase as a prayer ("wir deine elende kinder auf erden bitten dich"); new admonition
Frankfurt, French Reformed church, Diakonieordnung, 1585 (Reformed)	9, p. 497	Paraphrase only, from the draft of the order

The significant variants.

- No witness changes the paraphrase in substance except by turning it into a direct prayer. The textual tradition of the paraphrase is stable: Saxony, Mansfeld, Oldenburg, Lindau, Albertine Saxony and Grubenhagen differ from Wittenberg only in spelling and in single words.
- The paraphrase as a prayer. Wertheim c. 1555 and Frankfurt 1543 recast Luther's indirect wishes ("Das gott unser vater im himel … wolte", that God our Father in heaven would …) as a prayer addressed to God. Wertheim, Kirchenordnung, c. 1555 (Sehling 11, p. 713):

> O Gott, unser himmlischer Vater, du wollest barmherziglich uns, deine arme, elende kinder auf erden, ansehen und gnade verleihen, daß dein heilger name unter uns und in aller welt geheiliget werde durch reine, rechtschaffene lehr deines worts und durch brünstige besserung unseres lebens.

O God, our heavenly Father, vouchsafe mercifully to look upon us, thy poor, wretched children on earth, and grant grace that thy holy name may be hallowed among us and in all the world, through the pure and upright teaching of thy word and through the fervent amendment of our life.

Wertheim also reads "besserung unseres lebens" (amendment of our life) for Luther's "liebe unsers lebens" (love of our life).

- Prussia: a declaration of forgiveness in the admonition. The Prussian order keeps the paraphrase but opens the admonition with a conditional declaration of forgiveness and adds a sentence on personal appropriation. Prussia, Kirchenordnung, 1544 (Sehling 4, p. 65):

> Zum andern, lieben freunde Christi. Dieweil euch hungert und dürstet nach der barmherzigkeit gottes und herzlichen begeret vergebung euer sünden, so hat unser heiland Christus seinen leib und blut vor euch am creuze gegeben, das euch eure sünde söllen abgewaschen sein, so viel euer sind, die sölchs gleuben, darum vermahne ich euch im herrn, das ir mit rechtem glauben des reichen und heiligen testaments Christi warnemet und allermeist die wort, darinnen uns unser herre Christus seinen leib und sein teures blut zur vergebung der sünde schenkt, durch reinen glauben im herzen recht fasset, das ir seines leidens und sterbens gedenkt und dankt ime von herzen um der grundlosen lieb willen, die er uns bewiesen hat, do er uns durch sein eigen blut von gottes zorn, sünde, tod und helle erlöset hat, und darauf eusserlich das brot und wein, das ist seinen leib und blut, zur sicherung und pfand zun euch nemet, dann eben, wie es ein jeder für > sich selbst empfehet, also hat er auch des evangelions und eines gnedigen vereinten gottes sich zu trösten und anzunemen.

Secondly, dear friends of Christ: forasmuch as ye hunger and thirst after the mercy of God and heartily desire the forgiveness of your sins, our Saviour Christ hath given his body and blood for you on the cross, that your sins shall be washed away, as many of you as believe it; therefore I admonish you in the Lord that ye give heed with right faith to the rich and holy testament of Christ, and above all rightly hold fast in your heart, by pure faith, the words wherein our Lord Christ giveth us his body and his precious blood for the forgiveness of sin; that ye remember his passion and death and thank him from the heart for the bottomless love which he hath shown us, when he redeemed us by his own blood from God's wrath, sin, death and hell; and thereupon take outwardly unto you the bread and wine, that is, his body and blood, for assurance and pledge; for even as each one receiveth it for himself, so also hath he to comfort himself with the Gospel and with a gracious, reconciled God, and to take them to himself.

The order of 1568, which prints the whole paraphrase, reads "heiliger name" for Luther's "werder name" (Sehling 4, p. 82).

- Henneberg: the admonition alone. The Henneberg order drops the paraphrase. It rewrites the admonition with a stronger statement of the presence ("seinen warhaftigen leib zu einer speise und sein eigen blut zu einem trank", his true body for a meat and his own blood for a drink, a phrase of the Württemberg exhortation) and the Johannine "auf das also Christus in euch, und ihr in Christo ewiglich leben möget". Henneberg, Kirchenordnung of Georg Ernst, 1582 (Sehling 2, p. 308):

> Lieben freund in Christo, weil wir alhie im namen des herrn versamlet sind, das gnadenreiche abendmal unsers herrn Jesu Christi zu begehen und zu empfahen, so vermane ich euch, das ihr mit rechtem ernst und glauben des testaments Christi wol warnemet und allermeist die wort (Nemet hin, esset, das ist mein leib, trinket, das ist mein blut) darinnen uns Christus seinen warhaftigen leib zu einer speise und sein eigen blut zu einem trank verordnet, darmit vergebung der sünden schenket und reichet, im herzen wol bedenket, auch mit glauben fest fasset und demnach demütig und andechtig dem herrn Christo der grundlosen liebe, die er uns bewiesen hat, da er durch sein blutvergiesen und sterben von gottes zorn, sünd, tod und helle uns erlöset hat, danket und darauf das brod und wein, das ist, seinen leib und blut, zu gewiser versicherung, pfand und zeugnus empfahet, auf das also Christus in euch, und ihr in Christo ewiglich leben möget. Demnach wollen wir in seinem namen und aus seinem befehl durch seine eigene wort das testament also handeln und gebrauchen.

Dear friends in Christ, forasmuch as we are here gathered in the name of the Lord to celebrate and receive the gracious Supper of our Lord Jesus Christ, I admonish you that ye give good heed with right earnestness and faith to the testament of Christ, and above all well consider in your heart the words (Take, eat, this is my body; drink, this is my blood) wherein Christ ordaineth us his true body for a meat and his own blood for a drink, and therewith giveth and reacheth forgiveness of sins, and hold them fast with faith; and thereafter humbly and devoutly thank the Lord Christ for the bottomless love which he hath shown us, when by the shedding of his blood and his death he redeemed us from God's wrath, sin, death and hell; and thereupon receive the bread and wine, that is, his body and blood, for a sure assurance, pledge and witness, that so Christ may live in you and ye in Christ for ever. Accordingly we will, in his name and by his command, through his own words, so handle and use the testament.

- Use and option. Mansfeld 1562 makes the whole text optional: "das sie brauchen möge, wer gerne wil" (that whoever will may use it), and allows it to be dropped in towns when the singing and organ make the service too long (Sehling 2, p. 227). Saxony 1539 allows the Our Father and Verba to be sung instead. Oldenburg allows the Latin Preface instead.

3.5.4 The Osiander family: Nürnberg, 1524

The archetype. Andreas Osiander's exhortation was printed in the Nürnberg provosts' Grundt und ursach (1524). Sehling takes it as the base text of the order of the Nürnberg parish churches of 1524, with the variants of Volprecht (V), the parish churches (P) and Döber (D) in his apparatus. Osiander declared himself its author on 22 September 1533. It stood after the Verba, which were then still said in Latin, and served to "open" them to the people. Nürnberg, Gottesdienstordnung der Pfarrkirchen (base text of Grundt und ursach), 1524 (Sehling 11, pp. 48–49):

> Ir allerliebsten in Got! Dieweil wir jetzo das abentessen unsers Herren Jesu Christi wöllen bedenken und halten, darin uns sein flaisch und plut zur speis und zum trank, nicht des leibs, sondern der selen gegeben wirt, söllen wir pillich mit großem vleiß ain jedlicher sich selbs prüfen, wie Paulus sagt, und alsdann von disem prot essen und von disem kelch > trinken. Dann es soll nicht dann nur ain hungerige seel, die ir sünd erkennt, Gottes zorn und den tod fürcht und nach der gerechtigkait hungerig und durstig ist, dis heilig sacrament empfahen. So wir aber uns selbs prüfen, finden wir nichts in uns dann sünd und tod, können auch uns selbs in kainen weg daraus helfen. Darumb hat unser lieber Herr Jesus Christus sich uber uns erparmet, ist umb unsertwillen mensch worden, auf daß er für uns das gesetz erfüllet und lide, was wir mit unsern sünden verschuldet hetten, und daß wir das je festiglich glauben und uns frölich darauf verlassen möchten, nam er nach dem abentessen das prot, saget dank, prachs und sprach: Nempt hin und esset! Das ist mein leib, der für euch dar gegeben wirt, als wölt er sagen: Daß ich mensch bin worden und alles, was ich tu und leide, das ist alles euer aigen, für euch und euch zu gut geschehen. Des zu ainem gewissen warzaichen gib ich euch mein leib zur speis. Desgleichen auch den kelck und sprach: Nempt hin, und trinkt aus disem alle! Das ist der kelch des neuen testaments mit meinem plut, das für euch und für vil vergossen wirt, zur vergebung der sünd. So oft ir das tut, solt ir mein darbei gedenken! Als wölt er sprechen: Dieweil ich mich euer angenommen, und euer sünd auf mich geladen hab, will ich mich selbs für die sünde in den tod opfern, mein plut vergießen, gnad und vergebung der sünd erwerben und also ain neu testament aufrichten, darin der sünd ewig nicht mer gedacht soll werden. Des zu ainem gewisen warzeichen gib ich euch mein plut zu trinken. Wer nun also von disem prot isset, und von disem kelch trinket, das ist: Wer diesen worten, die er horet, und disen zaichen, die er empfahet, festiglich glaubet, der bleibt in dem Herren Christo und Christus in im und lebet also ewiglich. Darbei söllen wir an seines tods gedenken, ime darumb danksagen, ain jedlicher sein creuz auf sich nemen und ime nachfolgen und zuvor ainer den andern lieben, wie er auch uns geliebt hat, dann wir vil sein ain prot und ain leib, die wir alle aines prots taihaftig sein und aus ainem kelch trinken.

Ye dearly beloved in God! Forasmuch as we will now consider and keep the supper of our Lord Jesus Christ, wherein his flesh and blood are given us for meat and for drink, not of the body but of the soul, we ought rightly with great diligence every one to examine himself, as Paul saith, and so to eat of this bread and drink of this cup. For none but a hungry soul, which knoweth its sin, feareth God's wrath and death, and is hungry and thirsty after righteousness, ought to receive this holy sacrament. But when we examine ourselves, we find nothing in us but sin and death, and can in no wise help ourselves out thereof. Therefore hath our dear Lord Jesus Christ had mercy upon us, and for our sakes is become man, that he might fulfil the law for us and suffer that which we had deserved with our sins. And that we might steadfastly believe this and joyfully rely thereupon, he took after the supper the bread, gave thanks, brake it, and said: Take and eat! This is my body, which is given for you; as if he would say: That I am become man, and all that I do and suffer, that is all your own, done for you and for your good. For a sure token thereof I give you my body for meat. Likewise also the cup, and said: Take and drink ye all of this! This is the cup of the new testament with my blood, which is shed for you and for many for the forgiveness of sins. As oft as ye do this, ye shall remember me thereby! As if he would say: Forasmuch as I have taken your cause upon me and laden your sins upon myself, I will offer myself unto death for sin, shed my blood, obtain grace and forgiveness of sins, and so set up a new testament, wherein sin shall be remembered no more for ever. For a sure token thereof I give you my blood to drink. Whosoever now eateth thus of this bread and drinketh of this cup, that is, whosoever firmly believeth these words which he heareth and these signs which he receiveth, he dwelleth in the Lord Christ and Christ in him, and so liveth for ever. Hereby shall we remember his death, give him thanks therefor, every one take up his cross and follow him, and above all love one another, as he also hath loved us; for we being many are one bread and one body, who are all partakers of one bread and drink of one cup.

The Nürnberg variants, 1524–1525.

- The address. V, P and D all read "Mein allerliebsten" for "Ir allerliebsten".
- Small differences. V reads "hohem vleiß" (high diligence) for "großem". V, D read "verzeihung" (pardon) for "vergebung" of sins. V, P, D read "lieb haben" for "lieben".
- The closing wish. D adds "Das verleihe uns Got allen, das wirs wirdiglich empfahen. Amen" (God grant us all this, that we may receive it worthily. Amen). V adds "Got geb seliglich amen" (God grant it blessedly, amen).
- The Offene Schuld. In the winter of 1524/25 an open confession with absolution was added at the end; it was the subject of Osiander's dispute of 1533 (§3.4.4).

The Braunschweig recension. The Lower Saxon orders do not copy Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533. They go back to the 1524 text in a recension first attested in Lüneburg 1564 and taken into the Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel order of 1569. Lüneburg 1575 shows how it circulated: it was printed with Luther's hymnals ("in Doct. M. Lutheri sangbuch"). The recension changes the archetype in these places:

- "dieweil wir nu das abendmal unsers lieben Herrn" (now the Supper of our dear Lord) for "jetzo das abentessen unsers Herren".
- "darin uns sein fleisch zu einer speise und sein blut zu einem tranke nicht des leibes, sondern der seelen gegeben wird" (wherein his flesh is given us for a meat and his blood for a drink, not of the body but of the soul), restructuring "fleisch und plut zur speis und zum trank".
- "Denn niemand sol, sondern allein ein hungerige seel" (For none shall, but only a hungry soul) for "Dann es soll nicht dann nur ain hungerige seel".
- "des zu einem wahrzeichen", dropping "gewissen" (sure) both times.
- The Verba. "so thut es zu meiner gedechtnis" (do it in remembrance of me) for "solt ir mein darbei gedenken". Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel, Lippe and Waldeck B read the cup-word in the Pauline form, "dieser kelch ist das newe testament in meinem blut".
- "für die sünde opfern", dropping "in den tod".
- "der bleibet in Christo", dropping "dem Herren".
- The ending. "ihm von herzen danksagen, ein iglich sein kreuz auf sich nemen und dem Herrn nachfolgen und vor allen dingen einer den andern lieben, gleich als uns Christus geliebet hat. Denn es ist ein brot und wir viel ein leib, die wir eines brodes teilhaftig werden und alle aus einem kelche trinken" (give him thanks from the heart … and above all things love one another, even as Christ hath loved us. For it is one bread and we, being many, one body, who are made partakers of one bread and all drink of one cup).

- The bidding. Lüneburg 1564, Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1569 and Verden 1606 add a bidding to the Our Father (below). Lippe 1571 instead ends with Döber's "Das verleihe uns Gott alle, das wirs wirdiglich empfahen, Amen".

Lüneburg, Kirchenordnung, 1564 (Sehling 6/1, p. 547):

> Das wir aber alle samptlich nach jetzt gehorter lere und vermanung in rechtem warhaftigen glauben und bussfertigkeit das heilige sacrament wirdiglich empfahen mögen, so wollen wir Gott den Vater im namen Christi anruffen und von grund des herzen ein andechtig Vater unser sprechen.

But that we may all together, according to the teaching and exhortation now heard, worthily receive the holy sacrament in right true faith and penitence, we will call upon God the Father in the name of Christ, and from the bottom of our heart say a devout Our Father.

Where it stands. In the Braunschweig recension the exhortation is read after the sermon and the general prayer, before the Preface (Lüneburg) or before the Our Father and Verba (Verden). In Lüneburg, Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel, Lippe and Verden it is followed by Bugenhagen's exhortation as "Ein ander exhortation" (another exhortation), to be used in its place (§3.5.7).

3.5.5 The Brandenburg-Nürnberg family, 1533

The archetype. The Brandenburg-Nürnberg order of 1533 revised Osiander's text (§3.5.4) and moved it before the Verba. This revised text is the most widely copied exhortation in the corpus. Brandenburg-Nürnberg, Kirchenordnung, 1533 (Sehling 11, pp. 195–196):

> Ordnung des Herren abentmals. Wann der priester das abentmal des Herren (so er anderst comunicanten hat) halten will, soll er von stund an nachfolgende ermanung zum volk tun und dann die wort des nachtmals, wo die meß gesungen würdet, ungeferlich auf nachfolgende weise und nach den hernach gesetzten noten singen, oder, so er die meß liset, mit lauten verstendigen worten lesen, damit die umbsteenden dieselben hören mögen. Volget die ermanung. Ir allerliebsten in Got, dieweil wir jetzo das heilig abentmal unsern Herren Jesu Christi wöllen bedenken und halten, darin er uns sein flaisch zu einer […] speis und sein blut zu einem trank, den glauben darmit zu sterken, gegeben hat, sollen wir pillich mit großen fleiß ein jeder sich selbs brüfen, wie der heilig Paulus uns vermanet; dann dis heilig sacrament, ist zu einem sundern trost und sterk geben den armen betrübten gewissen, die ire sünde bekennen, Gottes zorn und den tod förchten und nach der gerechtigkeit hungerig und dürstig sind. So wir aber uns selbs prüfen und ein jeder in sein aigen gewissen geen, wie uns der heilig Paulus leret, werden wir gewißlich nicht anders finden dann allerlei greuliche sünde und den tod, den wir mit der sünde verschuldt haben, und können doch uns selbs in keinen wege daraus helfen. Darumb hat unser lieber Herr Jesus Christus sich über uns erbarmt und ist umb unser sünden willen mensch worden, auf das er das gesetz und allen willen Gottes für uns und uns zu gut erfüllet und den tod und alles, was wir mit unsern sünden verschuldt hetten, für uns und zu unser erledigung auf sich neme und erlitte. Und das wir das je festiglich glaubten und durch den glauben frölich in seinem willen möchten leben, nam er nach dem abentmal das brot, saget dank, brachs und sprach: Nemet hin und esset! Das ist mein leib, der für euch dargegeben wird. Das ist: das ich mensch bin worden und alles, das ich tu und leide, ist alles euer aigen, für euch und euch zu gut geschehen. Des zu einem gewisen anzaigen und zeugnus gib ich euch mein leib zur speis. Desgleichen nam er auch den kelch und sprach: Nemet hin und trinket aus disem alle! Das ist der kelch des neuen testaments in meinem blut, das für euch und für vil vergossen wird zu vergebung der sünde. So oft ir das tut solt, ir mein darbei gedenken. Das ist: dieweil ich mich euer angenummen und euer sünde auf mich geladen hab, will ich mich selbs für die sünde in tod opfern, mein blut vergießen, […] gnad und vergebung der sünde erwerben und also ein neu testament aufrichten, darinnen die sünde vergeben und ewig nicht mer soll gedacht werden. Des zu einem gewisen anzaigen und zeugnus gib ich euch mein blut zu trinken. Wer nun also von disem brot isset und von disem kelch trinket, auch disen worten, die er von Christo höret, und disen zaichen, die er von Christo empfahet, festiglich glaubt, der bleibt in dem Herrn Christo und Christus in ime und wird ewiglich leben. Darbei sollen wir nun sein gedenken und seinen tod verkündigen, nemlich das er für unser sünde sei gestorben und zu unser rechtfertigung wider auferstanden, und ime darumb danksagen, ein jeder sein kreuz auf sich nemen und ime nachfolgen und nach seinem gepot einander lieben, wie er uns geliebt hat: dann wir alle sind ein brot und ein leib, dieweil wir alle eines brots tailhaftig sind und aus einem kelch trinken.

Order of the Lord's Supper. When the priest will hold the Supper of the Lord (if he have communicants at all), he shall straightway make the following exhortation to the people, and then sing the words of the Supper, where the Mass is sung, about after the following manner and according to the notes set down hereafter; or, if he readeth the Mass, read them with loud and intelligible words, that they that stand about may hear them. The exhortation followeth. Dearly beloved in God, forasmuch as we will now consider and keep the holy Supper of our Lord Jesus Christ, wherein he hath given us his flesh for a meat and his blood for a drink, therewith to strengthen faith, we ought rightly with great diligence every one to examine himself, as the holy Paul exhorteth us; for this holy sacrament is given for a special comfort and strength to poor troubled consciences, which confess their sins, fear God's wrath and death, and are hungry and thirsty after righteousness. But when we examine ourselves, and every one goeth into his own conscience, as the holy Paul teacheth us, we shall surely find nothing else than all manner of horrible sins, and death, which we have deserved with sin, and yet can in no wise help ourselves out thereof. Therefore hath our dear Lord Jesus Christ had mercy upon us, and for our sins' sake is become man, that he might fulfil the law and all the will of God for us and for our good, and take upon himself and suffer death and all that we had deserved with our sins, for us and for our deliverance. And that we might steadfastly believe this, and through faith live joyfully in his will, he took after the supper the bread, gave thanks, brake it, and said: Take and eat! This is my body, which is given for you. That is: that I am become man, and all that I do and suffer, is all your own, done for you and for your good. For a sure token and witness thereof I give you my body for meat. Likewise he took also the cup and said: Take and drink ye all of this! This is the cup of the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you and for many for the forgiveness of sins. As oft as ye do this, ye shall remember me thereby. That is: forasmuch as I have taken your cause upon me and laden your sins upon myself, I will offer myself unto death for sin, shed my blood, obtain grace and forgiveness of sins, and so set up a new testament, wherein sins are forgiven and shall be remembered no more for ever. For a sure token and witness thereof I give you my blood to drink. Whosoever now eateth thus of this bread and drinketh of this cup, and firmly believeth these words which he heareth from Christ, and these signs which he receiveth from Christ, he dwelleth in the Lord Christ and Christ in him, and shall live for ever. Hereby shall we now remember him and show forth his death, namely that he died for our sins and rose again for our justification, and give him thanks therefor, every one take up his cross and follow him, and according to his commandment love one another, as he hath loved us: for we are all one bread and one body, forasmuch as we are all partakers of one bread and drink of one cup.

What 1533 changes in Osiander's text.

- "heilig abentmal" (holy Supper) for "abentessen" (supper), and "darin er uns sein flaisch zu einer speis und sein blut zu einem trank, den glauben darmit zu sterken, gegeben hat" (wherein he hath given us his flesh for a meat and his blood for a drink, therewith to strengthen faith) for "nicht des leibs, sondern der selen" (not of the body but of the soul).
- The comfort of consciences. "dis heilig sacrament ist zu einem sundern trost und sterk geben den armen betrübten gewissen" (this holy sacrament is given for a special comfort and strength to poor troubled consciences) replaces the rule that only a hungry soul "soll … empfahen".
- Self-examination expanded: "und ein jeder in sein aigen gewissen geen" (and every one go into his own conscience) and "allerlei greuliche sünde" (all manner of horrible sins).
- The work of Christ: "das gesetz und allen willen Gottes … erfüllet" (fulfil the law and all the will of God), "zu unser erledigung" (for our deliverance).
- "als wölt er sagen" (as if he would say) becomes "Das ist" (That is) before each gloss.
- "anzaigen und zeugnus" (token and witness) for "warzaichen" (sign).
- The ending. "seinen tod verkündigen, nemlich das er für unser sünde sei gestorben und zu unser rechtfertigung wider auferstanden" (show forth his death, namely that he died for our sins and rose again for our justification) is added from Rom 4:25. Döber's closing wish is dropped.
- No confession or absolution. The Nürnberg editions from 1569 append the Offene Schuld (§3.4.4).

The witnesses.

Erbach, Kirchenordnung, 1587	9, pp. 436–437	South-western subgroup; "sein leib unnd blut zu einer geistlichen speise unnd tranck" (his body and blood for a spiritual meat and drink); "nachtmal" for "sacrament"; followed by the open confession
Ysenburg-Birstein, Kirchenordnung, 1588	10, pp. 626–627	Verbatim ("mit allem fleiß" for "mit großen fleiß")

The south-western subgroup. Schwäbisch Hall 1543, Strasbourg 1553 and Erbach 1587 share a set of changes that mark them as one recension:

- "dieweil wir jetz das abentmal … halten wöllen", dropping "bedenken und" (consider and);
- "sein leib" (his body) for "sein flaisch" (his flesh);
- "und ein jeder in sein gewissen geht", dropping "wie uns der heilig Paulus leret";
- "das gesetz … für uns und uns zu gut erfüllet", dropping "und allen willen Gottes";
- "nam er im abentmal das brot" (he took the bread in the Supper) for "nach dem abentmal" (after the Supper);
- "und nach seinem gepot einander lieben, wie er uns geliebt hat, auch …" and "eines brots tailhaftig seyen".

Württemberg 1553 also reads "in dem Abendtmal", where Württemberg 1536 had followed Brandenburg-Nürnberg's "nach dem abentmal" (§3.5.6).

3.5.6 The Württemberg family, 1536 and 1553

The archetype. Württemberg 1536 takes the Brandenburg-Nürnberg text and expands it. It adds Augustine's sacraments as "sichtbarliche wort" (visible words), a stronger statement of the presence ("mein waren, wesenlichen leib", my true, essential body), and the Didache's figure of the grains and grapes. After it come the open confession, one of three absolutions, and the Our Father sung by the church (§3.4.4). Württemberg, Kirchenordnung, 1536 (Sehling 16, pp. 107–108):

> Ir allerliebsten in Christo Jesu, dieweil wir yetzund das gnadreich abentmal unsers liebsten heylands begeen und halten werden, Darinnen er uns sein warhafftigen leib zu einer speis unnd sein eigen blut zu einem dranck, den glauben damit zu stercken, gegeben hat, Sollen wir billich mit grossem fleis und inprünstiger andacht uns selbs, wie Sant Paulus vermanet, brüffen, Dann dieweil die armen, blöden gewissen eben sowol durch die gnadenreichen sacrament, die da sichtbarliche wort von Sant Augustin genant werden, als durch das wort, so zu dem er eingehet, vermittelst dem heiligen geyst getröst und gesterckt mögen werden, so ist das gnadenreich nachtmal zu einem sondern trost und stercke den betrübten geistern und zerschlagen hertzen geben, die ire sünd bekennen, Gottes gestrengen zorn und den grausamen todt fürchten unnd empfinden und nach der gerechtigkeyt hungerig seind. So wir aber unns selbs briefen unnd ein yeder in sein eigen gewissen gehen wirt, wie uns der heilig Apostel hie leeret, werden wir gewißlich nichts anders finden, dann allerley grosse, geferliche sünd unnd den erschrockenlichen tod, den wir mit der sünd verschult haben, unnd künden doch unns selbs in kein weg heraus helffen. Darumb hat unnser lieber herr Jesus Christus sich über uns erbarmet unnd ist umb unser sünd willen mensch worden, auff das er das gesatz und allen willen Gottes für uns erfüllet unnd den tod, auch alles, was wir mit unnser sünd verschult hetten, für uns zu ewiger erlösung auff sich neme und erlitte. Und das wir das ye vestigklich glauben und durch den glauben frölich und freuntlich in seinem willen möchten leben, nam er nach dem abentmal das brot, sagt danck, brachs und sprach: Nempt hin unnd esset, das ist mein leib, der für euch dargeben würdet; (das ist) das ich mensch bin worden und alles, das ich thue und leide, ist alles ewer eigen, für euch und euch zu gut geschehen, des zu einem gewissen wortzeichen, sigel unnd zeugknus gib ich euch hie mit dem brot mein waren, wesenlichen leib. Desgleichen nam er auch den kelch und sprach: Nemet hin und trincket alle daraus, das ist der kelch des newen testaments in meinem blut, das für euch und für vil vergossen wirdt zu vergebung der sünden; so offt ir das thund, solt ir mein darbey gedencken; das ist, dieweil ich mich ewer angenommen und ewer sünd auff mich geladen hab, will ich mich selbs für die sünd in todt opffern, mein blut vergiessen, gnad und vergebung der sünden erwerben unnd also ein new, ewig testament auffrichten, darinnen die sünd vergeben unnd ewig nimmermehr gedacht soll werden. Das zu einem sichern pfandt unnd ewiger zeugknus, gib ich euch mein eygen wesenlich unnd warhafftig blut zu trincken. Wer nun also von disem brot ysset und von disem kelch trincket, auch disen wortten, die ehr von Christo hie höret, unnd disen wortzeichen, die er von Christo empfacht, vestigklich glaubt, der bleibt in dem Herren Christo unnd Christus in ime und wirdt ewigklich leben. Darbey sollen wir nun sein gedencken unnd seinen tod verkündigen, namlich das er für unser sünd sey gestorben unnd zu unser rechtvertigung wider aufferstanden, und ime darumb dancksagen, ein yeder sein creutz auff sich nemmen unnd ime nachvolgen unnd nach seinem gebott einander lieben, wie er uns gelyebt hatt, dann wir alle seindt ein brott unnd eyn leyb, dieweyl wir alle eines brots theilhafftig sein und aus einem kelch trincken. Dann zu gleicherweis, wie aus vil börlin zusamen gekeltert ein wein unnd ein tranck fleußt unnd sich in einander menget, und aus vil kernlin ein meel gemalet, ein brot und kuch gebachen wirdt, also sollen wir alle, so durch den glauben Christo in geleibt sein, durch brüderliche lieb umb Christus, unsers liebsten heilands willen, der unns zuvor so hoch geliebt hat, alle ein leibe, tranck, kuchen und brot werden unnd solchs gegeneinander nit allein mit lären worten, so nit von hertzen gehn, sonder durch wercken und warheit, wie Johannis leeret, on allen trug, trewlich gegeneinander beweisen, Amen.

Dearly beloved in Christ Jesus, forasmuch as we will now celebrate and keep the gracious Supper of our dearest Saviour, wherein he hath given us his true body for a meat and his own blood for a drink, therewith to strengthen faith, we ought rightly with great diligence and fervent devotion to examine ourselves, as Saint Paul exhorteth; for forasmuch as poor feeble consciences may be comforted and strengthened, by means of the Holy Ghost, as well through the gracious sacraments, which are called by Saint Augustine visible words, as through the word, so far as it entereth in, therefore the gracious Supper is given for a special comfort and strength to troubled spirits and broken hearts, which confess their sins, fear and feel God's strict wrath and dreadful death, and are hungry after righteousness. But when we examine ourselves, and every one shall go into his own conscience, as the holy apostle here teacheth us, we shall surely find nothing else than all manner of great and perilous sin, and terrible death, which we have deserved with sin, and yet can in no wise help ourselves out thereof. Therefore hath our dear Lord Jesus Christ had mercy upon us, and for our sins' sake is become man, that he might fulfil the law and all the will of God for us, and take upon himself and suffer death, and also all that we had deserved with our sin, for us unto eternal redemption. And that we might steadfastly believe this, and through faith live joyfully and gladly in his will, he took after the supper the bread, gave thanks, brake it, and said: Take and eat, this is my body, which is given for you; (that is) that I am become man, and all that I do and suffer, is all your own, done for you and for your good; for a sure sign, seal and witness thereof I give you here with the bread my true, essential body. Likewise he took also the cup and said: Take and drink ye all thereof, this is the cup of the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you and for many for the forgiveness of sins; as oft as ye do this, ye shall remember me thereby; that is, forasmuch as I have taken your cause upon me and laden your sins upon myself, I will offer myself unto death for sin, shed my blood, obtain grace and forgiveness of sins, and so set up a new, everlasting testament, wherein sins are forgiven and shall never more be remembered for ever. For a sure pledge and everlasting witness thereof I give you my own essential and true blood to drink. Whosoever now eateth thus of this bread and drinketh of this cup, and firmly believeth these words which he here heareth from Christ and these signs which he receiveth from Christ, he dwelleth in the Lord Christ and Christ in him, and shall live for ever. Hereby shall we now remember him and show forth his death, namely that he died for our sins and rose again for our justification, and give him thanks therefor, every one take up his cross and follow him, and according to his commandment love one another, as he hath loved us; for we are all one bread and one body, forasmuch as we are all partakers of one bread and drink of one cup. For in like manner as out of many grapes pressed together one wine and one drink floweth and is mingled together, and out of many grains one meal is ground, and one bread and cake is baked, so shall we all, that are incorporated into Christ by faith, through brotherly love, for the sake of Christ our dearest Saviour, who first loved us so highly, become all one body, drink, cake and bread, and show the same faithfully one toward another, not only with empty words that come not from the heart, but in deeds and in truth, as John teacheth, without all guile, Amen.

The revision of 1553. The Württemberg order of 1553 revised the text, and nearly every later witness follows the revision. It moves the text back toward Brandenburg-Nürnberg in some places and adds Johannine clauses in others:

- Dropped: the Augustine clause ("dieweil die armen, blöden gewissen … getröst und gesterckt mögen werden"); "wesenlichen" (essential) and "eygen wesenlich unnd warhafftig" with the body and blood; "sigel" (seal); "gestrengen" and "grausamen"; "und freuntlich".
- Restored from Brandenburg-Nürnberg: "diß heilig Sacrament ist zu einem sondern trost und stercke gegeben den armen, betrübten gwissen" (this holy Sacrament is given for a special comfort and strength to poor troubled consciences); "für uns und uns zu gut"; "zu unser erledigung".
- Added:
  - "die ire sünde im hertzen entpfinden unnd bekennen" (that feel their sins in the heart and confess them);
  - "dann der sold der sünden ist der tod, wie Paulus sagt" (for the wages of sin is death, as Paul saith; Rom 6:23);
  - with the bread: "und das ir immer in mir bleiben und leben unnd ich in euch" (and that ye may always abide and live in me and I in you; John 6:56);
  - with the cup: "und zur stercke und fürderung meines lebens in euch" (and for the strength and furtherance of my life in you);
  - "unnd dises Sacrament zu erinnerung und bestätigung seines glaubens entpfahet" (and receiveth this Sacrament for the remembrance and confirmation of his faith), replacing "disen wortzeichen, die er von Christo empfacht";
  - "im ewig lob und danck darumb sagen" (say to him everlasting praise and thanks therefor);
  - the closing doxology "Das helff uns der Almechtig, barmhertzig Gott und Vatter unsers lieben Herrn Jesu Christi durch seinen heiligen geist, Amen" (The almighty, merciful God and Father of our dear Lord Jesus Christ help us thereto through his Holy Ghost, Amen).
- Changed: "bezalete" (paid) for "erlitte" (suffered); "in dem Abendtmal" (in the Supper) for "nach dem abentmal"; "mit der that und warheit" (in deed and truth) for "durch wercken und warheit".

- The editions of 1555 and after (and Mömpelgard 1560, 1571) restore after "ein brott und ein leib" the clause "dweil wir alle eins brots teilhafftig seind und auß einem Kelch trincken" (Sehling 16, p. 253, apparatus). All the later witnesses have it.

What the revision means. The 1553 reviser removed both the Augustinian language of signs and seals ("sichtbarliche wort", "wortzeichen", "sigel") and the strongest realist word ("wesenlichen leib"). In their place came the Johannine clauses of mutual indwelling and the Sacrament received "zu erinnerung und bestätigung seines glaubens". The orders that took the text over did not change it on either point.

3.5.7 The Bugenhagen family: Brunswick, 1528

The archetype. Bugenhagen's exhortation is read at the altar to the communicants, after the pulpit exhortation with its Creed, confession and general prayer (§3.4.4). Brunswick, Christlike ordeninge of Johannes Bugenhagen, 1528 (Sehling 6/1, pp. 443–444):

> Exhortatio edder vormaninge vor dem altare vamme sacramente an de communicanten. Myne allerlevesten, uns wert stedes dorch de predige des evangelii Christi vohrgehoLden, dat wy van uns sulvest unweten, arme sundere unde vorlaren sind. Unde dewile wy nicht mehr van uns sulvest sind wen flesch unde blut, derwegen […] wy uns ock mit unseme vorstande unde vormogen nicht konen lös maken uth deme strengen richte Gades unde van der gewalt des düvels, darin wy gevallen synt dorch de overtredinge de gebade unde des willen Gades. So hefft Got unse unvormogen bet erkant wen wy unde hefft vor uns gegeven alse eyn gnedich Vader synen eyngebaren Sone Jesum Christum, dat wy dorch syn evangelion erluchtet unde dorch synen döt erlöset wurden van unsen sunden unde dorch em kyndere Gades weren, ewich salich, so wy dat löveden. Sulk let he uns stedes predigen, we dat lovet, de hefft gewisse dat ewige levent, up sulken loven unde to sulker salicheit werde wy ock gedofft, dar schole wy stedes inne bliven, so blive wy in Christo unde Christus in uns. So ete wy stedes ane underlät geistlick mitdeme loven dat lyff Christi unde drinken syn blut, dat is, wy werden Christo ingelivet, dat wy eyns mit em werden, darmede dat wy löven, dat he syn lyff vor uns in den döt gegeven hefft unde syn blut vor uns imme krütze vorgaten, darup vorlate wy uns tor salicheit wedder alle falsche lere, alle sunde, anvechtinge unde nöt. Uth welker woldät Christi wy ock leren, welke leve unde gedult wy öven scholen jegen unsen negesten, ock jegen unsen vyent. Wat wolde wy mehr ? Doch dat wy nicht vorgeten edder träch wurden (alse wy leyder werden) to sulkeme loven der mynschwerdinge unde dodes Christi, hefft he uns ock eyne besonderge gedechtnisse edder vorkundinge synes dodes, so vakene wy willen, bevalen, dat wy ock imme uthwendigen sacramente, der vornuft vorborgen, alleyne deme loven uth deme worde Christi bekant, eten scholen unde drinken syn liff unde blut, dat wy jo nicht twivelen scholen, syn döt unde blutvorgetinge imme krütze sy unse gewisse salicheit, darvan schole wy singen, lesen, predigen, hören, alse wy in der misse dohn, unde namals ock darvan reden unde mank eynander vorkundigen, uns to tröste unde velen tor salicheit nach deme bevehle Christi: Sulk doht to myner gedechtnisse. We nu werdich wil eten unde drinken dit sacramente, de schal twe dink dohn: he schal löven, wat Christus secht, unde dohn, wat he gebut. He secht: Dit is myn lyff, dat vor ju gegeven wert. Dit is myn blut, dat vor ju uthgegaten wert to vorgevinge der sunden. Sulk schole gy löven. He gebut overs: Nemet hen unde etet. Drinket alle daruth unde gedenket myner. Sulk schole gy dohn nach syner gnaden wort unde bevehl. Amen.

Exhortation or admonition before the altar concerning the sacrament, to the communicants. My dearly beloved, it is continually set before us by the preaching of the Gospel of Christ that we of ourselves are ignorant, poor and lost sinners. And forasmuch as we of ourselves are no more than flesh and blood, therefore we can by no understanding or power of ours loose ourselves out of the strict judgment of God and from the power of the devil, wherein we are fallen through the transgression of the commandments and of the will of God. So God hath known our impotence better than we, and hath given for us, as a gracious Father, his only-begotten Son Jesus Christ, that we might be enlightened through his Gospel, and redeemed from our sins through his death, and through him be children of God, eternally saved, if we believed it. This he letteth be preached to us continually: whoso believeth it, he hath surely eternal life; upon such faith and unto such salvation are we also baptized; therein shall we abide continually; so abide we in Christ and Christ in us. So eat we continually without ceasing, spiritually with faith, the body of Christ and drink his blood; that is, we are incorporated into Christ, that we become one with him, in that we believe that he hath given his body into death for us and shed his blood for us on the cross; thereupon we rely for salvation against all false teaching, all sin, temptation and need. Out of which benefit of Christ we also learn what love and patience we shall exercise toward our neighbour, yea, toward our enemy. What would we more? Yet that we might not forget nor grow slack (as, alas, we do) in such faith in the incarnation and death of Christ, he hath also commanded us a special remembrance or showing forth of his death, as oft as we will, that we shall also in the outward sacrament, hidden from reason, known to faith alone out of the word of Christ, eat and drink his body and blood; that we may in no wise doubt that his death and shedding of blood on the cross is our sure salvation; thereof shall we sing, read, preach, hear, as we do in the Mass, and afterward also speak thereof and show it forth among one another, for our comfort and for the salvation of many, according to the command of Christ: This do in remembrance of me. Whoso now will worthily eat and drink this sacrament, he shall do two things: he shall believe what Christ saith, and do what he commandeth. He saith: This is my body, which is given for you. This is my blood, which is shed for you for the forgiveness of sins. That shall ye believe. But he commandeth: Take and eat. Drink ye all thereout, and remember me. That shall ye do according to his gracious word and command. Amen.

Note.

- "Twe dink" (two things), believing and doing, is the whole doctrine of worthy reception.

- Two kinds of eating. "So ete wy stedes … geistlick mitdeme loven" (so eat we continually … spiritually with faith) is the spiritual eating of John 6. The Sacrament is given in addition, "imme uthwendigen sacramente" (in the outward sacrament), so that we "jo nicht twivelen scholen" (may in no wise doubt).

Osnabrück (city), Kirchenordnung, 1613	7/1, p. 269	High German, abridged and recast (below)

The High German recension. Lüneburg 1564 translates the Low German text closely: "Mein allerliebsten, uns wird stets durch die predigt des evangelii Christi fürgehalten, das wir von uns selbs unwissen, arme sünders und verloren sein …" (Sehling 6/1, p.

547). Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1569, Lippe 1571 and Verden 1606 copy the Lüneburg translation, not the Low German.

Osnabrück 1613: the abridgement. The Osnabrück order of 1613 cuts the exhortation to half its length. It drops the passage on spiritual eating ("So ete wy stedes ane underlät geistlick …") and replaces the account of sacramental eating with a statement of oral reception. Osnabrück (city), Kirchenordnung, 1613 (Sehling 7/1, p. 269):

> Mein allerliebste, dieweil wir von uns selbst nichts dann fleisch und blut sein und können uns auß dem strengen gericht Gottes, darein wir gefallen seind, nicht loß machen, so hat Gott als ein gnädiger Vatter seinen eingebornen Sohn Jesum Christum für uns gegeben, daß wir durch seinen todt vom ewigen todt erlöset und also durch ihn kinder Gottes würden, ewig selig, so wir an ihn glauben. Auf solchen glauben und zu solcher seligkeit werden wir getauft, davon wird uns auch stäts gepredigt. Und damit wir nicht vergessen oder träg werden im glauben, lieb und gedult, als wir leider oft werden, so hat er ein besonder gedechtnusse und verkündigung seines todts befohlen, daß wir im außwendigen sacrament auf Christi befehl mit unserm leiblichen mund vermittelst deß gesegneten brots in einem hohen, der vernunft verborgenen geheimnuß essen sollen unsers Herrn Jesu Christi leib, den er für uns in den todt gegeben hat, und trinken auß dem gesegneten kelch sein blut, das er vor uns vergossen hat, und sollen von seinem todt und blutvergiessung singen, lesen, predigen und hören nach dem befehl Christi: Solches tut zu meinem gedechtnuß.

My dearly beloved, forasmuch as we of ourselves are nothing but flesh and blood, and cannot loose ourselves out of the strict judgment of God, into which we are fallen, God as a gracious Father hath given for us his only-begotten Son Jesus Christ, that through his death we might be redeemed from eternal death and so through him become children of God, eternally saved, if we believe on him. Upon such faith and unto such salvation are we baptized; thereof also is continually preached unto us. And that we may not forget nor grow slack in faith, love and patience, as, alas, we often do, he hath commanded a special remembrance and showing forth of his death: that in the outward sacrament, at Christ's command, we should eat with our bodily mouth, by means of the blessed bread, in a high mystery hidden from reason, the body of our Lord Jesus Christ, which he hath given into death for us, and drink out of the blessed cup his blood, which he hath shed for us; and should sing, read, preach and hear of his death and shedding of blood, according to the command of Christ: This do in remembrance of me.

The ending, "Wer nun würdig wil essen und trinken diß sacrament, der sol zwey ding tun …", follows Bugenhagen's text. Sehling's editor: "Es handelt sich im wesentlichen um die Vermahnung Bugenhagens … Doch ist die Exhortation hier straffer zusammengefaßt und verkürzt" (It is in essence Bugenhagen's exhortation … but here it is more tightly summarized and shortened).

What the family shows. Bugenhagen's text was transmitted in two languages, but the High German form is a single translation, made once (Lüneburg 1564) and copied. Only Osnabrück 1613 rewrote its doctrine, replacing the spiritual eating of John 6 with the oral eating "mit unserm leiblichen mund vermittelst deß gesegneten brots".

3.5.8 The Naumburg family, 1537

The archetype. The order for St. Wenzel's at Naumburg has a short exhortation of its own, read while the choir sings and the communicants gather in the choir, and followed by the German Sanctus. Naumburg, Kirchen-Ordnung for St. Wenzel's, 1537 (Sehling 2, p. 80):

> Und dieweil der ganze chor also singet, sollen sich die communicanten in den chor vorsamlen, so soll dan der priester eine vormanung an sie thun wie volget. Lieben freunde, dieweil ihr itzund das testament unsers lieben herrn Jesu Christi zu halten und empfahen vorsamlet seit, so vormane ich euch, das ihr der teuren gaben und gnaden, die uns unser lieber herr Jesus Christus hierinnen bescheiden und geschenket hat, eben warnehmen woltet, dieselben mit hohem vleis betrachten und ihme darumb danken, und ein jeder wolle sich selber hierinnen briefen, auf das er wirdig von dem brot und kelch, welches ist des herrn leib und blut, esse und trinke, also das er wisse, das ihme dis zu vorgebung seiner sunden zu trost und sterk seines glaubens vom herrn gegeben sei, und darnach auch hingehe und Christo unserm lieben herrn und gott zue lob und dank, seinem nehestem in warhaftiger lieb und treu nach allem vermugen diene, gleich wie uns Christus hiemit gedienet hat, das er uns durch sein heiliges bitteres leiden und sterben vom ewigem tode erloset und kinder des ewigen lebens gemacht hat. Auf diese vormanung singet der ganze chor das sanctus

And while the whole choir thus singeth, the communicants shall gather in the choir, and then the priest shall make an exhortation to them, as followeth. Dear friends, forasmuch as ye are now gathered to keep and receive the testament of our dear Lord Jesus Christ, I admonish you that ye would take good heed of the precious gifts and graces which our dear Lord Jesus Christ hath bequeathed and given us herein, consider them with high diligence and give him thanks therefor; and that every one would examine himself herein, that he may worthily eat and drink of the bread and cup, which is the Lord's body and blood, so that he may know that this is given him by the Lord for the forgiveness of his sins and for the comfort and strength of his faith; and that thereafter he would go forth and, to the praise and thanks of Christ our dear Lord and God, serve his neighbour in true love and faithfulness according to all his power, even as Christ hath served us herewith, in that he hath redeemed us from eternal death by his holy, bitter passion and death, and made us children of eternal life. Upon this exhortation the whole choir singeth the Sanctus.

Order	Sehling	Form and significant variants
Nördlingen, Kirchenordnung of Kaspar Löner, 1544	12, p. 312	Prescribes "eine kurze vermanung" (a short exhortation) to the communicants, followed by the German Sanctus, as at Naumburg, but does not print it. The editor of Nördlingen 1579 takes it to be the Naumburg text, "schon durch Löner nach Nördlingen gebracht" (brought to Nördlingen already by Löner).
Nördlingen, Kirchenordnung, 1579	12, pp. 369–370	Full (below)

Nördlingen 1579. The text is read "vor dem altar, uf welchem das nachtmal ausgeteilet" (before the altar on which the Supper is distributed), after the Our Father. Sehling's editor: "Nicht aus Württemberg 1553, wo die Nürnberger Abendmahlsvermahnung gebracht ist, sondern aus der Naumburger Kirchenordnung (Sehling 2, 80)" (Not from Württemberg 1553, where the Nürnberg exhortation is given, but from the Naumburg church order). Its changes:

- The address "Geliebten in Christo Jesu!" (Beloved in Christ Jesus!) for "Lieben freunde".
- "des Herrn leib und bluet" in parentheses, and "uf das er würdig werde" (that he may become worthy).
- "von sunden und ewigem tode erlöset" (redeemed from sins and eternal death).
- A transition to the Verba, sung in German after it: "Wie aber Christus sein abentmal gehalten und was er uns dabei zu glauben und zu tun bevolhen hat, werdet ir aus volgenden worten weiter vernemen" (But how Christ kept his Supper, and what he hath commanded us to believe and to do therein, ye shall further learn from the following words; Sehling 12, p. 370).

3.5.9 The Mecklenburg family, 1552

The archetype. The Mecklenburg order makes the exhortation a short summary of repentance and faith, with a conditional, indicative absolution, a call to thanksgiving and intercession, and a long prayer in the first person singular for each communicant to make his own. It is read after the Preface and Sanctus, "so man zeit hat" (if there is time). Mecklenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1552 (Sehling 5, pp. 202–204):

> Vermanung: Absolutio, danksagung und gebet vor der communio. Lieben freunde, ir als christliche menschen, die ir zuvor bericht habt von gott, von gottes ernstlichen willen und gesetz, von der menschlichen natur erschaffung, und ernach von unser sünde, und von der erlösung durch den heiland Jesum Christum, und von allen artickeln des glaubens, und warhaftiglich die selbigen gleubet, erscheinet allhie und komet zu diesem hohen trost, den uns der herr Christus in niessung seines leibs und bluts gibet, nu wisset ir den eid des allmechtigen ewigen gottes, darin er spricht, so war ich lebe, ich will nicht, das der sünder sterbe, sondern das er bekeret werde und das leben habe. Diesen eid hat gott mit seines eingebornen sons Jesu Christi blut, tod und ufferstehung bekreftiget, und ist beides darin gefasset, die bekerung und vergebung der sünden. Gott hat geschworn, das sein will ist, das wir nicht in sünden wider gewissen bleiben sollen, sondern sollen uns zu im bekeren, fur seinem gerechten zorn erschrecken, und herzlichen schmerzen haben, von wegen unsers ungehorsams und unser undankarkeit und schreckliche verachtung gegen im. Wer nu ein solch herz bringet, wie gott selb spricht, er wolle wonen in den zerschlagnen herzen, und die sein wort fürchten, die selbigen sollen die grosse gnaden , die uns um des herrn Christi willen geschenkt wird, betrachten, begeren und annemen, und sollen festiglich gleuben, das inen alle sünd, um des herrn Christi willen, aus gnaden, one unsere verdienst vergeben sind, so sie diesen trost mit glauben und vertrauen uff den herrn Christum annemen, und sollen nicht im zweivel stecken bleiben, sondern warhaftiglich schliessen, das sie also vergebung der sünden empfahen, und gott gefellig und erben ewiger selikeit sind, und das der herr Christus gewislich inen seinen heiligen geist geben wil, und das gott in inen gnediglich wonen, sie > regieren und bewaren wil zu ewiger selikeit, und sollen also forthin in glauben und gutem gewissen im gehorsam sein. Dieses alles solt ir teglich betrachten, und sonderlich so ir zur niessung des leibs und bluts unsers herrn Christi komet, da erinnert uns unser herr Christus beides, nemlich, das gottes zorn so gros ist wider unsere sünd , das er nicht anders hat sollen versünet werden, denn allein durch den gehorsam und tod seines allerliebsten sons, das er auch gewislich alle, die bekeret werden und uff den son vertrauen, gnediglich annimet. Und zum gewissen zeugnis dieses seinen unwandelbaren willens hat der herr Christus diese ordnung eingesetzt, das er uns mit diesen eusserlichen sichtbaren dingen gewislich seinen warhaftigen leib und blut gibet, und bestetiget hiemit seine zusag, das uns die sünden gewislich um seines leidens willen vergeben werden, und das er warhaftiglich bei uns sein und in uns wirken wolle, wie er spricht: Ich bin in inen, und ich gebe inen ewiges leben. Derhalben allen, die also hie erscheinen, die sich zu gott bekeren, und fur gottes zorn wider ire sünd erschrecken, und gleuben, das inen um des herrn Christi willen ire sünd vergeben werden, und haben fursatz von sünden wider gewissen abzulassen, denen verkünde ich vergebung der sünden, laut der wort Christi, Welchen ir die sünde vergebet , denen sind sie vergeben, derhalben aus befehl des herrn Christi sprich ich euch diese absolutio, das euch eure sünd vergeben sind, um des herrn Christi willen, und diese stimme des evangelii solt ir annemen, und am herrn Christo warhaftigen trost haben, und forthin im glauben und gutem gewissen gott gehorsam sein. Und zum zeugnis, das euch selb diese gnad geschenkt und adplicirt wird, solt ir den leib und das blut des herrn Jesu Christi empfahen, und wissen, das der herr Christus am creuz ein opfer fur euch gewesen ist, und hat seinen leib fur euch geben und sein blut fur euch vergossen, und das der herr Christus euch zu seinen gliedmassen machet und wil in euch kreftig sein. Hie solt ir auch dem allmechtigen gott, vater unsers herrn Jesu Christi, und dem herrn Jesu Christo fur solche grosse gnaden danken und trost und freude am herrn Christo haben, denn er wil bei euch sein, euch regiern und bewaren, ir solt auch hiebei euer herzlich gebet thun fur gemeine kirchen und herrschaft fur euch und fur eure kindlin. Allmechtiger warhaftiger gott, ewiger und einiger vater unsers heilands Jesu Christi, samt deinem einigen son Jesu Christo und heiligen geist, erschaffer aller creaturen, der du weise, warhaftig, gütig, gerecht, keusch und richter bist und zürnest wider die sünd, ich bekenne, das ich leider viel sünde an mir habe, und habe dazu viel sünde wissentlich und unwissentlich gethan, und ist mir herzlich leid, das ich dich warhaftigen gott erzürnet hab, und bitte dich, du wollest mir durch deine grosse barmherzigkeit um deines allerliebsten sons Jesu Christi willen alle meine sünde vergeben, mir gnedig sein, und mich um des herrn Christi willen und durch in gerecht und dir wolgefellig machen, und wollest mich mit deinem heiligen geist erleuchten, reinigen und regiern. Ich gleube auch deinem heiligen evangelio und deiner gnedigen verheissung, darin du uns um deines lieben sons Jesu Christi willen vergebung der sünden, gerechtikeit und ewiges leben zusagest, und bitte dich, du wollest mein herz im glauben und in erkentnis deines lieben sons sterken. Ich danke dir auch, allmechtiger gott, fur alle wolthat, und sonderlich dass du dich gnediglich uns geoffenbart hast, und hast uns deinen lieben son zu mittler und versüner für uns verordnet, und uns durch in vom ewigen zorn errettet und widerum zu ewiger selikeit angenomen. Und bitte dich, du wollest um deines sons Jesu Christi willen uns armen elenden schwachen menschen gnedig sein, und dir fur und fur unter uns ein ewige kirche samlen, und diese lande und herrschaft bewaren, und uns frieden und selige regiment geben, und mich und meine arme kindlin gnediglich regiern und behüten, amen. Auch danke ich dir, allmechtiger eingeborner son gottes, Jesu Christe, das du aus grosser liebe gegen der armen menschlichen creatur für uns gebeten hast, und hast menschliche natur an dich genomen, damit nicht die menschen ganz in ewikeit verworfen würden, sondern durch dich widerum von sünden errett, und zu ewiger gerechtikeit und ewigem leben gebracht würden, und hast den grossen unaussprechlichen zorn der göttlichen maiestet, wider unsere sünde, von uns schwachen menschen uff dich gewand, in allen deinem gehorsam, leiden und sterben, und bist widerum vom tod erstanden, und bleibest mittler und furbitter fur uns, und samlest dir ein ewige kirche, durch dein evangelium und heiligen geist, und bist Emmanuel, das ist gott mit uns, gibest ewige selikeit allen, die zu dir bekeret werden, und gleuben, das inen gott um deines leidens und deiner vorbit willen gnedig sei , und wilt gewislich diese arme schwache menschen in deiner kirchen bewaren. Ich bitte dich mit herzlichen seufzen, du wollest mir gnedig sein, und alle meine sünde vergeben, und deinen ewigen vater fur mich bitten und mir deinen heiligen geist geben, mich regiern und bewaren wider deine feinde, nemlich, wider die gotteslesterige, lügenhaftige, unreine teufel. Auch wollestu allmechtiger gottes son Jesu Christe, der du am creuz gestorben bist, und am dritten tag widerum lebendig ufferstanden, und bist gerecht, warhaftig, keusch und barmherzig, dir für und für unter uns ein ewige kirche samlen, und diese land und herrschaft bewaren, und uns frieden und selige regiment geben, und mich und meine arme kindlin gnediglich regieren und behüten, amen.

Exhortation: absolution, thanksgiving and prayer before the communion. Dear friends, ye that as Christian men have been instructed beforehand concerning God, concerning God's earnest will and law, concerning the creation of man's nature, and thereafter concerning our sin, and concerning the redemption through the Saviour Jesus Christ, and concerning all the articles of the faith, and truly believe the same, appear here and come to this high comfort which the Lord Christ giveth us in the eating of his body and blood. Now ye know the oath of the almighty, eternal God, wherein he saith: As I live, I will not the death of the sinner, but that he be converted and have life. This oath God hath confirmed with the blood, death and resurrection of his only-begotten Son Jesus Christ, and both are comprehended therein, conversion and forgiveness of sins. God hath sworn that it is his will that we shall not remain in sins against conscience, but shall turn to him, be terrified before his righteous wrath, and have hearty sorrow for our disobedience and our unthankfulness and dreadful contempt toward him. Whoso now bringeth such a heart (as God himself saith, he will dwell in the broken hearts and in them that fear his word), the same shall consider, desire and receive the great grace which is given us for the Lord Christ's sake, and shall firmly believe that all sins are forgiven them for the Lord Christ's sake, of grace, without our merit, if they receive this comfort with faith and trust in the Lord Christ; and shall not remain stuck in doubt, but truly conclude that they so receive forgiveness of sins, and are pleasing to God and heirs of eternal blessedness, and that the Lord Christ will surely give them his Holy Ghost, and that God will graciously dwell in them, govern and preserve them unto eternal blessedness; and they shall so henceforth be in obedience to him in faith and good conscience. All this ye shall consider daily, and especially when ye come to the eating of the body and blood of our Lord Christ; there our Lord Christ putteth us in mind of both, namely that God's wrath against our sin is so great that he could not be reconciled otherwise than only by the obedience and death of his dearest Son, and also that he surely receiveth graciously all that are converted and trust in the Son. And for a sure witness of this his unchangeable will the Lord Christ hath instituted this ordinance, that with these outward visible things he surely giveth us his true body and blood, and confirmeth herewith his promise that our sins are surely forgiven us for the sake of his passion, and that he will truly be with us and work in us, as he saith: I am in them, and I give them eternal life. Therefore unto all that so appear here, that turn to God, and are terrified before God's wrath against their sin, and believe that their sins are forgiven them for the Lord Christ's sake, and have the purpose to leave off sins against conscience, unto them I declare forgiveness of sins, according to the words of Christ, Whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; therefore by the command of the Lord Christ I speak unto you this absolution, that your sins are forgiven you for the Lord Christ's sake; and this voice of the Gospel ye shall receive, and have true comfort in the Lord Christ, and henceforth be obedient to God in faith and good conscience. And for a witness that this grace is given and applied to you yourselves, ye shall receive the body and the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ, and know that the Lord Christ hath been a sacrifice for you on the cross, and hath given his body for you and shed his blood for you, and that the Lord Christ maketh you his members and will be mighty in you. Here ye shall also give thanks to the almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the Lord Jesus Christ, for such great graces, and have comfort and joy in the Lord Christ, for he will be with you, govern and preserve you; ye shall also here make your hearty prayer for the common Church and government, for yourselves and for your little children. Almighty, true God, eternal and only Father of our Saviour Jesus Christ, together with thine only Son Jesus Christ and the Holy Ghost, Creator of all creatures, who art wise, true, good, just, chaste and a judge, and art wroth against sin: I confess that I, alas, have much sin in me, and have moreover done much sin, knowingly and unknowingly, and it is heartily grievous unto me that I have angered thee, the true God; and I pray thee that thou wouldest forgive me all my sins through thy great mercy, for the sake of thy dearest Son Jesus Christ, be gracious unto me, and make me righteous and well-pleasing unto thee for the Lord Christ's sake and through him, and enlighten, cleanse and govern me with thy Holy Ghost. I believe also thy holy Gospel and thy gracious promise, wherein thou promisest us forgiveness of sins, righteousness and eternal life for the sake of thy dear Son Jesus Christ, and I pray thee that thou wouldest strengthen my heart in faith and in the knowledge of thy dear Son. I thank thee also, almighty God, for all benefits, and especially that thou hast graciously revealed thyself to us, and hast ordained thy dear Son to be mediator and propitiator for us, and through him hast rescued us from eternal wrath and received us again unto eternal blessedness. And I pray thee that for thy Son Jesus Christ's sake thou wouldest be gracious unto us poor, wretched, weak men, and gather unto thyself evermore among us an eternal Church, and preserve these lands and this government, and give us peace and blessed rule, and graciously govern and keep me and my poor little children, amen. I thank thee also, almighty only-begotten Son of God, Jesus Christ, that out of great love toward the poor human creature thou hast prayed for us, and hast taken human nature upon thee, that men might not be wholly cast away for ever, but through thee be rescued again from sins and brought to eternal righteousness and eternal life; and hast turned the great, unspeakable wrath of the divine majesty against our sins from us weak men upon thyself, in all thy obedience, passion and death, and art risen again from death, and abidest mediator and intercessor for us, and gatherest unto thyself an eternal Church through thy Gospel and Holy Ghost, and art Emmanuel, that is, God with us, givest eternal blessedness to all that are converted to thee and believe that God is gracious to them for the sake of thy passion and thy intercession, and wilt surely preserve these poor weak men in thy Church. I pray thee with hearty sighs that thou wouldest be gracious unto me, and forgive all my sins, and pray thine eternal Father for me, and give me thy Holy Ghost, govern and preserve me against thine enemies, namely against the blasphemous, lying, unclean devils. And mayest thou, almighty Son of God, Jesus Christ, who didst die on the cross and on the third day didst rise again alive, and art just, true, chaste and merciful, gather unto thyself evermore among us an eternal Church, and preserve this land and this government, and give us peace and blessed rule, and graciously govern and keep me and my poor little children, amen.

Nassau-Weilburg 1618: the abridged recension. The Nassau-Weilburg Agende of 1618 replaces the text with a shorter form. It is addressed to those "die ihr euch gestern habt angezeigt" (who announced yourselves yesterday), recalls "der Vermahnung, so gestern an euch geschehen" (the exhortation made to you yesterday), and keeps the conditional absolution. It then adds a passage on the Words of Institution and ends with the Sursum corda. Nassau-Weilburg, Agende, 1618, from Sehling's apparatus to the order of 1576 (Sehling 10, p. 264):

> Daß ihr diese Wort mit rechtem, wahren Glauben fasset und nicht zweiffelt, sondern festiglich glaubet, so gewiß der Sohn Gottes euch laut seiner eigenen Verheissung im Abendmahl speiset und trdäncket mit seinem eigenen Leib und Blut, Also gewiß unnd warhafftig ubergibt er auch euch unnd einem jedern insonderheit alle die Geistlichen Wolthaten, so er mit Auffopfferung seines Leibs und Vergiessung seines thewren Bluts seiner lieben Christenheit verdienet und erworben hat, Als da ist Vergebung der Sünden, Gerechtigkeit, die vor Gott gilt, und nach diesem Leben das ewig selig Leben. Endtlich sollt ihr auch hierbey ewer Gebet thun zu Gott vor die Noth der gantzen Christenheit, vor ewre liebe Obrigkeit, vor euch und vor ewre Kindlein. So erhebet nun ewere Hertzen zu Gott, unserem Herren, denn es ist billich und recht, auch heylsam, daß wir an allen Orthen unnd zu aller Zeit unseren Himmlischen Vatter unnd Heyligen Gott anruffen durch Jesum Christum, unseren Heyland.

That ye lay hold of these words with right, true faith and doubt not, but firmly believe: as surely as the Son of God, according to his own promise, feedeth you in the Supper and giveth you to drink with his own body and blood, so surely and truly doth he also deliver to you and to every one in particular all the spiritual benefits which he hath merited and obtained for his dear Christendom by the offering of his body and the shedding of his precious blood, such as forgiveness of sins, the righteousness that availeth before God, and after this life the eternal, blessed life. Lastly ye shall also here make your prayer to God for the need of all Christendom, for your dear government, for yourselves and for your little children. Lift up therefore your hearts unto God, our Lord, for it is meet and right, and also wholesome, that we should in all places and at all times call upon our heavenly Father and holy God through Jesus Christ, our Saviour.

3.5.10 The Palatinate family, 1563

The archetype. The Reformed Palatinate order of Elector Frederick III (1563) has the longest exhortation in the corpus. It is read "bey dem tisch" (at the table) after the sermon and the Sunday prayer. It follows Geneva 1563 (Reformed) almost word for word at the beginning, and draws on London 1565 (à Lasco and Micron, Reformed) for the threefold examination and the fencing of the table, and on Kurpfalz 1556 (the Württemberg text) for the grains and grapes. Palatinate, Kirchenordnung, 1563 (Reformed; Sehling 14, pp. 383–386):

Ir geliebten in dem herrn Jesu Christo, höret an die wort der einsatzung deß heiligen abendmals unsers herrn Jesu Christi, welche uns beschreibet der heilig apostel Paulus in der ersten epistel an die Corint. am XI. capitel [23-29]: Ich hab es von dem herrn empfangen, daß ich euch gegeben hab. Denn der herr Jesus, in der nacht, da er verrahten ward, nam er das brod, dancket und brachs und sprach: Nemet, esset, das ist mein leib, der für euch gebrochen wird. Solchs thut zu meiner gedechtnuß. Desselbengleichen auch den kelch nach dem abendmal und sprach: Dieser kelch ist das neue testament in meinem blut. Solchs thut, so oft irs trinckt, zu meiner gedechtnuß. Denn so oft ir von diesem brod esset und von diesem kelch trincket, solt ihr des herrn todt verkündigen, biß daß er kompt. Welcher nun unwirdig von diesem brodt isset oder von dem kelch des herrn trincket, der ist schuldig an dem leib und blut deß herrn. Der mensch prüfe aber sich selbs und also esse er von disem brod und trincke von disem kelch. Denn welcher unwürdig ißet und trincket, der ißet und trincket im selber das gericht, damit daß er nicht underscheidet den leib deß herrn. Auf daß wir nun zu unserm trost des herrn nachtmal mögen halten, ist uns vor allen dingen vonnöten, daß wir uns zuvor recht prüfen, zum andern, daß wir es dahin richten, darzu es der herr Christus verordnet hat, nemlich zu seiner gedechtnuß. Die ware prüfung unser selbs stehet in diesen dreyen stücken, zum ersten bedenck ein jeder bei sich selbst seine sünd und vermaledeyung, auf daß er im selbst mißfalle und sich für Gott demütige, dieweil der zorn Gottes wider die sünd also groß ist, daß er dieselbige, ehe denn er sie ungestraft ließ hingehen, an seinem lieben son Jesu Christo mit dem bittern und schmehlichen tod des creutzes gestraft hat. Zum andern erforsche ein jeder sein hertz, ob er auch diser gewissen verheissung Gottes glaube, daß im alle seine sünd allein umb des leiden und sterben Jesu Christi willen vergeben sind und die volkommene gerechtigkeyt Christi ime als sein eigen zugerechnet und geschenckt sey, als wann er selbst in eigener person für alle seine sünde bezalet und alle gerechtigkeyt erfüllet hette. Zum dritten erforsche ein jeder sein gewissen, ob er auch gesinnet sey, forthin mit seinem gantzen leben Gott, dem herrn, sich danckbar zu erzeigen und für dem angesicht Gottes aufrichtig zu wandlen, ob er auch one alle gleißnerey aller feindschaft, neid und haß von hertzen absage und einen ernstlichen fursatz habe, hernachmals in warer lieb und einigkeyt mit seinem nechsten zu leben. Die nun also gesinnet sein, die wil Gott gewißlich zu gnaden annemen und für würdige tischgenossen seins sons Jesu Christi erkennen. Dargegen aber, die dieses zeugnuß in irem hertzen nicht empfinden, die essen und trincken inen selbst das gericht. Derhalben wir auch nach dem befelch Christi und des apostels Pauli alle, die sich mit nachvolgenden lastern behaftet wissen, von dem tisch des herrn abmanen und inen verkündigen, das sie kein theil am reich Christi haben, als da sind alle abgöttische, alle, so verstorbene heiligen, engel oder andere creaturen anrüfen, die bilder verehren, alle zauberer und warsager, die viehe und leuth sampt andern dingen segnen, und, die solchen segen glauben geben, alle verächter Gottes und seins worts und der heiligen sacramenten, alle gottslesterer, alle, die spaltung und meueterey in kirchen und weltlichem regiment begeren anzurichten, alle meineidigen, alle, die iren eltern und oberkeyten ungehorsam sind, alle todtschläger, balger, haderer, die in neid und haß wider ihren nechsten leben, alle ehebrecher, hurer, follsäufer, dieb, wucherer, rauber, spiler, geitzigen und alle die, so ein ergerlichs leben führen. Diese alle, so lang sie in solchen lastern beharren, sollen gedencken und sich diser speiß, welche Christus allein seinen gläubigen verordnet hat, enthalten, auf daß nit ir gericht und verdamnuß desto schwerer werde. Diß aber wirdt uns nicht fürgehalten, lieben christen, die zerschlagen hertzen der gläubigen kleinmütig zu machen, als ob niemands zum abendmal des herrn gehen möchte, dann die one alle sünde weren. Denn wir kommen nicht zu diesem abendmal, damit zu bezeugen, daß wir volkommen und gerecht seind in uns selbst, sonder dargegen, weil wir unser leben ausserhalb uns in Jesu Christo suchen, bekennen wir, daß wir mitten in dem todt ligen. Derhalben, wiewol wir noch viel gebrechen und elends in uns befinden, als da ist, daß wir nicht einen volkommenen glauben haben, daß wir uns auch nicht mit solchem eyfer, Gott zu dienen, begeben, wie wir zu thun schuldig sein, sonder täglich mit der schwachheyt unsers glaubens und bösen lüsten unsers fleisches haben zu streiten, nicht desto weniger, weil durch die gnad des heiligen geists solche gebrechen uns von hertzen leyd sind und wir unserm unglauben widerstand zu thun und nach allen geboten Gottes zu leben hertzlich begeren, sollen wir gewiß und sicher sein, daß keine sünd noch schwacheyt, so noch wider unsern willen in uns uberig ist, hindern kan, daß uns Gott nit zu gnaden anneme und also dieser himmlischen speiß und tranck würdig und theilhaftig mache. Zum andern laßt uns nun auch betrachten, warzu uns der herr sein abendmal hab eingesetzt, nemlich daß wir solches thun zu seiner gedechtnuß. Also sollen wir aber seins darbey gedencken, erstlich, daß wir gentzlich in unserm hertzen vertrauen, das unser herr Jesus Christus laut der verheissungen, welche den ertzvätern von anbegin geschehen, vom vater in dise welt gesandt sey, unser fleisch und blut an sich genommen, den zorn Gottes, under dem wir ewiglich hetten müssen versincken, von anfang seiner menschwerdung biß zum end seines lebens auf erden für uns getragen und allen gehorsam des göttlichen gesetz und gerechtigkeyt für uns erfüllet, fürnemlich da im der last unserer sünden und des zorns Gottes den blutigen schweiß im garten außgetrucket hat, da er ist gebunden worden, auf daß er uns entbünde, darnach unzälige schmach erlitten, auf daß wir nimmer zu schanden würden, unschuldig zum todt verurtheilt, auf daß wir für dem gericht Gottes freygesprochen würden, je seinen gebenedeiten leib ans creutz lassen neglen, auf daß er die handtschrift unser sünden daran neglete und hat also die > vermaledeyung von uns auf sich geladen, auf daß er uns mit seiner benedeiung erfüllet, und hat sich genidriget biß in die allertiefeste schmach und hellische angst leibs und der seelen am stammen des creutzes, da er schrey mit lauter stimme: Mein Gott, mein Gott, warumb hastu mich verlassen [Mt. 27, 46], auf daß wir zu Gott genommen und nimmermehr von im verlassen würden, endlich mit seinen todt und blutvergiessen das neue und ewige testament, den bund der gnaden und versönung beschlossen, wie er gesagt hat: Es ist vollbracht [Joh. 19, 30]. Damit wir aber festiglich glaubten, daß wir in diesen gnadenbund gehören, nam der herr Jesus in seinem letzten abendmal das brodt, dancket, brachs, gabs seinen jüngern und sprach: Nemet hin und esset, das ist mein leib, der für euch gegeben wirdt, das thut zu meiner gedechtnuß. Desselbengleichen nach dem abendmal nam er den kelch, saget danck und sprach: Nemet hin und trincket alle darauß, dieser kelch ist das neu testament in meinem blut, daß für euch und für viel vergossen wirdt zu vergebung der sünden. Solchs thut, so oft irs trincket, zu meiner gedechtnuß. Das ist, so oft ir von diesem brodt esset und von diesem kelch trincket, solt ir dardurch als durch ein gwisses gedechtnuß und pfand erinnert und versichert werden, diser meiner hertzlichen lieb und treu gegen euch, daß ich für euch, die ir sonst des ewigen todts hettet müssen sterben, meinen leib am stamm des creutzes in den todt gebe und mein blut vergiesse und euer hungerige und dürstige seelen mit demselben meinem gecreutzigten leib und vergossenem blut zum ewigen leben speise und trencke, so gwiß als einem jeden dises brodt für seinen augen gebrochen und dieser kelch im gegeben wirdt und ihr dieselben zu meiner gedechtnuß mit euerm mund esset und trincket. Auß dieser einsatzung des heiligen abendmals unsers herrn Jesu Christi sehen wir, daß er unsern glauben und vertrauen auf sein volkommen opfer, einmal am creutz geschehen, als auf den einigen grund und fundament unser seligkeyt weiset, da er unsern hungerigen und durstigen seelen zur waren speiß und tranck des ewigen lebens worden ist. Denn durch seinen todt hat er die ursach unsers ewigen hungers und kommers, nemlich die sünd, hinweggenommen und uns den lebendigmachenden geist erworben, auf daß wir durch denselben geist, der in Christo als dem haupt und in uns als seinen gliedern wohnet, ware gemeinschaft mit ihm hetten und aller seiner güter, ewigen lebens, gerechtigkeyt und herrligkeyt theilhaftigkeit würden. Darnach, daß wir auch durch denselben geist undereinander als glieder eines leibs in warer brüderlicher lieb verbunden würden, wie der heilig apostel spricht: Ein brod ist es, so seind wir viel ein leib, dieweil wir alle eines brodts teilhaftig seind [I.Kor. 10, 17]. Denn wie aus vielen körnlein ein meel gemahlen und ein brodt gebacken wirdt und aus vielen börlein zusammengekeltert ein wein und tranck fleust und sich ineinander menget, also sollen wir alle, so durch waren glauben Christo eingeleibt sein, durch brüderliche lieb umb Christi, unsers lieben heilands, willen, der uns zuvor so hoch geliebet hat, allsamen ein leib sein und solches nit allein mit worten, sonder mit der that gegeneinander beweisen. Das helf uns der allmechtige, barmhertzige Gott und vater unsers herrn Jesu Christi durch seinen heiligen geist, Amen.

Ye beloved in the Lord Jesus Christ, hear the words of the institution of the holy Supper of our Lord Jesus Christ, which the holy apostle Paul describeth to us in the first epistle to the Corinthians, in the eleventh chapter: I have received of the Lord that which I delivered unto you. For the Lord Jesus, in the night in which he was betrayed, took bread, gave thanks, brake it and said: Take, eat, this is my body, which is broken for you. This do in remembrance of me. After the same manner also the cup after the supper, and said: This cup is the new testament in my blood. This do, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye shall show the Lord's death till he come. Whosoever now shall eat this bread unworthily or drink of the cup of the Lord, he is guilty of the body and blood of the Lord. But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of this bread and drink of this cup. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily eateth and drinketh judgment to himself, in that he discerneth not the Lord's body. That we may now keep the Lord's Supper to our comfort, it is needful for us above all things, first, that we rightly examine ourselves beforehand; secondly, that we direct it to that end for which the Lord Christ ordained it, namely to his remembrance. The true examination of ourselves standeth in these three parts. First, let every one consider by himself his sin and curse, that he may be displeased with himself and humble himself before God, forasmuch as the wrath of God against sin is so great that, rather than let it go unpunished, he hath punished it in his dear Son Jesus Christ with the bitter and shameful death of the cross. Secondly, let every one search his heart whether he also believe this sure promise of God, that all his sins are forgiven him only for the sake of the passion and death of Jesus Christ, and that the perfect righteousness of Christ is imputed and given him as his own, as if he himself in his own person had paid for all his sins and fulfilled all righteousness. Thirdly, let every one search his conscience whether he be also minded henceforth to show himself thankful to God the Lord with his whole life and to walk uprightly before the face of God; whether he also renounce from the heart, without all hypocrisy, all enmity, envy and hatred, and have an earnest purpose hereafter to live in true love and unity with his neighbour. They now that are so minded, them God will surely receive into grace and acknowledge for worthy table-companions of his Son Jesus Christ. But on the other hand, they that feel not this witness in their heart eat and drink judgment to themselves. Therefore we also, according to the command of Christ and of the apostle Paul, warn away from the table of the Lord all that know themselves laden with the following vices, and declare unto them that they have no part in the kingdom of Christ: as are all idolaters; all that call upon departed saints, angels or other creatures, that worship images; all sorcerers and soothsayers, that bless cattle and people and other things, and they that give credence to such blessing; all despisers of God and of his word and of the holy sacraments; all blasphemers; all that seek to make division and mutiny in the Church and in the temporal government; all perjurers; all that are disobedient to their parents and rulers; all manslayers, brawlers, quarrellers, that live in envy and hatred against their neighbour; all adulterers, whoremongers, drunkards, thieves, usurers, robbers, gamblers, covetous, and all they that lead an offensive life. All these, so long as they persevere in such vices, shall take heed and abstain from this meat, which Christ hath ordained for his faithful alone, lest their judgment and damnation be the heavier. But this is not set before us, dear Christians, to make the broken hearts of the faithful faint-hearted, as though none might go to the Supper of the Lord but they that were without all sin. For we come not to this Supper to bear witness thereby that we are perfect and righteous in ourselves, but on the contrary, because we seek our life outside ourselves in Jesus Christ, we confess that we lie in the midst of death. Therefore, although we yet find much infirmity and misery in us, as namely that we have not a perfect faith, that we do not give ourselves to serve God with such zeal as we are bound to do, but have daily to strive with the weakness of our faith and the evil lusts of our flesh; nevertheless, since by the grace of the Holy Ghost such infirmities are grievous to us from the heart, and we heartily desire to resist our unbelief and to live according to all the commandments of God, we shall be sure and certain that no sin nor infirmity which yet remaineth in us against our will can hinder God from receiving us into grace and so making us worthy partakers of this heavenly meat and drink. Secondly, let us now also consider to what end the Lord hath instituted his Supper for us, namely that we do it in remembrance of him. And we shall remember him herein thus: first, that we wholly trust in our heart that our Lord Jesus Christ, according to the promises which were made to the patriarchs from the beginning, was sent by the Father into this world, took our flesh and blood upon him, bore for us the wrath of God, under which we should have sunk for ever, from the beginning of his incarnation to the end of his life on earth, and fulfilled for us all obedience to the divine law and righteousness; chiefly when the burden of our sins and of the wrath of God pressed out from him the bloody sweat in the garden; when he was bound, that he might loose us; then suffered countless reproach, that we might never be put to shame; was condemned to death innocent, that we might be acquitted before the judgment seat of God; yea, let his blessed body be nailed to the cross, that he might nail thereto the handwriting of our sins, and so took the curse upon himself from us, that he might fill us with his blessing; and humbled himself to the very deepest shame and hellish anguish of body and soul on the tree of the cross, when he cried with a loud voice: My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me, that we might be taken to God and never be forsaken of him; and finally by his death and shedding of blood sealed the new and everlasting testament, the covenant of grace and reconciliation, as he said: It is finished. But that we might firmly believe that we belong to this covenant of grace, the Lord Jesus in his last Supper took the bread, gave thanks, brake it, gave it to his disciples and said: Take and eat, this is my body, which is given for you; this do in remembrance of me. Likewise after the supper he took the cup, gave thanks and said: Take and drink ye all of it; this cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you and for many for the forgiveness of sins. This do, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. That is, as oft as ye eat of this bread and drink of this cup, ye shall thereby, as by a sure memorial and pledge, be reminded and assured of this my hearty love and faithfulness toward you: that for you, who must otherwise have died the eternal death, I give my body unto death on the tree of the cross and shed my blood, and feed and give drink to your hungry and thirsty souls with the same my crucified body and shed blood unto eternal life, as surely as this bread is broken before the eyes of every one and this cup is given him, and ye eat and drink them with your mouth in remembrance of me. From this institution of the holy Supper of our Lord Jesus Christ we see that he directeth our faith and trust to his perfect sacrifice, once made on the cross, as to the only ground and foundation of our salvation, in that he is become the true meat and drink of eternal life to our hungry and thirsty souls. For by his death he hath taken away the cause of our eternal hunger and misery, namely sin, and hath obtained for us the quickening Spirit, that through the same Spirit, which dwelleth in Christ as the head and in us as his members, we might have true fellowship with him and become partakers of all his goods, of eternal life, righteousness and glory. Moreover, that through the same Spirit we might also be bound together one with another, as members of one body, in true brotherly love, as the holy apostle saith: It is one bread, so are we, being many, one body, forasmuch as we are all partakers of one bread. For as out of many grains one meal is ground and one bread baked, and out of many grapes pressed together one wine and drink floweth and is mingled together, so shall we all, that are incorporated into Christ by true faith, through brotherly love, for the sake of Christ our dear Saviour, who first loved us so highly, be all together one body, and show the same one toward another not only with words but in deed. The almighty, merciful God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ help us thereto through his Holy Ghost, Amen.

What follows. A prayer for the right use of the Supper ("Barmhertziger Gott und vater, wir bitten dich, daß du in diesem abendmal … durch deinen heiligen geist in unsern hertzen wöllest wircken …"), the Our Father and the Apostles' Creed, and then the call to lift up the heart: "so laßt uns mit unsern hertzen nicht an dem eusserlichen brodt und wein haften, sonder unsere hertzen und glauben uber sich in den himel erheben, da Christus Jesus ist" (let us not cleave with our hearts to the outward bread and wine, but lift up our hearts and faith on high into heaven, where Christ Jesus is; Sehling 14, p. 386). It is the Reformed form of the Sursum corda.

The Lower Rhine recension. Moers and Bentheim (both Reformed) share a set of changes:

- A new transition after the Pauline text, which recalls the opening of Micron's exhortation (Reformed) ("Ihr habt, lieben brüder, auß dieser lehre des heiligen apostels Pauli gehöret, wer der einsetzer des nachtmals sey …", Sehling 7/1, p. 631). Moers, Kirchenordnung, 1581 (Reformed; Sehling 22, p. 197):

> Auß dieser lehr deß heiligen apostels Pauli hört ihr, lieben christen, daß unnser herr unnd heilandt Jesus Christus daß heiligh nachtmahl hab eingesezt und gehalten mit seinen jungern unnd daß er unns also dasselb zu halten befohlen habe.

From this teaching of the holy apostle Paul ye hear, dear Christians, that our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ instituted and kept the holy Supper with his disciples, and that he hath commanded us so to keep the same.

- The first point of the examination expanded: "seine sünde, die er wider Gott und sein heiliges gesetz und wider seinen nechsten gethan hat, und folgends die vermaledeiung und gerechten zorn Gottes wider die sünde" (his sin which he hath done against God and his holy law and against his neighbour, and then the curse and righteous wrath of God against sin).
- The second point: "alle seine sünden, sowol angeborne als thätliche" (all his sins, original as well as actual), forgiven "auß gnaden" (of grace).
- The third point: thankfulness "für seine unaussprechliche gnade und barmherzigkeit und sonderlich für die gnädige vergebung aller unser sünden" (for his unspeakable grace and mercy, and especially for the gracious forgiveness of all our sins), "die zeit seines lebens" (all the time of his life); "alle feindschaft, haß, neid".
- The excluded: those that persevere in the vices "und darinne noch fortzufahren fürhabens seindt" (and purpose to continue therein).
- The Spirit: "uns den lebendigmachenden geist durch seine vorbitt erlangt" (hath obtained for us the quickening Spirit by his intercession) for "erworben" (merited).
- Moers reads "traubenkörnlein" (grape-berries) for "börlein".

3.5.11 The Pfalz-Veldenz family, 1574

The archetype. The Pfalz-Veldenz order has an exhortation of its own, read by the pastor after the Sanctus ("Esaja, dem Propheten, das geschach") and before the communion. It closes with a call to confession and prayer that leads into the Mecklenburg prayer, turned into the plural (§3.5.9). Pfalz-Veldenz, Kirchenordnung, 1574 (Sehling 18, pp. 500–501):

> Ir geliebten in dem herrn Christo. Euch als Christen ist auß Gottes wortt und täglicher erfarung wol bewust, das wir alle sampt in sünden empfangen und geborn, auch noch täglichen immerdar sündigen und Gottes gebott ubertretten unnd > das wir dardurch den schweren zorn Gottes und ewiger verdamnus unnderworffen sein. Nun hat uns auß diser so grossen noth anders nit khönnen geholffen werden dann allein durch den bittern unnd aller heiligsten todt und fröhliche ufferstehung unnsers herrn und heilandts Jesu Christi, des ewigen und einigen Sohns Gottes. Diser hat auß unermesslicher liebe unnd erbarmnus den schweren last unnserer sünden uff sich geladen, an das Creutz gehefftet und in die Erde begraben und also durch vergiessung seines thewren, unschuldigen bluts die sünde bezahlet und das menschlich geschlecht von sünden und ewiger verdamnus erlöset. Solch sein thewers verdienst unnd alles, was er damit erlangt und erworben hat, gibt und schenckhet er uns armen sündern umbsonnst, aus lautter gnadt und Barmhertzigkheit, wir seind sein nit werth, könnens auch nit verdhienen noch etwas darzuthun, allein sollen wir uns dessen hertzlich annehmmen, frewen unnd trösten mit festem glauben unnd gantzem vertrawen, wer das thut, der geneusset und würdt theilhafftig des verdhiensts Christi, ist von sünden undt todt gefreyet und ein Erbe des ewigen lebens. Dieweil es aber menschlicher Natur, bevorab do der Mensch seine sünde nicht erkennet und fühlet, sehr schwer ist, dises warhafftig zuglauben, das der eingeborne Sohn Gottes für uns arme sünder solchen schmählichen, bittern Todt gelitten habe und das der himmelische Vatter allein umb desselbigen willen, auß lautter gnaden und Barmhertzigkheit unns alle sünden vergeben und das ewige leben schenckhen wölle, so hat unnser getrewer hailanndt Christus Jesus uns solche grosse gnadt nitt allein in seinem heiligen wort reichlich versprochen und zugesagt, sonder auch mitt eusserlichen, sichtbarn zaichen becrefftiget und versigelt und sonderlich hierzu dises heilig Sacrament seines leibs und bluts eingesetzt, das dardurch unnser schwache glaub gesterckt, unnsere verzagte gewissen getröstet und seiner verheissenen gnaden gentzlich versichert werden sollen. Sintemahl er selbs hie zugegen ist und in der nüessung diser eusserlichen, sichtbarn dingen, brodts und weins, uns seinen warhafftigen leib und blut zur speiß und tranckh gibt als gewisse Pfanndt und sigell, uns damitt zuversichern, das er so gewiß und warhafftig sein heiligen leib für uns hingegeben und sein unschuldiges blutt für unnsere Sünde vergossen habe und uns die Sünde gewißlich umb seines leidens uns sterbens willen vergeben werden, das er auch bey uns sein, in uns wohnen und würckhen und uns als lebendige glider seines leibs entlich vom dodt ufferweckhen und das ewig leben geben wölle. Solchen herrlichen, süessen trost haben wir in disem seinem heiligen Abendtmahl. Derohalben, so offt wir fühlen, das wir im glauben schwach unnd kleinmüettig, in dem leben sündig und gebrechlich sein, sollen wir uns zu disem tröstlichen, himmelischen Tisch und Abendtmahl verfüegen, uff das wir unnsere Versöhnung mit Gott und der vergebung unnserer sünden durch den Todt Christi vergewisset unnd also im glauben an den herrn Christum gesterckhet und getröstet werden. Damit wir aber diß Sacrament recht würdiglich zu unnserm trost und der Seelen seeligkheit brauchen und nüessen mögen, so müessen wir uns zuvor nach der lehr des hailigen apostels Pauli selbs prüefen. Unnd erstlich unsere Sünde mit hertzlichem schmertzen, rew und laidt vor Gott erkhennen und bekhennen. Darnach zum andern vhestiglich glauben, das uns allein auß lautter gnaden, umb des herrn Jesu Christi willen, die sünden vergeben werden. Unnd letstlich warhafftigen fürsatz haben, von sünden abzustehen, unnser leben mit Gottes hülff zubessern und in Christlicher lieb hinfürth zuwandlen. Dann es will ja unnser herr Gott nit des sünders Todt und verderben, darbey aber erfordert er auch warhafftige bekherung, wie in dem thewren aidt, so er durch den Propheten geschworen, gemeldet würdt: So wahr ich lebe (spricht Gott), will ich nit, das der sünder sterbe, sondern das er bekheret werde und das leben habe. Derohalben, meine geliebten, dieweil unnser lieber herr Gott ein gefallens hat an den sündern, die sich vor ime demüetigen und zu ime bekheren, und auch der herr Christus zu diser seiner Malzeitt solche gäste ladet und fordert, die do hungert und dürstet nach der gerechtigkeitt, so last auch unns unnsere hertzen mit Ernst zu Gott erheben, ime unnser Elenndt, gebrechlich und sündlich leben von hertzen clagen und bekhennen unnd im Namen seines aller liebsten sohns, unnsers einigen Erlösers Jesu Christi, umb verzeyhung aller unnserer sünden und missethat bitten, ihm auch für seine herrliche gnaden und wolthaten, so er uns und der gantzen Christenheit in dem selben seinem geliebten sohn Jesu Christo erzeigt, hertzlich danncken unnd dann ferrner umb sterckhung des glaubens, besserung unnsers sündtlichen lebens und alle andere Notturfft der gantzen Christenheit bitten, sprecht derohalben mit mir von gantzem hertzen:

Ye beloved in the Lord Christ. It is well known to you as Christians, out of God's word and daily experience, that we were all together conceived and born in sins, and also still sin daily and continually and transgress God's commandments, and that we are thereby subject to the heavy wrath of God and to eternal damnation. Now out of so great a need we could be helped in no other way than only by the bitter and most holy death and joyful resurrection of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, the eternal and only Son of God. He out of immeasurable love and compassion hath laden the heavy burden of our sins upon himself, fastened it to the cross and buried it in the earth, and so by the shedding of his precious, innocent blood hath paid for sin and redeemed mankind from sins and eternal damnation. This his precious merit, and all that he hath obtained and gained thereby, he giveth and bestoweth on us poor sinners freely, out of pure grace and mercy; we are not worthy of it, neither can we merit it nor add anything thereto; only we should heartily take it to ourselves, rejoice and comfort ourselves with firm faith and whole trust. Whoso doeth that, he enjoyeth and is made partaker of the merit of Christ, is set free from sins and death, and is an heir of eternal life. But forasmuch as it is very hard for human nature, especially when a man knoweth not and feeleth not his sin, truly to believe this, that the only-begotten Son of God suffered such a shameful, bitter death for us poor sinners, and that the heavenly Father will forgive us all sins and give us eternal life only for his sake, out of pure grace and mercy, therefore our faithful Saviour Christ Jesus hath not only richly promised and pledged us such great grace in his holy word, but also confirmed and sealed it with outward, visible signs, and especially instituted for this end this holy Sacrament of his body and blood, that thereby our weak faith may be strengthened, our fainthearted consciences comforted, and wholly assured of his promised grace. Since he himself is here present, and in the eating of these outward, visible things, bread and wine, giveth us his true body and blood for meat and drink, as sure pledges and seals, to assure us thereby that he hath as surely and truly given his holy body for us and shed his innocent blood for our sins, and that our sins are surely forgiven us for the sake of his passion and death; that he also will be with us, dwell and work in us, and as living members of his body at last raise us from death and give us eternal life. Such glorious, sweet comfort have we in this his holy Supper. Therefore, as oft as we feel that we are weak and fainthearted in faith, sinful and frail in life, we shall betake ourselves to this comfortable, heavenly table and Supper, that we may be made sure of our reconciliation with God and of the forgiveness of our sins through the death of Christ, and so be strengthened and comforted in faith in the Lord Christ. But that we may use and enjoy this Sacrament rightly and worthily, to our comfort and the salvation of our souls, we must first examine ourselves according to the teaching of the holy apostle Paul: and first acknowledge and confess our sins before God with hearty pain, repentance and sorrow; then secondly firmly believe that our sins are forgiven us only of pure grace for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake; and lastly have a true purpose to forsake sins, to amend our life with God's help, and henceforth to walk in Christian love. For our Lord God will not the death and destruction of the sinner; but therewith he requireth also true conversion, as is declared in the precious oath which he hath sworn by the prophet: As I live (saith God), I will not that the sinner die, but that he be converted and have life. Therefore, my beloved, forasmuch as our dear Lord God hath pleasure in sinners that humble themselves before him and turn to him, and the Lord Christ also inviteth and biddeth to this his meal such guests as hunger and thirst after righteousness, let us also lift up our hearts to God with earnestness, heartily lament and confess to him our misery and our frail and sinful life, and in the name of his dearest Son, our only Redeemer Jesus Christ, pray for the pardon of all our sins and misdeeds; heartily thank him also for his glorious graces and benefits which he hath shown to us and to all Christendom in the same his beloved Son Jesus Christ; and then further pray for the strengthening of faith, the amendment of our sinful life, and all other need of all Christendom. Say therefore with me from your whole heart:

What follows. "Beicht und gemeine gebett bey der Communion" (confession and common prayer at the communion): the Mecklenburg prayer in the plural, "Allmechtiger, barmhertziger Gott, ewiger und einiger Vatter unnsers herrn Jesu Christi … Wir bekhennen ja, herr, das wir vil sünde an uns haben, seind von Natur sündhafft und unrein …" (Sehling 18, p. 501). The exhortation itself draws on Mecklenburg 1552 for the oath of Ezekiel 33:11 and the call to conversion.

The witness. Lützelstein, Kirchenordnung, 1605 (Sehling 18, pp. 603–604) copies the text; the editor marks the section "aus KO Pfalz-Veldenz". It drops "warhafftig" (truly to believe), "reichlich" (richly promised) and "und fordert" (and biddeth), and ends "sprecht derohalben demütiglich mit mir" (say therefore humbly with me).

3.5.12 The Basel family: Memmingen 1528 and Neckarbischofsheim 1560

The archetype. The Memmingen order of 1528 (Moderate Reformed) has an exhortation read after communion. Sehling's editor notes that it is not in the Zürich order, which Memmingen otherwise follows. Neckarbischofsheim 1560 has the same text, which its editor traces to Oecolampadius's Basel order, Form und gstalt (Basel 1526, Reformed). Memmingen, Kirchenordnung, 1528 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 12, p. 245):

> Nach der nießung, so jederman geessen und trunken hat, folget nachgeende vermanung. Lieben brüder! Ir habt gehört die unaussprechlich barmherzigkait Gottes. Der himlisch Vater hat sein aingebornen Sun für uns in den schmehlichsten tod gegeben. Der hirt ist gestorben für die schäflin. Der unschuldig hat gelitten für den sünder, das haupt für die gelider. Der oberst priester hat sich […] selbest zuo ainem brinnenden opfer aus unseglicher lieb dem Vater für uns aufgeopfert und mit seinem bluot unser verbindnus mit Got dem Vater genuogsam versichert und versiegelt. Darumb laßt uns die guottaten in ewiger, frischer gedechtnus halten! Sein bluot berür unser herz! Im sei lob in ewigkait! Nun wöllen wir hinfüran nit unser sein, sondern des Herren knecht und diener seiner knecht. Nun wöllen wir Christo und nit uns leben und begeren, also ime eingeleibt sein als die gelider, die wir durch sein bluot erlöst und von sünden gerainiget seind.

After the eating, when every one hath eaten and drunk, followeth the exhortation hereafter following. Dear brethren! Ye have heard the unspeakable mercy of God. The heavenly Father hath given his only-begotten Son for us into the most shameful death. The shepherd hath died for the sheep. The innocent hath suffered for the sinner, the head for the members. The high priest hath offered himself up for us to the Father as a burning sacrifice, out of unspeakable love, and with his blood hath sufficiently assured and sealed our covenant with God the Father. Therefore let us keep the benefits in everlasting, fresh remembrance! His blood touch our heart! To him be praise for evermore! Now henceforth we will not be our own, but the Lord's servants and the servants of his servants. Now we will live to Christ and not to ourselves, and desire so to be incorporated into him as the members that are redeemed by his blood and cleansed from sins.

What follows at Memmingen. The deacons say Ps 113 in alternation ("Lobet, ir diener den Herren!"), and the leader then gives the second exhortation, which comes from Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed; §3.5.13), ending with the Ten Commandments and the dismissal "Nun gond hin im frid Gottes" (Now go in the peace of God).

The witness. Neckarbischofsheim, Kirchenordnung, 1560 (Sehling 16, pp. 682–683). Its form:

- Placement. The pastor reads it at the altar before communion, as "die Comunicanten vermanung oder erinerung von dem leiden und Sterben Jesu Christi sampt angehenckhter vermahnung" (the communicants' exhortation or reminder of the passion and death of Jesus Christ, with an appended exhortation).
- The opening. Before it stands Isaiah 53, introduced: "Geliebten Freund und userwelte kinder gottes. Dieweil in Empfahung des h[eiligen] Nachtmals … das fürnembste hauptstuckh … ist, zu bedenkchen mit hertzlicher danckhsagung sein bitter leiden und Sterben, so heret und bedenckht, wie der h[eilige] prophet Esaja solches vor langer zeit im gaist für gesehen hat" (Beloved friends and chosen children of God, forasmuch as in the receiving of the holy Supper the chief point and the whole matter is to consider with hearty thanksgiving his bitter passion and death, hear and consider how the holy prophet Isaiah foresaw it in the spirit long ago).
- The common text follows with "All hie heret ir offentlich, geliebten kinder gottes" (Here ye hear openly, beloved children of God) for "Ir habt gehört"; "Sein blut besprenge und beruhre unsere hertzen" (His blood sprinkle and touch our hearts; Heb 10:22); "Im sey lob, ehr und preis in ewigkait"; "darzu knecht und diner seiner knecht".
- An addition on the Supper, leading to the Words of Institution. Neckarbischofsheim, Kirchenordnung, 1560 (Sehling 16, p. 683):

> Darumb wir auch mit danckhsagung eingedenckh seind der guthaten seines leibs und Bluts, welche er uns in Crafft des glaubens an sein wort warhafftigklich gibt zu genießen, fürgebildet in leiblicher Speis und tranckh des gehayligten Brots und weins seines Abentmals, so er uns zu gedechtnis seines bittern leiden und Sterben selbs eingesetzt und verordnet hat zu halten.

Wherefore we also are mindful with thanksgiving of the benefits of his body and blood, which he truly giveth us to enjoy in the power of faith in his word, figured in the bodily meat and drink of the hallowed bread and wine of his Supper, which he himself instituted and ordained us to keep in remembrance of his bitter passion and death.

3.5.13 The Strasbourg family, 1525

The archetype. The early Strasbourg agendas (Moderate Reformed) leave the exhortation to the pastor, "auff den inhalt des gepets und gemeinlich noch der getonen predig materien" (on the content of the prayer and generally according to the matter of the sermon preached), and print one as an example. It was given at St. Peter the Younger, Wolfgang Capito's church, on Reminiscere Sunday, 12 March 1525, after a sermon on 1 Cor 1 (the word of the cross) and John 8 (Christ the light of the world). It is read after the Our Father and leads into the Words of Institution. Strasbourg, Die frühen Agenden, 1525 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 20/1, pp. 158–159):

> Lieben brüder und schwester, ir wöllen ein jedes bey im bedencken, mit was hertzlicher begird der herr Jesus sein leyden für uns gethon hat und wie groß verlangen er gehebt, das osterlamb mitt seinen jüngern zu essen, ee er litte, Und wie er befolhen hat, das man diese sein gedechtniß, so offt man sein nachtmal haltet, haben sol, Wie die alten christen in iren versamlungen beynach gehalten haben und wir am Sontag etlicher maß erzeygen, In dem das etlich auß eüch mit mir essen. Unnd aber hoff ich, ir alle in steiffem glauben bedencken unnd eben als wol fruchtbarlich im geyst essen, als die, so er zuher geen, Dann uns das eüsserlich essen würd vil unordenung und mühe bringen, wo jederman allemal auch leyplich essen wolt, Dann wir in allen dingen nitt eüsserlich thaten des herren, sonder das hauptstuck innerlichen treyben sollen, welchs hie ist die gedechtniß unser erlösung, so bey eüch umstendern allen woll sein mag. Darumb ermane ich eüch, das ir eüch lassen das wort des creützs fohen, […] welichs eüch, so selig werden, die krafft Gottes ist, wie der verdamten weltt ein thorheit und den frummen schein heylgen ein ergernüß. Nemen an Christum, das liecht der welt, > und wandeln fürter nit mer in der finsternüß, das ist, nach der art blut und fleischs, welches voller zanck, hader und zwitracht ist. Dann wo ir eüch annemen und mit ewer niessung oder gegenwertikeit falschlich fürgeben den glauben an Christum und die liebe gegen ewrens nechsten und dannocht in verdruß stünden gegen ewren mitbrüdern, so wissent, das ir Gott, dem heylgen geist, liegen, das ir gleißner sein und das ir bey des herrn nachtmal unwirdiglich sein oder selbs niessen eüch zum urteyl unnd zur verdamnüß. Bitten also Got, das er uns den verborgnen Adam in uns entdecke und sein heyl erzeyge, so er durch Christum Jesum gemacht hat.

Dear brothers and sisters, ye will every one consider with himself with what hearty desire the Lord Jesus did his suffering for us, and how great longing he had to eat the passover lamb with his disciples before he suffered; and how he commanded that this his remembrance should be had as oft as his Supper is kept, as the old Christians nearly did in their assemblies, and as we in some measure show on the Sunday, in that some of you eat with me. And yet I hope that ye all consider it in firm faith, and eat as fruitfully in the spirit as they that come forward; for the outward eating would bring us much disorder and trouble if every one would also eat bodily every time; for in all things we should not practise the outward deeds of the Lord, but the chief part inwardly, which here is the remembrance of our redemption, which may well be with all of you that stand about. Therefore I exhort you that ye let yourselves be taken by the word of the cross, which to you that are saved is the power of God, as to the damned world it is foolishness and to the pious hypocrites an offence. Receive Christ, the light of the world, and walk no more henceforth in darkness, that is, after the manner of flesh and blood, which is full of strife, quarrelling and discord. For if ye take upon you, and by your eating or presence falsely pretend, faith in Christ and love toward your neighbour, and yet stood in grudge against your brethren, know that ye lie to God the Holy Ghost, that ye are hypocrites, and that ye are at the Lord's Supper unworthily, or eat to yourselves judgment and damnation. Let us pray God, therefore, that he would uncover to us the hidden Adam in us, and show his salvation, which he hath wrought through Christ Jesus.

Note. The exhortation assumes that only some will commune ("In dem das etlich auß eüch mit mir essen"), and that the rest "im geyst essen" (eat in the spirit). It then turns to the invitation: "Ir, so mit mir wöllen des herren nachtmal entpfahen und so sich angezeygt haben, kommen nun her" (Ye that will receive the Lord's Supper with me, and have announced yourselves, come now hither; Sehling 20/1, p. 159).

The witness. Memmingen 1528 (Moderate Reformed) takes the second half, from "das ir euch lasset das wort des kreuz fahen", as the exhortation of the leader after Ps 113 and after communion (Sehling 12, pp. 245–246). It reads "nach art der bösen vergiften natur, bluets und flaischs" (after the manner of the evil, poisoned nature of blood and flesh), turns the warning into the past ("des Herren nachtmal unwirdig empfangen hetten", would have received the Lord's Supper unworthily), and ends with a prayer that God lead us "aus uns selbs und allen creaturen zuo seinem eingebornen Sun" (out of ourselves and all creatures to his only-begotten Son), followed by the Ten Commandments.

3.5.14 Exhortations outside the families

The exhortations below belong to none of the families in §3.5.3–3.5.13. Four are printed in full; the rest are summarized.

3.5.14.1 Kantz 1522 and the Bremen Mass 1525

Kantz's Nördlingen Mass of 1522 leaves the exhortation free: "ein ermanung … von dem sacrament oder sunst etwas tröstlichs us dem heiligen evangelio … wie im der Geist Gottes eingibt" (an exhortation of the Sacrament, or else something comforting out of the holy Gospel, as the Spirit of God giveth him). It then gives only a short address to the bystanders, "Allerliebsten in Christo! Uf das ir mit frölichem, begirigem herzen entpfahent …", which leads at once into the absolution. That address and absolution are printed in Chapter 7 §7.2.1, and summarized in §3.3.5 here.

The Low German Evangelische Misse printed at Bremen in 1525 has the same rubric and a translation of the same address. Bremen, Eyne evangelysce Misse, 1525 (Sehling 7/2.2, p. 405):

> Tom irsten scal de prester ofte eyn ander, darto gekaren, eyne vormaninge don van den Sacramente ofte anders ichtes wat trostelijkes uthe den hilgen Evangelio Unde seggen, dat eme de geist gades ingift. Darumme scal he de bisitters myt dussen ofte dus geliken worden vormanen: Alderlevesten in Christo, Uppe dat gy myt vroliken unde begerliken herten entfangen mogen den kosteliken schat unde dat testamente des vlesches unde blodes Christi Jesu, unses salichmakers, So othomodiget iuwe herten jegen Got unde kennet eme iuwe sunde unde gebreken myt herteliker begerten, trachtende na syner gotliken genade unde hulpe. So wil ick iuw nu lesen de absolucien

First shall the priest, or another chosen thereto, make an exhortation of the Sacrament, or else somewhat comforting out of the holy Gospel, and say what the Spirit of God giveth him. Therefore shall he exhort the bystanders with these or the like words: Dearest in Christ, that ye may receive with joyful and desirous hearts the precious treasure and the testament of the flesh and blood of Christ Jesus, our Saviour, humble your hearts before God and confess to him your sins and failings with hearty desire, striving after his godly grace and help. So will I now read you the absolution.

The differences. Bremen has "den kosteliken schat unde dat testamente des vlesches unde blodes" (the precious treasure and the testament of the flesh and blood) for Kantz's "den zarten fronleichnam und rosenfarbes blut" (the tender body and rose-coloured blood). It drops "euer erwölter priester" (your chosen priest), and it heads the priest's request for prayer "Bicht des presters" (the priest's confession). The absolution keeps Kantz's indicative form (§3.4.4).

3.5.14.2 Augsburg, St. Anna, 1530

The order of the Supper (Moderate Reformed) "wie die gehalten worden ist, durch die diener des ewangelions zu sant Anna" (as it was kept by the ministers of the Gospel at St. Anna's) prints two exhortations. The first, the longer, is a sermon on 1 Cor 11:28 in three heads: why Christ died, the love of God in his death, and the example of love it leaves. Augsburg, Form und ordnung des Herren nachtmal, 1530 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 12, pp. 40–41):

> Ir geliebten! Sant Paulus ermant uns 1. Corinth. am 11. [28], wir sollen uns vor probieren und aldann zu Gottes tisch geen. Darumb soll eur lieb zum ersten sehen, warinen die prob stande, damit man nit das gerucht esse und trink. So muessen wir nun mit ernst bedenken, was man hie tue, was da sei und was hie gesucht soll werden. Man soll zum ersten ansehen, was Christus getan hab und uns zu tun bevolhen, nemblich: wir sollen sein gedenken, sein hailsamen tod verkünden, hinz er kompt. Hie ist nit ain bauchmal, sonder ain speis und trank zu ainem neuen leben, darinnen uns Christus will speisen mit seinem waren leib und trenken mit seinem waren plut, so hie zugegen seind umb seines worts willen, wie er seine jünger gspeiset und trenket im ersten abentmal, durch wölichen leib und sein plut er uns am creuz mit seinem tod vom ewigen tod erkauft, ablaß der sünd erworben und zwischen Got dem Vater und uns den gnadenbund aufgericht und bestätiget hat, das wir durch Cristum und in Cristo sollen kinder Gottes werden und Got unser Vater sein. Darumb suchen wir hie nit irdisch, zergenklich ding, sonder ewigs. Wir seien krank und suchen erznei des lebens. Wir seien hungerig und durstig und suchen das lebentig prot, das von himel kompt: Jesum Cristum, den prunnen des ewigen lebens. Wer in in vertraut, wirt ersettiget und das ewig leben haben. Das vertrauen ist, das wir nit sollen zweifeln, der sun Gottes Jesus Cristus sei aus dem gnedigen willen seines und unsers himlischen Vaters für uns arme sünder gestorben und habe uns dem himlischen Vater wider versönt. Das ist der recht christlich glaub. Wer sich solichs nit zu Cristo versicht, nemlich: das er unser hailand sei, der uns von allem übel helfen will und kan (denn er ist warer Got und umb unsertwillen mensch worden), der were unglaubig und esse im selbs das gericht. Darumb sollen wir sehen, das man hie nit den leiblichen, sonder den gaistlichen hunger und durst bießen soll. So bevilcht uns nun Cristus, wir sollen das nachtmal halten im zur gedechtnus, und Paulus sagt, wir sollen den tod des Herren verkinden, bis er kompt. Do müssen wir nun drei ding für uns nemen, zum ersten: ursach sehen, warumb Cristus gestorben sei; zum andern: die liebe Gottes und gnad im tod seines aingepornen Suns zu herzen nemen; zum dritten: besehen, wie uns Cristus mit sein tod nit allain erlost hat, sonder auch ain exempel hat gelassen, darbei wir lernen, was treue und liebe ain jeglicher crist seinem nebenmenschen schuldig sei. Können wir uns nun selbs recht in disen dreien stucken erinnern und finden uns darzu berait oder zum wenigisten begirig, das wir im glauben und liebe gern wollten wandeln, so besteet die prob davon sant Paulus sagt [1. Kor. 11, 28].
> Zum ersten merkt, das Cristus ist gestorben umb unser sund willen. Es muß freilich nit ain klaine ursach sein, das Gottes Sun von himel selbs soll komen in dise welt und sich in den verschmechten tod des creuz gibt. Dabei merken wir die große und schwere unserer sünd, die nit mocht gebueßt werden, es neme si dann ain soliche unendliche person auf sich, Jesa. am 53. [4f.]. Wie grausam ist das urtail Gottes uber die sund und sunder! Wie mordlich ist der schad unsere sund, das der aingeporn allerliebst Sun Gottes soll ain vermaledeiung werden und sterben, auf das wir von dem ewigen fluch und tod erlöst wurden. Dieweil nun Cristus selbs stirbt, das er gnug tue fur uns und den Vater wider versöne, den Gaist Gottes erwerbe, dadurch wir erleucht, gerainigt und zu kindern Gottes zugerust werden, warlich so sollen wir den teuren tod Cristi, disen unermeßlichen costen, in unser herz pilden und die verdampten sund, so Cristo zum tod ain ursach was, als das hellisch gift und tod hassen, fliehen und uns in ain bußfertigs leben schicken, Da gee ain jeder in sich selbs, ob in reu, das er so oft und manigfaltig wider Got gesundet hat, derhalb er ewiger verdambnus wirdig ist, und ob er beger, durch Gottes gnad von sunden entledigt zu werden und ain cristlich leben zu fueren! Wo nit, so steet er ubel.

> Zum andern bedenkent die großen gnad und liebe Gottes, der seines aingepornen Suns nit verschont hat, sonder fur uns in tod geben. So lieb hat er die welt, das er sein aingepornen in die welt sandte, das wer in in glaubt, nit verloren werd, sonder habe das ewig leben. Wo ist solich lieb je erhört worden? Da wir noch sunder waren, ist Cristus fur uns gestorben, da wir noch veind waren, seien wir Got versönt durch den tod seines Suns, zun Römern am 5. [10]. Hat euch vor als pillich eur große sund und das gerecht urtail Gottes erschreckt, so seid wider getröst! Unser sund ligen nit mer auf uns, so wir glauben, sonder auf dem unvermaßgothen lemblin Gottes. Der hat si gebueßt, den tod abgetilget, das leben widerpracht, und Cristus ist uns geschenkt vom Vater, das er sei unser weishait, gerechtigkait, hailigmachung und erlösung. Des bedürfen wir alle wol, dieweil wir in uns selbs toren, ungerecht, unhailig, arm, gefangen sunder des bösen veinds waren. Söliche große ding standen uns zu und werden unser aigen, so wir an der liebe Gottes nit zweiflen, das er sein Sun Jesum Cristum uns geschenkt hab, das wir durch in leben. Nit, das wir in zuvor haben geliebt; sonder er hat uns vor geliebt und also sein Sun gesandt, ain versöner fur unser sund 1. Johann, am 4. [9]. Da höret ir im abentmal solichs, wie Cristus hab sein leib und plut fur uns dargeben. Glauben wir disen worten, so überwinden wir sund, tod, hell, empfahen frid freud und sicherhait der gewissne, das wir dankpar werden, umb soliche guthait willig zu tun und leiden, was uns Christus auflegt. Dann dis sacrament auch eucharistia haist, das mir dabei loben und preisen söllen Gottes barmherzigkait und danksagen für sein unaussprechenliche liebe. Wo wir sein tod und darinne sein väterliche treu alltzeit gedenken, werden wir diemuetig, dankpar, wachsen im vertrauen zu Got durch Cristum werden behutsam und richten uns in ain neues leben, das denn soll und muß sein oder wir werden allain titelcristen genennt werden.
> Zum dritten erinnert uns das nachtmal der cristlichen lieb und ainigkait; dann ist Cristus fur uns gestorben, so ists ain anzaigung, das wir an seinem leiden und sterben gemainschaft haben, und, so das haupt fur seine glider den tod hat gelitten und die höchst lieb an si gelegt, sollen wir ainer den andern auch nit verachten; dann wir seien kinder Gottes durch den verdienst Cristi under wöliche söliche große gueter ausgetailt werden und soll dise liebe Cristi uns ain exempel sein, das wir also gegenainander gesindt seien, wie Cristus gegen uns nemlich: ainer dem andern mit allem, das er ist und hat, dienen, wie am natürlichen leib ain glid dem andern. Widerwillen, nachred, haß und alle andere laster müssen abgestellt werden; denn was woltest du bei dem gemainen nachtmal des Herren tun, wann dir dein nächster nit wol bevolhen war, für den Cristus gestorben ist und der aller seiner gueter soll genießen mit allen auserwölten? Du erzaigest dich von außen als ein mitglid, das Cristum fur sein erlöser und die andern fur sein miterben und brueder erkennete, und verachtetest aber dein nächsten und gönntest im nichts guts. Wiltu kain glid sein am leib Cristi, das du andere mitglider nit magst leiden, lieben und im dienen, dich irer not annemen, als were si dem aigen, so hassest du auch das haupt, Cristum, und gehörest derhalb nit in dise gesellschaft.
> Darumb secht auf euch selbs! Es ist nit kinderspil, zu des Herren nachtmal zu geen. Rohe, freche, unbesind leut, denen nichts daran ligt, si sunden oder nit, die pleiben nun davon. Aber gaistlich arm leut, die ain beschwerd gewissen haben, wolten gern frumb werden, wiewol si noch vast unvolkomen seind, so si aber ain mißfallen haben, ab irer aignen sund, die söllen komen und den leib und plut Jesu Cristi im nachtmal empfahen; denn Got ist gnedig den diemüetigen.

Beloved! St. Paul exhorteth us, 1 Cor 11[:28], that we should first prove ourselves and then go to God's table. Therefore shall your love first see wherein the proof standeth, that none eat and drink the judgment. So must we now consider with earnestness what is done here, what is here, and what shall be sought here. One shall first look at what Christ hath done and commanded us to do, namely: we shall remember him and show forth his saving death till he come. Here is no belly-meal, but a meat and drink unto a new life, wherein Christ will feed us with his true body and give us to drink of his true blood, which are present here for his word's sake, as he fed his disciples and gave them to drink in the first Supper; through which body and his blood he hath bought us on the cross by his death from eternal death, purchased remission of sin, and set up and confirmed the covenant of grace between God the Father and us, that through Christ and in Christ we should become children of God, and God be our Father. Therefore we seek here no earthly, perishable things, but eternal. We are sick and seek the medicine of life. We are hungry and thirsty and seek the living bread that cometh from heaven: Jesus Christ, the well of eternal life. Whoso trusteth in him shall be satisfied and have eternal life. That trust is, that we shall not doubt that the Son of God, Jesus Christ, of the gracious will of his and our heavenly Father, hath died for us poor sinners and hath reconciled us again to the heavenly Father. That is the right Christian faith. Whoso looketh not for such from Christ, namely, that he is our Saviour, who will and can help us out of all evil (for he is true God, and for our sakes is made man), he were an unbeliever and eateth judgment to himself. Therefore we shall see that here not the bodily but the spiritual hunger and thirst is to be stilled. So Christ now commandeth us that we shall keep the Supper in remembrance of him, and Paul saith that we shall show forth the Lord's death till he come. Here must we now take three things before us: first, to see the cause why Christ died; secondly, to take to heart the love and grace of God in the death of his only-begotten Son; thirdly, to consider how Christ hath not only redeemed us by his death, but also left an example, whereby we learn what faithfulness and love every Christian oweth to his fellow man. If we can now rightly call ourselves to mind in these three points, and find ourselves ready thereto, or at the least desirous, that we would gladly walk in faith and love, then the proof standeth whereof St. Paul speaketh [1 Cor 11:28].

First, mark that Christ died for our sins' sake. It must verily be no small cause, that God's Son should himself come from heaven into this world and give himself into the despised death of the cross. Hereby we mark the greatness and heaviness of our sin, which might not be atoned unless such an infinite person took it upon himself, Isaiah 53[:4f.]. How terrible is the judgment of God upon sin and sinners! How murderous is the harm of our sin, that the only-begotten, dearest Son of God should become a curse and die, that we might be redeemed from the eternal curse and death! Since then Christ himself dieth, that he may make satisfaction for us and reconcile the Father again, and purchase the Spirit of God, whereby we are enlightened, cleansed and made ready to be children of God, verily we should form in our heart the precious death of Christ, this unmeasurable cost, and hate and flee the damned sin, which was a cause of death to Christ, as hellish poison and death, and set ourselves to a penitent life. Here let every one go into himself, whether he repent that he hath so often and so manifoldly sinned against God, wherefore he is worthy of eternal damnation, and whether he desire by God's grace to be rid of sins and to lead a Christian life! If not, he standeth ill.

Secondly, consider the great grace and love of God, who spared not his only-begotten Son, but gave him into death for us. So loved he the world, that he sent his only-begotten into the world, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life. Where hath such love ever been heard of? While we were yet sinners, Christ died for us; while we were yet enemies, we are reconciled to God by the death of his Son, Romans 5[:10]. If your great sin and the righteous judgment of God have before terrified you, as is meet, so be comforted again! Our sins lie no more upon us, if we believe, but upon the unspotted lamb of God. He hath atoned them, abolished death, brought life again; and Christ is given us of the Father, that he may be our wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption. Of this we all have good need, since we in ourselves were fools, unrighteous, unholy, poor, captive sinners of the evil enemy. Such great things belong to us and become our own, if we doubt not of the love of God, that he hath given us his Son Jesus Christ, that we may live through him. Not that we loved him before; but he loved us first, and so sent his Son to be a reconciler for our sin, 1 John 4[:9]. There ye hear such things in the Supper, how Christ hath given his body and blood for us. If we believe these words, we overcome sin, death, hell, receive peace, joy and assurance of conscience, so that we become thankful, to do and to suffer willingly for such goodness what Christ layeth upon us. For this sacrament is also called eucharistia, that we thereby should praise and extol God's mercy and give thanks for his unspeakable love. Where we always remember his death, and therein his fatherly faithfulness, we become humble and thankful, grow in trust toward God through Christ, become heedful, and order ourselves to a new life, which then shall and must be, or we shall be called titular Christians only.

Thirdly, the Supper putteth us in mind of Christian love and unity; for if Christ hath died for us, it is a token that we have fellowship in his passion and death; and as the head hath suffered death for his members and laid the highest love upon them, we also shall not despise one another; for we are children of God through the merit of Christ, among whom such great goods are dealt out; and this love of Christ shall be an example to us, that we be so minded one toward another as Christ toward us, namely, that one serve another with all that he is and hath, as in the natural body one member serveth another. Ill will, backbiting, hatred and all other vices must be put away; for what wouldest thou do at the common Supper of the Lord, if thy neighbour were not well commended to thee, for whom Christ hath died, and who shall enjoy all his goods with all the elect? Thou showest thyself outwardly as a fellow member, who acknowledgeth Christ for his redeemer and the others for his fellow heirs and brethren, and yet thou despisest thy neighbour and grudgest him all good. If thou wilt be no member of the body of Christ, in that thou mayest not suffer the other fellow members, love them and serve them, take their need upon thee as were it thine own, then thou hatest also the head, Christ, and belongest therefore not in this fellowship.

Therefore look to yourselves! It is no child's play to go to the Lord's Supper. Rude, insolent, heedless folk, to whom it is nothing whether they sin or not, let them stay away. But spiritually poor folk, that have a burdened conscience and would fain be godly, although they be yet very imperfect, yet if they have a displeasure at their own sin, they shall come and receive the body and blood of Jesus Christ in the Supper; for God is gracious to the humble.

The second exhortation. After the Words of Institution the order gives a shorter text, "gepraucht ... im vergangem reichstag umb kurze willen und hernach gemanklich am sontag mitsampt andern cristlichen ermanungen aus gotlicher schrift" (used at the late Diet [of 1530] for brevity's sake, and afterwards commonly on Sunday, together with other Christian exhortations out of divine scripture). It contains an indicative general absolution. Augsburg, Form und ordnung des Herren nachtmal, 1530 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 12, p. 42):

> Ir geliebten! Ir wißt, das wir bevelch haben von Cristo, unserm Herrn und Got, das wir so predigen und die hailigen sacrament raichen söllen, vergebung der sunden predigen und alle sund vergeben an Gottes und unsers Herren Cristi stat, allen denen, so solichs begeren und daran glauben; dann also steet geschriben [Joh. 21, 23]: Wölichen ir die sund vergibt, den sollen sie vergeben sein und, welichen ir si behalt, den sollen si behalten sein. Derhalb will ich euch erstlich an stat und von wegen Gottis und unsers Herrn Cristi vergebung der sund verkunden, wie dan Cristus unser Herr fur all unser sund durch sein tod genug getan und Got versonet und gnad erworben an unser verdienst und bevolhen, von seinet wegen soliches in alle welt zu predigen und die sund zu strafen und zu vergeben. Darumb sprech ich euch alle und jedes in sonderhait, so des begeren, ledig von euren sunden und söllen euch dieselbigen aus gnaden umb Cristus willen vergeben sein aus getlichem bevelch im namen Gottes des Vaters und des Sons und des Hailigen Gaists. Der frid Gottes sei bei euch! Amen.
> Und wöllent auch diser absolucion glauben als Gottes wort und bevelch nicht weniger dann, als höret ir Gottes stim von himel erschallen, und wisset, das ir gnad und vergebung der sund allain durch disen glauben entpfacht und das diser glaub der höchst und rechte cristlich gottesdienst ist, das ir Got die eer tuet, das ir in fur warhaftig haltet, das er sein zusagen halten werde, wölle gnedig sein, wie er verhaißen hat, wolle auch erhören und helfen, so ir hilf bei im sucht, und sollent solichen glauben üben in aller not, das ir lernent erfaren, das Got pflege warhaftiglich gnad und hilf erzaigen denen, so im und in anruefend, und diser glaub imerdar zuneme, das man als guts von Got hoffe und bei im such. Darzu ist auch das hailig sacrament eingesetzt zu gedenken, das unser Herr Cristus fur uns umb der sund willen gestorben sei und wider auferstanden, das er uns gnad, den Hailigen Gaist und ewigs leben gebe. Darumb söllet ir das hailig sacrament also entpfahen, das ir warhaftiglich glaubt, das euch hiebei gnad und vergebung der sunden angepoten werd; dann Cristus unser Herr gibt uns sein leib und sein plut, das wir ja glauben und warhaftiglich halten, er wöll bei uns sein, sein leben, sein Hailigen Gaist und sein gueter uns mittailen. Amen.

Beloved! Ye know that we have commandment from Christ, our Lord and God, that we should so preach and minister the holy sacraments, preach forgiveness of sins and forgive all sins in the stead of God and of our Lord Christ, to all them that desire such and believe it; for thus it is written [John 20:23]: Whose sins ye remit, they shall be remitted unto them, and whose ye retain, they shall be retained. Therefore will I first proclaim to you forgiveness of sins in the stead and on the behalf of God and of our Lord Christ, as Christ our Lord hath made satisfaction for all our sins by his death, and reconciled God, and purchased grace without our merit, and commanded that for his sake such be preached in all the world, and sins be rebuked and forgiven. Therefore I pronounce you all, and each one in particular that desireth it, free from your sins, and they shall be forgiven you of grace for Christ's sake, by divine commandment, in the name of God the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. The peace of God be with you! Amen.

And ye shall also believe this absolution as God's word and commandment, no less than if ye heard God's voice sound from heaven; and know that ye receive grace and forgiveness of sins through this faith alone, and that this faith is the highest and right Christian service of God, that ye give God the honour of holding him true, that he will keep his promise, will be gracious, as he hath promised, will also hear and help, if ye seek help of him; and ye shall exercise such faith in all need, that ye may learn by experience that God is wont truly to show grace and help to them that call upon him and in him, and that this faith may ever increase, so that one hope all good of God and seek it of him. For this also is the holy sacrament instituted, to remember that our Lord Christ died for us for sin's sake and rose again, that he might give us grace, the Holy Ghost and eternal life. Therefore ye shall so receive the holy sacrament that ye truly believe that grace and forgiveness of sins is offered you herein; for Christ our Lord giveth us his body and his blood, that we may indeed believe and truly hold that he will be with us and impart to us his life, his Holy Ghost and his goods. Amen.

Notes.

- The absolution. "Darumb sprech ich euch alle und jedes in sonderhait, so des begeren, ledig von euren sunden" is indicative, like Kantz's, and grounded in John 20:23. It belongs with the forms in §3.4.4.
- The order of parts. The first exhortation stands before communion; the minister then rehearses the Words of Institution ("Ee und der diener das ewangeli die gemaind communiert, wideräffert er die wort des nachtmals", before the minister communicates the congregation with the Gospel, he repeats the words of the Supper).
- Other exhortations. Sehling's editor, citing Fille (1895), notes that "auch einige andere solche Vermahnungen, meist von Urban Rhegius" (some other such exhortations also, mostly by Urban Rhegius) were once kept: "Sie sind aber jetzt verloren" (but they are now lost; Sehling 12, p. 40).

3.5.14.3 Buxtehude, Agende, 1565

The Buxtehude Agende prints, after the Latin Prefaces, a "Vormaninge vor der entfanginge des sacramentes" (exhortation before the receiving of the Sacrament). It builds on the Words of Institution, which it rehearses in full, and draws four lessons from them: what the Sacrament is, who instituted it, what it is for, and who receive it to salvation. It ends with a prayer said by all. Buxtehude, Agende, 1565 (Sehling 7/1, pp. 124–125):

> Myne leven Christen, alle, de dut hillige aventmall unses Heren Jesu Christi fruchtbarlich to erer salicheit wyllen bedenken und holden, is hoch vannoden, datt se vor allen dingen de worde der insettinge dusses aventmals, alse desulvigen de hilligen evangelisten und Paulus beschreven hebben, vaste weten, welker also luden: Unse Here Jhesus Christus in der nacht, do he vorraden wart, nam he dat brott, dankede und brack und gaff idt synen jungeren und sprack: Nemet hen und etet, dat is myn liff, dat vor ju gegeven wert, sulcks doet to myner gedechtnisse. Amen.

My dear Christians, all that will consider and keep this holy Supper of our Lord Jesus Christ fruitfully to their salvation, it is highly needful that before all things they know firmly the words of the institution of this Supper, as the holy evangelists and Paul have written them, which run thus: Our Lord Jesus Christ, in the night in which he was betrayed, took the bread, gave thanks, and brake it, and gave it to his disciples, and said: Take, eat; this is my body, which is given for you; this do in remembrance of me. After the same manner also he took the cup after supper, gave thanks, gave it them, and said: Drink ye all of it; this cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you for the remission of sins; this do, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.

Whoso considereth these words diligently, he findeth therein all that a godly Christian needeth to know of this holy sacrament, as: First, what this holy sacrament is, namely the true body and the true blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is given us under bread and wine to eat and to drink, to sustain therewith not the body but the soul. Secondly, these words teach who hath instituted and ordained this sacrament, namely no emperor, kings, man or angel, but our Lord Jesus Christ himself, the emperor of all emperors, king of all kings, the Lord of the angels and of all creatures, the redeemer of mankind, the only-begotten Son of God, who is with the Father and the Holy Ghost of like power and truth, whose will and words come truly to pass and deceive no man, though it seemed to our reason incomprehensible and impossible. Thirdly, these words teach whereto the holy sacrament is profitable and useful to us, namely, first, that we thereby are incorporated into our Lord Christ in faith, and he become one with us and we one with him, unto eternal life, as he himself saith, John 6[:56 and 54]: Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh of my blood dwelleth in me and I in him, and I will raise him up again at the last day. Secondly, it serveth us also thereto, that we thereby assure our faith in the promises of the gospel of the forgiveness of sins, as with a pure, divine, undeceiving seal and pledge. Thirdly, that we show forth the death of our Lord Christ until his coming again, that is, that we thank him all the days of our life for the redemption, which hath come to pass not through gold or silver (as Peter saith), but through his precious sacrifice and bloodshedding. Lastly, these words teach who they are that receive the holy sacrament savingly to the forgiveness of their sins, namely not the hypocrites, who appear penitent only before men and yet think not to amend their sinful life, but remain after as before full of unchastity, hatred, envy, usury, falsehood, deceit and the like; these eat and drink (as Paul saith) judgment to themselves. But they that repent of their sins from the heart, and firmly believe the forgiveness thereof through the passion, death and bloodshedding of Christ, and earnestly think to amend their life, and so receive this holy sacrament hungry and thirsty for grace and mercy, as oft as they do it, they are here assured by Christ that their sins are forgiven them and shall not be remembered.

That we may now receive the holy sacrament worthily, pray with me thus: Lord God, merciful Father, we beseech thee, help us yet to a true repentance, and cover our sins and unworthiness with the worthiness of thy dear Son Jesus Christ, our Lord, and grant that we may receive this holy sacrament to the strengthening of our faith in the forgiveness of sins, and grow and increase in a new life, that we, thus clothed with the worthiness of thy Son, may be eternally saved, through the same thy Son, our Lord Christ. Amen.

What follows. "Eyn ander" (another): the editor notes that the order then gives the exhortation "Myn alderlevesten in Godt", which Lüneburg 1564 also has in High German, that is, the Braunschweig recension of Osiander (§3.5.4), and that Buxtehude adds the wish "Datt vorlene uns Godt alle, dat wy idt werdichlick entfangen. Amen" (God grant this to us all, that we receive it worthily. Amen; Sehling 7/1, p. 125). Buxtehude is thus also a witness of §3.5.4.

3.5.14.4 Micron, London 1554, German 1565

Micron's order for the Dutch stranger church at London (Reformed), in the German version of 1565 (with the Norden Dutch variants), has the minister read the institution from 1 Cor 11 from the pulpit and then exhort the congregation to examine itself "ihe sie an den tisch des Herren sitze" (before it sit at the table of the Lord). Micron, Ordinancien (1554), German 1565 (Reformed; Sehling 7/1, pp. 631–633):

> Ihr habt, lieben brüder, auß dieser lehre des heiligen apostels Pauli gehöret, wer der einsetzer des nachtmals sey, nemlich Christus Jesus, und wie es sol gehalten werden, es sey denn, das man in grosse gefahr der seelen fallen wil. Denn sie werden schuldig an dem leib und blut Christi, essen und trinken ihnen selbs das gericht, die es unwirdig empfahen. Auf daß wir denn diser gefahr entfliehen und das nachtmal des Herren wirdiglich niessen mögen, so lasset uns, ihe wir an den tisch des Herren sitzen, fleissig anhören, warin (nach der heiligen schrift) die rechte niessung des nachtmals gelegen sey. Dieselbige stellet hie der apostel Paulus für in unserer prüffung und in dem underscheiden des leibs des Herren, also daß ein jeder, der sich selbs […] aufrichtig prüffet und den leib des Heeren underscheidet, wirdiglich zu seiner seelen trost und seligkeit zum nachtmal des Herren geht. Diese prüffung aber und underscheidung des leibs des Herren oder seines opfers, durch welches er seinen leib für uns in den tod gegeben hat, ist in dreien stücken fürnemlich gelegen. Zum ersten, daß wir unsere sünden, die wir wider Gott und unsern nechsten getan haben, von herzen bekennen und beweinen und uns (sofern es müglich) warhaftig mit allen denen versünen, mit welchen wir etwas widerwertiges haben. Zum andern, das wir in der erkentnuß unser sünden und in der empfindnuß des zorns Gottes gegen uns nicht kleinmütig werden umb unser sünden willen noch in verzweifelung fallen an seiner güte gegen uns, auch unsere zuflucht nicht nemen zu menschlichen verdiensten, sonder sollen festiglich glauben, daß uns alle unsere sünden allein auß lauter gnaden umbsonst vergeben werden durch das einige verdienst des tods Christi, gleich ob wir den todt selber in unser eignen person am stammen des kreuzes gelidten hetten. Zum dritten ist das rechte prüffen unsers gewissens hierin gelegen, das wir einfeltig one gleißnerey vor uns nemen ein aufrichtige besserung des lebens nach dem heiligen willen Gottes. Hierin soll denn ein jeder sein eigen herz und gewissen fleissig undersuchen, wie er sich selbs gerüst find gegen Gott und seinen nechsten; denn welcher halßstarrig in seinen sünden wil bleiben, als in abgötterey, lästerung, geiz, > stelen, liegen, betriegen, haderen, volsaufen, unreinigkeit und dergleichen, oder der seine sünden bekennet und doch in jemand anders beruwet denn in Jesu Christo und in dem verdienst seines tods, oder der nicht von ganzem herzen one gleißnerey vor sich nimpt, ein besser leben zu füren, derselbige sol nu, zu dem nachtmal des Herren zu kommen, nicht eilen. So aber jemand anders hierin handlen wurde, wie heimlich auch dasselbige geschehe, wird er doch vor dem angesicht Gottes schuldig sein des tods Christi, welchen er also verunehrt und verachtet.

> Diß sagen wir dennoch darumb nicht, lieben brüder, als wolten wir die zerschlagene herzen der glaubigen kleinmütig machen, als wen niemand zu dem nachtmal des Herren möcht gehn, denn der von aller unreinigkeit der sünden frey und in aller heiligkeit volkommen sey. Denn Christus der Herr hat sein nachtmal nicht eingesetzt zu einem zeugnuß unser heiligkeit oder volkommenheit, sonder vielmehr zu einem zeugnuß unser unvolkommenheit und ungerechtigkeit, welche er von uns hinnimpt durch das opfer seines leibs und rechent uns seine gerechtigkeit und ehre zu, ja, schenket uns dieselbige. Und darumb kommen die gläubigen zu dem tisch des Herren nit, daß sie sich ihrer gerechtigkeit und fromkeit rümen, sonder vilmehr zu bezeugen, daß sie auß ihnen selbs nichts anders sünd [!] denn kinder des zorns, under die sind [!] verkauft und unwirdig, ihre augen gehn himmel aufzuheben, welcher gerechtigkeit, volkommenheit und heiligkeit allein Christus ist, der alle unsere krankheit auf sich durch sein kreuz genomen hat und geust uns ein durch den heiligen Geist ein rechte lust zu der gerechtigkeit.
> Derhalben, so vil er under uns sind, die zum trost ihres gewissens mit dem hochzeitlichen kleide an den tisch des Herren sitzen wollen: Lasset uns unß selbs von ganzem herzen der sünden halben beschüldigen und vestiglich glauben, daß sie uns allein umb Christus willen nicht zugerechnet werden. Lasset uns auch für uns nemmen ein ernstliche besserung des lebens. Und auf daß wir die süssigkeit des verdienstes des tods Christi in dem gebrauch des nachtmals in unsern herzen kreftiglich empfinden und geniessen mögen, so sollen wir nit kleben bleiben in der eusserlichen ubung oder in den elementen des brots und weins, sonder dardurch vermanet, müssen wir unsere sinne, herzen und verstand hinauf in himmel erheben, da Jesus Christus allein nach dem leib ist, ein getreuer fürsprecher für uns, und dardurch sollen wir ungezweifelt versichert sein, daß wir viel gewisser durch die geistliche gemeinschaft des leibs und bluts Christi zu dem ewigen leben gespeiset werden, denn unsere sterbliche leibe durch speise und trank teglich underhalten werden, und denn wir in dem nachtmal des Herren brot und wein nach dem befelch Christi niessen. Gott, unser himlischer Vater, wolle uns seine gnade geben, daß wir die warhaftige speise unser seelen Jesum Christum in unserm gewissen warhaftig zu dem ewigen leben schmecken mögen. Amen.

Ye have heard, dear brethren, out of this doctrine of the holy apostle Paul, who is the institutor of the Supper, namely Christ Jesus, and how it shall be kept, unless one will fall into great danger of the soul. For they that receive it unworthily become guilty of the body and blood of Christ, and eat and drink judgment to themselves. That we then may flee this danger and enjoy the Supper of the Lord worthily, let us, before we sit at the table of the Lord, hear diligently wherein (according to the holy scripture) the right eating of the Supper lieth. The same doth the apostle Paul here set forth in our proving and in the discerning of the body of the Lord, so that every one that sincerely proveth himself and discerneth the body of the Lord goeth worthily to the Supper of the Lord to his soul's comfort and salvation. But this proving and discerning of the body of the Lord, or of his sacrifice, whereby he hath given his body into death for us, lieth chiefly in three points. First, that we confess and bewail from the heart our sins, which we have done against God and our neighbour, and truly reconcile ourselves (so far as it be possible) with all those with whom we have aught at variance. Secondly, that in the knowledge of our sins and in the feeling of the wrath of God against us we become not faint-hearted for our sins' sake, nor fall into despair of his goodness toward us, nor yet take our refuge in human merits, but shall firmly believe that all our sins are forgiven us only out of pure grace, freely, through the only merit of the death of Christ, even as if we ourselves had suffered the death in our own person on the tree of the cross. Thirdly, the right proving of our conscience lieth herein, that we simply, without hypocrisy, purpose a sincere amendment of life according to the holy will of God. Herein then shall every one diligently search his own heart and conscience, how he findeth himself prepared toward God and his neighbour; for whoso will remain stiff-necked in his sins, as in idolatry, blasphemy, covetousness, stealing, lying, deceiving, quarrelling, drunkenness, uncleanness and the like, or who confesseth his sins and yet trusteth in any other than in Jesus Christ and in the merit of his death, or who purposeth not with his whole heart, without hypocrisy, to lead a better life, the same shall not now make haste to come to the Supper of the Lord. But if any should deal otherwise herein, however secretly the same be done, he shall yet before the face of God be guilty of the death of Christ, whom he thus dishonoureth and despiseth.

Yet we say not this, dear brethren, as though we would make the broken hearts of the faithful faint, as if none might go to the Supper of the Lord but he that is free from all uncleanness of sins and perfect in all holiness. For Christ the Lord hath not instituted his Supper for a witness of our holiness or perfection, but much rather for a witness of our imperfection and unrighteousness, which he taketh from us by the sacrifice of his body, and reckoneth to us his righteousness and honour, yea, giveth us the same. And therefore the faithful come to the table of the Lord, not that they may boast of their righteousness and godliness, but much rather to testify that of themselves they are nothing else than children of wrath, sold under sin, and unworthy to lift up their eyes to heaven, whose righteousness, perfection and holiness is Christ alone, who hath taken all our sickness upon himself through his cross, and poureth into us through the Holy Ghost a right desire for righteousness.

Therefore, as many of us as will sit at the table of the Lord for the comfort of their conscience with the wedding garment: Let us accuse ourselves with our whole heart for our sins, and firmly believe that they are not imputed to us, only for Christ's sake. Let us also purpose an earnest amendment of life. And that we may mightily feel and enjoy in our hearts the sweetness of the merit of the death of Christ in the use of the Supper, we shall not remain cleaving to the outward exercise or to the elements of bread and wine, but, admonished thereby, we must lift up our senses, hearts and understanding into heaven, where Jesus Christ alone is according to the body, a faithful advocate for us; and thereby we shall be assured without doubt that we are fed unto eternal life through the spiritual communion of the body and blood of Christ much more surely than our mortal bodies are daily sustained by meat and drink, and than we eat bread and wine in the Supper of the Lord according to the commandment of Christ. God, our heavenly Father, give us his grace, that we may truly taste the true food of our souls, Jesus Christ, in our conscience unto eternal life. Amen.

Notes.

- The place. It is read after the Verba, from the pulpit; the minister then goes down to the table and announces 1 Cor 5:7f. ("Nach diser vermanung gehet der diener von der kanzel und stellet sich zu den andern dinern bey dem tisch", after this exhortation the minister goeth from the pulpit and standeth with the other ministers by the table; Sehling 7/1, p. 633).
- Sources. Sehling's editor compares the second point, on the forgiveness won "am galgen des krützes" (on the gallows of the cross), with the third exhortation of Gellius Faber of Emden (Reformed) (Sehling 7/1, p. 632).
- The Sursum corda turned to a doctrine. "Wir müssen unsere sinne, herzen und verstand hinauf in himmel erheben, da Jesus Christus allein nach dem leib ist" (we must lift up our senses, hearts and understanding into heaven, where Jesus Christ alone is according to the body) is the Reformed reading of Sursum corda.
- Moers (Reformed). The Lower Rhine recension of the Palatinate exhortation (§3.5.10) opens with Micron's words: "Auß dieser lehr deß heiligen apostels Pauli hört ihr …" (Out of this doctrine of the holy apostle Paul ye hear …).

3.5.14.5 Three short notes

- Marienhafe, Kirchenordnung, 1593. After communion "tut der prediger ein kurze vermanung von der liebe des nehesten" (the preacher maketh a short exhortation of the love of the neighbour), on 1 Cor 10:17 and the figure of many grains and grapes made into one bread and one wine. It turns into the thanksgiving: "so hebet nun eure herzen zu Godt (ihr geliebten) und last uns frolick danksagen" (so lift up now your hearts to God, beloved, and let us joyfully give thanks; Sehling 7/1, p. 713). The image of grains and grapes is the one that closes the Palatinate exhortation of 1563 (Reformed; §3.5.10). Sehling's editor also describes the Low German Nürnberg hospital Mass, "De düdesche Misse" of a Hamburg hymnal of 1558, which has both the Nürnberg and the Bugenhagen exhortations after the Agnus Dei (p. 714).
- Hohenlohe, Kirchenordnung, 1578. Besides the Brandenburg-Nürnberg exhortation at the altar (§3.5.5), the order appends "Vermanungen vom heiligen abendmal, an dem sambstag zur vesper den beichtkindern und communicanten vorzulesen" (exhortations of the holy Supper, to be read at Saturday Vespers to the penitents and communicants; Sehling 15, p. 327). They are a cycle of eight teaching homilies with a common opening, "Lieben freunde Christi. Dieweil wir morgendes tags das hochwirdige und heilige abendmal … zu halten gedenken" (Dear friends of Christ, forasmuch as we purpose to keep tomorrow the most worthy and holy Supper), which begins with the words of Luther's address (§3.5.3). The editor traces them to the Saturday sermons of Johann Hofmann (pp. 243, 328).
- Mecklenburg 1540/45. Its three Low German exhortations are not printed by Sehling (§3.5.2).

3.6 Before and after the service

3.6.1 Vesting prayers

No vesting prayers survive. None of the evangelical orders in Sehling prints or appoints a vesting prayer, or any of the other prayers in the Lutheran Missal Project's Vesting Prayers:

- the psalms of preparation (84, 85, 86, 116, 130) with the antiphon Ne reminiscaris;
- the Kyrie, Our Father and preces;
- the collects;
- the prayers before vesting, at the washing of the hands, and at the amice, alb, cincture, maniple, stole, tunicle, chasuble and mitre.

The searches covered the Latin incipits (Ne reminiscaris, Quam dilecta, Benedixisti, Inclina, Domine, Credidi, De profundis in a preparatory setting), praeparatio ad missam, amictus, indue me, and the German and Low German words for vesting. The psalms occur only in the Office and the Introits.

The only mention of the medieval prayers is an editor's note. Sehling's editor, on the Amberg hospital order of 1544, distinguishes the three preparations of the priest before Mass. Amberg, Ordnung der kirchen … im spital, 1544, editor's note (Sehling 13, p. 282):

> Was hier in diesem beachtenswerten Versuch als Rüsthandlung für die Gemeinde anstatt des Stufengebetes (mit dem Confiteor) als einer Rüsthandlung des zelebrierenden Geistlichen vor den Introitus gesetzt ist, ist wahrscheinlich eine Form des Akzesses. Dieser ist die erste der drei vorgeschriebenen Rüsthandlungen des Geistlichen. Diese war nicht - wie die auf ihn folgende Praeparatio ad missam (u.a. mit den Gebeten bei Anlegung der einzelnen Bestandteile der Meßkleidung) und die dann schon in der Messe selbst in Gestalt des Stufengebetes - im Meßbuch ihrer Form nach genau vorgeschrieben, konnte daher örtlich und persönlich durchaus verschieden sein und auch die Form einer Andacht, mit der Priester sich gemeinsam auf die Feier der Messe vorbereiteten, annehmen

What is here set before the Introit, in this noteworthy attempt, as a preparation for the congregation instead of the prayers at the foot of the altar (with the Confiteor), which are a preparation of the celebrating clergyman, is probably a form of the accessus. This is the first of the three prescribed preparations of the clergyman. It was not, like the Praeparatio ad missam that followed it (with, among other things, the prayers at the putting on of the several parts of the Mass vesture), and that which then came within the Mass itself in the form of the prayers at the foot of the altar, exactly prescribed in its form in the Missal, and could therefore differ quite widely by place and person, and could also take the form of a devotion with which priests prepared themselves together for the celebration of Mass.

What the orders do say about vesting. The orders mention vesting only as a rubric, and only to say that it signifies nothing. The vestments themselves are indifferent. Brandenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1540 (Sehling 3, p. 65):

> Die andern zusetz eusserlicher leiblicher ding, als messgewand, altardeck, silbern und gülden gefess, lichter etc. sein aller ding frei, geben und nemen dem glauben und gewissen nichts. Darum dieweil sie vorhin verhanden und gezeuget sein, sol man sie behalten und brauchen, sonderlich die kleider darum, das die diener der kirchen nicht alweg in iren eigen kleidern also gestalt sein, das sie darinnen tapfer und ehrlich der gemein mochten dienen.

The other additions of outward bodily things, as Mass vestment, altar cloth, silver and golden vessels, lights, etc., are altogether free; they give and take nothing to faith and conscience. Therefore, since they were there before and have been provided, they shall be kept and used, especially the vestments, because the ministers of the church are not always so furnished in their own clothes that they might serve the congregation therein worthily and honourably.

The rubrics on vesting say no more than this:

- The moment of vesting. At Hadeln the priest vests during the Te Deum at the end of Matins, "nicht alse nödig, sundern als ein düchtig erbarlich zirath, und nicht darinne de saligkeit soken" (not as needful, but as a seemly and honest ornament, and not seeking salvation therein; §3.3.4). In Mecklenburg 1540 the priest turns to the people "wenn he sick hefft angekledet" (when he hath vested himself; §3.3.4). In both, vesting is done in silence, in the church or sacristy, with no prayer.
- The *Stufengebet, the third of the medieval preparations, is the only one that survives (§3.3.2–3.3.4). The accessus survives, recast, only as the congregation's Veni Sancte Spiritus (§3.3.7).

3.6.2 The psalms and the Ne reminiscaris

None of the five preparatory psalms of the Missal's praeparatio is appointed as a private preparation of the minister, and the antiphon Ne reminiscaris (Tobit 3:3) does not occur.

- The nearest thing is Bugenhagen's Domine, ne memineris iniquitatum nostrarum antiquarum (Ps 79:8), said with the sexton at the altar step (§3.3.3). It is the same plea for the forgetting of old sins, but taken from the Lenten tract.
- Penitential psalms. Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 allows "ein feinen bußpsalm" (a goodly penitential psalm) in place of the Confiteor (§3.3.2). Ps 130 De profundis appears as a hymn, Luther's Aus tiefer Not, sung as the Introit in Lippe (§3.3.4) and often elsewhere.
- The psalms themselves occur in the corpus only as Introits, Office psalms, or proof texts. Ps 84 Quam dilecta is the dedication psalm at Hof 1592 (Sehling 11, p. 422), and Lüneburg 1564 cites it in defence of public worship (Sehling 6/1, p. 541).

3.6.3 After the Mass

The priest's private thanksgiving. The medieval gratiarum actio post missam (the canticle Benedicite, Ps 150 Laudate Dominum in sanctis eius, and collects, said by the priest while unvesting) survives in only one form. In Bugenhagen's Hildesheim order of 1544 and the Schleswig-Holstein order of 1542, the priest unvests during the closing hymn, kneels again before the altar, and "danket Godde hemelick vor sick sülvest" (thanketh God secretly for himself; Sehling 7/2.1, p. 855; Sehling 23, p. 91). No text is given. Both are quoted with translations in Chapter 7 §§7.15.2–7.15.3.

The Benedicite and Ps 150. Neither is appointed after Mass in any evangelical order. Both occur only as the canticle and psalm of Sunday Lauds, sung in the choir by the schoolboys or the canons. Pomerania prescribes the weekday canticles of Lauds after the Te Deum. Pomerania, Pia ordinatio caeremoniarum, 1535 (Sehling 4, p. 349):

> Post tertium responsorium, quod cum gloria patri etc. canitur, sequatur te deum etc. Mox cantor incipiat aliquam antiphonam, secundum cuius tonum canatur tantum unus ex psalmis prophetalibus, quae cantica vocantur. — Dominica die: Benedicite omnia etc. -— Feria secunda: Confitebor tibi, domine, quoniam iratus etc. — Feria tertia: Ego dixi etc. —- Feria quarta: Exultavit etc. — Feria quinta: Cantemus etc. — Feria sexta: Domine, audivi etc. — Sabbato: Audite coeli etc.

After the third responsory, which is sung with the Gloria Patri, etc., let the Te Deum follow, etc. Next let the cantor begin some antiphon, according to whose tone there shall be sung only one of the prophetic psalms, which are called canticles: on the Lord's Day, Benedicite omnia, etc.; on Monday, Confitebor tibi, Domine, quoniam iratus, etc.; on Tuesday, Ego dixi, etc.; on Wednesday, Exultavit, etc.; on Thursday, Cantemus, etc.; on Friday, Domine, audivi, etc.; on Saturday, Audite coeli, etc.

The Schleswig-Holstein order of 1542 has the same scheme in Low German, "des Sondages: Benedicite Omnia etc." (on Sundays: Benedicite omnia; Sehling 23, p. 141). At the Ansbach collegiate churches Sunday Lauds keeps both the Benedicite and the Laudate psalms. Brandenburg-Ansbach, Ordnung singens und lesens bei den Stiften, 1533 (Sehling 11, p. 313):

> Am sontag singen sie das Te Deum laudamus. Darnach die psalmen Dominus regnavit, Jubilate Deo omnis terra, Deus Deus meus, Benedicite omnia opera, Laudate Dominum de coelis mit der antiphona Indutus est, Benedictus Dominus etc., wie man sunst gewonlich am sontag helt.

On Sunday they sing the Te Deum laudamus; thereafter the psalms Dominus regnavit, Jubilate Deo omnis terra, Deus, Deus meus, Benedicite omnia opera, Laudate Dominum de coelis, with the antiphon Indutus est; the Benedictus Dominus, etc., as is otherwise customarily held on Sunday.

Who sings them. At Ansbach, "sie": the canons and vicars of the collegiate foundations. In Pomerania and Schleswig-Holstein, the cantor and the schoolboys in the choir. The people are not present at Lauds. The Laudate psalms (Pss 148–150) are sung under the one heading "Laudate Dominum de coelis".

What the orders do appoint after Mass. In place of the priest's private thanksgiving, the evangelical Mass ends with a public thanksgiving by all:

- a postcommunion collect, usually Luther's "Wir danken dir, allmächtiger Herr Gott";
- the Aaronic blessing;
- a hymn or psalm sung by the schoolboys and people while the communicants return, or at the very end. At Hildesheim it is "einen düdeschen, korten psalm" (a short German psalm) begun by the schoolmaster.

In Kantz 1522 and in Nürnberg the Nunc dimittis is sung after communion. The collects and thanksgiving prayers are treated in Chapter 5, and the hymns in Chapter 8.

3.6.4 Prayers before and after the sermon

The pattern. Every Lutheran order surrounds the sermon with prayer. The preacher calls the people to prayer before he begins, and they pray, usually the Our Father in silence or aloud, or sing a hymn to the Holy Ghost. At the end of the sermon he calls them again to thanksgiving and to intercession for the Church, the government and all need, and leads the general prayer. The Lüneburg order puts it most fully. Lüneburg, Kirchenordnung, 1564 (Sehling 6/1, pp. 544–545):

> Aber vor der predigt hat der priester das volk zum christlichen gebet zu vermanen, das der liebe Gott ihnen seinen heiligen Geist geben wolle, sein heiliges wort nützbarlich zu handeln […] und in das herze zu fassen, das sie ihr sündlich leben bessern, trost und sterkung ihres glaubens erlangen und hinfurt christlich und seliglich leben mögen. Darauf sol man ein Vater unser sprechen oder singen: Nu bitten wir den heiligen Geist. Umb die Weihnachten: Ein kindelein so löbelich etc. Umb die Ostern: Christ ist erstanden etc. Zum ende der predigt sol das volk abermal zum gebet und danksagung gegen Gott vermanet werden und samptlich vor erhaltung der kirchen Gottes und rechter lere, darzu der treuen warhaftigen lerer und das Gott treue arbeiter in seine ernte senden wolle, für die oberkeit, für zeitlichen friede und gewechs der früchte und in summa für die not der ganzen christenheit und sonderbarer personen, die des christlichen gebets begeren

But before the sermon the priest is to exhort the people to Christian prayer, that the dear God would give them his Holy Ghost, to handle his holy word profitably and to take it into the heart, that they may amend their sinful life, obtain comfort and strengthening of their faith, and henceforth live christianly and blessedly. Thereupon an Our Father shall be said, or "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray" sung; about Christmas, "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child", etc.; about Easter, "Christ Is Arisen", etc. At the end of the sermon the people shall again be exhorted to prayer and thanksgiving toward God, and [shall pray] together for the preservation of the Church of God and right doctrine, and thereto of faithful, true teachers, and that God would send faithful labourers into his harvest; for the government, for temporal peace and the increase of the fruits; and in sum for the need of all Christendom and of particular persons that desire the Christian prayer.

Other orders.

- Luther 1526: "das man auf der cantzel gemein gebet thut oder das vater unser fur spricht" (that the common prayer is made in the pulpit, or the Our Father said before [the people]), remains from the old pulpit office (§3.5.3).
- Mecklenburg 1552: at the end of the sermon the people are "zum gebet und danksagung … vermanet" (exhorted to prayer and thanksgiving), and the preacher is to bid them "das sie in der kirchen bei der communio bleiben" (that they remain in the church at the communion) (Sehling 5, p. 198). Lüneburg copies it.
- Hadeln: the preacher "schall thom ersten dat volk vormahnen tho vlitiger anropinge der hulpe gades" (shall first exhort the people to diligent calling upon the help of God). After the sermon he again exhorts to prayer, recites the Small Catechism, and prays for the prince, the preachers "und alle nothsaken" (and all needs) (Sehling 5, p. 468).
- Buxtehude 1552: the chaplains "scholen … alle ore predige mit gesange, Godt umme syne gnade to bidden, ahnfangen" (shall begin all their sermons with a hymn, to pray God for his grace; Sehling 7/1, p. 72).
- Hanau-Lichtenberg 1573, weekday sermons: "fur der Predig eynen Psalmen singen. Dem folg ein Vater unser und die Predig. Letzlich beschließ die Predig mit dem Gesang, Gebet und Segen" (before the sermon sing a psalm; then follow an Our Father and the sermon; lastly close the sermon with hymn, prayer and blessing; Sehling 20/2, p. 53). In the villages without a school the pastor sings a German psalm, then "erzele er die offne Beicht, Absolution und Epistel" (let him recite the open confession, absolution and epistle; ibid.).
- Palatinate 1563 (Reformed): the prayer of confession before the sermon, ending in the Our Father, said by the minister (§3.3.6); the confession, absolution and the long general prayer after it (§3.4.4).

The pulpit prayers, the greeting and the notices are treated more fully in Chapter 11 §11.10.

Who prays. The preacher bids and leads; the congregation prays the Our Father with him or silently, and answers "Amen". The schoolboys and choir sing the hymn. No order gives a private prayer for the preacher to say before going up into the pulpit. Pfalz-Veldenz 1574 has him begin the sermon "mitt dem gebett, wie breuchlich" (with the prayer, as is customary; Sehling 18, p. 499), and leaves the text to custom.

3.6.5 On entering and leaving church; the communicants' own prayers

On entering church. No order in the corpus prints or appoints a prayer for the worshipper to say on entering or leaving the church. The modern hymnal's "prayer on entering church" has no sixteenth-century church-order counterpart. What the orders appoint "when one comes into church" is a hymn:

- Sayn 1590: "Erstlich, wann man in die Kirche kompt, soll man einen Teutschen Psalm singen. Darnach soll der Pfarrherr ein Collect lesen" (First, when one cometh into the church, a German psalm shall be sung; thereafter the pastor shall read a collect; Sehling 19/1, p. 412).
- Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557: an opening hymn of the Holy Ghost is sung "biß die Kirch zusammen kombt" (until the church cometh together; §3.3.4).
- Amberg 1550, weekday morning prayer: the priest begins Deus in adiutorium, and the choir sings one or two Latin psalms "bis das volk zusammenkumbt" (until the people come together; Sehling 13, p. 287).

The orders regulate behaviour instead: the people are not to stand about in the churchyard or run in and out during the sermon. The village ordinance of Obereisenheim (Castell) of 1579 wants each to go into church when the bell is rung, to "Gottes wort hören, der predigt auswarten und sein gebet mit einer ganzen gemeind ruhig und still volbringen" (hear God's word, wait upon the sermon, and finish his prayer with the whole congregation quietly and still; Sehling 11, p. 688).

The communicants' prayers. The orders print no private prayers for the communicant to say before or after receiving. What the communicant does is set out in three ways:

1. Private preparation by confession and examination on the Saturday (§3.4.6).
2. Prayers said for them by the minister:
    - Pfalz-Veldenz 1574 has a "Gebett vor dem Abendmal", read by the minister to the people after the absolution. It asks "du wöllest uns allen, die wir von disem deinem heiligen abendtmal essen unnd trinckhen werden, die seelige gemeinschafft deines leibs und bluts gnediglich schenckhen" (that thou wouldest graciously give unto all of us that shall eat and drink of this thy holy Supper the blessed communion of thy body and blood; Sehling 18, p. 499).
    - Micron's Dutch order (Reformed) has a "Gebett vor dem nachtmal" (prayer before the Supper), said by the minister from the pulpit while all kneel (Sehling 7/1, p. 630).
    - Ysenburg 1588 prints more than one prayer after communion, all collects of the minister (Sehling 10, p. 627).
3. Hymns sung during the distribution. Jesus Christus unser Heiland, Gott sei gelobet, the German Agnus Dei: the hymns are the people's prayer during communion. Mecklenburg 1552 tells the communicants "ir solt auch hiebei euer herzlich gebet thun" (ye shall also here make your hearty prayer), and gives the prayer in the first person, to be made their own (§3.5.9).

The hymnal. The nearest thing to the modern hymnal's printed devotions is the Pfalz-Zweibrücken Gesangbuch of 1571/1587. It reprints the Mecklenburg confession, prayer and absolution as "Beicht, Gebett und Absolutio vor der Predig am Sontag" (Confession, prayer and absolution before the sermon on Sunday), so that the people had the text in their hands (Sehling 18, p. 187, apparatus).

A note on "Benedicite". In the household sections of the orders, "Benedicite" and "Gratias" are the grace before and after meat of Luther's Small Catechism ("Aller augen warten auff dich, Herr" and "Dancket dem Herrn, dann er ist freundlich"). It is not the canticle of the three children. Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557 heads it "Wie ein Haußvater sein Gesinde soll leren, das Benedicite und Gratias sprechen" (How a householder shall teach his household to say the Benedicite and Gratias; Sehling 18, p. 180).

3.7 Table by order

The table gives, for each order discussed in §3.3 and §3.4 and for the orders with an exhortation of their own (§3.5.14), what stands before the Introit, how the confession is said and absolved, and where the exhortation falls. Every cell has been checked against the text of the order. "—" means the order has nothing of the kind; "not stated" means the order mentions the item but gives no text or form. "A"–"G" are the families of §3.3.1; absolution types 1–5 are those of §3.4.4. The orders that appear only as witnesses to an exhortation are listed in the witness tables of §3.5.3–3.5.13.

Chapter 4. The Propers of the Mass

This chapter follows the propers of the Mass, the parts that change with the day, through the evangelical church orders printed in Emil Sehling's Die evangelischen Kirchenordnungen des XVI. Jahrhunderts. The propers covered are the introit, the prophecy or Old Testament lesson, the epistle, the gradual, the alleluia and tract, the gospel, the offertory, the Proper Preface and the communion chant. For each it asks:

- Was it kept, and where?
- Who sang or read it: the cantor and the school choir, the celebrant, the congregation, the organ? Was it sung in alternation?
- Was it in Latin or German?
- Were the historic tunes kept, cut, or replaced with new music: new tones, polyphony?

For the Proper Prefaces it asks also:

- On which days of the season, feast or saint were they used?
- Which Prefaces did each order have?

Appendix 4.A renders every Proper Preface in the corpus:

- in the original language, Latin and German or Low German;
- with a formal-equivalence translation in the idiom of the Authorized Version;
- with the list of the orders that carry each text.

Where the corpus has both the Latin and a German translation, both are given. The English is then made from the Latin, with notes on where the German shortens, adds to or changes it.

How the chapter is laid out.

- §4.1 summarizes the findings, and §4.2 sets out the method and cautions.
- §4.3 describes the three ways the orders dealt with the propers.
- §§4.4–4.9 take the propers in turn: introit, lessons, gradual, offertory, Preface, communion.
- §4.10 deals with the music.
- §4.11 is a table by order, and §4.12 a concordance.

4.1 Summary of findings

1. Three models, often combined. The orders handle the propers in one of three ways (§4.3):

- Keep them in Latin, sung by the school choir: the Formula missae line.
- Translate them into German prose, sung to the old tones: Müntzer 1524 (Radical Reformation), Erfurt 1525, Calenberg-Göttingen 1542.
- Replace them with German hymns sung by the congregation: the Deutsche Messe line.

Most territorial orders allowed all three by place and day:

- Latin "where there is a school", "in the towns", "on the feasts";
- German psalms "in the villages" and on ordinary Sundays.

The constant condition is that a proper must be from Scripture and "pure". In practice this meant de tempore*, not *de sanctis (§4.3.1, §4.6.2).

2. The introit was the most widely kept proper (§4.4).

- Luther's approval. Luther approved the Sunday and festal introits "if taken from Scripture" (1523).
- Who sang it. The school sang it in Latin, under the cantor or schoolmaster, while the priest read it quietly. Villages sang a German psalm instead.

- Fallbacks. Where boys could not learn every Sunday's introit, they repeated Benedicta sit sancta Trinitas or Spiritus Domini (Hatzkerode, Heilbronn, Kurpfalz, Hamburg 1556).
- German introits. These appear in Müntzer (Radical Reformation), Erfurt and Hof 1592. Wittgenstein 1555 allows the festal introits to be sung in German in the villages.
- Organ and polyphony. By the later century the introit was often played by the organ in alternation with the choir, or sung figuraliter (Nördlingen 1579, Hof 1592).

3. No Old Testament "prophecy" before the epistle survives as a regular lesson (§4.5.1).

- At the Mass. The prophetic lessons that remain are the historic epistles taken from a prophet (Hof 1592). On some feasts a chapter of the feast's history is read instead (Pfalz-Neuburg 1543).
- At the office. Old Testament lessons belong to Matins and Vespers. They were read in the old prophecy tone, whose cadence is written out in solmization (Hamburg 1529, Pomerania 1535, Wittenberg 1533).

4. The epistle and gospel of the day were kept everywhere, and read toward the people (§4.5.2–4.5.3).

- Exceptions. Müntzer (Radical Reformation), and Nürnberg and Brandenburg-Nürnberg in the 1520s–30s, read whole chapters in sequence.
- Three practices of language and tone:
  - German in new tones. Luther's Deutsche Messe has the epistle in the eighth tone and the gospel in the fifth. The Saxon orders send pastors to copy "the tone and accent customary at Wittenberg".
  - German read without notes, for intelligibility (Mecklenburg).
  - Latin chanted "in the old customary melody", then read in German (Schwäbisch Hall 1526, Hamburg 1556, Brieg 1592). Brandenburg's visitors required this in 1573.

5. The gradual and alleluia survived as a Latin choir piece, cut short (§4.6).

- Cut short. Luther limited the gradual to two verses, and kept the alleluia in Lent as "the perpetual voice of the church". Bugenhagen's northern orders cut off the jubilus, "the many notes which one was wont to hang on behind".
- Replaced. In villages, and where the text was "not pure", a German psalm took the place.
- German graduals. Müntzer (Radical Reformation) and Erfurt have them. Nürnberg sang its gradual "in a tone made for it".

6. The offertory chant was the proper most often dropped (§4.7).

- Dropped. It went with the offertory prayers as part of the "abomination" of sacrifice (Luther 1523). Volprecht says it is "never said, because Christ was once offered for our sins".
- Kept. A few orders kept the Latin offertory as a Scripture text sung by the choir: Wittenberg 1525, Brandenburg 1540, Ansbach 1548, Amberg 1550.
- Translated. Müntzer (Radical Reformation) and Erfurt translated it.
- Replaced. Most replaced it with a German psalm or the creed hymn.

7. The Proper Preface survived chiefly on the feasts, in Latin, to the Missal tones (§4.8).

- Cut. Luther cut the Preface short in 1523 and dropped it in 1526. Prussia abolished it outright.
- The usual rule. Most orders from Duke Henry's Saxon order of 1539 on adopted the rule: the Latin Preface on the feasts, the exhortation on ordinary Sundays.
- The feasts. The proper Prefaces were those of the feasts of Christ: Christmas, Epiphany, Easter, Ascension, Pentecost, Trinity.
- Ordinary Sundays. Bugenhagen's northern orders chose the Trinity Preface "made against the Arians" (Hamburg 1529, Wolfenbüttel 1543, Herford 1532, Wittenberg 1533). Wolfenbüttel 1543 dropped even the common Preface as "needless".
- Saints' days. Sanctoral Prefaces were excluded as impure. The exceptions are:
  - Michaelmas, with the common Preface (Hoya, Osnabrück, Lippe);
  - the Marian and Apostles' Prefaces in Dortmund's Low German set of 1554, the Apostles' made to speak of the apostles' "doctrine";
  - Müntzer's rewording (Radical Reformation) of the Marian Preface for Advent.
- Who sang. The priest sang the Preface at the altar; the choir answered and sang the Sanctus.

- Language. In Lippe 1571 and Mecklenburg the towns had Latin and the villages German.

8. The communion chant was optional from the start and was mostly replaced by hymns (§4.9).

- Optional. Luther says "If one will sing the communion, let it be sung".
- Kept in Latin. Volprecht, Ansbach 1536 and Brandenburg 1540 kept it.
- German. Müntzer (Radical Reformation) and Erfurt translated it.
- Polyphony. In the larger churches festal motets "sub communione" took its place, among them Clemens non Papa's Pascha nostrum at Hof.

9. The old melodies were kept, trimmed, and supplemented (§4.10).

- Kept. The Latin propers kept the plainchant of the old books, standardized in Lossius's *Psalmodia. Rostock made it binding around 1560, and Hof used it in 1592.
- Trimmed. They were trimmed by verse and melisma.
- New tones. German texts got new or adapted tones.
- Polyphony. From the 1530s the feasts brought polyphonic introits, Masses and motets: "choraliter or figuraliter". Hof 1592 names Senfl, Lassus, Clemens, Victoria, Walter, Isaac and Josquin.
- Organ. The organ alternated with the choir in the introit and the ordinary.

10. Appendix 4.A gives every Proper Preface in the corpus.

- Latin. The Latin set (Christmas, Epiphany, Easter, Ascension, Pentecost, Trinity, common) belongs to the Lower Saxon and Westphalian orders, Lüneburg 1564 to Verden 1606.
- German translations of the Latin:
  - Müntzer's (1524, Radical Reformation), carried on by Erfurt, Calenberg-Göttingen and the Lippe villages;
  - Strasbourg's (1524, Moderate Reformed);
  - Dortmund's Low German (1554), which alone translates the whole Roman series, Lent, Cross, the Virgin and the Apostles included.
- New German Prefaces. There are four:
  - Grubenhagen's Isaiah 53 Preface for Maundy Thursday (1581);
  - Lippe's Michaelmas Preface on the forgiveness of sins (1571);
  - Kurland's Christmas and Pentecost Prefaces (1570), built on the Easter Preface.

4.2 Scope, sources and cautions

What was searched. The `eko.db` database was searched for every proper by name, in Latin, German and Low German spellings:

- introitus;
- prophetia, lectio;
- epistola;
- graduale, alleluia, tractus;
- evangelium;
- offertorium;
- praefatio, Vorrede;
- communio, sub communione.

It was also searched for the singers (Schüler, Knaben, Chor, Cantor, Organist), for the languages (lateinisch, deutsch, düdesch), and for the music (Noten, Ton, tonus, Melodei, figuraliter, choraliter, mensur). The Proper Prefaces were searched for by the opening words of each Latin text and of the known German translations. The passages were then read in context.

Related chapters. Two earlier chapters overlap with this one:

- Chapter 8 deals with the hymns that replaced the introit, gradual, sequence, offertory and communion. This chapter deals with the propers themselves: the Latin chant, German prose versions, and the lessons and Prefaces.
- Chapter 7 gives the German common Prefaces of the early German Masses (Kantz, Worms (Moderate Reformed), Volprecht, Döber, Bremen) and the Preface sections of Müntzer (Radical Reformation), Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed), the Kiel Mass and Lippe. Those texts are cited here, not repeated, except where a Proper Preface is concerned.

Later chapters take up related subjects:

- Chapter 5 covers the collect, the secret and the postcommunion (§§5.4–5.6).
- Chapter 2 covers the place of the propers in the order of the Mass, and the Preface as part of the ordinary (§§2.5, 2.10).
- Chapter 12 covers the feasts whose propers were kept, and the proper prefaces and sequences as marks of rank (§§12.8, 12.10.3–12.10.4).
- Chapter 9 covers the organ in alternation (§9.3.3).
- Chapter 11 covers preaching on the lessons (§11.5).

Cautions. Four things limit what the corpus can show:

- Silence is not absence. Many orders say only "the introit" or "the gradual", or "as hitherto", and assume the old books. Where an order is silent, the Latin chant may well have gone on.
- Sehling did not print everything. The edition leaves out much musical and liturgical matter. The notated Prefaces of Mecklenburg (1545, 1552), Pomerania (1542), Mansfeld (1580) and Buxtehude (1565) are described but not printed (Appendix 4.A, introduction). Hof's tables of introits and motets are printed, but its notes are not.
- Notes are marked, not reproduced. Where an order prints music, the edition shows "[Noten:]" and "[Ende der Noten]". The texts are given, but not the melodies. Sehling's editors often identify the melody in the Handbuch der deutschen evangelischen Kirchenmusik.
- Town and village differ. A territorial order often sets one practice for the towns with Latin schools and another for the villages. Both are reported here.

Terms.

- de tempore: of the season, or of the Sunday.
- de sanctis: of the saints.
- dominica: of the Sunday.
- de festo: of the feast.
- choraliter: in plainchant.
- figuraliter, in mensuris, "mensur": in mensural polyphony.
- organicen: the organist.
- Schüler, Knaben, Chor: the Latin school, which was the choir.
- Amt: the Mass, "the office".

4.3 Three ways of handling the propers

The orders deal with the propers in one of three ways, and many combine them by place and by day:

- keep them in Latin, sung by the school (§4.3.1);
- translate them into German prose, sung to the old tones (§4.3.2);
- replace them with German hymns sung by the congregation (§4.3.3).

4.3.1 Latin propers, sung by the school (the Formula missae line)

Luther's position. Luther's Formula missae (1523) keeps the sung propers of the Sundays and the feasts of Christ:

- the introit (§4.4.1);
- the gradual of two verses with the alleluia (§4.6.1);
- the communion "if one will" (§4.9.1).

It rejects the offertory as the beginning of the "abomination" of the sacrifice (§4.7.1). The rule is that what is sung de tempore, from Scripture, may stay. Luther says the Sunday propers "alone still bear witness to the ancient purity, except the canon" (Sehling 1, p. 4).

Wittenberg 1525. A Wittenberg report of 1525 on "how it is held for a time with the ceremonies of the Mass" lists the parts sung. They include, at that date, even the offertory. Wittenberg, Wie es einer zeit mit den ceremonien der messe gehalten, 1525 (Sehling 1, p. 698):

> doch umb etlicher sachen umbs glauben willen lasset man singen de tempore, und nit de sanctis, und singet introitum, kyrieleison, gloria in excelsis, et in terra, collecta, oder preces, epistel, gradualia, on sequens, evangelium, credo, offertorium, prefatio, sanctus, on canonen maior und minor, dieweil die geschrift nit gemess seind.

[…] yet for certain causes touching the faith one letteth sing de tempore, and not de sanctis; and one singeth the introit, Kyrie eleison, Gloria in excelsis, Et in terra, the collect or prayers, the epistle, the graduals (without sequence), the gospel, the Creed, the offertory, the preface, the Sanctus; without the greater and lesser canon, since these are not agreeable to Scripture.

Who sang the Latin propers. In the orders that kept the Latin propers, they were sung by the school choir under the cantor or schoolmaster: the introit, gradual, alleluia, sometimes the offertory, and the communion. The priest sang the collect, epistle, gospel and Preface. Latin was defended as training for the boys. Veit Dietrich's Nürnberg Agendbüchlein (1545) has the scholars sing the introit "if it be agreeable to Scripture, or a German psalm". It adds that "where there are schools, the Latin tongue also be exercised with singing in the church". Nürnberg, Agendbüchlein of Veit Dietrich, 1545 (Sehling 11, p. 495):

> Dieweil sollen die schuler den introitum, so er der schrift gemeß ist, singen oder ein teutschen psalm, nachdem es im gebrauch ist, doch das, wo schulen sind, die lateinisch sprach auch mit dem gesang in der kirchen geübet werde.

Meanwhile shall the scholars sing the introit, if it be agreeable to scripture, or a German psalm, according as it is in use; yet so that, where there are schools, the Latin tongue be also exercised with singing in the church.

The territorial orders. The Latin propers were kept in this way in the territorial orders of Albertine Saxony (1539, 1580), Brandenburg (1540), Brandenburg-Nürnberg (1533), Pfalz-Neuburg (1543), Mecklenburg (1545, 1552), Pomerania (1535, 1542, 1569), Hohenlohe (1553), Amberg (1550, 1555), Regensburg (1553, 1567), Hamburg (1556), Wolfenbüttel (1543, 1569), Lüneburg (1564), Hoya and Grubenhagen (1581) and Hof (1592). Each has its own limits, given in the sections that follow.

Brandenburg 1540 is the most conservative. It keeps the Latin offertory and communion as well, in the collegiate churches and towns. The parishes and villages get German psalms (§4.7.2).

4.3.2 German prose propers, sung to the old tones

Müntzer (Radical Reformation). Müntzer's Deutsch evangelisch Messe (Allstedt 1524) is the first full set. For each of five offices (Advent, Christmas, Passion, Easter, Pentecost) it has a German introit with its whole psalm, Kyrie, Gloria, collect, epistle, gradual and alleluia, gospel, offertory, Preface, Sanctus, Agnus Dei and communion. It is printed with notes. Müntzer's own explanation says the people are "led with the customary singing, in their own tongue, as children are brought up with milk". Allstedt, Thomas Müntzer, Ordnung und berechnunge des teutschen ampts, 1523/24 (Radical Reformation; Sehling 1, pp. 504–505):

> Demnach so nimpt man bei uns den eingang der geheim gotis aus dem psalter, do der schlussel David auf der schultern Christi ist, zu eröffnen alles, was gesungen wirt. Auf das man je klerlich sehe, one stückwerk, singet man den ganzen psalm, wie im anfang der christenheit durch die frommen nachfolger der heiligen aposteln geschach. […] Hirnach wirt gesungen das gradal und alleluia, auf das der mensche geherzt werd, sich festiglich auf gotis wort zuverlassen. […] Zum andern ist zu wissen, das wir alzeit ein ganz capitel anstat der epistel und evangelion lesen, auf das die stuckwerkische weise damit vorworfen werden, und das die heilige schrift der biblien dem volk gemein werde, […] und die leut mit gewonlichem gesange, mit eigener sprache geleitet werden, wie die kinder mit milch erzogen

Accordingly with us the entrance of the mystery of God is taken out of the Psalter, where the key of David is on the shoulder of Christ, to open all that is sung. That it may be seen clearly, without piecework, the whole psalm is sung, as was done in the beginning of Christendom by the godly followers of the holy apostles. […] After this the gradual and alleluia are sung, that a man may be heartened to rely firmly on God's word. […] Secondly, be it known that we always read a whole chapter instead of the epistle and gospel, that the piecemeal manner may thereby be cast off, and the holy scripture of the Bible be made common to the people, […] and the people be led with the customary singing, in their own tongue, as children are brought up with milk […]

Erfurt and Calenberg. The Erfurt *Deutsches Kirchenamt (1525) reprints Müntzer's offices, labels each piece (Introitus, Gradual, Offertorium, Prefatio, Commun.) and adds one for Trinity (Sehling 2, pp. 376–380). Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 gives a notated German Mass for the Sundays and the feasts with German epistles, gospels, alleluias and Prefaces, but it has a German psalm "in place of the offertory" (Sehling 6/2, pp. 813–833). Sehling's editors trace its Prefaces to Müntzer and to the Erfurt Kirchenamt.

Strasbourg 1524 (Moderate Reformed). The Strasbourg *Teutsche Meß of 1524 gives German Prefaces for the feasts (Sehling 20/1, pp. 133–134). Its Augsburg reprint explains each Latin heading for the reader: "Introitus – Das nennet man anfang oder eingang", "that is called the beginning or entrance" (p. 135). Its successors drop the Preface (§4.8.1).

Later German prose propers. These are fewer:

- Wittgenstein 1555 lets the festal introits be "learned and sung in German in the villages" (§4.4.4).
- Hof 1592 has German prose introits for ordinary Sundays (§4.4.4).
- The German Prefaces of Lippe 1571, Kurland 1570 and Grubenhagen 1581 are given in Appendix 4.A.

4.3.3 Hymns in place of the propers (the Deutsche Messe line)

Luther's Deutsche Messe (1526) replaces the introit with "a spiritual song or a German psalm", and the gradual with a German hymn ("Nu bitten wir" or another). It has no offertory and no Preface. It keeps the epistle and gospel, sung in German to new tones (§4.5.3). This model, and the choice of hymns, is the subject of the hymn-practice chapter (Chapter 8, §§8.3–8.5, 8.8, 8.11, 8.14). Here it matters only as the third option, which most orders allowed side by side with the first:

- "in the towns Latin, in the villages German";
- "where there is a school" Latin, otherwise a German psalm;
- Latin "on the feasts", German on ordinary Sundays.

Albertine Saxony. Duke Henry's Saxon order of 1539 makes the arrangement for ordinary use. Albertine Saxony, Kirchenordnunge zum anfang (Duke Henry's Agende), 1539 (Sehling 1, p. 271):

> sollen die schuler singen: Erstlich den introitum von der dominica, oder festen, darauf das kyrie eleison, gloria in excelsis, und et in terra latinisch, darnach die collecten deudsch oder latinisch, darauf die epistel gegen dem volk deudsch, darnach ein sequenz, oder deudschen psalm, oder andern geistlichen gesang, wie solches ein jede zeit erfordert. Darnach das evangelium von der dominica oder vom fest, auch gegen dem volk deudsch gelesen, darauf den glauben gesungen, wir gleuben all an einen gott etc.

[...] the scholars shall sing: first the introit of the Sunday or of the feast, thereafter the Kyrie eleison, Gloria in excelsis and Et in terra in Latin; thereafter the collects in German or Latin; thereafter the epistle toward the people in German; thereafter a sequence, or a German psalm, or other spiritual song, as each season requireth. Thereafter the gospel of the Sunday or of the feast, also read toward the people in German; thereupon the Creed sung, "We All Believe in One True God" etc.

4.4 The introit

4.4.1 Luther's rule: the Sunday and festal introits, if from Scripture

The Formula missae approves "the introits of the Sundays and of the feasts of Christ", Easter, Pentecost and Christmas, though Luther would rather have the whole psalms "from which they are taken, as of old". Introits of the saints may be kept by those who wish, "when they are taken from the psalms or other Scriptures". Luther, Formula missae et communionis, 1523 (Sehling 1, p. 5):

> Primo, introitus dominicales et in festis Christi, nempe paschatis, pentechostes, nativitatis, probamus et servamus, quamquam psalmos mallemus, unde sumpti sunt, ut olim, sed nunc sic usui recepto indulgebimus. Quod si qui apostolorum, virginis aliorumque sanctorum introitus (quando e psalmis aut aliis scripturis sumpti sunt) probare volent, non damnamus.

First, the introits of the Sundays and of the feasts of Christ, to wit of Easter, Pentecost and the Nativity, we approve and keep; although we had rather have the psalms, whence they are taken, as of old; but now we will indulge the received use. But if any will approve the introits of the apostles, of the Virgin and of other saints (when they are taken out of the psalms or other scriptures), we condemn it not.

The rest of the century repeats the condition "if it be taken from Holy Scripture" or "so far as it is pure" almost word for word:

- Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533 (Sehling 11, p. 188);
- Weißenburg 1528 (11, p. 659);
- Hohenlohe 1553 (15, p. 68);
- Mecklenburg 1545 (5, p. 151);
- Teschen 1584 (3, p. 462);
- Henneberg (Meiningen) 1566 (2, p. 339).

4.4.2 Who sang it: the school, in Latin, with a German psalm for the villages

The school sang it. The introit was sung by the school: the schoolmaster or cantor with the boys, "as was customary". The priest might read it quietly at the altar meanwhile. The Brandenburg-Nürnberg order of 1533 sets out the arrangement that became standard in the south. Brandenburg-Nürnberg, Kirchenordnung, 1533 (Sehling 11, p. 188):

> darnach den introitum lesen, doch das er aus der heiligen schrift genummen sei. Dieweil sollen die schuler, wo man schul hat, den introitum auch singen lateinisch. Wo man aber als in dörfern zu solichem lateinischen gesang nicht leut hette, soll man ein christenlich teutsch gesang nach gelegenheit jedes orts singen. Wo aber das volk solich geseng nicht könte, sollens die pfarherr anrichten zu lernen.

[…] thereafter [let the priest] read the introit, provided it be taken out of holy scripture. Meanwhile let the scholars, where there is a school, sing the introit also in Latin. But where, as in villages, there are no folk for such Latin singing, a christian German song shall be sung, according to the occasion of each place. And where the people could not [sing] such songs, the pastors shall set about teaching them.

Where there was no choir. In Pfalz-Neuburg 1543, "where there is no choir, as in the country in villages", the priest himself sings or reads the introit (Sehling 13, p. 70).

Saxony. Duke Henry's Saxon order of 1539 and the Electoral Saxon order of 1580 both open the Mass with "the scholars shall sing: first the introit of the Sunday or feast" (Sehling 1, pp. 271, 368).

The north. The northern orders have the same division. Mecklenburg 1545 has the cantor or schoolmaster "in the towns" begin the introit in Latin, "or sing at times a German psalm". It gives the introits of the chief feasts by incipit. In the villages, between Christmas and Candlemas, the German stanzas of "Ein Kindelein so löbelich" serve as the introit. Mecklenburg, Ordeninge der misse, 1545 (Sehling 5, p. 151):

> Hirna schall in den steden de cantor edder scholmester den introitum anfangen to latin, effte singen under tiden enen düdeschen psalm. Erbarme di miner o here godt, etc. Menn kan dat jar aver in den steden singen de introitus, de nicht wedder de hillige schrift sint. In den hogen festen, winachte: Puer natus etc. In die Epiphanie: Ecce advenit etc. In die Purificationis singe me vor enen introitum de veer schonen versche. Ein kindelin etc. Welck ock de sondage twischen winachten und lechtmissen up den dörpern schal vor enen introitum gesungen werden. […] In den ostern: Resurrexi, Ascensionis: Viri Galilei. In den pinxsten: Spiritus domini. Trinitatis: Benedicta sit sancta tri[nitas].

Hereafter in the towns shall the cantor or schoolmaster begin the introit in Latin, or sing at times a German psalm, "Have mercy upon me, O Lord God", etc. One may through the year in the towns sing the introits that are not against holy scripture. On the high feasts, at Christmas: Puer natus etc. On Epiphany: Ecce advenit etc. On the Purification let the four goodly verses be sung for an introit, "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child" etc.; which also on the Sundays between Christmas and Candlemas shall be sung in the villages for an introit. […] At Easter: Resurrexi; at the Ascension: Viri Galilaei; at Pentecost: Spiritus Domini; on Trinity: Benedicta sit sancta Trinitas.

Hesse, late in the century. The Hessian Agende of 1574 (Philippist) allows a Latin psalm "or introit" only where there are people who understand it, and only "at the beginning, before the whole congregation cometh together". In the villages German songs only are to be sung, and in the towns German songs for the most part. Hesse, Agende, 1574 (Philippist; Sehling 8, p. 411):

> ein lateinischer psalm oder introitus gesungen werden, doch daß auf den dorfen durchaus, in stedten aber mehrerteils allein teutsche gesenge im gemeinen brauch seien und bleiben.

[…] a Latin psalm or introit [may] be sung; yet so that in the villages throughout, but in the towns for the most part, only German songs be and remain in common use.

Sung slowly. Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 has the choir sing the introit "right slowly, so that it become not an ass's braying" (Sehling 6/2, p. 793).

4.4.3 The Trinity or Holy Ghost introit as a fallback

Where the boys could not learn a new introit each Sunday, the orders let them repeat one. The usual choices were Benedicta sit sancta Trinitas (Trinity) or Spiritus Domini (Pentecost). Hatzkerode (about 1534) allows the Trinity introit "where the Sunday introits were too hard for the boys". It adds that they "should yet learn them in time, since they are taken from Scripture". Hatzkerode, Kirchenordnunge, 1534(?) (Sehling 2, p. 586):

> darnach den introitum von fest ader de tempore, zuweilen de S. Trinitate nach gefallen des pfarhers, wo die sontage introitus den knaben zu swer weren. Doch sollen sie die, weil sie aus der schrift genommen, mit der zeit auch lernen.

[…] thereafter the introit of the feast or of the season, sometimes of the Holy Trinity at the pastor's pleasure, where the Sunday introits were too hard for the boys. Yet they shall learn them also in time, since they are taken out of scripture.

Other orders with the same fallback.

- Heilbronn's song order of 1543 begins "Every Sunday hath its own introit, which shall be sung to the organ". For a schoolmaster who finds that too much, it provides a reduced cycle: from Easter to Pentecost the Easter introit, from Trinity Benedicta (Sehling 17/1, p. 322).
- Kurpfalz 1546 names "the introit of the season, or of the Holy Trinity, or of the Holy Ghost" (Sehling 14, p. 96).
- Hamburg 1556 keeps the Latin introit for feasts, and "sometimes also on the Sundays de Trinitate or de Spiritu sancto" (Sehling 5, p. 552).

4.4.4 German introits

Müntzer and Erfurt. Müntzer's Deutsch evangelisch Messe (1524, Radical Reformation) and the Lutheran Erfurt Deutsches Kirchenamt (1525) translate the introits into German prose, with their psalm verse and Gloria Patri, and sing them to the Latin melody (§4.3.2). Erfurt's Christmas introit is an example. Erfurt, Deutsches Kirchenamt, 1525, "das ampt von der gepurt Christi" (Sehling 2, p. 379):

> Introitus: Uns ist ein kind geboren, und ein sohn ist uns gegeben, welches hirschaft ist auf seiner schuldern. Und sein nam wurd geheissen ein engel des grossen rathes. Singet got dem herren ein neues lied; dan er hat wundersam ding gemachet. Ehre sei dem vater und dem etc.

Introit: Unto us a child is born, and unto us a son is given, whose government is upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called the angel of great counsel. Sing unto God the Lord a new song, for he hath done marvellous things. Glory be to the Father and to the, etc.

Wittgenstein 1555. Wittgenstein keeps the Latin festal introits, Puer natus, Resurrexi and Spiritus Domini. It adds that these "may also be learned and sung in German in the villages", or else replaced by the festal hymn. Wittgenstein, Kirchenordnung, 1555 (Sehling 22, p. 102):

> nach dem Veni sancte den gewönlichen introitum singen, als da sind: Puer natus est nobis etc., Resurrexi et adhuc tecum sum etc., Spiritus Domini replevit orbem terrarum etc., welche man auch auff den dörffern deutsch lernen und singen kan oder an stadt derselbigen brauchen: Der tag, der ist so freudenreich etc., Christ lag in todes banden etc., Es ist das heyl uns kommen her etc.

[…] after the Veni sancte sing the customary introit, such as are: Puer natus est nobis etc., Resurrexi et adhuc tecum sum etc., Spiritus Domini replevit orbem terrarum etc.; which one may also learn and sing in German in the villages, or use in their stead: "Now Hail the Day So Rich in Cheer" etc., "Christ Jesus Lay in Death's Strong Bands" etc., "Salvation unto Us Has Come" etc.

Hof 1592. Hof's weekly table (§4.10.3) gives German prose introits for ordinary Sundays: "Bistu, der da kommen soll?" (Advent III), "Ein kindlein ist uns geboren" (Epiphany I), "Ich bin die auferstehung" (Cantate) (Sehling 11, pp. 433–440). The festal introits are kept in Latin, in polyphony.

Hymns in the introit's place. These are treated in the hymn-practice chapter (Chapter 8, §8.5): "a German psalm" (Ps 67, 51, 130, 12, 124 or 14), "Komm heiliger Geist", or the feast's own Leise.

4.4.5 Organ, polyphony and alternation

Organ. In the larger churches the introit was shared between organ and choir, or set in polyphony:

- In Regensburg 1553 the organist, if there is one, "plays the introit together with the Kyrie, Et in terra, Patrem, Sanctus and Agnus Dei on the organ" (Sehling 13, p. 421).
- In Merseburg 1545, at an ordination Mass, Benedicta sit sancta Trinitas, the Kyrie and the Gloria were sung "on the organ and choir", in alternation (Sehling 2, p. 7).
- In Nördlingen 1579, on the high feasts, "the introit of the season is first struck by the organist, and sung by the scholars figuraliter" (Sehling 12, p. 365).

Hof 1592 describes a three-choir alternation of the introit with the organ. The parts are the whole choir, a second choir of the older boys, and a choir of girls. Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592 (Sehling 11, p. 424):

> I. Organicen introitum modulatur usque ad versum, chorus vero eundem gubernante ludirectore canit et quidem primam partem chorus totus, alteram seu repetitionem chorus secundus ex adulterioribus conflatus versiculum chorus puellarum, qui in ordine est tertius. His peractis organicen versiculum seu Gloria Patri praecinit; chorus totus Gloria Patri, secundus chorus denuo incipit introitum usque ad repetitionem, chorus puellarum repetitionem absolvit usque ad versiculum. […] Nota. Figuraliter eodem modo unaque vice canitur introitus praeside cantore usque ad versiculum; post organa audita versiculus additur solus nihil amplius repetito.

I. The organist playeth the introit as far as the verse; and the choir, the schoolmaster governing, singeth the same: the first part the whole choir, the second or repetition the second choir, made up of the older [boys], the versicle the choir of girls, which is the third in order. These done, the organist preludeth the versicle or Gloria Patri; the whole choir [sings] Gloria Patri; the second choir beginneth the introit again as far as the repetition; the girls' choir finisheth the repetition as far as the versicle. […] Note. In figural music the introit is sung in the same manner and once only, the cantor presiding, as far as the versicle; after the organ hath been heard, the versicle alone is added, and nothing more repeated.

Hof's festal table assigns polyphonic introits by name. For Christmas it has "Puer natus est nobis, a 4, by Senfl", and for the Ascension "Viri Galilaei, a 4" (Sehling 11, pp. 457, 462). See §4.10.

The organ's prelude and its alternation with the choir are treated in Chapter 9, §§9.3.2–9.3.3.

4.5 The lessons: prophecy, epistle and gospel

4.5.1 The Old Testament "prophecy"

At the Mass. None of the orders in the corpus adds a regular Old Testament lesson (prophetia, lectio) before the epistle. The lessons from the prophets that survive are of two kinds:

- The historic epistles taken from a prophet. Hof 1592 instructs its readers how to announce them: "Lectio ex propheta Esaia …", and the like (Sehling 11, p. 409). These are the lessons of the Christmas Masses, Epiphany and the Ember days in the Missal.
- Festal chapters in place of the epistle. Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 has "the chapters out of the Bible" read on the feasts "wherein the history of the feast is described" (Sehling 13, p. 71). Mecklenburg 1545 reads Isaiah 40 for St John the Baptist's day, because "it is written of John the Baptist" (Sehling 5, p. 152).

At Matins and Vespers. The Old Testament lessons were read at the office, not the Mass. Their tone was the tone of the prophecies. Hamburg 1529 has the lessons read "in the tone in which one is wont to read at Matins; but the ending as one was wont to end when one read a prophecy, thus: sol sol sol la sol fa fa" (Sehling 5, p. 522). Pomerania 1535 prescribes the same cadence (Sehling 4, p. 349). Wittenberg 1533 has the boys end each lesson "as one was wont to read or sing the prophecies, in fine: sol sol mi fa sol sol" (Sehling 1, p. 703). This is one of the few places where an order writes down a melodic formula of the old chant.

4.5.2 The epistle and gospel: kept, and read toward the people

Kept everywhere. Every Lutheran order in the corpus keeps the epistle and gospel of the day (de dominica, de festo), with these exceptions:

- Müntzer (Radical Reformation) reads "always a whole chapter instead of the epistle and gospel" (§4.3.2).
- Nürnberg 1524 and Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533 read the New Testament continuously (lectio continua). In the Nürnberg parish Mass of 1524 the minister sings a whole chapter of Romans, and the deacon a chapter of Matthew, in German, each with a fixed announcement: "Ir aller liebsten, vernemet das N. capitel …" (Sehling 11, p. 46).

Toward the people. The reader turns toward the people ("gegen dem volk", "tom volke gekeret"). That is what made the reading a reading. The priest reads the epistle and gospel in most orders. Where there were deacons or chaplains, they read: in Pfalz-Neuburg and Regensburg the subdeacon and deacon (see Chapter 16, §16.4.2). Some orders read the epistle from the pulpit:

- Schweinfurt 1543: "the chaplain shall not read the epistle over the altar, but from the pulpit" (Sehling 11, p. 641);
- Pomerania 1535: "as one is wont to do on the pulpit" (Sehling 4, p. 341).

Preaching on the Sunday gospels and epistles is treated in Chapter 11, §11.5.1.

4.5.3 Sung or read, Latin or German

Luther's tones. Luther's Deutsche Messe sets the epistle in the eighth tone, "that it remain at the same pitch as the collect", and the gospel in the fifth tone, both "with the face turned to the people". Luther, Deutsche Messe und ordnung gottis diensts, 1526 (Sehling 1, p. 14):

> Darnach die epistel in octavo tono, das er im unisono der collecten gleich hoch bleibe, cuius regulae sunt istae. […] Er sol aber die epistel lesen mit dem angesicht zum volk gekert, aber die collecten mit dem angesicht zum altar gekeret. […] Darnach lieset er das evangelion in quinto tono, auch mit dem angesicht zum volk gekeret.

Thereafter the epistle in the eighth tone, that he remain at the same pitch, in unison with the collect; whose rules are these: […] But he shall read the epistle with his face turned to the people, but the collects with his face turned to the altar. […] Thereafter he readeth the gospel in the fifth tone, also with his face turned to the people.

Saxony copies Wittenberg. The Saxon orders refer the pastors to the larger towns for the melody. The visitation instruction of 1539 says: "the melody for singing the gospels and epistles in German the pastors may seek and copy at the churches of the greater towns, as Dresden, Leipzig, Weißenfels, Salza" (Sehling 1, p. 281). Wurzen (1542) and the Saxon town orders want the epistle read "in German, in the tone and accent customary at Wittenberg, Torgau, Dresden or Leipzig" (Sehling 2, p. 98; 1, p. 564).

Read without notes. Other orders had the lessons read without notes, for intelligibility:

- Mecklenburg 1545: "with a loud voice, without notes, that the church may understand the words" (Sehling 5, p. 152);
- Mecklenburg 1552 repeats it (5, p. 202);
- Pomerania 1535: "if the priest cannot sing, he may read loud and understandable" (4, p. 341).

Latin first, then German. A third group kept the Latin chant first, for the school, and then read the lesson again in German:

- Schwäbisch Hall (1526): the deacon sings the gospel "in the choir in this tone, as it hath hitherto been sung", and it is then read to the people in German (Sehling 17/1, p. 40).
- Hamburg 1556: two scholars read the Latin gospel "in the customary tone", and a third repeats it in German "in the same tone" (Sehling 5, p. 552).
- Brieg 1592: the pastor sings the epistle and the gospel in Latin before the altar, but "in little towns it may remain in German" (Sehling 3, p. 445).

- Brandenburg 1573: the electoral visitors went furthest. They required the epistles and gospels to be sung "not in German, but in the old customary melody in Latin", then read in German "for the simple folk's sake, that they may understand it, which cannot happen in singing". Brandenburg, Visitations- und Consistorialordnung, 1573 (Sehling 3, p. 129):

> Sie sollen auch darauf sehen, das die pfarrer und caplene die episteln und evangelia vor dem altare nicht deutsch, sondern in der alten, gewohnlichen melodei lateinisch singen, und dann hernach, um der einfeltigen willen, deutsch vorlesen, das sie es verstehen können, welches im singen nicht geschehen kan

They shall also see to it that the pastors and chaplains sing the epistles and gospels before the altar not in German, but in the old customary melody in Latin, and then afterward, for the simple folk's sake, read them in German, that they may understand it, which in singing cannot be done [...]

Wittenberg's German tones. Halle's order of 1543 takes the opposite view. It lets the epistles and gospels be sung in Latin "for the youth's sake", "yet it shall also be free to have them sung in German, as at Wittenberg, and especially when one hath a good melody" (Sehling 2, p. 436). Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 prints its German gospels with notes, to be sung "in German toward the people with a loud voice" (Sehling 6/2, p. 813).

4.6 Gradual, alleluia and tract

4.6.1 Luther: two verses, and the alleluia always

The Formula missae keeps "the gradual of two verses together with the alleluia, or either". The long Lenten graduals and tracts are to be sung "by whoever will, in his own house". The alleluia is not to be dropped in Lent, for "the alleluia is the perpetual voice of the church". Luther, Formula missae et communionis, 1523 (Sehling 1, p. 5):

> Quarto, graduale duorum versuum simul cum alleluia, vel utrum, iuxta arbitrium episcopi cantetur. Porro gradualia quadragesimalia et similia, quae duos versus excedunt, cantet quisquis velit in domo sua. In ecclesia nolumus tedio extingui spiritum fidelium. [...] Alleluia enim vox perpetua est ecclesiae, sicut perpetua est memoria passionis et victoriae eius.

Fourthly, let the gradual of two verses, together with the alleluia, or either of them, be sung at the bishop's discretion. But the Lenten graduals and the like, which exceed two verses, let whoso will sing in his own house. In the church we will not have the spirit of the faithful quenched with tedium. [...] For the alleluia is the perpetual voice of the church, as the memory of his passion and victory is perpetual.

Schleswig-Holstein and Hildesheim. Bugenhagen's orders for Schleswig-Holstein (1542) and Hildesheim (1544) take this over. They also shorten the melody: the children sing the alleluia with its verse, "but leaving out the many notes which one was wont to hang on at the end", that is, the jubilus. Before the gradual "a German psalm, taken from Scripture, or else a gradual that hath two verses". Schleswig-Holstein, Kirchenordnung, 1542 (Sehling 23, p. 90):

> Alleluia, welcker ein ewich stemme der Kercken ys, singen de kinder mit dem verse, doch uthgelaten de vele noten, de men plach hinden anthohengende, darna vor dat Gradual einen düdesschen Psalm, uth der Schrifft genamen, edder ock ein Gradual, dat men twe verse hefft.

The alleluia, which is a perpetual voice of the church, the children sing with the verse, yet leaving out the many notes which one was wont to hang on behind; thereafter, for the gradual, a German psalm taken out of Scripture, or else a gradual that hath two verses.

The Hildesheim text is word for word the same (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 853).

4.6.2 Kept where pure, by the school, or exchanged for a German psalm

The pattern. The gradual and alleluia survived as a choir piece in Latin, sung by the school between the epistle and gospel. In the parishes and villages they were exchanged for a German psalm or hymn:

- Brandenburg 1540: "the gradual, or in the parishes a German psalm in place of the gradual; then the alleluia and sequence, or as occasion serveth a tract, in Latin" (Sehling 3, p. 71).
- Pfalz-Neuburg 1543: the choir "sings again in Latin a gradual or a tract or an alleluia with a sequence, as the order of the season giveth". "Where there is no choir, the priest may sing or say it himself, and the people meanwhile a good German spiritual song" (Sehling 13, p. 71).
- Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533: the priest "may read an alleluia with its verse in Latin, or a gradual taken from holy Scripture; the same the scholars may also sing in Latin" (Sehling 11, p. 195).
- Weißenburg 1528: "the schoolmaster sings a short alleluia or gradual" (Sehling 11, p. 659).

Where the gradual was not pure. The Ansbach Auctuarium of 1548, an Interim order, lists German psalms to be sung where the gradual or alleluia "were not pure, as commonly de sanctis". Brandenburg-Ansbach-Kulmbach, Auctuarium, 1548 (Interim order; Sehling 11, p. 329):

> An den andern feirtagen und festen, die nit raine oder keine sequenz haben, sol man das gradual oder Alleluia singen. Wo aber die nit rain weren, als gemainlich de sanctis, an dero stat sing man dieser psalm einen: Ein feste burg ist unser Gott etc. Wer Gott nit mit uns diese zeit etc. Wol dem, der in Gottes forcht steht etc. Aus tiefer not etc.

On the other holy days and feasts which have no sequence, or none pure, one shall sing the gradual or alleluia. But where these were not pure, as commonly de sanctis, let one of these psalms be sung in their stead: "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God" etc., "If God Had Not Been on Our Side" etc., "Happy the Man Who Feareth God" etc., "From Depths of Woe I Cry to Thee" etc.

The tract. The tract, the Lenten substitute for the alleluia, appears in Brandenburg 1540, Pfalz-Neuburg 1543, Pomerania 1569 and Hof 1592. Luther's ruling notwithstanding, these orders kept the Lenten change.

4.6.3 German graduals

Müntzer and Erfurt. These (Müntzer's Radical Reformation offices and Erfurt's Lutheran reprint) have German prose graduals and alleluias. Erfurt's Passion gradual is an example. Erfurt, Deutsches Kirchenamt, 1525, office of the Passion (Sehling 2, p. 380):

> Gradual: Christus ist worden für uns gehorsam bis zum tode, zum tode des creuzes. Darumb hat in gott auch erhöhet und hat im einen namen gegeben, der uber alle namen ist. Alleluia : Alleluia. Christus ist gehorsam worden seinem vater bis in tod, und in tod des kreuzes.

Gradual: Christ became for us obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name. Alleluia: Alleluia. Christ became obedient to his Father unto death, even the death of the cross.

This is Christus factus est, the gradual of Maundy Thursday and Palm Sunday, in German.

Nürnberg's new tone. In Nürnberg, by the report sent to Goslar in 1528, "the gradual is sung, that is again a verse or two from the Psalter or another book of the Old Testament, in a tone made for it". The tone was new, not the old melisma (Sehling 7/2.2, p. 230).

Calenberg-Göttingen. The German alleluias of Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 are printed with notes. For the Purification it puts the Nunc dimittis hymn "Mit fried und freud ich far dahin" "for the gradual and alleluia" (Sehling 6/2, pp. 813, 823).

4.6.4 The sequence

The sequence, the hymn after the alleluia, was cut back to a few "pure" texts for the chief feasts and farced with German stanzas. This is treated in Chapter 8, §8.8.2–8.8.3.

The sequences as marks of the great feasts are treated in Chapter 12, §12.10.4.

4.7 The offertory

4.7.1 Rejected with the offertory prayers

For Luther the offertory chant belonged to "that whole abomination" that begins at the offertory, where "almost everything soundeth and smelleth of oblation" (Sehling 1, p. 5). Most orders dropped the chant together with the offertory prayers (the canon minor):

- Volprecht's Nürnberg Mass (1524): "The offertory is never said, because Christ was once offered for our sins" (Sehling 11, p. 39).
- The Nürnberg parish Mass (1524): it is left out with the canon minor (Sehling 11, p. 47).
- Prussia 1525: "the offertory, secret, canon minor and maior are necessarily left out" (Sehling 4, p. 32).

Nürnberg, Deutsche Messe of Prior Volprecht, 1524 (Sehling 11, p. 39):

> Credo s[em]p[er] dicit[ur]. Interim praeparatur calix. Offertorium nunquam d[ici]tur, quia Christus semel pro peccatis nostris oblatus est.

The Creed is always said. Meanwhile the chalice is prepared. The offertory is never said, because Christ was once offered for our sins.

4.7.2 Kept as a sung text from Scripture

The Latin offertory kept. A few orders kept the Latin offertory chant as a text from Scripture, sung by the choir while the bread and wine were prepared:

- Wittenberg 1525 lists it among the parts sung (§4.3.1).
- Brandenburg 1540 has "the offertory of the Sunday or feast" after the sermon, "but in the villages one may sing a German psalm for it" (Sehling 3, p. 71).
- Amberg 1550: "Chorus: Offertorium de tempore" (Sehling 13, p. 286).
- The Ansbach Auctuarium (1548), an Interim order, has the schoolmaster sing "the Latin offertory noted in the same Mass, since they are all taken from holy Scripture", or a Latin responsory. Brandenburg-Ansbach-Kulmbach, Auctuarium, 1548 (Interim order; Sehling 11, p. 330):

> Sobald die predig ir end hat, soll der schulmaister das lateinisch offertorium, so in derselben meß verzaichnet, singen (dann sie alle aus der hailig schrift genommen) oder aber ein responsorium lateinisch

As soon as the sermon hath its end, the schoolmaster shall sing the Latin offertory that is noted in the same Mass (for they are all taken out of holy scripture), or else a Latin responsory […]

German offertories. Müntzer (Radical Reformation) and the Erfurt Kirchenamt translate the offertory into German. Erfurt has an offertory for Easter ("Die erde hat erbidmet und geruget, do got wolt zum urteil auferstehn. Alleluia", Terra tremuit) and for Pentecost (Confirma hoc, Deus). In the Trinity office it has "a psalm or else a spiritual hymn of praise" "for the offertory" (Sehling 2, pp. 376–378).

4.7.3 A German psalm, or the Creed, in its place

The usual Lutheran solution. The usual Lutheran solution was a German psalm or hymn "an stat des offertorii", sung while the elements were prepared and the communicants came forward:

- Naumburg 1527: "Aus tiefer Not" (Sehling 2, p. 60).
- Calenberg-Göttingen 1542: "In place of the offertory one shall sing with the congregation a German psalm", and at Christmas "Ein kindelein so löbelich" (Sehling 6/2, pp. 814, 821).
- Dortmund 1554: "a fitting hymn of praise for the offertory" (Sehling 21, p. 209).
- Lippe 1525: "for the offertory one singeth a spiritual song, that is a psalm" (Sehling 22, p. 568).
- In Bugenhagen's orders the creed hymn "Wir glauben all" after the sermon served as the offertory (Chapter 8, §8.9.2, §8.11.3).

4.8 The Proper Preface

The full texts of every Proper Preface in the corpus are in Appendix 4.A. This section deals with three questions:

- whether the Preface was kept at all;
- on which days a proper Preface was used, and which;
- who sang it, in which language and to which tune.

The Preface in the order of the Mass, required, optional or festal, is treated in Chapter 2, §2.10.1, and the proper prefaces as marks of a feast's rank in Chapter 12, §12.10.3.

4.8.1 Kept, shortened or dropped

Luther, 1523. The Formula missae keeps the dialogue and the common Preface but cuts it off at *per Christum Dominum nostrum and joins the Words of Institution to it. The Words are sung "in the same tone of voice" as the Preface. Volprecht and the Nürnberg parish Mass of 1524 follow (see Chapter 7, §7.3.2, §7.7.1). The Nürnberg Mass marks the cut with the rubric "Hic finitur prefatio" (Sehling 11, p. 47).

Luther, 1526. The Deutsche Messe drops the Preface and puts a paraphrase of the Our Father and an exhortation in its place. Orders that followed the Deutsche Messe closely did the same:

- The Prussian order of 1544 says plainly "In place of the preface, which shall be abolished and left out", the paraphrase follows. Prussia, Kirchenordnung, 1544 (Sehling 4, p. 65):

> An stat der prefation, welche abgethan und ausbleiben sölle, volgt balde ein offentliche vermanung und paraphrasis des vater unsers, die der priester conceptis ader prescriptis verbis thun sölle, wol laut und vernemblich

In place of the preface, which shall be done away and left out, there followeth straightway a public exhortation and paraphrase of the Our Father, which the priest shall make in conceived or in prescribed words, right loud and audibly [...]

- The Prussian order of 1568 repeats it (Sehling 4, p. 81).
- The Strasbourg agendas after 1525 (Moderate Reformed) have no Preface or Sanctus (Sehling 20/1, p. 63, editor's introduction).
- The Engerhafe liturgy in East Frisia (1583) replaces the Preface with Psalm 111 (Sehling 7/1, p. 677, n. 20).

The compromise of 1539. Duke Henry's Saxon order allowed the exhortation and paraphrase to be dropped "sometimes, especially on the feasts", and the Latin Preface sung instead. Albertine Saxony, Kirchenordnunge zum anfang (Duke Henry's Agende), 1539 (Sehling 1, p. 271):

> Auch mag man zuzeiten, sonderlich auf die festa, die paraphrasim und vermanung dem volk furzulesen, nachlassen, und dafur die latinische prefation singen, darauf das latinische sanctus

One may also at times, especially on the feasts, forgo reading the paraphrase and exhortation to the people, and instead thereof sing the Latin preface, and thereupon the Latin Sanctus [...]

The usual Lutheran rule. This became the usual Lutheran rule: Preface on feasts, exhortation on ordinary Sundays, or Preface "if time allows". Examples:

- Hatzkerode about 1534: "on the great feasts the praefatio de festo shall be sung in its stead, with the customary Latin Sanctus" (Sehling 2, p. 587).
- Halberstadt: "On the high feasts the pastor singeth the preface" (Sehling 2, p. 484).
- Pomerania 1535 and 1542: "not always, but when one will, especially at the high feasts" (Sehling 4, pp. 341, 357).
- Mecklenburg 1552: "if the time allows" (Sehling 5, p. 199).
- Lüneburg 1564: "in feasts, in the towns" (Sehling 6/1, p. 546).
- Stralsund 1555: "which may also at times be left out, as the time requireth" (Sehling 4, p. 551).

Shortened at the cantor's discretion. Hamburg 1556 allows the Preface to be shortened, "but so that the cantor and the priest have agreed on it beforehand". Hamburg, Kirchenordnung, 1556 (Sehling 5, p. 552):

> darna de prefation latine singen na dem altar gewendet. Idt mag ock wol underwilen de prefation vorkortet werden, averst doch dat de cantor und prester des falles eines geworden vorhenne. Dat sanctus schall stedes naher gesungen werden, pro ratione festorum et dominicarum, underwilen düdesch, Jesaia dem propheten etc.

[…] thereafter sing the preface in Latin, turned to the altar. The preface may also well at times be shortened, but so that the cantor and the priest be agreed beforehand of the case. The Sanctus shall always be sung after it, according to the feasts and Sundays, sometimes in German, "Isaiah, Mighty Seer in Days of Old", etc.

4.8.2 Which days: the temporal cycle

The core set. Where a proper Preface was kept, the core set was the de tempore Prefaces of the feasts of Christ: Christmas, Epiphany, Easter, Ascension, Pentecost and Trinity, with the common Preface for other days. The second Saxon visitation instruction of 1539 names exactly this set, to be taken "out of the Latin missals". Albertine Saxony, Instruktion zur zweiten Visitation, 1539 (Sehling 1, p. 281):

> Prefation in der messe, oder communion, prefatio in natali domini, prefatio in epiphania domini, prefatio in festo paschali, prefatio in festo ascensionis domini, prefatio in festo pentecostes, prefatio de s. trinitate. Item prefationem communem, mögen die pfarherr aus den latinischen missaln nemen

The preface in the mass, or communion: the preface on the Lord's Nativity, the preface on the Lord's Epiphany, the preface on the feast of Easter, the preface on the feast of the Lord's Ascension, the preface on the feast of Pentecost, the preface of the Holy Trinity. Item the common preface, the pastors may take out of the Latin missals […]

Shorter sets. Some orders used fewer:

- Lippe 1571 prints only Christmas, Easter, Pentecost and Michaelmas, for "the high four-times feasts" (Viergezeiten) (Sehling 21, p. 410).
- Grubenhagen 1581 has Christmas, Easter, Pentecost and Trinity, "where there are schools and boys" (Sehling 6/2, p. 1073).
- Osnabrück 1618 has Michaelmas, Christmas, Easter and Pentecost (Sehling 7/1, pp. 268–269).
- Kurland 1570 has German Prefaces for Christmas, Easter and Pentecost, sung "for variation" on the high feasts instead of the daily one (§4.A.14).

Two forms for each feast. The Pfalz-Neuburg order (in its 1547 form) says that each high feast has two Prefaces, "a solemnis and a *dominicalis". These are the solemn and the Sunday tones of the Missal. It tells the priest to write them out with their notes and keep them on the desk. Pfalz-Neuburg, Kirchenordnung of Ottheinrich, [1547] (Sehling 14, p. 109):

> und die prefation gantz oder ein stuck darauß nach der gelegenheyt singen oder lesen. Es seind aber auf etliche hohe fest, Osterfest, Auffart, Pfingsten, Trinitatis etc., besondere prefation, von idem fest zwo, ein solemnis und eine dominicalis, die mag ein priester außnotiren oder außschreiben und auf dem pult alwegen neben der kirchenordnung haben

[…] and sing or read the preface, whole or a piece thereof, as occasion serveth. But for certain high feasts, Easter, Ascension, Pentecost, Trinity etc., there are special prefaces, of each feast two, a solemn and a Sunday one, which a priest may note out or write out and have always on the desk beside the church order […]

Trinity on ordinary Sundays. For ordinary Sundays the northern Bugenhagen orders chose the Trinity Preface, because it "was made against the Arians", "as the Nicene Creed also was". Hamburg, Hamburger Kirchenordnung, 1529 (Sehling 5, p. 528):

> und in den groten festen, de sunderge prefation hebben, und sus wen he wil up etlike sondage mit der prefatien trinitatis, de wedder de Arrianer, alse ock das Symbolum Nicenum gemaket is, schal he anheven latinisch de prefatie dominus vobiscum und singen se bet an dat ende. Darup singe dat chor ein latinsch sanctus.

[…] and on the great feasts which have a special preface, and otherwise when he will on certain Sundays with the preface of the Trinity, which was made against the Arians, as was also the Nicene Creed, he shall begin in Latin the preface Dominus vobiscum, and sing it unto the end. Thereupon let the choir sing a Latin Sanctus.

Wolfenbüttel 1543 gives the same reason, and goes further. It allows Latin Prefaces in the towns at Christmas, Easter and Pentecost, and on other feasts the Trinity Preface. Every other Preface, the common one included, is to be "simply let lie as unneeded". Wolfenbüttel, Christlike kerken-ordeninge im lande Brunschwig, 1543 (Sehling 6/1, p. 59):

> de prester mach denne ock dar wol singen de latinische praefatio vam Wynachten-, vam Paschen- und Pinxten-feste und up andere feste de prefatio de sancta trinitate, wenn man wil, welcke praefatio gemaket is wedder de Arrianer, andere praefation, ock de quotidiana, lasse men slichtes ligen alse unnödich etc. Up de latinische praefatio mach de ganze kercke frölick dat düdesch Sanctus singen.

[...] the priest may then also well sing there the Latin preface of the feast of Christmas, of Easter and of Pentecost, and on other feasts the preface of the Holy Trinity, if one will, which preface was made against the Arians; other prefaces, the quotidiana too, let them simply lie as needless, etc. Upon the Latin preface the whole church may joyfully sing the German Sanctus.

Herford (1532) has the rule that a feast takes its own Preface, and a Sunday, if any, the Trinity: "wil me ock up de sondage Prefatien holden, so schal me singen de Prefatien de Trinitate" (Sehling 21, p. 176). So does Wittenberg's own town order of 1533: "on the feasts … with the preface of the feast, or else on the Sunday with the preface de sancta trinitate, if one will" (Sehling 1, p. 704).

Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 gives its model Sunday Mass a shortened German Easter Preface instead (§4.A.6, German 5).

The seasons are almost absent. No order in the corpus prescribes a Preface for Advent apart from Müntzer's tradition (Müntzer himself belongs to the Radical Reformation). That tradition uses the reworded Marian Preface (§4.A.10). Lent and Passiontide have a Preface only in Dortmund and in the Müntzer tradition (§4.A.4–4.A.5). Grubenhagen added a new German Passion Preface from Isaiah 53 for Maundy Thursday (§4.A.12).

4.8.3 Saints' days: Michaelmas, the Virgin and the Apostles

The purity rule. Saints' Prefaces were generally excluded under the rule that only "pure" texts may be sung:

- Halle 1543: "at great feasts the Latin prefaces remain, which are Christian and agreeable to Scripture" (Sehling 2, p. 436).
- Corvinus's order for Lippe (1542): "the prefaces that are pure" (Sehling 21, p. 345).

The exceptions are few:

- Michaelmas. The common Preface is the festal Preface for Michaelmas in Hoya 1581, Osnabrück 1618 and Lippe 1571. Lippe's German version for the villages replaces the choirs of angels with the forgiveness of sins (§4.A.1, §4.A.13). Osnabrück sings it "on Michaelmas and other high feasts".
- The Virgin and the Apostles. Dortmund 1554 alone translates the Marian Preface, for five feasts including the Assumption, and the Preface of the Apostles. It turns the Apostles' protection into the Apostles' "doctrine" (§4.A.10–4.A.11).
- Müntzer's tradition (Müntzer himself Radical Reformation) keeps the Marian Preface's text but strikes Mary's feast from it, and uses it for Advent and Trinity (§4.A.10).

4.8.4 Who sang it, in what language, to which tune

The celebrant sings, the choir answers. Everywhere the Preface belongs to the priest at the altar, turned to the altar (Hamburg 1556). The choir (the school) answers the dialogue and sings the Sanctus. Kurland 1570 and Osnabrück 1618 mark the parts "Der diener" / "Das chor" and "Minister" / "Chorus" (§4.A.14; Sehling 7/1, p. 268). In Osnabrück the Sanctus that follows "is sung or played on the organ" (Sehling 7/1, p. 269). In Wolfenbüttel 1543 "the whole church" sings a German Sanctus to the Latin Preface (above).

Latin in the towns, German in the villages. Language followed the school:

- Mecklenburg's Mass order of 1545 has the pastor sing the Preface in Latin or German in the towns, "in the villages German".
- It also insists on one tune: "these notes and no other", against "the useless motley singing that every man maketh after his own head". Mecklenburg, Ordeninge der misse, 1545 (Sehling 5, p. 154):

> mach de kerckhere singen in den steden to tiden latin edder düdesch de prefation, wo hir na folget. Up den dörperen schal men düdesch singen, unde sündergen in den festen nicht laten anstan. De trinitate ock under tiden düdesch. [...] De kerckheren willen ock düsse noten so leren, wo hirna geschreven. Unde de prefationes ock de verba consecrationis, > mit duessen und neuen anderen noten singen. Dat unnutte bunte singent, dat ein ider na sinem koppe maket, buwet nicht in der gemene.

[…] the pastor may in the towns at times sing the preface, in Latin or in German, as here followeth. In the villages one shall sing it in German, and especially on the feasts not let it stand over. [The preface] of the Trinity also at times in German. […] The pastors will also learn these notes, as hereafter written; and sing the prefaces and also the words of consecration with these and no other notes. The useless motley singing which every man maketh after his own head edifieth not in the congregation.

- Lippe 1571 prints each Latin Preface with a German one beside it "for the villages" (§4.A.2, §4.A.6, §4.A.8, §4.A.13).
- Grubenhagen 1581 keeps the Latin Prefaces only "where there are schools and boys", and gives its new German Isaiah Preface "for the simple layman" (§4.A.12).
- Kurland 1570 begins the communion "with the customary noted German preface", "since the Latin Mass is abolished" (Sehling 5, p. 89).

The tunes. The Latin Prefaces kept their Missal tones:

- Duke Henry's order of 1539 refers the pastors to "the notes of the Latin Missal". Sehling's editor gives this from the first edition (Sehling 1, p. 89).
- The 1539 instruction tells pastors to take the Prefaces "out of the Latin missals" (above).
- Amberg 1555/57 wants them sung "German or Latin, as they are in use in other evangelical places and set to the customary notes" (Sehling 13, p. 291).
- The Pfalz-Neuburg order distinguishes the solemn tone from the Sunday tone (above).
- Hof 1592 has the Preface sung on the chief feasts "from Lossius's book", that is the Psalmodia of Lucas Lossius (Sehling 11, p. 473).
- Sehling's editors identify the notated Prefaces of Calenberg-Göttingen, Grubenhagen and the other Lower Saxon orders with the standard melodies in the Handbuch der deutschen evangelischen Kirchenmusik.

The German Prefaces were sung to the same Preface tone adapted to German. So were the Words of Institution. Prussia 1544 has them sung "in nota prefationis, as they were also sung with us before in that way" (Sehling 4, p. 65).

4.9 The communion chant (communio)

4.9.1 Optional, and soon replaced

Luther. The Formula missae leaves the communion chant free: "if one will sing the communion, let it be sung". The Agnus Dei is sung during the communion itself (Sehling 1, p. 6). Luther, Formula missae et communionis, 1523 (Sehling 1, p. 6):

> VI. Deinde communicet tum sese, tum populum, interim cantetur Agnus dei. […] VII. Si communionem cantare libet, cantetur.

VI. Then let him communicate both himself and the people; meanwhile let the Agnus Dei be sung. […] VII. If it please to sing the communion, let it be sung.

Orders that kept the Latin communio.

- Volprecht (1524): "Communio de quo sit missa", the communion of whatever Mass is being said (Sehling 11, p. 39).
- The Ansbach visitation order of 1536: "where there are Latin schools", "the introit, Kyrie, Gloria, Et in terra, Patrem, Sanctus, Agnus Dei and communion in Latin" (Sehling 11, p. 326).
- Brandenburg 1540: "the Latin preface, the Sanctus, the communion, and further the conclusion" (Sehling 3, p. 71).

German communio. Müntzer (Radical Reformation) and the Erfurt Kirchenamt have a German communio for each office. For Easter it is "Unser osterlamp Christus ist geopfert fur uns. Alleluia" (Pascha nostrum). For Christmas it is "Alle grenze der erden haben gesehn den heiland unsers gottes" (Viderunt omnes) (Sehling 2, pp. 376, 379). In the Advent office "a psalm or other spiritual hymn of praise" is sung "for the communion" (Sehling 2, p. 379).

Replaced by hymns. Elsewhere the slot was filled by the communion hymns and the Agnus Dei, often several in turn "according as the communicants be many or few". These are treated in Chapter 8, §8.14–8.15.

4.9.2 Polyphonic communions and festal motets

Motets "sub communione". In the larger town churches the communion was covered by motets, Latin and German, often chosen to fit the feast:

- Wittenberg 1533: "Pange lingua in Latin and the like, and also German songs of the feast, until the communion is over" (Sehling 1, p. 705).
- Nördlingen 1555: on Maundy Thursday "sub communione, Pange lingua in mensural music". At Pentecost the Sanctus paschale may be sung "in place of 'Jesaia' and 'Jesus Christus'" (Sehling 12, pp. 321, 325).
- Hof 1592: the fullest list. For each Sunday and feast it names a motet "sub communione". For the Sunday after Easter (Quasimodogeniti) it gives "Pascha nostrum immolatus est Christus, a 5, Clemens non Papa", which is the text of the Easter communio, in polyphony. "If these do not suffice, as also at other times whenever the number of communicants requireth it", it adds "Schaff in mir, Gott, ein reines Herz", a 6, by Leonhard Schröter, or O sacrum convivium, a 6, by Victoria. Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592, Dominica Quasimodogeniti (Sehling 11, pp. 461–462):

> Sub communione: Pascha nostrum immolatus est Christus, A 5. Clemens Non Papa, item: Dum transisset sabbatum. Vaet. A 6. His non sufficientibus, (sicut etiam alias, quotiescunque multitudo communicantium requirit), additur Schaff in mir Gott ein reines herz. A 6. Leonhardi Schroteri, vel: O sacrum convivium. A 6. L. de Victoria.

During the communion: Pascha nostrum immolatus est Christus, for five voices, by Clemens non Papa; also Dum transisset sabbatum, by Vaet, for six voices. If these suffice not (as also at other times, as often as the number of the communicants requireth it), there is added "Schaff in mir, Gott, ein reines Herz", for six voices, by Leonhard Schröter, or O sacrum convivium, for six voices, by L. de Victoria.

The organ. Several orders let the organ play during the communion, or alternate with the hymns:

- Regensburg 1553 (Sehling 13, p. 421);
- the Schönburg lordships (1542), "only on the high feasts" (Sehling 2, p. 171);
- Engerhafe 1583 (Sehling 7/1, p. 681).

4.10 The music: old chant, cut chant, new tones, polyphony and organ

4.10.1 The old melodies kept

Latin propers. Where the Latin propers were kept, they were sung to the plainchant of the old books:

- the introits, graduals and alleluias of the Gradual;
- the Prefaces in the Missal tones (§4.8.4).

The orders seldom say so outright, because it went without saying. They speak of "the customary notes", "as hitherto", "as was customary". Two late orders insist on the old melody against innovation:

- Brandenburg 1573 requires the epistles and gospels "in the old customary melody in Latin" (§4.5.3).
- Mecklenburg 1545 requires the Prefaces and Verba "with these and no other notes" (§4.8.4).

The Lossius standard. From mid-century the Latin chant was standardized for Lutheran use in Lucas Lossius's *Psalmodia (1553). The Rostock order of about 1560 makes it the norm for all the city's churches. Rostock, Conformitas ceremoniarum in singulis templis ecclesiae Rostochiensis, 1560–1576 (Sehling 5, p. 288):

> Es wird für gut angesehen und notig eracht, das man in allen kirchen halten sol Lucae Lossii psalmodia und sol sich das chor darnach richten. Nach dem introitum sol das kyrie gesungen und geschlahen werden.

It is held good and deemed needful that in all churches Lucas Lossius's Psalmodia be kept, and that the choir order itself thereafter. After the introit the Kyrie shall be sung and played.

Other references to Lossius. Hof 1592 sings the gradual and sequence "from the great Missal or from Lossius's book", and the festal Prefaces "from Lossius's book" (Sehling 11, p. 473). On the authorized cantionals of Spangenberg and Lossius see Chapter 8, §8.18.6.

4.10.2 The old melodies cut

The orders also trimmed the chant:

- Graduals: Luther's rule of two verses for the gradual, with the long Lenten graduals sent home (§4.6.1).
- The alleluia's jubilus: Bugenhagen's removal of the long melisma at the end of the alleluia, "the many notes that one was wont to hang on behind" (§4.6.1).
- Introit psalm: Müntzer's (Radical Reformation) whole psalm for the introit, against the single verse of the medieval introit (§4.3.2).
- Pace: Calenberg-Göttingen's warning that the choir sing "right slowly, that it become not an ass's braying" (§4.4.2).

4.10.3 New tones for German texts

The new tones. German texts needed new tones, or adaptations of the old:

- Luther's epistle tone (eighth mode) and gospel tone (fifth mode) in the Deutsche Messe (§4.5.3).
- The Nürnberg gradual "in a tone made for it" (§4.6.3).
- Müntzer's notated German offices (Radical Reformation), sung "with the customary singing, in their own tongue" (§4.3.2).
- The German Prefaces of Calenberg-Göttingen, Grubenhagen and Lippe, set to the Preface tone (Appendix 4.A).

Copying the melodies. The Saxon visitors told pastors to copy the melodies for the German epistles and gospels "at the churches of the greater towns" (§4.5.3). Halle 1543 allows the German lessons "especially when one hath a good melody" (Sehling 2, p. 436).

4.10.4 Polyphony

Feasts in mensural music. From the 1530s the propers of the feasts were often sung in figural (mensural) music by the school choir. At Naumburg (1537/38) the cantor may "on the high feasts, when one singeth mensural music", sing "a good Latin motet" for the Et in terra or after the epistle, "and sometimes, when there is a goodly introit, the same before the 'Komm heiliger Geist'". Naumburg, Kirchen-Ordnung für die St. Wenzelskirche, 1537/1538 (Sehling 2, p. 71):

> an den hohen festen, wenn man mensur singet, mag der cantor wol bisweilen vor das et in terra etc. item für dem psalm, so man nach der epistel singet, eine gute lateinische muteten und bisweilen, wan ein schöner introitus ist, denselben vor das Kom heiliger geist singen.

[…] on the high feasts, when one singeth in measure, the cantor may well at times, instead of the Et in terra etc., and also instead of the psalm which one singeth after the epistle, sing a good Latin motet; and at times, when there is a goodly introit, the same instead of "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord".

"Choraliter or figuraliter". The formula "choraliter or figuraliter" is common in the later orders:

- Gottleuba 1567: "one singeth plainchant and sometimes figural" (Sehling 1, p. 567).
- Penig 1575: "the introit, the Kyries etc., Et in terra pax etc. choraliter, oftener also figuraliter" (Sehling 1, p. 634).
- Schwäbisch Hall 1543/1615: "an introit of the season, the Kyrie eleison, Gloria in excelsis Deo etc. sung in Latin, vel choraliter, vel figuraliter, as the season giveth occasion" (Sehling 17/1, p. 162).
- Nördlingen 1579: on the high feasts the introit is "sung by the scholars figuraliter" (Sehling 12, p. 365).
- Schweinfurt 1576: after the epistle the choir, "if it hath adjutants", sings "something in four or five voices" (Sehling 11, p. 648).

Hof 1592. Hof's Ordo ecclesiasticus gives the fullest repertory. For each Sunday and feast it names the polyphonic introit, Mass setting, motets after the epistle and the gospel, a motet "in place of 'Nun bitten wir'", and the motets "sub communione". The composers are Senfl, Lassus ("Orlandus"), Clemens non Papa, Vaet, Victoria, Johann Walter, Isaac, Josquin, Galliculus, Dressler, Meiland and others. Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592, Christmas Day (Sehling 11, p. 457):

> In die Nativitatis Jesu Christi. Introitus: Puer natus est nobis A 4. Senffelii. Missa super Praeter rerum seriem. A 6. Ludovici Daser. Post epistolam: Quem vidistis pastores. A 6. L. de Victoria. Post evangelium: Resonet in laudibus. A 5. Orlandi. Loco Nun bitten wir: Exultet coelum. Orlandus. A 5. Sub communione: Sanctus prioris missae.

On the day of the Nativity of Jesus Christ. Introit: Puer natus est nobis, for four voices, by Senfl. The Mass upon Praeter rerum seriem, for six voices, by Ludwig Daser. After the epistle: Quem vidistis pastores, for six voices, by L. de Victoria. After the gospel: Resonet in laudibus, for five voices, by Orlando. In place of "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray": Exultet coelum, by Orlando, for five voices. During the communion: the Sanctus of the foregoing Mass.

The plain Sundays at Hof. Beside this, Hof's ordinary Sunday table uses German introits and chorale Kyries (§4.4.4). The festal Latin polyphony and the German chorale service stand side by side in the same order.

Rhau's collections. Sehling's editors note that Georg Rhau's printed collections of 1539–1545 supplied Lutheran choirs with polyphonic introits, alleluias and sequences (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 1085).

4.10.5 The organ

Organ and choir. The organ entered the propers in alternation with the choir:

- Heilbronn 1543: "every Sunday hath its own introit, which shall be sung to the organ" (Sehling 17/1, p. 322).
- Regensburg 1553: the organist "plays the introit" with the ordinary (Sehling 13, p. 421).
- Schweinfurt 1576: the organist begins the introit "which the choir singeth after" (Sehling 11, p. 648).
- Hof 1592: the organ plays the introit "as far as the verse" in alternation with three choirs (§4.4.5).
- Osnabrück 1618: the Sanctus after the Preface "is sung or played on the organ" (Sehling 7/1, p. 269).

Silent seasons. Hof stops the organ from Advent II until Christmas Eve (Sehling 11, p. 432).

4.11 Table by order

Key.

- L: Latin, sung by the school or choir.
- G: German prose proper.
- H: German hymn or psalm in its place.
- —: dropped.
- ?: not stated.
- "town / village": the order sets different practice.

Appendix 4.A The Proper Prefaces: texts and translations

This appendix gives every Proper Preface printed in the corpus, once for each distinct text, and lists the orders that carry it.

How the entries are laid out.

- The Latin, where the corpus has it. The Latin text is given first, from one witness, with the other witnesses listed and their variants noted. The English is translated from the Latin.
- The German translations. Each distinct German or Low German translation follows, with notes on where it shortens, adds to or changes the Latin.
- German where the Latin is not in the corpus. Some prefaces survive only in German: Lent, the Cross, the Blessed Virgin and the Apostles. The Latin of these is not printed anywhere in the corpus, so the English is made from the German. The note names the Latin preface of the Roman Missal that the German renders.
- New German compositions. Prefaces that are new German texts, not translations, are given last (§4.A.13–4.A.16).

Where the Latin set comes from. The Latin texts all belong to one Lower Saxon and Westphalian chain of orders:

- Lüneburg 1564;
- Wolfenbüttel 1569;
- Grubenhagen and Hoya 1581;
- Verden 1606;
- Osnabrück (1588) 1618;
- Lippe 1571.

These orders print the prefaces "with notes" at the end of the order or of the Mass. Sehling's editors refer them to the Roman Missal (Röm. Meßbuch) and to the Missale Hildensemense of 1511 (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 855, n. 33).

Prefaces mentioned but not printed. Several orders printed prefaces that Sehling's edition does not reproduce:

- Mecklenburg 1540/45 ("Folgen Präfationes, 35 Seiten, mit Noten");
- Mecklenburg 1552;
- Pomerania 1542 ("Folgen 16 praefationes mit Noten");
- Mansfeld 1580 ("eine Reihe von Präfationes");
- Buxtehude 1565, which has Christmas, Epiphany, Easter, Ascension, Pentecost, Trinity and the Quotidiana;
- Oldenburg 1573.

Their texts are not in the corpus. Where their headings are given, they match the Lower Saxon set.

Already in Chapter 7. The common Preface in German is also rendered in Chapter 7, for Kantz, Worms (Moderate Reformed), Volprecht, Döber and Bremen. Those renderings are not repeated here.

4.A.1 The dialogue and the common Preface (Quotidiana, Praefatio communis)

The common Preface frames every proper one. After Vere dignum … aeterne Deus the proper text is inserted, and it ends with its own Et ideo or Per quem clause. In the Lower Saxon orders the common Preface is also the festal Preface of Michaelmas (29 September) in Hoya 1581, Osnabrück 1618 and Lippe 1571. This is the only sanctoral use of a Latin Preface in the corpus (§4.8.3).

Latin witnesses:

- Lüneburg 1564 (Sehling 6/1, p. 574);
- Wolfenbüttel 1569 (6/1, p. 180);
- Verden 1606 (7/1, p. 206);
- Hoya 1581, "In die Michaelis" (6/2, p. 1155);
- Osnabrück (1588) 1618, "In die Michaelis" (7/1, pp. 268–269);
- Lippe 1571, "In die Michaelis" (21, p. 411).

Luther's Formula missae (1523) and the Nürnberg parish Mass of 1524 keep only the opening, cut off at per Christum Dominum nostrum (§4.8.1).

Wolfenbüttel, Kirchenordnung of Duke Julius, 1569, "Quotidiana" (Sehling 6/1, p. 180):

> Dominus vobiscum. Et cum spiritu tuo. Sursum corda. Habemus ad Dominum. Gratias agamus Domino Deo nostro. Dignum et iustum est. Vere dignum et iustum est, aequum et salutare, nos tibi semper et ubique gratias agere, Domine sancte Pater omnipotens, aeterne Deus, per Christum Dominum nostrum, per quem maiestatem tuam laudant angeli, adorant dominationes, tremunt potestates, coeli coelorumque virtutes ac beata seraphin socia exultatione concelebrant. Cum quibus et nostras voces ut admitti iubeas te precamur supplici confessione dicentes:

The Lord be with you. And with thy spirit. Lift up your hearts. We lift them up unto the Lord. Let us give thanks unto the Lord our God. It is meet and right. It is very meet and right, just and wholesome, that we should at all times and in all places give thanks unto thee, O holy Lord, Father almighty, everlasting God, through Christ our Lord; through whom the Angels praise thy majesty, the Dominions adore, the Powers tremble, the heavens and the Virtues of the heavens and the blessed Seraphim with one accord celebrate it with exultation. With whom we beseech thee that thou wouldest bid our voices also to be admitted, saying with lowly confession:

The German versions of the common Preface follow the Latin closely. The Low German of Dortmund 1554 is a fair example. Dortmund, Gottesdienstordnung, 1554, "Gemen edder Dechlike Prefatio" (Sehling 21, p. 211):

> Ja frylick (warlick) isset recht unde billick, behörlick unde ock heilsam, Dat wy dy, Here, O hilge Vader, Almechtige, ewige Godt, tho allen tyden unde steden dancken Dorch Christum, unsen Heren, Dorch welcken dyne Herlicheit de Engele laven, de herschopen anbeden, de Mechte fruchten. Dartho ock de Hemmele unde der hemmelen Krefften unde de hilligen Seraphim mit groter froude tho samen hochlick eeren unde prysen, Mit welcken wy bidden, du willest tholaten, unse stemme demötlick loffsingende (loffsegende).

Notes on the German.

- The Low German doubles some terms: "recht unde billick, behörlick unde ock heilsam" for dignum et iustum, aequum et salutare.
- Supplici confessione becomes "humbly singing praise" (or "speaking praise"). The printed alternatives in brackets are the order's own.

Dortmund also gives the short form that Luther had made. It runs "through Christ our Lord, who in the night when he was betrayed took the bread" straight into the Words of Institution (Sehling 21, pp. 209–210).

4.A.2 Christmas (Quia per incarnati Verbi mysterium)

Latin witnesses:

- Lüneburg 1564 (6/1, p. 574);
- Wolfenbüttel 1569 (6/1, p. 180);
- Grubenhagen 1581 (6/2, p. 1073; reads infulsit, the Missal's reading, for effulsit);

- Hoya 1581 (6/2, p. 1154; agnoscimus for cognoscimus);
- Verden 1606 (7/1, p. 206);
- Osnabrück (1588) 1618 (7/1, p. 269; caritatis for claritatis);
- Lippe 1571 (21, p. 410).

Lüneburg, Kirchenordnung, 1564, "In die nativitatis Christi" (Sehling 6/1, p. 574):

> Vere dignum et etc. Aeterne Deus, quia per incarnati verbi mysterium nova mentis nostrae oculis lux tuae claritatis effulsit, ut dum visibiliter Deum cognoscimus, per hunc in invisibilium amorem rapiamur. Et ideo cum angelis et archangelis, cum thronis et dominationibus, cumque omni militia coelestis exercitus hymnum gloriae tuae canimus, sine fine dicentes.

It is very meet, etc. … everlasting God: for by the mystery of the Word made flesh the new light of thy brightness hath shone upon the eyes of our mind; that while we know God visibly, we may by him be caught up into the love of things invisible. And therefore with Angels and Archangels, with Thrones and Dominions, and with all the company of the heavenly host, we sing the hymn of thy glory, evermore saying:

German (1): Müntzer's translation (Radical Reformation). Müntzer's Deutsch evangelisch Messe (1524) has this translation. So do the Erfurt Deutsches Kirchenamt (1525; Sehling 2, p. 379), Calenberg-Göttingen (1542; 6/2, p. 821) and Lippe 1571, "auff den Dörffern an Weihenachten" (21, p. 410). Allstedt, Thomas Müntzer, Deutsch evangelisch Messe, 1524, Christmas office (Radical Reformation; Sehling 1, pp. 501–502):

> Dann durch das geheimnis des vormenschten wortes ist das neue licht deiner klarheit den augen unsers gemüthes erschinen. Auf das so wir got sichtbarlich erkennen, mügen kummen zu dem erkentnis der unsichbaren gotheit. Dorumb singen wir mit allen engeln und erzengein, und mit den, do got innen hirschet, dozu mit aller himlischer geselschaft, singen wir eine leisen deinem preise one ende sagende.

Notes on Müntzer's German.

- Opening. It begins at quia. The opening is "as in the Mass of Advent" (§4.A.11).
- Per hunc in invisibilium amorem rapiamur ("may by him be caught up into the love of things invisible") becomes "may come to the knowledge of the invisible Godhead". The words "by him" are dropped, and love becomes knowledge.
- Cum thronis et dominationibus becomes "with them in whom God reigneth": the Thrones are read as the seat of God.
- Omni militia coelestis exercitus becomes "all the heavenly company".
- Hymnum gloriae tuae canimus becomes "sing we a Leise to thy praise". A Leise is a vernacular hymn ending Kyrieleis.
- Lippe 1571 substitutes "Lobgesang deines preyses", "a song of praise of thy glory", for eine leisen.

German (2): Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed). Strasbourg, Teutsche Meß und Tauff, 1524, "Etliche vorreden" (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 20/1, p. 133):

> So du in der oben angezeigten Prefation gelesen hast das wörtlin Ewiger Gott, so folget: Dann durch die geheymnuß des worts, so fleysch worden, ist ein neüwes liecht deiner klarheit den augen unsers gemüts erschinen, auff das, so wir Gott sichtbarlichen erkennen, das wir durch in zuor liebe unsichtbarer dingen gezogen werden, Deßhalb wir mit den Engeln und allen hymmlischen härscharen dir singen on underlaß den preyß deiner ere und sagent:

When thou hast read in the Preface shewn above the little word "everlasting God", there followeth: For by the mystery of the Word which was made flesh a new light of thy brightness hath appeared to the eyes of our mind; that, as we know God visibly, we may by him be drawn to the love of invisible things. Wherefore we with the Angels and all the heavenly hosts sing unto thee without ceasing the praise of thine honour, and say:

Notes on the Strasbourg German.

- This is a close translation, and it keeps per hunc ("durch in") and amorem ("liebe").
- It drops the Archangels, Thrones and Dominions.
- It renders sine fine "without ceasing".
- The rubric shows that the proper text was spliced into the common Preface after aeterne Deus, as in the Missal.

German (3): Dortmund (Low German). Dortmund, Gottesdienstordnung, 1554, "Vorrede tho Wynachten edder Midtwynter" (Sehling 21, p. 210):

> Wente dorch de geheimniss des fleschgewordenen Wordes (edder: went dorch de minschwerdinge dynes leven Söns) ys unses herten ogen ein nye licht dyner klarheit erschenen, Up dat, als wy Godt sichtlick erkennen, dorch em thor leve der unsichtliken dinge getagen werden, Darumme mit den Engelen unde Ertzengelen, mit den Thronen unde den Herschopen Unde ock mit aller Ridderschop des Hemmelschen heres singen wy loff dyner herlicheit, sunder ende seggende: Hillich etc.

Notes on the Dortmund Low German.

- This is a full and faithful translation, with every rank of angel kept.
- It offers an alternative, "by the incarnation of thy dear Son", for "the mystery of the Word made flesh".
- It renders mentis as "heart".

4.A.3 Epiphany (Quia cum Unigenitus tuus)

Latin witnesses: Lüneburg 1564 (6/1, p. 574), Wolfenbüttel 1569 (6/1, pp. 180–181) and Verden 1606 (7/1, pp. 206–207). Grubenhagen, Hoya, Osnabrück and Lippe have no Epiphany Preface.

Lüneburg, Kirchenordnung, 1564, "In die epiphanias" (Sehling 6/1, p. 574):

> Vere dignum et iustum etc. Aeterne Deus, qui cum unigenitus tuus in substantia nostrae mortalitatis apparuit, nova nos immortalitatis suae luce reparavit, et ideo cum angelis et archangelis, cum thronis et dominationibus, cumque omni militia coelestis exercitus hymnum gloriae tuae canimus, sine fine dicentes.

It is very meet and right, etc. … everlasting God: for when thine Only-begotten appeared in the substance of our mortality, he restored us by the new light of his immortality. And therefore with Angels and Archangels, with Thrones and Dominions, and with all the company of the heavenly host, we sing the hymn of thy glory, evermore saying:

Note. The Lower Saxon orders print qui cum where the Missal has quia cum.

German: Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed). Strasbourg, Teutsche Meß und Tauff, 1524, "Ein ander Vorred" (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 20/1, p. 133):

> Ewiger Gott, So dein eingeborner sun in dem wesen unser tödtlicheit erschinen ist, hat er uns mit dem neüwen liecht seiner untödtlichheyt widerbracht etc., Deshalb wir etc., wie oben steet.

Everlasting God, when thine only-begotten Son appeared in the being of our mortality, he restored us with the new light of his immortality, etc.; wherefore we, etc., as standeth above.

Note. The translation is exact; substantia becomes "wesen", "being".

German: Dortmund (Low German). Dortmund, Gottesdienstordnung, 1554, "Inn der Apenbaringe Christi edder der Köninge dach" (Sehling 21, p. 210):

> Wente do dyn eingebaren Söne yn gestalt (edder: yn der Substantien efft wesende) unser sterfflicheit ys erschennen, hefft he uns mit dem nyen lichte syner unsterfflicheit wedder maket. Darumme etc., wo baven.

For when thine only-begotten Son appeared in the form (or: in the substance or being) of our mortality, he made us anew with the new light of his immortality. Therefore, etc., as above.

4.A.4 Lent (Qui corporali ieiunio)

Witness: Dortmund 1554 only. No Latin Lenten Preface is printed in the corpus. The Low German renders the Missal's Qui corporali ieiunio vitia comprimis, mentem elevas, virtutem largiris et praemia, faithfully. Dortmund, Gottesdienstordnung, 1554, "Inn der Vasten" (Sehling 21, p. 210):

> De du dorch dat lyfflike vastent de gebrecke vordrückest, dat herte erhevest, dogede unde lon uns gevest Dorch Christum, unsen Heren, Dorch welcken etc., wo nedden yn der gemenen vorrede.

[It is very meet … everlasting God:] Who by bodily fasting dost suppress our faults, lift up the heart, and give us virtue and reward; through Christ our Lord, through whom, etc., as below in the common Preface.

4.A.5 Passiontide and the Holy Cross (Qui salutem humani generis in ligno crucis)

Witnesses: Müntzer 1524 (Radical Reformation; 1, p. 502), Erfurt 1525 (2, p. 380), Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 (6/2, p. 826), Strasbourg 1524 (Moderate Reformed; 20/1, p. 121) and Dortmund 1554 (21, p. 210).

- Müntzer, Erfurt and Calenberg use it in the Mass "of the suffering of Christ".
- Strasbourg puts it in its ordinary Sunday Mass.
- Dortmund uses it "of the Cross and Passion of Christ".

No Latin text of this Preface is printed in the corpus. The German renders the Missal's Qui salutem humani generis in ligno crucis constituisti, ut unde mors oriebatur, inde vita resurgeret, et qui in ligno vincebat, in ligno quoque vinceretur.

German (1): Müntzer (Radical Reformation). Müntzer's translation is also in Erfurt and Calenberg. Allstedt, Thomas Müntzer, Deutsch evangelisch Messe, 1524, office of the Passion (Radical Reformation; Sehling 1, p. 502):

> Warlich es ist wirdig und recht billich und ist heilsam, das wir dir herr almechtiger ewiger got allzeit danksagen. Der du das heil des menschlichen geschlechtes am holz des kreuzes dargestelt hast, auf das do der tod her entsprossen war, solt wider erstehn das leben, durch Christum unseren herren, durch wilchen loben die engel dein herligk. etc.

Verily it is worthy and right, meet and wholesome, that we should at all times give thanks unto thee, O Lord, almighty everlasting God: who hast set forth the salvation of mankind on the wood of the cross, that whence death had sprung, thence life might rise again; through Christ our Lord, through whom the Angels praise thy glory, etc.

Note. Müntzer omits the last clause of the Latin, et qui in ligno vincebat, in ligno quoque vinceretur, "and that he who by a tree overcame might also by a tree be overcome". Erfurt and Calenberg follow him. Calenberg completes the ending with the full German common Preface, "durch welchen loben die engel … ohne ende sagende".

German (2): Strasbourg, Schwarz (Moderate Reformed). Diebold Schwarz's Strasbourg Mass expands that last clause with a reference to Adam and to the obedience shown on the tree. Strasbourg, Mass of Diebold Schwarz, 1524 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 20/1, p. 121):

> Es geburt sich furwor und ist billich, recht und heilsam, das wir dir alweg an allen orten danck sagen. O herr, heiliger, almechtiger vatter, ewiger Gott, der du unser heil durch das holtz des creutzs verschafft hast, uff das das leben von solchem keme, von welchem der todt uffgangen ist, und uff das der feyndt, so durch das holtz übertrettung uns alle in Adam überwunden hatt, wider uß gehorsam, so am holtz geleistet ist, bestritten wurde, durch Christum Jesum, unsern hern, durch welches maiestat und herlichkeyt dich die engel und alle hymmelsche ritterschafft loben, mit glichem frolocken samenthafft ryemen und preysen, zu welchen du auch unsere stymmen annemen wöllest, bitten wir mit undertheniger bekantnuß und sagen:

It is fitting in truth, and meet, right and wholesome, that we should always and in all places give thanks unto thee, O Lord, holy, almighty Father, everlasting God, who hast wrought our salvation by the wood of the cross, that life might come from that from which death had arisen; and that the enemy, who through the transgression at the tree had overcome us all in Adam, might be overcome again through the obedience rendered on the tree; through Christ Jesus our Lord, through whose majesty and glory the angels and all the heavenly chivalry praise thee, and with like exultation together extol and laud thee; with whom we pray thee to accept our voices also, with humble confession, and we say:

Notes on Schwarz's German.

- The Latin's "he who overcame by a tree" is glossed as the devil, who conquered "through the transgression at the tree" "in Adam".
- The Latin's "might be overcome by a tree" becomes "through obedience rendered on the tree". Christ's obedience is set against Adam's disobedience (Rom 5:19).
- The angelic orders of the common Preface are reduced to "the angels and all the heavenly chivalry".

German (3): Dortmund (Low German). Dortmund renders the whole Latin, the last clause included. Dortmund, Gottesdienstordnung, 1554, "Vam Crütze unde Lyden Christi" (Sehling 21, p. 210):

> De du des minschliken geslechts salicheit am holte des Crützes heffst gewercket, up dat, dar de dodt van her was gekamen, dar hen dat leevent wedder uth erstönde unde de dar im holte averwunnen hadde, wedderumme ock am holte averwunnen worde, Dorch Christum, unsen Heren, dorch welcken etc., nedden yn der gemenen vorrede.

[It is very meet … everlasting God:] Who hast wrought the salvation of mankind on the wood of the Cross, that whence death had come, thence life might rise again; and that he who had overcome by the tree might in turn be overcome on the tree; through Christ our Lord, through whom, etc., below in the common Preface.

4.A.6 Easter (Te quidem, Domine, omni tempore)

Latin witnesses:

- Lüneburg 1564 (6/1, p. 574);
- Wolfenbüttel 1569 (6/1, p. 181);
- Grubenhagen 1581 (6/2, p. 1074);
- Hoya 1581 (6/2, p. 1154). It prints verus est Deus for verus est agnus, which Sehling's editor takes for a misprint;
- Verden 1606 (7/1, p. 207);
- Osnabrück (1588) 1618 (7/1, p. 269);
- Lippe 1571 (21, p. 410).

Lüneburg, Kirchenordnung, 1564, "In die Paschae" (Sehling 6/1, p. 574):

> Vere dignum et iustum est, aequum et salutare, te quidem Domine, omni tempore, sed in hac potissimum die gloriosius praedicare, cum pascha nostrum immolatus est Christus. Ipse enim verus est agnus, qui abstulit peccata mundi, qui mortem nostram moriendo destruxit et vitam resurgendo reparavit, et ideo cum angelis et archangelis, cum thronis et dominationibus, cumque omni militia coelestis exercitus hymnum gloriae tuae canimus, sine fine dicentes.

It is very meet and right, just and wholesome, at all times indeed to praise thee, O Lord, but chiefly on this day more gloriously, when Christ our Passover was sacrificed. For he is the very Lamb, which hath taken away the sins of the world; who by dying hath destroyed our death, and by rising again hath restored life. And therefore with Angels and Archangels, with Thrones and Dominions, and with all the company of the heavenly host, we sing the hymn of thy glory, evermore saying:

German (1): Müntzer (Radical Reformation). This translation is in Müntzer 1524 and Erfurt 1525 (2, p. 376). It is also in Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 (6/2, p. 829) and Lippe 1571, "auff den Dörffern" (21, p. 410). The Low German Mass from Kiel has it too (Sehling 23, p. 56; rendered in Chapter 7, §7.11.2). Allstedt, Thomas Müntzer, Deutsch evangelisch Messe, 1524, office of the Resurrection (Radical Reformation; Sehling 1, p. 503):

> Warlich es ist wirdig und recht billich und gleich und ist heilsam, das wir herr almechtiger got dir allenthalben danksagen. Und sonderlich in dieser zeit höcher preisen, dann Christus unser osterlamp ist vor uns geopfert. Er ist das ware lamp gotes, wilchs do weg genommen hat die sunde der werlet. Der do durch seinen tod unsern ewigen tod vorstöret hat und als er auferstanden ist, hat er herwiderbracht das leben. Dorumb singen wir mit allen engeln der himlischen scharen ein leisen deines preises one ende sagende.

Notes on Müntzer's German.

- The opening is the common Preface's. Te quidem, Domine, omni tempore … praedicare is replaced by "that we give thanks unto thee in all places, and specially at this time praise thee more highly". The Latin's own "at all times indeed to praise thee" disappears into the common formula.
- In hac potissimum die ("chiefly on this day") becomes "at this time", so the Preface serves the whole Easter season.
- Mortem nostram becomes "our eternal death".
- The Et ideo is reduced to "with all the angels of the heavenly hosts", and "the hymn" becomes "a Leise".
- The Kiel Mass adds that Christ died "by his temporal death" ("synen tytliken dot"). Lippe 1571 reads "einen lobgesang" for "ein leisen".

German (2): Kurland. Kurland 1570 has its own translation. Kurland, Kurländische Kirchenordnung, 1570, "Auf ostern" (Sehling 5, p. 90):

> Warlich, es ist billich und gerecht, dazu gleich und ganz heilsam, das wir dir alzeit und an allen enden danksagen, und sonderlich zu dieser zeit höher preisen, dieweil Christus, unser osterlam, für uns am creuze ist geopfert, welch ist das wahre lam gottes, das dar weggenommen hat der welt sünde, der durch sein sterben den tod uberwunden hat, und durch sein auferstehung das leben herwider gebracht, darum wir mit allen engeln und mit der ganzen himlischen herscharen singen einen lobgesang deines preises ohne ende sagende.

Notes on Kurland's German. It follows Müntzer's shape. It adds "on the cross" to "sacrificed for us", and it says that Christ by his death "overcame death" instead of "destroyed our death".

German (3): Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed). Strasbourg, Teutsche Meß und Tauff, 1524, "Ein ander Vorred" (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 20/1, p. 133):

> Recht und heylsam, das man dich allweg herrlich rüm und preyße, Dann unser osterlamb Christus ist geschlachtet. Er ist das wor lamb, das hyn nympt der welt sünde, der unsern tod durchs sterben zerstöret und das leben durch aufferstehung widerbracht hat, Deßhalb wir etc.

[It is] right and wholesome that thou be always gloriously extolled and praised; for Christ our Passover is slain. He is the true Lamb, that taketh away the sin of the world; who by dying hath destroyed our death, and by rising again hath restored life. Wherefore we, etc.

Note. Strasbourg keeps the Latin's own opening ("always … gloriously praised"). But it drops *sed in hac potissimum die: there is no "chiefly on this day".

German (4): Dortmund (Low German). Dortmund, Gottesdienstordnung, 1554, "Tho Paschen" (Sehling 21, p. 210):

> Dy twarn, O Here, tho allen tyden, besunder överst up dessem dage (edder: desse tydt) hochtydtliker tho prysen, dar yn unse Paschen Christus ys geoffert, De sülve ys dat ware Lam, dat dar hen genomen hefft der werlt sünde. De unsen dodt dorch syn stervent hefft tho braken unde dat leevent dorch syn upstaent weddermaket. Darumme etc., wo baven tho Wynachten.

[It is very meet … wholesome,] to praise thee indeed, O Lord, at all times, but chiefly upon this day (or: this time) more festally, wherein Christ our Passover is offered. The same is the true Lamb, that hath taken away the sin of the world; who by his dying hath broken our death, and by his rising hath made life anew. Therefore, etc., as above at Christmas.

Note. This is complete and faithful. "Chiefly upon this day" is kept, with "this time" offered as an alternative, as in Müntzer.

German (5): the Easter text as Calenberg's Sunday Preface. Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 prints a shorter form of the Easter Preface in its model Mass for an ordinary Sunday. That Mass has the Trinity propers: the Alleluia Benedictus es, Domine, Deus patrum nostrorum and the Gospel John 3. Calenberg-Göttingen, Kirchenordnung, 1542 (Sehling 6/2, p. 815):

> Warlich ist das billich und recht und heilsam, das wir dir danken, heiliger Herr, almechtiger Vater, ewiger Gott, durch Christum, unsern Herren, der das ware osterlamb ist, der ist warlich das lamb, das der welt sünde tregt, der unsern todt mit seinem sterben verstöret hat und das leben mit seiner auferstehunge erworben hat. Darumb singen wir mit seinen engeln und erzengeln deiner ehr ein lobgesang, ohn end sprechende

Verily it is meet and right and wholesome that we give thanks unto thee, holy Lord, almighty Father, everlasting God, through Christ our Lord, who is the true Passover lamb; he is verily the Lamb that beareth the sin of the world, who by his dying hath destroyed our death, and by his resurrection hath won life. Therefore we sing with his angels and archangels a song of praise to thine honour, without end saying:

Note. All reference to the day and the season is gone. The Easter Preface becomes a Sunday Preface: every Sunday is a feast of the resurrection.

4.A.7 Ascension (Qui post resurrectionem suam)

Latin witnesses:

- Lüneburg 1564 (6/1, p. 574);
- Wolfenbüttel 1569 (6/1, p. 181);
- Hoya 1581 (6/2, p. 1155; faceret for tribueret);
- Verden 1606 (7/1, p. 207).

Lüneburg, Kirchenordnung, 1564, "Ascensionis" (Sehling 6/1, p. 574):

> Vere dignum et etc. Per Christum Dominum nostrum, qui post resurrectionem suam omnibus discipulis suis manifestus apparuit et ipsis cernentibus est elevatus in coelum, ut nos divinitatis suae tribueret esse participes, et ideo cum angelis et archangelis, cum thronis et dominationibus, cumque omni militia coelestis exercitus, hymnum gloriae tuae canimus, sine fine dicentes.

It is very meet, etc. … through Christ our Lord: who after his resurrection appeared openly unto all his disciples, and in their sight was lifted up into heaven, that he might grant us to be partakers of his Godhead. And therefore with Angels and Archangels, with Thrones and Dominions, and with all the company of the heavenly host, we sing the hymn of thy glory, evermore saying:

German (1): Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed). Strasbourg, Teutsche Meß und Tauff, 1524, "Ein ander Vorred" (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 20/1, p. 134):

> Ewiger Gott, durch Christum, unnsern herrn, Der nach seiner aufferstendtnuß seinen jüngern offentlich erschinen und in irem gesicht erhebt ist in hymmel, auff das er unß seiner gotheit teilhaftig macht, Deshalb wir etc.

Everlasting God, through Christ our Lord, who after his resurrection appeared openly to his disciples, and in their sight was lifted up into heaven, that he might make us partakers of his Godhead; wherefore we, etc.

Note. The translation is exact, but it leaves out "all" (omnibus).

German (2): Calenberg-Göttingen. Calenberg-Göttingen, Kirchenordnung, 1542, Ascension (Sehling 6/2, p. 831):

> Warlich, es ist billich und recht und ist heilsam, das wir dir, Herr, almechtiger Gott, allenthalben danksagen durch Christum, unseren Herren, welcher nach seiner auferstehung allen seinen jüngern offenbarlich erschinen ist und fur ihren augen aufgenomen ist in himel, auf das er uns geb, das wir seiner gottheit teilhaftig würden. Darumb singen wir mit den engeln und erzengeln, herschenden und gewaltigen engeln, auch mit der herschaft der himlischen herscharen ein lobgesang deiner herrligkeit, ohn ende sagende

Notes on Calenberg's German.

- This is a full and faithful translation.
- Cum thronis et dominationibus becomes "ruling and mighty angels", and omni militia coelestis exercitus becomes "the lordship of the heavenly hosts".
- Sehling's editor notes that the text is close to the Erfurt Kirchenamt of 1526.

German (3): Dortmund (Low German). Dortmund, Gottesdienstordnung, 1554, "Hemmelfart Christi" (Sehling 21, p. 210):

> Dorch Christum, unsen Heren, De na syner upstandinge alle synen Jungeren sick klarlick hefft apenbaret unde ys hüdden ansehens vor eren ogen tho hemmel gefaren, dat he uns syner Godtheit deelhafftich makede. Darumme etc., tho Wynachten.

[It is very meet …] through Christ our Lord, who after his resurrection shewed himself clearly to all his disciples, and this day, in sight before their eyes, went up into heaven, that he might make us partakers of his Godhead. Therefore, etc., [as] at Christmas.

Note. Dortmund adds "this day" ("hüdden").

4.A.8 Pentecost (Qui ascendens super omnes caelos)

Latin witnesses:

- Lüneburg 1564 (6/1, pp. 574–575);
- Wolfenbüttel 1569 (6/1, p. 181);
- Grubenhagen 1581 (6/2, p. 1074);

- Hoya 1581 (6/2, p. 1155);
- Verden 1606 (7/1, p. 207);
- Osnabrück (1588) 1618 (7/1, p. 269);
- Lippe 1571 (21, p. 411).

The canimus variant. Lüneburg, Wolfenbüttel and Hoya read canimus ("we sing") where the Missal has concinunt ("[the Powers] sing together"). Sehling's editor marks it "[!]" in Hoya. The grammar is broken, but the sense is that the congregation joins the angels. The others read concinunt. In Grubenhagen the editor has restored concinunt against a print reading canimus.

Lüneburg, Kirchenordnung, 1564, "Pentecostes" (Sehling 6/1, pp. 574–575):

> Vere dignum et iustum etc. Per Christum Dominum nostrum, qui ascendens super omnes coelos, sedensque ad dexteram tuam, promissum Spiritum sanctum hodierna die in filios adoptionis effudit. Quapropter profusis gaudiis totus in orbe terrarum mundus exultat, sed et supernae virtutes atque angelicae potestates hymnum gloriae tuae canimus, sine fine dicentes.

It is very meet and right, etc. … through Christ our Lord: who, ascending above all the heavens, and sitting at thy right hand, did on this day pour forth the promised Holy Ghost upon the children of adoption. Wherefore with overflowing joy the whole world throughout all the earth doth exult; and the Virtues on high and the angelic Powers also [with them] we sing the hymn of thy glory, evermore saying:

German (1): Müntzer (Radical Reformation). Müntzer's translation is also in Erfurt 1525 (2, p. 377), Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 (6/2, p. 833) and Lippe 1571, "auff den Dörffern" (21, p. 411). In Sehling's edition Müntzer's Pentecost office is printed at the head of the following document (eko.db doc 52). Allstedt, Thomas Müntzer, Deutsch evangelisch Messe, 1524, office of the Holy Ghost (Radical Reformation; Sehling 1, p. 504):

> Warlich es ist wirdig und recht billich und ist heilsam, das wir dir almechtiger ewiger got allzeit und allenthalben danksagen durch Christum unseren herren. Der do aufgestigen ist in himmel und sitzt zu der rechten des vaters, und hat heut den heilgen geist, den er vorheissen hatte, ergossen in die auserwelten kinder. Dorumb ist die ganze welt voll freuden, im ganzen umkreis der erden. Dozu singet alle himlische schaer ein leisen deinem preise one ende sagende.

Notes on Müntzer's German.

- Super omnes caelos ("above all the heavens") becomes "into heaven".
- In filios adoptionis ("upon the children of adoption") becomes "upon the elect children".
- Profusis gaudiis is dropped.
- Supernae virtutes atque angelicae potestates becomes "all the heavenly host", who "sing a Leise".

German (2): Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed). Strasbourg, Teutsche Meß und Tauff, 1524, "Ein ander Vorred" (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 20/1, p. 134):

> Ewiger Gott, durch Christum, unnsern hern, Der, auffgestigen über alle hymmel und sitzend zuo deiner gerechten, außgossen hat den verheyssen geist über dein an kindes statt angenommene kinder, Deßhalb mit außtringenden freüden in allem erdtrich die welt sich freüwet, auch die Engel dein lob singen und sprechen: Sanctus, Heyliger etc.

Everlasting God, through Christ our Lord, who, ascended above all heavens and sitting at thy right hand, hath poured out the promised Spirit upon thy children taken in the stead of children; wherefore with overflowing joys in all the earth the world rejoiceth, and the Angels also sing thy praise and say: Sanctus, Holy, etc.

Note. This is close, and it keeps "above all heavens" and "adoption" ("an kindes statt angenommene"). It drops hodierna die, "on this day".

German (3): Dortmund (Low German). Dortmund, Gottesdienstordnung, 1554, "Pingesten" (Sehling 21, pp. 210–211):

> Dorch Christum, unsen Heren. De upfarende baven alle hemmele unde sittende tho dyner rechtern handt, hefft (hüden tho dage) den belaveden hilligen Geist yn de utherwelden Kyndere gestörtet, Des sick de gantze werlt avermaten seer hochlick vorblidet, Ja, ock de Oversten Kreffte unde Engelschen mechte singen loff dyner herlicheit, sunder ende seggende: Hillich etc.

[It is very meet …] through Christ our Lord, who, ascending above all heavens and sitting at thy right hand, hath (on this day) poured out the promised Holy Ghost upon the chosen children; whereof the whole world rejoiceth exceedingly; yea, the highest Virtues also and the angelic Powers sing the praise of thy glory, without end saying: Holy, etc.

Notes on Dortmund's German. Dortmund agrees with Müntzer's "chosen children" against the Latin's "children of adoption". It puts "today" in brackets as optional, and it has concinunt, not canimus.

4.A.9 Trinity (Qui cum unigenito Filio tuo)

Latin witnesses:

- Lüneburg 1564 (6/1, p. 575);
- Wolfenbüttel 1569 (6/1, p. 181);
- Grubenhagen 1581 (6/2, p. 1074);
- Hoya 1581 (6/2, p. 1155; essentiae for substantiae);
- Verden 1606 (7/1, p. 207).

Several orders also prescribe it for ordinary Sundays (§4.8.2): Wolfenbüttel 1543, Hamburg 1529, Herford 1532 and Wittenberg 1533. The reason they give is that the Preface "was made against the Arians".

Lüneburg, Kirchenordnung, 1564, "Trinitatis" (Sehling 6/1, p. 575):

> Vere dignum et iustum est, aequum et salutare, nos tibi semper et ubique gratias agere, Domine sancte Pater omnipotens, aeterne Deus, qui cum unigenito Filio tuo et Spiritu sancto unus es Deus, unus es Dominus, non in unius singularitate personae, sed in unius trinitate substantiae. Quod enim de tua gloria revelante te credimus, hoc de Filio tuo, hoc de Spiritu sancto sine differentia discretionis sentimus, ut in confessione verae sempiternaeque deitatis et in personis proprietas et in essentia unitas et in maiestate adoretur aequalitas, quam laudant angeli, adorant dominationes, tremunt potestates, coeli coelorumque virtutes ac beata seraphin socia exultatione concelebrant. Cum quibus et nostras voces, ut admitti iubeas te precamur supplici confessione dicentes.

It is very meet and right, just and wholesome, that we should at all times and in all places give thanks unto thee, O holy Lord, Father almighty, everlasting God: who with thine only-begotten Son and the Holy Ghost art one God, one Lord; not in the singleness of one Person, but in the Trinity of one substance. For that which by thy revelation we believe of thy glory, the same we believe of thy Son, the same of the Holy Ghost, without any difference or separation; that in the confession of the true and everlasting Godhead there may be adored in the Persons propriety, in the essence unity, and in the majesty equality: which the Angels praise, the Dominions adore, the Powers tremble at, the heavens and the Virtues of the heavens and the blessed Seraphim with one accord celebrate with exultation. With whom we beseech thee that thou wouldest bid our voices also to be admitted, saying with lowly confession:

Note. The ending is that of the common Preface: quam laudant angeli, adorant dominationes …. It is not the Cherubim quoque ac Seraphim, qui non cessant clamare of the later Roman form.

German (1): Lippe, Low German. Lippe, Deutsche Messe, [1525–1538], Trinity Sunday (Sehling 22, p. 568):

> Warlyck, edt is byllick unde recht, dartho ock yst seer heilsam, dat wy dy altydt und yn allen enden danck seggen. Here, heillyge vader, almechtige, ewyge Godt, welcker du myt dynem eyngebornen soen und dem hilligen geiste eyn enyge Godt bist, eyn enyger here bist. Nicht yn eynycheit der personen, sonder yn der enycheit eynes sunderliken wesens. Den dat wy durch dyn sulvest apenbarynge von dyner herlicheit gheloven, even dat sulffte holden wy underscheiden van dynem sone und dem hilligen geiste, up dat yn der bekentnysse der waren und ewyghen godtheit de eghenschop yn den personen und enyccheit [!] yn dem wesen und de ghelicheit yn der majestat recht werde anghebetet, welke de engel laven, erwerdigen de ertzeengel, dartho Cherubin und Seraphin, de ane unterladt myt eyndrechtiger stemmen syngen:

Notes on the Lippe Low German.

- Sed in unius trinitate substantiae ("but in the Trinity of one substance") becomes "but in the unity of one peculiar being". The word "Trinity" is lost.
- Sine differentia discretionis ("without difference or separation") becomes "that same we hold distinctly of thy Son and the Holy Ghost". The negative is lost, and the clause seems to say the opposite of the Latin.

- The angelic ending follows the other Roman form: "the angels praise, the archangels worship, and Cherubim and Seraphim … sing without ceasing with one voice". Compare Angeli atque Archangeli, Cherubim quoque ac Seraphim, qui non cessant clamare.

German (2): Dortmund (Low German). Dortmund, Gottesdienstordnung, 1554, "Van der Hilligen Drevoldicheit" (Sehling 21, p. 211):

> De mit dynem eingebaren Söne unde dem hilligen Geiste bist ein Godt, ein Here, nicht yn einer personen enicheit, sunder ynn eines wesendes drevoldicheit. Wente dat wy van dyner herlicheit dorch dyn apenbarent gelöven, dat völe wy ock van dynem Söne unde van dem Hilligen Geiste, sunder jenich underscheides, voranderinge, Also dat ynn der bekenninge der warachtigen, ewigen Godtheit ein underscheit yn den personen, ein enicheit yn dem wesende unde doch gelickheit yn der herlichen angebedet werde. De dar de Engelen laven etc., als yn der gemenen Prefation.

[It is very meet … everlasting God:] Who with thine only-begotten Son and the Holy Ghost art one God, one Lord; not in the oneness of a person, but in the trinity of one being. For what we believe of thy glory through thy revealing, that we feel also of thy Son and of the Holy Ghost, without any difference [or] change; so that in the confession of the true, everlasting Godhead a distinction in the Persons, a unity in the being, and yet an equality in the glory be adored. Which the Angels praise, etc., as in the common Preface.

Note. This is faithful. Proprietas becomes "a distinction", and discretionis becomes "change".

4.A.10 The Blessed Virgin (Et te in … beatae Mariae), and Müntzer's Advent rewording

Witnesses:

- Dortmund 1554: the Marian Preface itself, for the Purification, Annunciation, Visitation, Assumption and Nativity of Mary.
- Müntzer 1524 (Advent; Radical Reformation), Erfurt 1525 (Trinity, also used in Advent) and Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 (Advent): a reworded form, which turns the praise of Mary's feast into thanksgiving for the Incarnation.

No Latin text is printed in the corpus. The German renders the Missal's Et te in [festivitate] beatae Mariae semper Virginis collaudare, benedicere et praedicare. Quae et Unigenitum tuum Sancti Spiritus obumbratione concepit: et virginitatis gloria permanente, lumen aeternum mundo effudit, Iesum Christum Dominum nostrum.

German (1): Dortmund (Low German), the Marian feasts. Dortmund, Gottesdienstordnung, 1554, "Inn Marien Festen" (Sehling 21, p. 211):

> Unde dynem dage (der reyningen, der Bodtschop, der Heymsökinge edder des Berchganges, der hemmelfart, der Gebort etc.) Marien, der hilligen steden Junckfrouwen, mit fröliken herten thosamen laven, benedyen unde hochlick prysen, De dynen eingebaren Söne yn averschemminge des hilligen Geistes hefft entfangen unde beholdener eeren der junckfrouwschop desser werlt dat ewige licht geberet, Jhesum Christum, unsen Heren, Dorch welcken etc., yn der gemenen prefation.

[It is very meet … to give thanks unto thee,] and on thy day (of the Purification, of the Annunciation, of the Visitation or Going over the Mountain, of the Assumption, of the Nativity, etc.) of Mary, the holy, ever Virgin, with joyful hearts together to praise, bless and highly extol; who conceived thine only-begotten Son by the overshadowing of the Holy Ghost, and, the honour of her virginity remaining, brought forth to this world the everlasting light, Jesus Christ our Lord; through whom, etc., in the common Preface.

Notes on Dortmund's German.

- "Thy day … of Mary". The Missal's "in the festival of blessed Mary" becomes "on thy day … of Mary". The feast is God's, and the Virgin is its occasion.
- The Assumption is still listed ("der hemmelfart", 15 August).
- Effudit ("poured forth") becomes "brought forth".

German (2): Müntzer's rewording for Advent (Radical Reformation). Müntzer's form is also in Erfurt 1525 (2, p. 378) and Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 (6/2, p. 818). Allstedt, Thomas Müntzer, Deutsch evangelisch Messe, 1524, office of Advent (Radical Reformation; Sehling 1, p. 500):

> Warlich, es ist billich und recht und ist heilsam, das wir dir, herr, o heiliger vater, almechtiger, ewiger got, allzeit und allenthalben danksagen. Dann du dein heilige menscheit von der junkfrauen Maria hast empfangen durch die umbschetigung des heilgen geistes, das sie mit unvorruckter keuscheit das ewige licht zur welt gebracht hat, Jesum Christum, unseren herren. Durch wilchen loben die engel dein herligkeit und ehr erbieten die engel, do du innen hirschest; es entsetzten sich die gewaltigen engel; dozu die himmel und der himmel krefte und die heiligen seraphin preisen dich on unterlass mit einmütiger freuden. Drumb bitten wir dich, o herr, das du woltest unsere stimmen mit in zu lassen, das wir dich mit warem bekentnis mügen loben one ende, sagende:

Verily it is meet and right and wholesome that we should at all times and in all places give thanks unto thee, O Lord, holy Father, almighty, everlasting God. For thou hast received thy holy manhood of the Virgin Mary by the overshadowing of the Holy Ghost, so that she with unblemished chastity brought the everlasting light into the world, Jesus Christ our Lord: through whom the angels praise thy glory, and the angels in whom thou reignest do thee honour; the mighty angels tremble; and the heavens and the powers of the heavens and the holy Seraphim praise thee without ceasing with one accord of joy. Therefore we pray thee, O Lord, that thou wouldest admit our voices with them, that we may praise thee with true confession, without end saying:

Notes on Müntzer's rewording.

- Mary's feast is gone. The clause "and on the festival of blessed Mary to praise, bless and proclaim thee" is struck out.
- The subject changes. It is no longer Mary who "conceived thine Only-begotten". It is God who "received thy holy manhood of the Virgin Mary". The Preface becomes a thanksgiving for the Incarnation, fit for Advent.
- The common ending is translated, with dominationes as "the angels in whom thou reignest".
- Erfurt 1525 prints the same text in its Trinity office. Its Advent office takes the whole Preface from there, and its Passion office takes "the beginning together with the conclusion" (Sehling 2, pp. 379–380).

4.A.11 The Apostles (Et te, Domine, suppliciter exorare)

Witness: Dortmund 1554 only. No Latin is printed in the corpus. The Low German renders the Missal's Et te, Domine, suppliciter exorare, ut gregem tuum, pastor aeterne, non deseras: sed per beatos Apostolos tuos continua protectione custodias. Ut iisdem rectoribus gubernetur, quos operis tui vicarios eidem contulisti praeesse pastores. Dortmund, Gottesdienstordnung, 1554, "Van den Apostolen" (Sehling 21, p. 211):

> Dy Here, demötlick tho bidden, dat du, O ewige Herde, dyne Schape nicht vorlatest, sunder dorch dyner hilligen Apostolen lere vor allem erdom ynn stedeliker höde bewarest, dat se dorch der sülven regenten lere geleidet werden, de du en dynes werckes, plegers an dyner stede ym worde vor tho syn tho Herden heffst gegeven, Derhalven mit den Engelen unde Ertzengelen etc., baven, tho Wynachten.

[It is very meet … wholesome,] humbly to beseech thee, O Lord, that thou, O everlasting Shepherd, forsake not thy sheep, but through the doctrine of thy holy Apostles keep them in continual guard from all error; that they may be led by the doctrine of the same rulers, whom thou hast given them for shepherds, stewards of thy work, to be over them in thy stead in the word. Therefore with the Angels and Archangels, etc., above, at Christmas.

Notes on Dortmund's German.

- "Through thy blessed Apostles" becomes "through the doctrine of thy holy Apostles … from all error". The Apostles keep the flock by their teaching, not by their intercession.
- "By the same rulers" becomes "by the doctrine of the same rulers", again teaching, not rule.
- Vicarios becomes "stewards … in thy stead in the word".

4.A.12 Passiontide and Maundy Thursday: Grubenhagen's Isaiah 53 Preface (new German text)

Witness: Grubenhagen 1581. "So that the simple layman may be awakened more devoutly to the contemplation of the sufferings and death of Christ", the order adds "a German preface taken from the 53rd chapter of Isaiah". It is to be sung "on Maundy Thursday, or else at any time when there are many communicants". It is a new composition with notes, built on the frame of the German common Preface. Grubenhagen, Kirchenordnung, 1581 (Sehling 6/2, p. 1074):

> Warlich, es ist billich und recht, löblich und auch heilsam, das wir dir immer und ewiglich, Gott Vater, danksagen, das du uns deinen lieben Son geschenket hast, der mit seinem bittern leiden bezahlet hat, was Adam und wir verschuldet han, > wie Esaias sagt: Fürwar, er trug unser krankheit und lud auf sich unser schmerzen. Er ist umb unser missethat willen verwundet und umb unser sünde willen so zuschlagen; die straffe ligt auf ihm, auf das wir friede hetten, und durch seine wunden sind wir geheilet. Wir gingen alle irr, gleich wie die schafe, die keinen hirten haben. Ein jeglicher sah auf seinen weg. Aber der Herr warf unser aller sünd auf ihn, ein untregliche last, darunter er blutigen schweis geschwitzet hat und am stam des kreuzes geschrieen hat: Mein Gott, mein Gott, warumb hastu mich verlassen?, auf das wir nicht ewig würden verlassen. Darumb wir dir mit den engeln und erzengeln, mit den thronen und den herschaften und mit allem himlischem heer den lobgesang deiner ehre singen, immer und ewig sagende

Verily it is meet and right, laudable and also wholesome, that we should give thanks unto thee, God the Father, evermore and everlastingly, for that thou hast given us thy dear Son, who by his bitter suffering hath paid what Adam and we had deserved; as Isaiah saith: Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows. He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement is upon him, that we might have peace, and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray, as sheep that have no shepherd; we have turned every one to his own way. But the Lord laid on him the sin of us all, an unbearable burden, under which he sweat bloody sweat, and on the stem of the cross cried: My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? that we might not be forsaken for ever. Therefore with the angels and archangels, with the thrones and the dominions, and with all the heavenly host, we sing unto thee the hymn of thine honour, evermore and ever saying:

4.A.13 Michaelmas: Lippe's German Preface for the villages (new German text)

Witness: Lippe 1571. For the towns, Lippe sets the Latin common Preface "In die Michaelis" (§4.A.1). For the villages it gives a German Preface of its own. This keeps the opening of the common Preface but replaces the choirs of angels with the forgiveness of sins. On the feast of St Michael and All Angels, the angels are named only in the Sanctus. Lippe, Kirchenordnung, 1571, "Am tage Michaelis auff den Dörffern" (Sehling 21, p. 411):

> Warlich, es ist billich und recht und ist heilsam, das wir dich, Herre, O Heiliger Vater, Allmechtiger, Ewiger Gott, allzeit und allenthalben dancksagen durch Christum unsern Herren. Umb welches willen du uns verschonest, vergibst uns unsere sünden und verheischest die Ewige wolfart. Des wir danckbarlich singen einen Lobgesang deiner Herrligkeit one ende sagende: Sanctus.

Verily it is meet and right and wholesome that we should at all times and in all places give thanks unto thee, O Lord, holy Father, almighty, everlasting God, through Christ our Lord: for whose sake thou sparest us, forgivest us our sins, and promisest everlasting welfare. Wherefore we thankfully sing a song of praise of thy glory, without end saying: Holy.

4.A.14 Christmas in Kurland: the Easter Preface with the Nativity prefixed (new German text)

Witness: Kurland 1570. "On the high feasts, for variation (as is done at the princely court)", the minister may sing "these prefaces noted below, in place of the quotidiana". The Christmas Preface is not the Roman Christmas text. It is the German Easter Preface, with the Virgin Birth set in front of the Lamb. The minister and choir sing the dialogue in alternation. The Easter Preface follows (§4.A.6, German 2), then a Pentecost Preface, which is the Easter text again with the Ascension and the sending of the Spirit added (§4.A.15). Kurland, Kurländische Kirchenordnung, 1570, "Auf Nativitatis" (Sehling 5, pp. 89–90):

> Der diener: Der herre sei mit euch. Das chor: Und mit deinem geist. Der diener: Erhebet eure herzen. Das chor: Wir heben sie zum herren. Der diener: Last uns dank sagen gotte, unserem herren. Das chor: Es ist billich und gerecht. Der diener: Warlich, es ist billich und gerecht, Da zugleich ganz und heilsam, Das wir dir alzeit Und an allen enden dank sagen, Und sonderlich zu dieser zeit höher preisen, Dieweil uns ein jungfreulein zart Den sohne gottes geboren hat, Welch ist das wahre lam gottes, Das da weggenommen hat der welt sünde, Der durch sein sterben Den tod uberwunden hat, Und durch sein auferstehung Das leben her wider gebracht, Darum wir mit allen englen Und mit der ganzen himlischen herscharen Singen einen lobgesang deines preises Ohne ende sagende.

The minister: The Lord be with you. The choir: And with thy spirit. The minister: Lift up your hearts. The choir: We lift them up unto the Lord. The minister: Let us give thanks unto God our Lord. The choir: It is meet and right. The minister: Verily it is meet and right, and withal wholly wholesome, that we should at all times and in all places give thanks unto thee, and especially at this time praise thee more highly, because a tender little maiden hath borne unto us the Son of God, who is the true Lamb of God that hath taken away the sin of the world; who by his dying hath overcome death, and by his resurrection hath brought life again. Therefore with all the angels and with all the heavenly hosts we sing a song of praise of thy glory, without end saying:

4.A.15 Pentecost in Kurland: the Easter Preface with the Ascension and Pentecost added (new German text)

Witness: Kurland 1570. This is the Easter Preface of §4.A.6 (German 2), extended. Before the Sanctus it adds that Christ, "when he was taken visibly into heaven", sent down the Comforter. Kurland, Kurländische Kirchenordnung, 1570, "Auf pfingsten" (Sehling 5, p. 90):

> Warlich, es ist billich und gerecht, dazu gleich und ganz heilsam, das wir dir alzeit und an allen enden danksagen, und sonderlich zu dieser zeit höher preisen, dieweil Christus, unser osterlam für uns am creuze ist geopfert, welch ist das ware lam gottes, das dar weggenommen hat der welt sünde, der durch sein sterben den tod uberwunden hat und durch sein auferstehung das leben her widergebracht, und als er sichtlich zu himel genommen ist, hat er den tröster, den heiligen geist, seinen gleubigen hernieder gesant, darum wir mit allen engeln und mit der ganzen himlischen herscharen singen einen lobgesang deines preises ohne ende sagende.

Verily it is meet and right, and withal wholly wholesome, that we should at all times and in all places give thanks unto thee, and especially at this time praise thee more highly, because Christ our Passover lamb is sacrificed for us upon the cross, who is the true Lamb of God that hath taken away the sin of the world; who by his dying hath overcome death and by his resurrection hath brought life again; and when he was taken up visibly into heaven, he sent down the Comforter, the Holy Ghost, upon his faithful. Therefore with all the angels and with all the heavenly hosts we sing a song of praise of thy glory, without end saying:

4.A.16 Summary: which Prefaces each order has

Preface	Latin in the corpus	German or Low German in the corpus

Chapter 5. Collect, Secret and Postcommunion

This chapter follows the three presidential prayers of the medieval Mass through the evangelical church orders printed in Emil Sehling's Die evangelischen Kirchenordnungen des XVI. Jahrhunderts:

- the collect (collecta, oratio), said after the Gloria and before the epistle;
- the secret (secreta, oratio super oblata), said silently over the gifts at the end of the offertory;
- the postcommunion (postcommunio, complenda, ad complendum), said after the communion;
- on the weekdays of Lent, a fourth: the prayer over the people (oratio super populum), said after the postcommunion before the dismissal.

In the medieval rite all three were proper: each Sunday and feast had its own set, printed together in the Missal. They were also multiplied. A Mass of the day could add the collect of a commemorated feast or octave, or a votive prayer (for peace, for rain, for the ruler). Each added collect brought its own secret and postcommunion with it, so that two collects meant two secrets and two postcommunions.

For each prayer the chapter asks:

- What did the Lutheran orders keep of the old system?
- What did they strip?
- What did they add?
- What did they alter?

It gives particular attention to the claim that the postcommunion was standardized into a fixed prayer, Luther's thanksgiving of 1526, and to the other postcommunions that stood beside it, among them versions of the old Missal prayers.

How the chapter is laid out.

- §5.1 summarizes the findings, and §5.2 sets out the method and cautions.
- §5.3 describes the medieval system and Luther's two rulings, of 1523 and 1526.
- §5.4 deals with the collect, §5.5 with the secret, and §5.6 with the postcommunion and, in §5.6.6, the Lenten prayer over the people.
- §5.7 sets out what was kept, stripped, added and altered.
- §5.8 is a table by order, and §5.9 a concordance.
- Appendix 5.A lists the postcommunion texts and their sources.

5.1 Summary of findings

1. Luther set the pattern in two steps (§5.3).

- 1523, Formula missae. One collect of the day only, "if it be godly". No secret, because it fell with the offertory. The proper postcommunions were rejected because "they almost all sound of sacrifice". In their place came two of the priest's ablution prayers, Quod ore sumpsimus and Corpus tuum, the same every Sunday.
- 1526, Deutsche Messe. One German collect, and one fixed German thanksgiving after the communion: "Wir danken dir, allmächtiger Herr Gott, dass du uns durch diese heilsame Gabe hast erquicket …". Sehling's Verden editor, after P. Drews, traces this prayer to the Missal postcommunion of the eighteenth Sunday after Pentecost, Gratias tibi referimus … sacro munere vegetati. Luther changed its petition from "make us worthy" to "make it prosper in us unto faith and love".

2. The collect: kept, proper, and mostly from the Missal (§5.4).

- Kept de tempore. Every order with a Mass has a collect after the Gloria, of the season or feast. The territorial orders print German series by the church year (Saxony 1539 and 1580, Lüneburg 1564, Wolfenbüttel 1569, Henneberg 1582, Grubenhagen 1581, Oldenburg 1573, Verden 1606, Osnabrück 1618).
- From the Missal. Sehling's editors trace many of these collects to Missal collects (Excita, Concede … nova per carnem nativitas, Deus qui hodierna die corda fidelium), mostly by way of the Wittenberg hymnbook of 1533 and the translations of Michael Coelius.

- Reduced to one, with exceptions. Luther's rule of one collect was common (Volprecht 1524, Mecklenburg 1545). But a second collect for need survived: Mecklenburg allows it, and Ansbach 1548 requires two, the first for spiritual and the second for temporal things. Hof 1592 has the votive "for rain and fair weather". The collect for peace after Verleih uns Frieden (Deus, a quo sancta desideria) became the standing second collect at the end of the service.
- Purged. Collects asking the intercession of the saints went (Hannover 1536). The rest were kept "if pure" (Amberg 1550, Henneberg 1582).
- Added. Veit Dietrich's gospel collects (from 1546) were written on the day's gospel rather than the season. Wolfenbüttel 1569 and Soest 1609 allow them. In Buxtehude 1565 each Sunday has two collects, a Missal collect before the sermon and Dietrich's after it.
- Altered. Collects moved into German so the people could answer Amen (Coburg 1554/55, Wolfstein 1574). Hof 1592 still teaches the medieval rules for the collect conclusions.

3. The secret: abolished (§5.5).

- No secret in any order. No order keeps a secret, and the corpus has no German version of one. It fell with the offertory: Prussia 1525 lists "offertory, secret, canon minor and maior" among the things "of necessity left out".
- Remnants. What remains is:
  - the secret's sung ending Per omnia saecula saeculorum. Amen before the Preface (Müntzer (Radical Reformation), Lippe, Calenberg-Göttingen);
  - its name and place in Dortmund 1554, where the priest makes "an open prayer for all magistrates, estates and needs of the whole Christendom" instead;
  - collects for the Church and rulers said aloud under the Sanctus (Döber 1525, Brandenburg 1540, Calenberg-Göttingen 1542, Pfalz-Neuburg 1543).

4. The postcommunion: an ordinary prayer, but never only one (§5.6).

- Luther's 1523 prayers. They were kept in Latin as the priest's devotion (Brandenburg 1540, Pfalz-Neuburg 1543) and put into German as the Complenda (Strasbourg 1524, Moderate Reformed).
- Proper postcommunions kept for a time. Some orders kept the proper postcommunions of the Missal:
  - the Nürnberg parish Mass and Volprecht (1524), and Coburg 1524;
    - Müntzer (1524, Radical Reformation), with German versions of the Easter postcommunion Spiritum nobis … tuae caritatis infunde and the Pentecost Sancti Spiritus … infusio;
  - Erfurt (1525), which adds the Trinity Proficiat;
  - Calenberg-Göttingen 1542, which prints, for each feast, Luther's thanksgiving followed by a proper postcommunion from the Missal (Advent Suscipiamus, Easter, Pentecost). This is the last order in the corpus to do so.
- Luther's thanksgiving became the ordinary. From the 1530s it is the standard Lutheran postcommunion, and some orders still call it "the complenda" (Hatzkerode, Reuss 1552, Breslau 1550).
- The alternatives beside it. Almost every order prints one or two alternatives, "or this":
  - the Nürnberg thanksgiving of 1533 ("Wir sagen deiner göttlichen Mildigkeit Lob und Dank"), an expansion of Quod ore sumpsimus. Brandenburg 1540 and Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 sing it with Luther's "under one conclusion", as two collects;
  - a German version of the Corpus Christi collect Deus, qui nobis sub sacramento mirabili ("Ach du lieber Herre Gott, der du uns bei diesem wunderbarlichen Sakrament …"): Mecklenburg 1545, Buxtehude 1565, Oldenburg 1573, Saxony and Mansfeld 1580, Grubenhagen 1581, Nördlingen 1579;
  - Döber's prayer of 1525, taken up by Mecklenburg;
  - Prussia 1544's second collect, sung on alternate Sundays.
- Without communicants. Where no one communicated, a free collect, or a "thanksgiving for the word of God heard" (Lippe 1571), took the postcommunion's place.

5. The Lenten prayer over the people: gone from the Mass, kept once in the office (§5.6.6).

- Not at the Mass. No order keeps the oratio super populum or its bidding Humiliate capita vestra Deo at the end of the Mass. The blessing "over the people" at the end of the Lutheran Mass is the Aaronic blessing.
- At Lauds, in Ansbach. The Brandenburg-Ansbach order for the collegiate churches (1533) strikes out the Lenten Lauds collects that "speak of the fast". In their place it allows "the super populum that followeth": the prayer over the people of the same day, which asks for God's protection without reference to fasting.

6. The overall pattern (§5.7).

- Kept: the collect of the day, mostly from the Missal; the shape Dominus vobiscum, Oremus, prayer and long conclusion, Amen; the idea of a closing prayer after the communion, still often called the complenda.
- Stripped: the secret entirely; the Lenten super populum at the Mass; the proper postcommunion (after a transition ending in 1542); commemorations of saints; the automatic multiplication of collects.
- Added: Luther's fixed thanksgiving; the Nürnberg thanksgiving; Dietrich's gospel collects; collects for rulers under the Sanctus; the peace collect at the end.
- Altered: Latin to German; the postcommunion from a proper to an ordinary, with alternatives; the sacrificial petitions of the old prayers recast as petitions for faith, love and the fruit of the sacrament.

5.2 Scope, sources and cautions

What was searched. The `eko.db` database was searched for the three prayers by name, in Latin, German and Low German spellings:

- collecta, collecte, collecten, oratio, gebet;
- secreta, secret, stillmesse, super oblata;
- complenda, complende, postcommunio, post communionem, danksagung, danckseggінge;
- super populum, super plebem, humiliate capita, inclinate capita, "über das Volk", "neiget eure Häupter".

It was also searched for the opening words of the prayers that the orders use after the communion: Quod ore sumpsimus, Corpus tuum, Proficiat, "Wir danken dir … heilsame Gabe", "Wir sagen deiner göttlichen Mildigkeit", "wunderbarlichen Sakrament", "heiligen Mut, guten Rat". Sehling's editorial notes that identify Missal sources ("Röm. Meßbuch", "Missale", "lateinisches Meßgebet") were read for every order quoted. The passages were then read in context.

Related chapters. Three earlier chapters overlap with this one:

- Chapter 7 prints the eucharistic part of the early German Masses in full, including their offertory, Sanctus collects, thanksgivings and postcommunions. Where a text is printed there, this chapter cites it rather than repeating it.
- Chapter 4 deals with the other proper parts of the Mass: introit, lessons, gradual, offertory chant, Preface, communion chant.
- Chapter 8 deals with the hymns, including Verleih uns Frieden, after which the peace collect is sung.

Later chapters take up related subjects:

- Chapter 2 covers the salutation and collect in the order of the Mass, and the service when nobody communicated (§§2.8, 2.14).
- Chapter 6 covers the three collects read from the pulpit as a family of the general prayer (§6.15).
- Chapter 10 covers the collects of Matins and Vespers (§§10.7.1, 10.7.5).
- Chapter 13 covers the Litany and its collects (§13.21).
- Chapter 12 covers the seasons whose collects were kept (§12.12).

Where an order gives the collect to a deacon or junior minister, as at Hof, see Chapter 16.

Cautions. Four things limit what the corpus can show:

- Silence is not absence. Many orders say only "a collect" or "the collect with the blessing", without saying which. Where an order prints a collect series, it may not print the rubric for using it, and the reverse.
- Sources of the German prayers. The identification of a German prayer with a Latin one is in most cases Sehling's editors'. Where the identification is this chapter's own, it is marked as such. The German is often free.
- The Missal used. The editors cite the Roman Missal of their own day, or a diocesan Missal (Bamberg, Verden, Bremen, Magdeburg). The Latin texts given here are those of the Roman Missal. The Sarum Missal shares most of these collects and postcommunions with the Roman, though it numbers the Sundays after Trinity rather than after Pentecost. The German texts therefore cannot show whether a prayer came by a Sarum or a Roman route; in the German lands the source was in any case the local diocesan Missal.

- Beyond the corpus. The corpus ends in the early seventeenth century. It says nothing directly about the later Lutheran service books, including the Common Service and its postcommunions. §5.6.2 notes the points of contact.

5.3 The medieval system and Luther's rulings

5.3.1 What the reformers inherited

The three prayers. In the late-medieval Mass the celebrant said three variable prayers, each ending with the long conclusion (Per Dominum nostrum …):

- the collect after the Gloria, sung aloud;
- the secret at the end of the offertory, said silently over the bread and wine, of which only the closing Per omnia saecula saeculorum was sung aloud, as the opening of the Preface dialogue;
- the postcommunion or complenda after the communion, sung aloud.

Proper and multiplied. All three changed with the day. They were also added to. Commemorations of a feast falling on the same day, of an octave, or of a season brought their own collect, secret and postcommunion. Votive prayers (for peace, for the ruler, for rain or fair weather) were added in the same way. Sehling's editors gloss the terms where the orders use them: the complenda is "the closing collect" ("die Schlußkollekte", Sehling 20/1, p. 123, n. 29) and "today called the postcommunion" (Sehling 11, p. 49, n. 24).

5.3.2 Luther's Formula missae, 1523: one collect, no secret, a new postcommunion

"Hireling collects." Luther's preface to the Formula missae lists the collects among the late accretions that made the Mass a sacrifice. Luther, Formula missae et communionis, 1523 (Sehling 1, p. 4):

> ibi cepit missa fieri sacrificium, ibi addita offertoria et collectae mercenariae, ibi sequentiae et prosae inter Sanctus et Gloria in excelsis insertae.

there the Mass began to be made a sacrifice; there were added the offertories and the hireling collects; there the sequences and proses were inserted between the Sanctus and the Gloria in excelsis.

The collect: kept, but only one. The collect of the day is kept, "if only it be godly", and Luther notes that the Sunday collects mostly are. But it is to be said alone: no commemorations, no second or third collect. Luther, Formula missae et communionis, 1523 (Sehling 1, p. 5):

> Tertio, sequens oratio illa seu collecta, modo sit pia (ut fere sunt, quae dominicis diebus habentur), perseveret ritu suo, sed ea duntaxat unica. Post hanc lectio epistolae.

Thirdly, the prayer or collect which followeth, if only it be godly (as for the most part are those which are appointed for the Lord's days), let it continue in its accustomed rite, but that one alone. After this the reading of the epistle.

The secret: gone with the offertory. Luther rejects the whole offertory, "whence also it is called the offertory", because from there on "almost everything soundeth and savoureth of oblation" (Sehling 1, p. 5). The secret, the prayer over the oblation, falls with it. The text and the details are given in Chapter 7, §7.3.1.

The postcommunion: the proper complenda replaced. The proper postcommunions are rejected for the same reason: "they almost all sound of sacrifice". In their place Luther puts two of the priest's private prayers from the ablutions, said aloud in the collect tone. Luther, Formula missae et communionis, 1523 (Sehling 1, p. 6):

> Sed loco complendae seu ultimae collectae, quia fere sacrificium sonant, legatur in eodem tono oratio illa: 'Quod ore sumpsimus, domine'. Poterit et illa legi: 'Corpus tuum, domine, quod sumpsimus etc.' mutato numero in pluralem.

But in the place of the complenda or last collect, because they almost all sound of sacrifice, let that prayer be read in the same tone: "What we have taken with our mouth, O Lord". That other also may be read: "Thy body, O Lord, which we have received, etc.", the number being changed into the plural.

The two prayers are:

- Quod ore sumpsimus: Quod ore sumpsimus, Domine, pura mente capiamus, et de munere temporali fiat nobis remedium sempiternum. "What we have taken with our mouth, O Lord, may we receive with a pure mind; and from a temporal gift may it become for us an everlasting remedy."
- Corpus tuum: Corpus tuum, Domine, quod sumpsi, et Sanguis, quem potavi, adhaereat visceribus meis … "Thy Body, O Lord, which I have taken, and thy Blood, which I have drunk, cleave unto my inmost parts …"

What this did to the system. In one stroke the Formula missae reduced the three proper prayers to one. The collect stayed proper. The secret was gone. The postcommunion became, for the first time, an ordinary: the same prayer every Sunday.

5.3.3 Luther's Deutsche Messe, 1526: one collect and a fixed thanksgiving

The collect. The Deutsche Messe gives one collect, read by the priest "facing the altar" on a fixed pitch. The example printed is a German collect from the Missal. Luther, Deutsche Messe und ordnung gottis diensts, 1526 (Sehling 1, p. 14):

> Darnach lieset der priester eine collecten ins F faut in unisono, wie folget. Almechtiger Gott, der du bist ein beschutzer aller die auf dich hoffen, an welchs gnad niemand ichts vermag noch etwas fur dir gild, lasse deine barmherzigkeyt uns reichlich widerfarn, auf das wir durch dein heiliges eingeben denken was recht ist, und durch deine kraft auch dasselbige volbringen umb Jesus Christus unsers hern willen. Amen.

Thereafter the priest readeth a collect on F fa ut in unison, as followeth: Almighty God, who art the protector of all that hope in thee, without whose grace no man is able to do aught, nor is anything of worth before thee; let thy mercy richly come upon us, that by thy holy inspiration we may think those things that be right, and by thy power also perform the same; for Jesus Christ our Lord's sake. Amen.

Its source. The first half is the collect Protector in te sperantium, Deus, sine quo nihil est validum, nihil sanctum: multiplica super nos misericordiam tuam (third Sunday after Pentecost, the fourth after Trinity). The editors of the Lüneburg order identify the Missal prayer (Sehling 6/1, p. 572, n. 70). The second half follows, in this chapter's reading, the Rogate collect Deus, a quo bona cuncta procedunt … ut cogitemus, te inspirante, quae recta sunt, et te gubernante eadem faciamus. The Deutsche Messe collect thus fuses two Missal collects into one German prayer.

The postcommunion: a single fixed thanksgiving. After the communion the Deutsche Messe has one prayer, with no alternative, followed by the Aaronic blessing. Luther, Deutsche Messe und ordnung gottis diensts, 1526 (Sehling 1, p. 16):

> Darnach folget die collecten mit dem segen. Wir dancken dir, almechtiger herre gott, das du uns durch dise heilsame gabe hast erquicket und bitten deine barmherzigkeit, das du uns solchs gedeien lassest zu starckem glauben gegen dir und zu brinstiger liebe unter uns allen, umb Jhesus Christus unsers herrn willen. Amen.

Thereafter followeth the collect with the blessing. We give thanks unto thee, Almighty Lord God, that thou hast refreshed us through this salutary gift; and we beseech thy mercy, that thou wouldest make the same to prosper in us unto strong faith toward thee and unto fervent love among us all; for Jesus Christ our Lord's sake. Amen.

Its source. This is not a new composition but an old postcommunion, recast. The editor of the Verden order of 1606 points to P. Drews, who traced it to the postcommunion of the eighteenth Sunday after Pentecost. Verden, Kirchenordnung, 1606, editor's note (Sehling 7/1, p. 161, n. 81):

> zum lateinischen Ursprung der Kollekte (Postcommunio der Messe des 18. Sonntags nach Pfingsten im Missale): P. Drews, Beiträge zu Luthers liturgischen Reformen. 1910, 95f.

on the Latin origin of the collect (the postcommunion of the Mass of the eighteenth Sunday after Pentecost in the Missal): P. Drews, Beiträge zu Luthers liturgischen Reformen, 1910, pp. 95f.

The Latin is Gratias tibi referimus, Domine, sacro munere vegetati: tuam misericordiam deprecantes, ut dignos nos eius participatione perficias: "We give thee thanks, O Lord, being quickened by the sacred gift, beseeching thy mercy that thou wouldest make us worthy of the partaking thereof." Luther kept the frame ("we give thanks … refreshed by the gift … we beseech thy mercy"). He changed the petition: not that we be made worthy of the sacrament, but that it prosper in us unto faith toward God and love toward one another.

The result. One proper postcommunion of the year, made over, became the fixed postcommunion of the Deutsche Messe. Through the Saxon and Low German orders it became the ordinary Lutheran postcommunion (§5.6.3).

5.4 The collect

5.4.1 One collect, or two

Luther's rule: one. The Formula missae allowed "that one alone" (§5.3.2). The early Nürnberg Masses follow it:

- Volprecht's Mass, 1524, lists the parts of the Mass with what is "always said" and "never said". Of the collect it says: "only one is said". Nürnberg, Deutsche Messe des Priors Volprecht, 1524 (Sehling 11, p. 39):

> Gl[or]ia in excelsis Deo semper dicitur. Collecta: una t[ant]um d[ici]tur. Ep[isto]la, Graduale, v[ersus], Alleluja, v[ersus].

Gloria in excelsis Deo is always said. Collect: one only is said. Epistle, gradual, verse, Alleluia, verse.

- The Nürnberg parish churches, 1524: "the celebrant sings the Sunday prayer, Sancti tui nominis etc." (Sehling 11, p. 46). Sehling's note explains: "the prayer falling on the Sunday in question (the collect)".

The memorial collect survives as a prayer "for need". Mecklenburg 1545 keeps Luther's rule but leaves room for a second collect in time of need. It also forbids reading the same collect every time, and reading a collect out of its season. Mecklenburg, Ordeninge der misse, 1545 (Sehling 5, p. 152):

> Me schal ock men eine collecten tor tidt lesen. Idt were den sake, dat ander grot noth vorhanden were, de noch ein ander gebet vorderde. Ein ider wert de gebede ordenen na gelegenheit, dat nicht stedes ein collecte gelesen werde. Ock nicht in dem osterfeste, de collecten van den winachten, sonder ordentlick hir mede handelen, wo truwen husholderen to behort.

One shall also read but one collect at a time, unless it were that some other great need were at hand which required yet another prayer. Each shall order the prayers according to the occasion, that not always the same collect be read; nor at the feast of Easter the collects of Christmas; but [each shall] deal herein in order, as becometh faithful stewards.

Two collects as the rule: Ansbach 1548. The Ansbach Auctuarium of 1548, an Interim order, goes back to the medieval pattern of a collect of the day followed by a second, votive collect. It requires two, and fixes their subjects: the first for spiritual things, the second for temporal goods. Brandenburg-Ansbach-Kulmbach, Auctuarium, 1548 (Interim order; Sehling 11, p. 330):

> Auf solch gesang volgen in der kirchenordnung etlich viel gestelte collecten oder gebet, daraus jedesmals zwo collecten nach gelegenhait der zeit für allerlei anligen der christenhait und des volks genommen werden solln. Doch das die erste collect allwegen für gaistliche sachen sei und die ander umb zeitliche gueter als frid, gut wetter, für die frucht des feldes etc., allerding, wie in der kirchenordnung vermeldet wurd.

After such singing there follow in the church order very many collects or prayers set forth, out of which each time two collects shall be taken according to the occasion of the time, for all manner of concerns of Christendom and of the people; yet so that the first collect be always for spiritual things, and the second for temporal goods, as peace, good weather, for the fruit of the field, etc., altogether as is set forth in the church order.

"One or more." Other orders leave the number open:

- Henneberg: a pastor's report has "a collect or two, as need requireth" after the sermon (Sehling 2, p. 330).
- Wolfstein 1574: "one or more collects according to the occasion of the time etc., and these shall be in German and not Latin" (Sehling 13, p. 576).

The second collect for peace. The commonest second prayer is the collect for peace. Luther's Verleih uns Frieden was sung at the end of the service with a German collect after it, "Herr Gott, himlischer Vater, der du heiligen Mut, guten Rat und rechte Werke schaffst …". This is the Missal collect of the Mass for peace, Deus, a quo sancta desideria, recta consilia, et iusta sunt opera (Sehling 6/2, p. 819, n. 71). It appears in at least twelve orders of the corpus, from Saxony 1539 to Schaumburg 1614. In Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 it follows the proper postcommunion, so that the Advent Mass ends with two collects, the proper one and the one for peace (§5.6.2).

Hof 1592: "of the season, or for rain". At Vespers the Hof deacon sings "the collect of the season, or also for rain and fair weather" (Sehling 11, p. 429). The votive collects ad petendam pluviam and ad poscendam serenitatem of the Missal survive here by name.

5.4.2 The collect of the day kept, in German

Saxony 1539. The order of Duke Henry has the collect "in Latin or German, the common one or quotidianam, or de festis, as they stand hereafter at the end". Saxony, Kirchenordnunge zum anfang, 1539 (Sehling 1, p. 274):

> Darnach eine collecten, auch latinisch oder deudsch, die gemeine oder quotidianam, oder de festis, wie sie hernach zu end stehen.

Thereafter a collect, also in Latin or German, the common one or [the] daily one, or [one] of the feasts, as they stand hereafter at the end.

The collects at the end are headed "collects or prayers which one may read in the church under the office of the Mass (before the epistle) and also otherwise" (Sehling 1, p. 275). They are grouped by season: Advent, Christmas, and so on.

Collect series by the church year. The later territorial orders print a series of German collects for the seasons and feasts:

- Saxony 1580 and Mansfeld 1580 (Sehling 1, p. 375; 2, pp. 227–229);
- Lüneburg 1564 and Wolfenbüttel 1569 (Sehling 6/1, pp. 568–572 and 178–179);
- Henneberg 1582 (Sehling 2, p. 317);
- Grubenhagen 1581 (Sehling 6/2, pp. 1076–1081);
- Verden 1606 and Osnabrück 1618 (Sehling 7/1), Oldenburg 1573 (Sehling 7/2.1) and Schaumburg 1614 (Sehling 7/2.2).

Henneberg introduces its series as "pure collects", partly in use before, partly new. Henneberg, Kirchen ordnung of Georg Ernst, 1582 (Sehling 2, p. 317):

> Volgen die collecten, nach ordnung der zeit und festen im jar. Auf das die pfarrherrn und kirchendiener die versikel und reine collecten beisamen haben mögen, ist fur gut angesehen worden, dieselben hiernach zu setzen. Und sind solche gutes teils hiebevor auch, ausserhalb etlicher, welche zum teil nach gelegenheit dieser ordnung und dann auch sonsten von neuem hinzugesetzt worden, in unserer kirchen gebreuchlich gewesen, und erstlich die, so auf gewise fest und zeiten, volgends andere gemeine, so nach gelegenheit jeder vorfallender not und sonsten pflegen gesungen zu werden.

Here follow the collects, according to the order of the seasons and feasts in the year. That the pastors and ministers of the church may have the versicles and pure collects together, it hath been thought good to set them down hereafter. And such have for a good part been in use in our churches heretofore also, except some which have been newly added, partly by occasion of this order and partly otherwise; and first those [appointed] for certain feasts and seasons, then other common ones, which are wont to be sung according to the occasion of every need that falleth out, and otherwise.

The proper collect kept with its versicle. Henneberg's "versicles and pure collects" keep another medieval habit: the collect introduced by a seasonal versicle. Its Advent set begins "Bereitet den weg dem herrn, halleluja" (Sehling 2, p. 317). Hof 1592 does the same before its festal collects ("Uns ist ein kind geboren", Sehling 11, p. 413).

What the German collects are. Sehling's editors trace most of the seasonal collects of the Saxon and Lower Saxon series back to the Wittenberg hymnbook of 1533, and through it to the Missal. Lüneburg's Advent collect is a typical case. Lüneburg, Kirchenordnung, 1564 (Sehling 6/1, pp. 542–543):

> Darauf wende sich der priester widerumb jegen den altar und singe eine collecten de tempore oder festo oder die sich zu der materien schicken auf folgende melodey: […] Last uns beten: Allmechtiger Herre Gott, weck uns auf, das wir bereit sein, wenn […] dein Son kümpt, ihn mit freuden zu empfahen und dir mit reinem herzen zu dienen durch denselbigen deinen Son Jhesum Christum, unsern Herrn.

Thereupon let the priest turn again toward the altar and sing a collect of the season or of the feast, or one that agreeth with the matter, to the following melody: […] Let us pray. Almighty Lord God, stir us up, that we may be ready, when thy Son cometh, to receive him with joy and to serve thee with a pure heart; through the same thy Son Jesus Christ our Lord.

This is the Advent collect Excita, Domine, corda nostra ad praeparandas Unigeniti tui vias: ut per eius adventum purificatis tibi mentibus servire mereamur. Sehling's editors identify it as the collect of the second Sunday in Advent (Sehling 6/2, p. 1077, n. 86; 7/1, p. 93, n. 7). "Mit reinem herzen zu dienen" is purificatis mentibus servire. The Missal's "prepare the ways of thine Only-begotten" becomes "that we may be ready … to receive him with joy". The same collect stands in Saxony 1580, Mansfeld 1580, Grubenhagen 1581, Buxtehude 1565 and Ysenburg-Birstein 1588.

Other Missal collects identified by the editors. In the notes to Lüneburg, Grubenhagen, Osnabrück and Oldenburg the editors identify, among others:

- Christmas: Concede, quaesumus, omnipotens Deus, ut nos Unigeniti tui nova per carnem nativitas liberet (third Mass of Christmas; Sehling 7/1, p. 271; 7/2.1, p. 1134);
- Ascension: Concede, quaesumus, omnipotens Deus, ut qui hodierna die Unigenitum tuum … ad caelos ascendisse credimus (Sehling 6/2, p. 1078, n. 97);
- Pentecost: Deus, qui hodierna die corda fidelium Sancti Spiritus illustratione docuisti (Sehling 6/2, p. 1079, n. 99);
- the third Sunday after Easter (Sehling 6/1, p. 573, n. 76).

Pentecost is identified in Osnabrück too (Sehling 7/1, p. 275). The introduction to the Oldenburg order sums up its very large collection: of all its collects only two are its own, and of these "the one rests upon a Latin Mass prayer" (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 962).

5.4.3 The collects purged

"If it be pure." The condition Luther set ("if only it be godly") recurs:

- Amberg 1550: "the collect of the season, if it be pure, and the epistle in Latin" (Sehling 13, p. 286).
- Henneberg 1582: "pure collects" (above).

Collects removed. The collects that went were those of the saints, and above all those that asked for the intercession of Mary and the saints. Hannover 1536 names them with the Marian antiphons. Hannover, Kirchenordnung, 1536 (Sehling 6/2, p. 1009):

> Was wider Gottes wort ist, lassen wir nimer singen oder lesen, es sey deudsch oder latin. Darumb haben wir abgestelt das Salve regina, Regina celi, Sub tuum presidium und etliche collecten, darinnen die ehre, so allein unserm einigen mitler Jhesu Christo zugehört, allzu grob den creaturn zugelegt wird.

Whatsoever is against God's word we will never suffer to be sung or read, be it German or Latin. Therefore we have put away the Salve regina, the Regina caeli, the Sub tuum praesidium, and certain collects wherein the honour that belongeth to our one Mediator Jesus Christ alone is all too grossly given to the creatures.

Luther on the office collects. Already in 1523 Luther had set aside the antiphons, responsories and collects "of the saints and of the cross" until "they be swept", "for there is grievous much filth therein" (Sehling 1, p. 3).

5.4.4 New collects added: the gospel collects

Veit Dietrich's collects. The chief addition was a new kind of collect: one written on the gospel of the day, as a summary of the sermon, rather than on the season. The source was Veit Dietrich's Kinderpostille and Summarien (from 1546). Wolfenbüttel 1569 allows them in place of the season's collect. Wolfenbüttel, Kirchenordnung, 1569 (Sehling 6/1, p. 179):

> Es mögen auch zu zeiten auf den Sontagen und feirtagen die collecten accommodiret werden auf die lehre, so aus dem evangelio gehandelt wird, wie solche collecten in der kinderpostillen Viti Didrichs zu finden sind.

There may also at times on the Sundays and holy days the collects be accommodated to the doctrine that is handled out of the gospel, as such collects are to be found in the children's postil of Veit Dietrich.

Other orders allow the same:

- Lippe, Corvinus's order of 1542: a later hand adds that "there stand also certain fine collects in the postil of Veit Dietrich, appointed for all Sundays and feasts" (Sehling 21, p. 352, apparatus).

- Soest 1609: "a collect … that agreeth with the gospel, or else a common collect for the grace of the Holy Ghost for the sermon" (Sehling 22, p. 488).
- Lüneburg 1564: "or one that agreeth with the matter" (above).

Two collects again: one before and one after the sermon. In the Buxtehude agenda of 1565 each Sunday has two collects, the old and the new. Sehling's introduction describes the arrangement. Buxtehude, Agende, 1565, editor's introduction (Sehling 7/1, p. 67):

> In der ersten Kollektensammlung für die Sonn- und Festtage des Jahres wechselt meistens ein dem Missale entlehntes, freilich ins Niederdeutsche und teilweise sehr frei übertragenes Gebet mit einer Evangelienkollekte Veit Dietrichs, wobei das eine Gebet vor, das andere nach der Predigt zu sprechen ist. Diesem Kollektenzyklus liegt eine in verschiedenen Ausgaben erschienene Sammlung des Mansfelder Hofpredigers Michael Coelius (1492-1559) zugrunde. Eine zweite Kollektensammlung gegen Schluß der Agende stellt alte lateinische Meßgebete, stellenweise etwas überarbeitet, zusammen.

In the first collection of collects for the Sundays and feasts of the year there alternate for the most part a prayer borrowed from the Missal (rendered, indeed, into Low German and in part very freely) and a gospel collect of Veit Dietrich, the one prayer to be said before the sermon and the other after it. Underlying this cycle of collects is a collection by the Mansfeld court preacher Michael Coelius (1492–1559), which appeared in various editions. A second collection of collects toward the end of the agenda brings together old Latin Mass prayers, here and there somewhat revised.

An example of the Missal collect "before the sermon" is that of the third Sunday after Epiphany, Omnipotens sempiterne Deus, infirmitatem nostram propitius respice, atque ad protegendum nos dexteram tuae maiestatis extende. Sehling's note cites the Verden Missal for it (Sehling 7/1, p. 98, n. 62). Buxtehude, Agende, 1565 (Sehling 7/1, p. 98):

> Am drudden Sondag. Gebett vor der predig. Almechtige Herr Godt, du woldest gnedichlick behertigen unsere swackheit und dyne gewaldigen hand utrecken, uns vor unsern vienden to schutten, dorch Jhesum Christum, unsern Hern. Amen.

On the third Sunday. Prayer before the sermon. Almighty Lord God, mayest thou graciously take to heart our weakness, and stretch forth thy mighty hand to defend us against our enemies; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Michael Coelius. The editors name the source of many of these German Missal collects: the collection of the Mansfeld court preacher Michael Coelius, who "translated a Latin Mass prayer into German for his collection of collects" (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 1137, n. 35; 7/1, p. 92, n. 1). The old proper collects thus came into the Lutheran orders by two routes. The first was Luther's circle and the Wittenberg hymnbooks (1529–1533). The second was Coelius's translations.

5.4.5 Language, voice and form

Latin or German. The early orders allowed either:

- Bremen 1534: "a collect in Latin out of the Mass book, or in German out of the hymnbook" (Sehling 7/2.2, p. 459);
- Saxony 1539: "also in Latin or German" (above);
- Amberg 1550: the collect of the season, in Latin (above).

Later orders required German, so that the people could say the Amen. Coburg, Vorschaffung of the visitation of 1554/55 (Sehling 1, p. 544):

> Zum dritten, das keine collecten lateinisch, sondern alle sampt deutsch gesungen werden, dormit das volk vorstehen und amen dorzu singen moge.

Thirdly, that no collects be sung in Latin, but all together in German, that the people may understand, and sing Amen thereto.

Wolfstein 1574 says the same ("in German and not Latin", Sehling 13, p. 576). Mecklenburg 1545 has the collect read "with a loud voice, that the whole church may say Amen and so cry unto God with the priest" (Sehling 5, p. 152).

Facing the altar. Luther's Deutsche Messe has the collect read "with the face turned to the altar", the epistle "with the face turned to the people" (Sehling 1, p. 14). Lüneburg 1564 keeps the rule (above). Hof 1592 has the deacon sing the collect "facing the people" (spectans populum, Sehling 11, p. 425).

The conclusions. Hof 1592 keeps the medieval rules for ending a collect, set out as in the old rubrics. Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592 (Sehling 11, p. 411):

> Notio de collectis! Quandocunque oratio dirigitur ad Patrem solum, in fine dicatur: Per Dominum nostrum Jesum Christum etc. Si vero dirigitur ad Patrem et Filii mentio fit in ipsa, in fine dicatur: per eundem Dominum nostrum Jesum Christum. Si oratio dirigitur ad Filium solum, finis sic formetur: Qui cum Patre et Spiritu Sancto vivis et regnas Deus per omnia etc.

A note on the collects! Whensoever the prayer is directed to the Father alone, let there be said at the end: Through our Lord Jesus Christ, etc. But if it be directed to the Father, and mention of the Son be made in it, let there be said at the end: through the same our Lord Jesus Christ. If the prayer be directed to the Son alone, let the ending be formed thus: Who with the Father and the Holy Ghost livest and reignest, God, world without end, etc.

Hof's collects at Mass. At the Mass itself Hof's deacon sings "the collect of the season, or one directed to the Lord's Supper". After the communion he sings "a collect, for example the thanksgiving for the Lord's Supper received" (Sehling 11, pp. 425–426). Its example of a Mass collect is the Deutsche Messe collect "O allmechtiger Gott, der du bist ein beschützer aller" (Sehling 11, p. 425).

5.5 The secret

5.5.1 Abolished with the offertory

No order keeps the secret as a prayer over the gifts. The secret was the offertory's own prayer: it asked God to receive the gifts offered. Luther's rejection of the offertory (§5.3.2) took it with it, and the orders that name the secret do so only to say it is left out:

- Volprecht, 1524: "the offertory is never said, because Christ was once offered for our sins" (Sehling 11, p. 39). There is no secret in his list.
- The Nürnberg parish Mass, 1524: after the Creed the celebrant goes straight to Dominus vobiscum and Sursum corda, "the offertory and the lesser canon being omitted" (offertorio ac canone minore omissis, Sehling 11, p. 47).
- Prussia 1525 names the secret outright. Prussia, Artikel der ceremonien und anderer kirchenordnung, 1525 (Sehling 4, p. 32):

> Volgt die prefation, welche der priester deütsch singet samt den evangelischen worten der gebenedeiung oder consecration oder brod und wein (den offertorium, secret, canon minor und maior werden notwendig ausgelassen).

There followeth the Preface, which the priest singeth in German, together with the evangelical words of the blessing or consecration of bread and wine (for the offertory, the secret, the lesser and the greater canon are of necessity left out).

Never a German secret. The Lutheran orders translated collects and postcommunions from the Missal, but the corpus has no German version of any secret. The secrets were the prayers that most plainly asked God to accept an offering. Unlike the collects, they could not be "purified" by a light change of wording.

5.5.2 What took the secret's place

Its last words. The secret ended aloud with Per omnia saecula saeculorum. Amen, which ran straight into Dominus vobiscum and Sursum corda. Three German Masses keep this ending before the Preface dialogue, though the silent prayer is gone:

- Müntzer (Radical Reformation): "durch alle ewigkeit der ewigkeit. Amen";
- Lippe: "Durch alle ewicheit der ewicheit amen";
- Calenberg-Göttingen 1542: "Gott sey preis von ewigkeit zu ewigkeit. Amen".

See Chapter 7, §7.1.1 and §7.4.1.

An open prayer at the same place. Dortmund 1554 keeps the heading Secreta and says what is to be done there instead. The silent prayer over the gifts becomes an open prayer for the magistrates and the needs of Christendom, if the general prayer has not already been said after the sermon. Dortmund, Gottesdienstordnung, 1554 (Sehling 21, p. 209):

> Secreta Vor de Secreta mach de Prester ein apen gebedt don vor alle Overicheit, stenden unde nodtsaken der gantzen Christenheit, dar he medde an de Prefation kome, so he na der predike dat gemene bedt nicht gedan hedde edder sus ein ander na gelegenheit der tydt.

Secret. In place of the Secret the priest may make an open prayer for all magistrates, estates and needs of the whole Christendom, wherewith he may come to the Preface, if he have not made the common prayer after the sermon; or else another, according to the occasion of the time.

Collects under the Sanctus. In several orders the space between the offertory and the Verba was filled with collects said aloud for the Church and the magistrates. They stood under the Sanctus, before or after the Verba:

- Döber, Nürnberg 1525: an optional "common prayer, to be said on a holy day when there is much people, after the Preface or before the Sanctus, as one will" (Sehling 11, p. 55). See Chapter 7, §7.8.11.
- Brandenburg 1540: four German collects under the Latin Sanctus (§7.12.2 of that chapter).
- Calenberg-Göttingen 1542: "the collect which the priest prayeth under the Sanctus", headed "Für die oberkeit". It is printed in every proper Mass of the order: "Folget die collecten, welche der priester under dem Sanctus betet: Barmherziger himlischer Vater …" (Sehling 6/2, p. 819, and again in each proper Mass, pp. 821–833). See §7.13.1 of that chapter.
- Pfalz-Neuburg 1543: three collects under the Sanctus, after the Verba (§7.14.4 of that chapter).

These are not secrets. They are not proper to the day, they say nothing of gifts, and they are said aloud. But they occupy the secret's place, and like the medieval memorial collects they pray for the ruler and for peace.

A prayer over the gifts, once. Only Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 has a prayer said over the bread and wine before the Verba: Osiander's "Wir bringen … dise deine gaben". It is a new composition, not a secret. See Chapter 7, §7.14.2.

In sum. Of the three proper prayers the secret alone vanished without a successor of its own kind. What survives is its closing doxology, its place (filled with intercessions), and in one order its name.

5.6 The postcommunion

5.6.1 Luther's 1523 substitutes: Quod ore sumpsimus and Corpus tuum

In Latin. Brandenburg 1540 and Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 keep both of Luther's prayers in Latin. The priest says them "bowing", after the German thanksgiving (Sehling 3, p. 70; 13, p. 76). The texts are given in Chapter 7, §7.12.8 and §7.14.8. Here they have become the priest's own devotion again, said after the people's thanksgiving, which is what they had been in the Roman rite.

In German. The Strasbourg Mass of Theobald Schwarz (1524, Moderate Reformed) gives Quod ore sumpsimus in German under the old name Complenda. It also allows "any other that seemeth Christian". Strasbourg, the early agendas: Schwarz's German Mass, 1524 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 20/1, p. 123):

> Complenda Laßt uns bitten: Das wir mit mund haben zu uns genomen, verlyhe uns, herr, uff das wir dasselbig mit reynem gemüt annemen, und das uns von der zeytlichen goben werde eyne ewige artzenyg, durch Christum Jesum, unsern herrn, Amen. Vel aliam aliquam, que Christiana videtur.

Complenda. Let us pray. What we have taken with our mouth, grant us, O Lord, that we may receive the same with a pure mind; and that from the temporal gift there may be made unto us an everlasting medicine; through Christ Jesus our Lord. Amen. Or some other that seemeth Christian.

The printed Teutsche Meß of 1524 has the same text (Sehling 20/1, p. 133). The Strasbourg Ordenung und inhalt Teutscher Mess (also Moderate Reformed) explains the term for the people: "Complenda: the conclusion with a common prayer" (Sehling 20/1, p. 135). Volprecht's German Mass has a German Quod ore too (Chapter 7, §7.7.2).

5.6.2 Proper postcommunions kept

Not every early order followed Luther. Several kept the proper complenda of the day, either in Latin or in a German version.

Nürnberg, 1524. The Latin Mass of the Nürnberg parish churches ends with the day's postcommunion. Nürnberg, Gottesdienstordnung der Pfarrkirchen, 1524 (Sehling 11, p. 49):

> Demum offitium cum oratione, quam complendam vocant, concludatur.

Finally let the office be concluded with the prayer which they call the complenda.

The Coburg proposal of 1524, which follows the Nürnberg Mass ("the offertory and the lesser canon left out"), likewise ends with "the collect which they call the complenda, and the Benedicamus with the blessing, as is customary" (Sehling 1, p. 542).

Volprecht, 1524. Volprecht's outline of the Latin Mass has "Complenda de quo sit missa": the postcommunion of whatever Mass is being said (Sehling 11, p. 39). Sehling's note: "namely the one falling due in each case". His German Mass for Trinity ends with the Trinity postcommunion, Proficiat nobis ad salutem corporis et animae, in German (Sehling 11, p. 42). See Chapter 7, §7.7.2.

Müntzer, 1524 (Radical Reformation). Each of Müntzer's five German Masses ends with a "prayer at the end of the office", most of them German versions of the Missal postcommunion. For Easter it is the Easter postcommunion, Spiritum nobis, Domine, tuae caritatis infunde: ut quos sacramentis paschalibus satiasti, tua facias pietate concordes. Allstedt, Thomas Müntzer, Deutsch evangelisch messe, 1524 (Radical Reformation; Sehling 1, p. 503):

> Unser osterlamp Christus ist geopfert vor uns alleluia alleluia. […] Gepet am ende des ampts der ersteung. O herr geuss in uns den geist der liebe und die du hast gesettiget mit deinem osterlamb mache eintrechtig in deiner liebe durch Jesum etc.

Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us, alleluia, alleluia. […] Prayer at the end of the office of the Resurrection. O Lord, pour into us the spirit of love, and those whom thou hast filled with thine Easter lamb make of one mind in thy love; through Jesus, etc.

The other postcommunions of Müntzer's Masses (Radical Reformation):

- Pentecost: Sancti Spiritus, Domine, corda nostra mundet infusio ("O herr vorlei uns die gnad des heiligen geists, auf das der thau deiner güte …", Sehling 1, p. 504).
- Advent: a new prayer, "O herr gott, steh hart bei uns" (Chapter 7, §7.4.4).
- Christmas and the Passion: prayers in the same form, "O gütiger gott eröffne uns den abgrund unser selen …" and "O herr gib deinem armen volke zu erkennen deine veterliche zucht und ruthe …" (Sehling 1, p. 502). This chapter has not found a Missal source for them.

Erfurt, 1525. The Erfurt Deutsches Kirchenamt takes over the offices of Müntzer (Radical Reformation) and adds one for Trinity. Its "prayer at the end of the office" is the Trinity postcommunion Proficiat. Erfurt, Deutsches Kirchenamt, 1525 (Sehling 2, p. 378):

> Gebet am ende des ampts: O herre got, lass uns zu nutz kummen des leibes und der seelen die entphahunge des heiligen sacraments und das ewige bekentnus des [der] heiligen und der selbstendigen, ungetheilten dreivaltigkeit. Der du lebest und regirest, got, mit dem son und heiligem geiste von ewigkeit zu ewigkeit. Amen.

Prayer at the end of the office: O Lord God, let the receiving of the holy sacrament profit us for body and soul, and the everlasting confession of the holy and self-subsistent, undivided Trinity. Who livest and reignest, God, with the Son and the Holy Ghost, from everlasting to everlasting. Amen.

The Latin is Proficiat nobis ad salutem corporis et animae, Domine Deus noster, huius sacramenti susceptio: et sempiterna sanctae Trinitatis eiusdemque individuae Unitatis confessio. Erfurt's Pentecost office has Müntzer's Pentecost postcommunion (Sehling 2, p. 377).

Calenberg-Göttingen, 1542. The fullest survival is in the Calenberg-Göttingen order. Its proper Masses for Advent, Christmas, Purification, the Passion, Easter, Ascension and Pentecost each have, in order:

1. the collect of the day after the Gloria;
2. a collect for the magistrates under the Sanctus (§5.5.2);
3. in every Mass but Advent, a fixed thanksgiving after the communion ("Die danksagung"), usually Luther's;
4. after the Agnus Dei, a second, proper postcommunion, headed "Die collecta". Some are Missal postcommunions, others collects from the Wittenberg hymnbook (Passion, Sehling 6/2, p. 827).

Sehling's editors identify several of these proper prayers as Missal postcommunions. The Advent Mass, which has no thanksgiving, ends with the proper postcommunion and then the Da pacem with its collect: two collects after the communion, the proper one and the one for peace, as in the medieval rite. Calenberg-Göttingen, Kirchenordnung, 1542, Advent (Sehling 6/2, p. 819):

> Collect. Herre, las uns entpfangen an mittel des tempels deine barmherzigkeit, auf das wir mit billicher ehr vorgehen der herrligkeit, die an jenem tage uber uns komen wird. Das Da paoem zum beschlus: […] Verley uns friden gnediglich, Herr Gott, zu unsern zeiten, es ist doch ja kein ander nicht, der fur uns künde streiten, denn du, unser Gott, alleine. Gott, gib frid in deinem lande! Glück und heil zu allem stande! Herr Gott, himlischer Vater, der du heiligen muth, guten rath und rechte werke schaffest, gib deinen dienern frid, welchen die welt nicht kan geben, auf das unsere herzen an deinen geboten hangen und wir unsere zeit durch deinen schutz still und sicher fur feinden leben durch Jhesum Christ, deinen Sohn, unsern Herren. Amen.

Collect. Lord, let us receive thy mercy in the midst of thy temple, that we may go before the glory which shall come upon us at that day with fitting honour. The Da pacem for the conclusion: […] Grant us peace graciously, Lord God, in our days; there is indeed none other that could fight for us but thou, our God, alone. God, give peace in thy land! Fortune and welfare to every estate! Lord God, heavenly Father, who workest holy desire, good counsel and right works, give unto thy servants peace, which the world cannot give, that our hearts may cleave to thy commandments, and that we may pass our time by thy defence quiet and safe from enemies; through Jesus Christ, thy Son, our Lord. Amen.

The first prayer is the postcommunion of the first Sunday in Advent: Suscipiamus, Domine, misericordiam tuam in medio templi tui: ut reparationis nostrae ventura solemnia congruis honoribus praecedamus. Sehling's note gives the Latin phrase in medio templi tui (Sehling 6/2, p. 819, nn. 69–69a). The German changes "the coming solemnities of our redemption" into "the glory which shall come upon us at that day", turning the prayer from Christmas to the Last Day. The peace collect is the Missal's Deus, a quo sancta desideria (n. 71).

The Easter Mass of the same order has, after Luther's thanksgiving and the Agnus Dei, a version of the Easter postcommunion. It is shorter and freer than Müntzer's. Calenberg-Göttingen, Kirchenordnung, 1542, Easter (Sehling 6/2, p. 829):

> Die danksagung. Wir danken dir, almechtiger Gott .... […] Das Agnus Dei. O lamb Gottes unschuldig … […] Herr, uberschütte uns mit deinem Geiste, das wir in steter liebe und einigkeit leben, deiner auferstehung und zukunft niemer vergessen. Amen. Die benedictio. Der Herr segne dich ....

The thanksgiving. We give thanks unto thee, Almighty God … […] The Agnus Dei. O Lamb of God, unspotted … […] Lord, pour out upon us thy Spirit, that we may live in constant love and concord, and never forget thy resurrection and thy coming again. Amen. The blessing. The Lord bless thee …

Sehling's note: "On the following prayer compare the Roman Missal … (postcommunion on Easter Sunday and Easter Monday)" (Sehling 6/2, p. 829, n. 37a). The order's Pentecost Mass has the Pentecost postcommunion of Müntzer (Radical Reformation) in the same place (Sehling 6/2, p. 834). The order's common Mass, used outside the feasts, has in this slot the priest's prayer for peace Domine Iesu Christe, qui dixisti in German. See Chapter 7, §7.13.3.

Where the line ends. Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 is the last order in the corpus to print proper postcommunions for the feasts. After it the proper postcommunion is gone from the Mass. Some of these prayers survived as collects for other uses: the Corpus Christi collect became an alternative postcommunion (§5.6.4), and the Easter prayer for love and concord passed into the German collect books.

A note on the Common Service. The modern Common Service tradition, with its Sarum-derived postcommunion beside Luther's, lies outside the corpus, which ends in the early seventeenth century. Two things in the corpus bear on it:

- The Easter postcommunion *Spiritum nobis … tuae caritatis infunde is one of the Missal postcommunions that evangelical orders put into German and used after the communion: first Müntzer (Radical Reformation), then the Lutheran Calenberg-Göttingen.
- The Sarum and Roman Missals share most of their collects and postcommunions. The corpus therefore cannot show whether a given prayer reached a later book from the Sarum or the Roman Missal. The German orders took theirs from the German diocesan Missals.

5.6.3 Luther's thanksgiving becomes the ordinary postcommunion

From 1526 on. Luther's thanksgiving "Wir danken dir, allmächtiger Herr Gott, dass du uns durch diese heilsame Gabe hast erquicket" (§5.3.3) became the standard postcommunion of the Lutheran orders. The editor of the Verden order lists where it stands (Sehling 7/1, p. 161, n. 81):

- Lüneburg and Wolfenbüttel;
- Lippe, Spiegelberg and Pyrmont 1571;
- Oldenburg 1573;
- Grubenhagen and Hoya 1581;
- Lauenburg;
- Osnabrück 1618;
- and, he adds, "elsewhere also widely spread".

To these the corpus adds Saxony 1539 and 1580, Mansfeld 1580, Prussia 1544, Mecklenburg 1545, Calenberg-Göttingen 1542, Brandenburg 1540, Pfalz-Neuburg 1543, Hatzkerode, Nördlingen 1579 and others.

Still called the complenda. Some orders keep the old name for the new prayer. The Hatzkerode order calls Luther's thanksgiving "the complenda". Hatzkerode, Kirchenordnunge, 1534(?) (Sehling 2, p. 587):

> sol er sich umb keren und die salutatio singen: Der herr sei mit euch, dann wider zum altar gewant, die complende: Wir danken dir cet. oder dergleichen; zuletzt sol er sich wieder umb wenden und den segen singen: Der herr segne dich cet.

he shall turn about and sing the salutation, The Lord be with you; then, turned again to the altar, the complenda: We give thanks unto thee, etc., or the like; and last he shall turn about again and sing the blessing, The Lord bless thee, etc.

The term occurs also in Reuss 1552 ("the complenda after the use of our church … which one singeth toward the people", Sehling 2, p. 154), in Breslau 1550 ("then one readeth the complenda", Sehling 3, p. 404) and in the Wendish service at Senftenberg 1555 ("together with the complenda and the Aaronic blessing", Sehling 1, p. 672). Other orders call it simply "a collect of thanksgiving" (eine Collecten thor danckseggínge, Schleswig-Holstein 1542, Sehling 23, p. 91).

The salutation and the "Let us give thanks". The thanksgiving keeps the frame of the old postcommunion: Dominus vobiscum, Oremus, the prayer, Amen. Two orders add a bidding to give thanks:

- Mecklenburg 1545: "Segget dank dem heren. Darup antwordet de kercke: Gade si loff unde dank" (Sehling 5, p. 155);
- Saxony 1580: "Last uns dem herrn danken und beten" (below).

Nördlingen 1579 puts a versicle before each, as before a medieval collect: 1 Cor 11:26 ("So oft ir von disem brot esset …") before Luther's thanksgiving, and 1 Cor 11:27 before the alternative. It appoints them for Palm Sunday and Maundy Thursday, "and also all Sundays and holy days after the communion held" (Sehling 12, p. 382).

5.6.4 The alternatives

The ordinary was not alone. Most orders print Luther's thanksgiving with one or two alternatives, "or this". The alternatives come from four sources.

(a) The Nürnberg thanksgiving of 1533. Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533 orders "a common prayer in German, spoken openly", which "shall be a thanksgiving". It is a new composition, longer than Luther's, and asks that what was received with the mouth be grasped by faith. Brandenburg-Nürnberg, Kirchenordnung, 1533 (Sehling 11, p. 197):

> Wann nun das volk alles verricht ist, soll man aber ein gemain gebet in teutsch offenlich sprechen. Das soll ein danksagung sein also: Laßt uns bitten! O almechtiger, ewiger Got. Wir sagen deiner götlichen miltigkeit lob und dank, das du uns mit dem hailsamen flaisch und blut deines ainigen Suns Jesu Christi, unsers Herrn, gespeist und getrenkt hast, und bitten dich demütiglich, du wöllest durch deinen Heiligen Gaist in uns würken, wie wir dis heilig sacrament mit dem mund haben empfangen, das wir auch also dein götliche gnad, vergebung der sünde, verainigung mit Christo und ewigs leben, so darinnen angezaigt und zugesagt ist, mit festem glauben mögen begreifen und ewiglich behalten. Durch unsern Herrn Jesum Christum, deinen Sun, der mit dir in ainigkeit des Heiligen Gaists lebt und herschet, warer Gott, immer und ewiglich. Amen.

Now when all the people have been communicated, there shall again be spoken openly a common prayer in German. This shall be a thanksgiving, thus: Let us pray. O almighty, everlasting God, we give praise and thanks unto thy divine bounty, that thou hast fed us and given us to drink with the wholesome flesh and blood of thine only Son Jesus Christ our Lord; and we humbly beseech thee that thou wouldest work in us by thy Holy Ghost, that as we have received this holy sacrament with the mouth, so we may also with firm faith lay hold on and for ever retain thy divine grace, forgiveness of sins, union with Christ and everlasting life, which are therein shown forth and promised. Through our Lord Jesus Christ, thy Son, who with thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost liveth and reigneth, true God, ever and everlastingly. Amen.

The phrase "as we have received … with the mouth, so … with firm faith" is Luther's Quod ore sumpsimus … pura mente capiamus opened out. The 1533 prayer is thus the third stage of the 1523 substitute: Latin ablution prayer, then plain German, then a doctrinal expansion.

(b) Two collects "under one conclusion". Brandenburg 1540 joins the Nürnberg prayer and Luther's into a single "thanksgiving" (Sehling 3, p. 70). Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 does the same and names the old technique: two collects sung "under one conclusion", the way the medieval rite joined a postcommunion and a commemoration. Pfalz-Neuburg, Kirchenordnung, 1543 (Sehling 13, p. 76):

> Darnach soll er dise zwo collecten unter einem beschluß in gewonlichem ton singen oder mit vernemlicher stimme sprechen. Laßt uns beten: O almechtiger, ewiger Gott. Wir sagen deiner götlichen miltigkeit lob und dank, das du uns mit dem heilsamen fleisch und blut deines einigen Sons Jesu Christi, unsers Herrn, gespeiset und getrenket hast […]. Ein ander gebet. Wir danken dir auch, Herr Jesu Christe, das du uns durch dise heilsame gabe deines leibs und bluts hast erquicket, und bitten deine barmherzigkeit, das du uns solchs gedeihen lassest zu einem starken glauben gegen dir und zu brünstiger lieb unter uns allen, der du mit Got dem Vater in einigkeit des Heiligen Geists lebest und regirest immer und ewiglich. Chorus: Amen.

Thereafter he shall sing these two collects under one conclusion in the accustomed tone, or say them with an audible voice. Let us pray. O almighty, everlasting God, we give praise and thanks unto thy divine bounty, that thou hast fed us and given us to drink with the wholesome flesh and blood of thine only Son Jesus Christ our Lord […]. Another prayer. We thank thee also, Lord Jesus Christ, that thou hast refreshed us through this salutary gift of thy body and blood; and we beseech thy mercy that thou wouldest make the same to prosper in us unto a strong faith toward thee and unto fervent love among us all; who with God the Father in the unity of the Holy Ghost livest and reignest ever and everlastingly. Choir: Amen.

Pfalz-Neuburg addresses Luther's prayer to Christ ("Herr Jesu Christe") and closes it with the conclusion for a prayer to the Son. Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 has the same two-part thanksgiving in its common Mass, "which shall be made in all Masses after the communion" (Sehling 6/2, p. 816; see Chapter 7, §7.13.3). Oldenburg 1573 gives the Nürnberg prayer as an alternative (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 1145).

> Nach der communion lese man der nachfolgenden collecten eine, und beschliesse mit der benediction. Collecten. Last uns dem herrn danken und beten. Wir danken dir allmechtiger herre gott, das du uns durch diese heilsame gaben hast erquicket, und bitten deine barmherzigkeit, das du uns solches gedeien lassest, zu starkem glauben gegen dir, und zu brünstiger liebe unter uns allen, durch Jesum Christum deinen sohn, unsern herrn, Antwort. Amen. Oder diese. Ach du lieber herre gott, der du uns bei diesem wunderbarlichen sacrament deines leidens zugedenken und predigen befohlen hast, verleihe uns, das wir solch deines leibes und bluts sacrament also mögen brauchen, das wir dein erlösung in uns teglich fruchtbarlich empfinden, Antwort. Amen.

After the communion let one of the following collects be read, and let him conclude with the blessing. Collects. Let us give thanks unto the Lord and pray. We give thanks unto thee, Almighty Lord God, that thou hast refreshed us through these salutary gifts; and we beseech thy mercy, that thou wouldest make the same to prosper in us unto strong faith toward thee and unto fervent love among us all; through Jesus Christ thy Son our Lord. Answer: Amen. Or this. O thou dear Lord God, who in this wonderful sacrament hast commanded us to remember and to preach thy passion; grant us so to use this sacrament of thy body and blood, that we may daily perceive in us fruitfully thy redemption. Answer: Amen.

The Latin "hast left us a memorial of thy passion" becomes "hast commanded us to remember and to preach thy passion" (1 Cor 11:26). "To venerate the sacred mysteries" becomes "so to use this sacrament". The petition ut redemptionis tuae fructum in nobis iugiter sentiamus is kept almost word for word: "das wir dein erlösung in uns teglich fruchtbarlich empfinden". The same pair (Luther's, "or this" the Corpus Christi collect) stands in:

- Mecklenburg 1545 (below);
- Buxtehude 1565, where the Corpus Christi collect comes first (Sehling 7/1, p. 125);
- Mansfeld 1580 (Sehling 2, p. 227);
- Grubenhagen 1581 (Sehling 6/2, p. 1076);
- Oldenburg 1573 (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 1145);
- Nördlingen 1579 (Sehling 12, p. 382).

Grubenhagen 1581 also uses it in its old place, as the collect for Maundy Thursday ("Die coenae Domini", Sehling 6/2, p. 1078). The Württemberg order of 1536 has it among its collects as the Oratio de Eucharistia (Sehling 16, p. 125).

(d) Döber's prayer of 1525. Döber's Nürnberg Mass of 1525 has a postcommunion that Sehling's editor thought "apparently newly made" (Sehling 11, p. 55, n. 22). Nürnberg, Deutsche Messe des A. Döber, 1525 (Sehling 11, pp. 54–55):

> Darnach die collecten spricht zum volk: Last uns bitten: O Herr, allmechtiger Got, verleih uns in unser gemüt und herzen, das wir durch den zeitlichen tod [...] deines Suns, welche dise wirdige geheimnus bedeuten, das wir getrauen, das du uns geben hast das ewig leben durch den Christum, unsern Herrn. Amen.

Thereafter he saith the collect to the people: Let us pray. O Lord Almighty God, grant us in our minds and hearts that, through the temporal death of thy Son, which this worthy mystery signifieth, we may trust that thou hast given us everlasting life; through Christ our Lord. Amen.

Its pairing of "temporal" with "signifieth" and "everlasting" recalls the Corpus Christi postcommunion Fac nos, quaesumus, Domine, divinitatis tuae sempiterna fruitione repleri: quam pretiosi Corporis et Sanguinis tui temporalis perceptio praefigurat. It may be a free reworking of it; this is a suggestion, not Sehling's identification. Mecklenburg took Döber's prayer into its list of three.

Mecklenburg's three. Mecklenburg 1545 offers all three kinds: Luther's, Döber's, and the Corpus Christi collect. Mecklenburg, Ordeninge der misse, 1545 (Sehling 5, p. 155):

> Darup de prester: Latet uns beden. Wi danken di allmechtige here godt, dat du uns dorch düsse heilsame gave dines lives unde blodes heffst erquicket, und bidden dine barmherticheit, dat du uns sülckes gedien latest to starkem loven jegen di, unde to füriger leve mank uns allen, dorch unsen heren Jesum Christum, amen. Edder to tiden dit gebet. O here almechtige vader vorlene uns in unse gemöte unde herte, dat wi dorch den tidtliken dot dines söns, welckeren düsse werdige hemelicheit bedüdet, getrüwen, dat du uns gegeven heffst dat ewige levent, dorch Jesum Christum, unsen heren, amen. Edder düsse. Ach du leve here godt, de du uns bi düssem wunderbarliken sacramente dines lidens to gedenken unde predigen bevalen heffst, vorlene uns, dat wi sölck dines lives unde blodes sacramente also mögen bruken, dat wi dine erlösinge in uns dagelick fruchtbarlick erfinden, dorch Jesum Christum, amen.

Thereupon the priest: Let us pray. We give thanks unto thee, Almighty Lord God, that thou hast refreshed us through this salutary gift of thy body and blood; and we beseech thy mercy, that thou wouldest make the same to prosper in us unto strong faith toward thee and unto fervent love among us all; through our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen. Or at times this prayer: O Lord, almighty Father, grant us in our minds and hearts that, through the temporal death of thy Son, which this worthy mystery signifieth, we may trust that thou hast given us everlasting life; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen. Or this: O thou dear Lord God, who by this wonderful sacrament hast commanded us to remember and to preach thy passion; grant us so to use this sacrament of thy body and blood, that we may daily perceive in us fruitfully thy redemption; through Jesus Christ. Amen.

(e) Alternating Sundays: Prussia 1544. The Prussian order of 1544 has two postcommunions sung "to alternate every other Sunday". The second is a new prayer on the fruit of the passion. Prussia, Kirchenordnung, 1544 (Sehling 4, p. 66):

> Darnach wendet sich der priester zum volk und singt: Der herre sei mit euch, und wendet sich widder noch dem altar, singt der collecten eine mit gewönlichem accent etc. umb den andern soutag abzuwechseln. Erste collect. Wir danken dir etc. […] Ein ander collect. O warhaftiger got, barmherziger vater, wir bitten dich herzlich, las uns dürftigen des heiligen leidens unsers herren nutz und frucht, das ist gnade und vergebung unser sünden mit gleubigem herzen rechtschaffen ergreifen, gleich wie wir durch deines heiligen sones wort seinen heiligen leib und sein theures blut, welche er für uns gegeben und vergossen hat, unter dem brot und wein warlich haben empfangen, durch denselbigen unsern herren Jesum Christum, deinen sohn, der mit dir lebet und hirschet von ewigkeit zu ewigkeit. Amen.

Thereafter the priest turneth to the people and singeth: The Lord be with you; and turneth again to the altar, [and] singeth one of the collects with the customary accent, etc., to alternate every other Sunday. First collect: We give thanks unto thee, etc. […] Another collect: O true God, merciful Father, we heartily beseech thee, let us needy ones rightly lay hold with believing heart on the profit and fruit of the holy passion of our Lord, that is, grace and the forgiveness of our sins, even as through the word of thy holy Son we have truly received under the bread and wine his holy body and his precious blood, which he gave and shed for us; through the same our Lord Jesus Christ, thy Son, who liveth and reigneth with thee from everlasting to everlasting. Amen.

The Prussian articles of 1525 had already provided "two common collects or complendas for the end of the Mass, to alternate through the whole year". Sehling does not print them (Sehling 4, p. 37).

(f) Later replacements. Late orders sometimes replace Luther's short prayer with a longer one. At Engerhafe in East Frisia (1583) "a trinitarian thanksgiving has taken the place of Luther's short thanksgiving collect (postcommunion)", as Sehling's editor notes in comparing it with the order of 1535 (Sehling 7/1, p. 681, n. 34). The thanksgiving with the Placeat in Kantz's Mass of 1522 is treated in Chapter 7, §7.2.7.

5.6.5 When there was no communion

A collect instead. Without communicants the Lutheran Mass ended after the sermon, and the postcommunion slot was filled with "a collect" of the pastor's choice, not with the thanksgiving for the sacrament:

- Saxony 1580: "But where no communicants are present, it shall be concluded after the sermon, or a chapter of Holy Scripture read, with a Christian collect and the customary blessing" (Sehling 1, p. 369).
- Soest 1609: "When there are no communicants, the preacher may conclude with a collect of his own choice" (arbitraria collecta, Sehling 22, p. 495).
- Lippe 1571: a collect "or thanksgiving for the word of God heard". Lippe, Kirchenordnung, 1571 (Sehling 21, p. 397):

> Darauff eine Collecten oder Dancksagung für das gehörte Wort Gottes singen und mit einem Christlichen Liede beschliessen.

Thereupon sing a collect or thanksgiving for the word of God which hath been heard, and conclude with a Christian hymn.

The thanksgiving for the gift of the sacrament became, in the service without communion, a thanksgiving for the gift of the Word.

The service when nobody communicated is treated in Chapter 2, §2.14, and the Litany sung in place of the Mass in Chapter 13, §13.21.1.

5.6.6 The prayer over the people (oratio super populum)

The medieval use. On the weekdays of Lent the Missal added a fourth proper prayer after the postcommunion. The deacon bade the people Humiliate capita vestra Deo, "Bow down your heads before God", and the priest said the oratio super populum, a prayer over the people, before the dismissal. In the Breviary the same prayers served as collects of the office on the Lenten weekdays.

Not at the Mass. No Lutheran order in the corpus keeps the super populum at the end of the Mass. The bidding Humiliate capita vestra Deo does not occur, in Latin or in German. The corpus was searched for super populum, super plebem, humiliate capita, inclinate capita and German phrases such as "neiget eure Häupter". The Lutheran Mass had no weekday Lenten Masses to carry the prayer. Its place at the end of the Sunday Mass was held by the postcommunion collect and the Aaronic blessing. The orders describe that blessing in the same words: "the blessing over the people out of the book of Numbers" (benediction uber das volk aus dem buch numeri, Gnandstein 1539, Sehling 1, p. 564). Müntzer (Radical Reformation) describes his postcommunion the same way: "after the communion one giveth thanks to God over the people, and blesseth the Lord" (Sehling 1, p. 506). Neither is a super populum prayer.

In the office: Ansbach 1533. The one place where the super populum survives by name is in the Divine Office of the collegiate churches. The Brandenburg-Ansbach order of 1533 for the singing and reading in the Stifte goes through the Breviary and strikes out what is unfit. In Lent it strikes out the collects at Lauds (super Benedictus) that "speak of the fast" as a work, day by day. For their place it allows the super populum prayers. Brandenburg-Ansbach-Kulmbach, Ordnung singens und lesens bei den Stiften, 1533 (Sehling 11, p. 315):

> In die Cinerum collecta super Benedictus Concede nobis, Domine praesidia und andere collecten mer, die von der vasten lauten als Inchoata ieiunia und Adesto, Domine, supplicacionibus nostris etc., und der hymnus Ex more docti sollen nicht gehalten werden. Weiter sollen sie underlassen dominica Invocavit: die collect super Bened[ictus] Deus, qui ecclesiam tuam, […] feria secunda nach Reminiscere: die collect super Benedictus Praesta, quaesumus, omnipotens Deus, familia tua etc., feria quarta: die collecta super Benedictus Populum tuum, Domine etc., feria quinta: die collect super Benedictus Praesta nobis Domine, quaesumus, feria sexta: super Benedictus collect Da, quaesumus, omnipotens Deus etc., sabbato: super Benedictus collecta Da,quaesumus, Domine nostris effectum; und an diser stat mogen sie allwegen nemen die nachvolgende super populum;

On Ash Wednesday the collect at the Benedictus, Concede nobis, Domine, praesidia, and other collects more which speak of the fast, as Inchoata ieiunia and Adesto, Domine, supplicationibus nostris, etc., and the hymn Ex more docti, shall not be kept. Further they shall leave out: on the Sunday Invocavit, the collect at the Benedictus Deus, qui ecclesiam tuam; […] on the Monday after Reminiscere, the collect at the Benedictus Praesta, quaesumus, omnipotens Deus, familia tua, etc.; on the Wednesday, the collect at the Benedictus Populum tuum, Domine, etc.; on the Thursday, the collect at the Benedictus Praesta nobis, Domine, quaesumus; on the Friday, at the Benedictus the collect Da, quaesumus, omnipotens Deus, etc.; on the Saturday, at the Benedictus the collect Da, quaesumus, Domine, nostris effectum; and in this place they may always take the super populum that followeth.

What the rule means. The list goes on through the weeks of Oculi, Laetare and Judica (Sehling 11, pp. 315–316).

- What it strikes out. The Lauds collects of the Lenten weekdays are the collects of the day's Mass. Many of them ask that bodily fasting be made fruitful or meritorious. An example is the Monday after Reminiscere: Praesta, quaesumus, omnipotens Deus, ut familia tua, quae se affligendo carnem ab alimentis abstinet, sectando iustitiam a culpa ieiunet. Another is the Wednesday: Populum tuum, Domine, propitius respice: et quos ab escis carnalibus praecipis abstinere, a noxiis quoque vitiis cessare concede.
- What it puts in their place. "The super populum that followeth" is the prayer over the people of the same day, which stands after the postcommunion in the Missal. These prayers ask for God's protection, mercy and guidance of his people, without reference to the fast. For the same Monday it is Adesto supplicationibus nostris, omnipotens Deus: et quibus fiduciam sperandae pietatis indulges, consuetae misericordiae tribue benignus effectum.

The identification of these texts is this chapter's. Sehling's editor gives no note on the passage.

The result. The Lenten prayer over the people outlived the Lenten collect in this one Lutheran order. It did so not at the end of the Mass but at Lauds, and for a doctrinal reason: of the day's two proper prayers it was the one that said nothing of fasting as a work. Ansbach's handling matches Luther's test for the collect in 1523, "if only it be godly" (§5.3.2). The corpus shows no other Lutheran use of the super populum.

5.9 Concordance of the orders quoted

Every order quoted or cited in this chapter is listed below by region. The table gives:

- Sehling: the volume and pages in Sehling's edition.
- Doc: the `eko.db` document that holds the text, for full-text lookup. A single database record may hold several orders.
- §: the sections where the order is quoted or cited ("A" = Appendix 5.A).

Chapter 6. The General Prayer of the Church: Texts by Family

The general prayer (das gemein Gebet, the Prayer of the Church) is the intercession for all estates and needs in the chief Sunday service of the church orders in the Sehling corpus. This chapter does two things:

- §§6.1–6.3 say what the general prayer is, where it stands in the service, and how its texts are related.
- §§6.4–6.21 give the texts themselves, one family at a time. For each petition the original is followed by the English, for the rubric, the bid and the prayer in turn. Each family can be read straight through, in the order in which the prayer runs.

The texts are the representative texts of the general-prayer workbook, `general_prayers.xlsx` (Introduction). They come from four sheets of the workbook:

- Orig Prayers - Representative;
- Eng Prayers - Representative;
- Orig Bids - Representative;
- Eng Bids - Representative.

The workbook sets these out with one row per category and one column per family, so that one intention can be compared across the families. Here they are turned around: each family's column is printed as a single prayer.

The Introduction (The general-prayer workbook and database) describes the workbook and `general_prayers.db`: how the texts were curated and checked against the corpus, the categories, and how the critical and representative texts are made. The workbook also gives:

- every witness's own text, in the Prayers sheet;
- the variants within a family, in the Archetypes sheet and the critical sheets;
- the orders side by side, petition by petition, in the Compare sheet.

Related chapters. Several subjects are treated more fully elsewhere:

- the place of the general prayer in the order of the Mass: Chapter 2, §§2.4–2.5;
- the prayer before the sermon, the greeting and the notices: Chapter 11, §11.10;
- the Litany and the bidding prayers: Chapter 13, §13.21;
- the intercessions under the Sanctus in the Masses that have them: Chapter 7, §§7.8.11, 7.12.2, 7.14.4;
- the collects: Chapter 5, §5.4.

The labels of the texts (rubric, bid, prayer and witnesses) are explained in the Conventions.

6.1 The general prayer in the Sunday service

6.1.1 What it is

Every order in this set (57 witnesses, dated 1526–1618) has one prayer in the chief service of the Sunday in which the congregation prays for the Church and her ministers, the magistrates, the afflicted and the other needs of Christendom. The orders call it:

- das gemein gebet, the common prayer. This is the usual name: Württemberg 1553 has "Ordnung des gemeinen gebets", Leipzig 1567 "Gemein gebet".
- Vermanung zum gebet, the exhortation to prayer: Hessen 1566 (Moderate Reformed), Strasbourg 1598. Nürnberg 1545 has "Vermanung zu bitten für allerlei stende".
- Fürbitt or Vorbitt, intercession: Augsburg 1537 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling's heading), Öhringen 1544.
- Exhortatio edder vormaninge, exhortation or admonition: Braunschweig 1528, Hamburg 1529.
- Oratio: the Latin order of the French church at Frankfurt, 1554 (Reformed).

Hessen 1566 (Moderate Reformed) gives it as the fifth part of the service and grounds it in the practice of the first Church:

> Von solchem gebet, so uf die auslegung der schrift und predigt gefolget hat in der ersten kirchen, redet sehr kurz Iustinus in der andern Apologia, da er spricht: Post exhortationes ab eo qui praeest factas, surgimus omnes ac > comprecamur, das ist, wenn die predigt vom öbersten lehrer volendet, stehen wir alle uf und beten. (Sehling 8, p. 245)

> Of such prayer, which in the first Church followed upon the exposition of the Scripture and the sermon, Justin speaketh very briefly in his second Apology, where he saith: After the exhortations made by him that presideth, we all rise and pray together; that is, when the sermon of the chief teacher is ended, we all stand up and pray.

What counts as the general prayer, and what is left out (collect banks, the Litany, prayer-day and afternoon forms), is set out in the Introduction (What counts as the general prayer).

6.1.2 Where it stands in the service

After the sermon. In 48 of the 57 witnesses the prayer follows the sermon, and in most of them it is said from the pulpit. Kursachsen 1580 has it said "allezeit nach der predigt … dem volk auf der canzel" (always after the sermon … to the people from the pulpit). In these orders the prayer is the hinge between the service of the Word and the Supper, and it is often joined to the items around it:

- Before it, in many orders: an open confession and absolution, or the publishing of banns and notices. Examples:
  - confession and absolution in Neckarbischofsheim 1560, Erbach 1560, Hohenlohe 1578, the Ysenburg orders, Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1569, Oldenburg 1573 and Kurpfalz 1563 (Reformed);
  - banns and notices in Hohenlohe 1578, Solms-Laubach 1576, Strasbourg 1598 and Frankfurt 1554 (Reformed).
- After it: the Our Father, which closes almost every form. Then:
  - a psalm or hymn, such as "Erhalt uns Herr", "Verleih uns Frieden" or "Danck sagen wir alle";
  - a collect and the blessing when there is no Communion;
  - otherwise the Supper. In Lüneburg 1564 and its followers the communicants come into the choir and kneel.

Elsewhere in the service. The other nine witnesses place it as follows:

Place	Witnesses
In the Mass, said by the priest in German under the Sanctus, before or after the Words of Institution	Brandenburg 1540, Calenberg-Göttingen 1542, Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 (family L)
In the Communion office, after the exhortation to the communicants, before the Words of Institution	Frankfurt 1553 and 1589
After the Kyrie and Gloria, in place of the Latin collect, read from a lectern before the altar (the sermon precedes the whole service)	Schwäbisch Hall 1526
In place of the Epistle in the village Mass, followed by the Creed, the Ten Commandments and the catechism (the medieval pulpit office)	Nürnberg 1545
After the Gospel has been expounded from the pulpit and the catechism recited, before the Creed and Preface	Osnabrück 1543
From the pulpit, when the choir has finished the first psalm or hymn	Worms 1560

The Brandenburg prayers keep the place of the old intercessions of the Canon. Sehling notes on Pfalz-Neuburg 1543:

> Diese Gebete sind an die Stelle der in der römischen Messe teils vor teils nach der Konsekration gesprochenen Fürbittgebete gesetzt. Sie wurden sonst in evangelischen Kirchenordnungen ohne Ersatz gestrichen, weil sie den von der Reformation abgelehnten Opfercharakter der Messe zur Grundlage haben. (Sehling 13, p. 74)

> These prayers are set in the place of the intercessory prayers spoken in the Roman Mass partly before and partly after the consecration. Elsewhere in the evangelical church orders these were struck out without replacement, because they rest upon the sacrificial character of the Mass, which the Reformation rejected.

Who says it. The minister says it: the pastor or the deacon from the pulpit, or the priest at the altar in family L. In Schwäbisch Hall 1526 it is read from a lectern before the altar, in a cope. The people take part:

- by saying the Our Father;

- by the confession, which they say after the minister in Braunschweig ("spreket ock de bicht mit my") and in Ysenburg-Ronneburg 1582 ("Bekennet mit mir vor Gott ewer sunde");
- by praying "mit mund und herzen" (with mouth and heart), as the Leipzig print of 1567 directs.

6.1.3 Its forms

The witnesses use six forms. Each family keeps to one form, except for the two prescriptions of contents: Magdeburg 1562 (in B2) and Osnabrück 1543 (in H).

Form	How it runs	Families	Witnesses
Bidding and collect	For each intention the minister bids the people ("Lasst uns bitten für …"), then says a collect	A, B1	10
Bidding exhortation	The minister tells the people what to pray for, item by item, without addressing God, and closes with the Our Father	C, D, G, H, I, J, M	14
Continuous prayer	One prayer to God that names the intentions in turn ("Wöllest auch …")	B2, E, F, R1, R3, R4	25
Collects	Separate collects without biddings: three from the pulpit (K), or the priest's collects under the Sanctus (L)	K, L	4
Lord's Prayer paraphrase	The intentions are arranged under the petitions of the Our Father	R2 (and the close of R3)	2
Prescription of contents	Not a text to be read, but a list in indirect speech of what the prayer must contain	Magdeburg 1562 (B2), Osnabrück 1543 (H)	2

Long and short forms. Württemberg 1553 prints a long form (B1) and a short form (B2). Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557 says when each is to be used:

> Dises gebet, dieweil es zimlich lang ist, mögen die Kirchendiener etwan an den grossen Festen gebrauchen, als am Christag, Ostern und Pfingsten, und sonst jeder zeit im jar, wann die Kirch one das mit der predig nit lang auffgehalten wirt, sonst sollen sie die kürtzere form, welche hernach folget, gemeinigklich dem Volck fürlesen. (Sehling 18, p. 195)

> This prayer, forasmuch as it is somewhat long, the ministers of the Church may use at the great feasts, as on Christmas Day, Easter and Pentecost, and at any other time in the year when the church is not otherwise held long by the sermon; else they shall commonly read to the people the shorter form, which followeth hereafter.

The short form became the most copied prayer in the corpus (17 witnesses, 1553–1618).

Alternatives and freedom. Some orders allow the prayer to vary:

- The Litany instead. The Litany is the second form of the common prayer in Württemberg 1553 and Rothenburg 1559. It is prayed on Fridays in the towns of Kursachsen 1580 and on alternate Sundays in Rothenberg 1618.
- A choice of texts. Kurpfalz 1563 (Reformed) offers a Lord's-Prayer paraphrase, "Oder also" (or thus), beside its Sunday prayer (R2). Augsburg 1537 (Moderate Reformed) offers two texts against the Turk.
- Local adaptation.
  - Hessen 1566 (Moderate Reformed) lets each church make the form "kürzer oder lenger" (shorter or longer).
  - Hanau-Lichtenberg 1573 tells the pastor to refer to the sermon and to present needs.
  - Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588 (Reformed) lets ministers add to the prayer in time of need.
  - Many forms end with a rubric that lets the sick and other particular needs be named (the category Special intercessions).

6.1.4 The sequence of intentions

Lutheran. The usual Lutheran series goes back to Brenz 1526 and Württemberg 1553:

exhortation > Church > magistrates > afflicted > peace > enemies > women with child > fruits of the earth > Our Father.

Reformed. The Heidelberg prayer of 1563 begins with confession and thanksgiving, prays for the fruit of the Word, and has a petition for all men (1 Tim 2:1):

confession > thanksgiving > Word > magistrates > fruits of the earth > all men > persecuted > afflicted > Our Father.

What all share. Civil authority is the one intention found in every witness. The Introduction (What the comparison shows) sets out the other patterns.

Traditions.

The traditions follow the inventory in Chapter 1, §1.3. Every order of another tradition than the Lutheran is marked where it is cited, by its tradition in brackets after it, as "Kurpfalz 1563 (Reformed)".

- Eleven families are Lutheran: A to E and H to L.
- F (Augsburg 1537) is Moderate Reformed: Upper German and Bucerian.
- G (Hessen 1566) is Moderate Reformed: the church of Philip of Hesse, between Wittenberg and the Upper Germans, which bore Bucer's stamp.
- M (Norden 1528) is an early East Frisian evangelical order, which Sehling prints among the Reformed orders of East Frisia; it is marked Reformed here.
- R1–R4 are Reformed. Schaumburg 1614, a Lutheran order, takes over the Heidelberg prayer of R1.
- No Interim order is among the witnesses.

6.2 How the texts are given here

Representative texts. A family's representative text is one clean text for each category, made from all the family's witnesses by majority:

- a petition, bid or prayer is kept if at least half the witnesses to that category have it;
- word by word, the reading of the majority is chosen;
- where no reading has half the witnesses, the earliest witness's reading stands.

Every word comes from a witness, but in a family with several witnesses the result need not match any one witness exactly. Where a family has a single witness, its text is that witness's text. The rules are given in full in the Introduction (Representative texts).

Order. The workbook lists the categories in a standard order. Here each family's petitions follow the order in which its prayer actually runs:

- the order of the family's earliest witness;
- with petitions that only later witnesses have placed where those witnesses have them.

Where a family has more than one petition in a category (two petitions for the magistrates in Lüneburg 1564, or the confession and the absolution), the workbook cell holds them both, separated by a blank line. Here each is given in its own place.

Exact reproduction. The petitions of each family, joined category by category, reproduce the four workbook sheets exactly. This was checked for all 2,016 cells (28 categories × 18 families × 4 sheets), with no differences. The workbook's "Bids" sheets put the rubric on the first line of the bid; here the rubric and the bid are given separately.

Each petition is numbered within its family (A.1, A.2, …) and headed with its category. For families with more than one witness, a line in italics names the witnesses that have the petition. It also notes where a rubric, bid or prayer is in only some of them. Then come, in turn:

- the rubric, original then English;
- the bid, original then English;
- the prayer, original then English.

Each part is given only where the petition has it.

Not taken in. Each family section lists the witness petitions that are not in the representative text, because another reading of the same category has the majority. Those texts are in the Prayers sheet and in the critical sheets.

6.3 The families at a glance

One row per family, in the order of the workbook columns. "Petitions" is the number of petitions in the representative text given below.

6.4 Family A: Brenz bidding prayer

Deacon or pastor bids the people for one intention ("Lasst uns bitten für …"), then says a collect for it; the series runs Church, magistrates, peace, afflicted, all needs, and closes with the Lord's Prayer. Frankfurt adds collects from Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533 and Veit Dietrich.

- Earliest witness (archetype): Schwäbisch Hall 1526 (Brenz).
- Tradition: Lutheran.
- Language: German.
- Form: bidding + collect.
- Place in the service (Schwäbisch Hall 1526): After the Kyrie and Gloria, in place of the Latin Oremus/collect; read from a lectern before the altar in a cope. The sermon precedes the whole service.

Year	Witness	Territory	Sehling	Form

1589	Frankfurt am Main, Agende 1589	Frankfurt am Main (Imperial city)	Sehling 9, VI/Frankfurt Nr. 13, pp. 552–553	bidding + collect

The representative text follows Brenz's Schwäbisch Hall form of 1526, which the later witnesses copy with small changes. Where they part from it, as in the preface and the close, its reading stands. Following the family's own majority, each bid ends "Bittend also:" and the collects end bare (see the Introduction, Representative texts, rule 4).

A.9 to A.13 (the Our Father, Creed and Decalogue printed as part of the prayer, and the closing rubric) stand in Schwäbisch Hall 1526 (A.9 also in 1543). A.14 is Frankfurt 1589's own closing prayer for the communicants and A.15 Neckarbischofsheim 1560's closing word of assurance. They come at the end, after the Our Father, as in those orders.

Not in the representative text (a minority reading of its category; see the Prayers sheet or the critical sheets): Frankfurt 1553 no. 1 (Exhortation / preface); Frankfurt 1553 no. 7 (Lord's Prayer); Neckarbischofsheim 1560 no. 1 (Exhortation / preface); Neckarbischofsheim 1560 no. 9 (Lord's Prayer); Frankfurt 1589 no. 1 (Exhortation / preface); Frankfurt 1589 no. 7 (Lord's Prayer).

Sequence: A.1 Exhortation / preface > A.2 The Church > A.3 Civil authority > A.4 The afflicted > A.5 Peace > A.6 Enemies > A.7 Women with child > A.8 Fruits of the earth > A.9 Lord's Prayer > A.10 Lord's Prayer > A.11 Creed > A.12 Ten Commandments > A.13 Special intercessions > A.14 Communicants > A.15 Blessing.

A.1 Exhortation / preface

Witnesses: Schwäbisch Hall 1526 and Schwäbisch Hall 1543.

Rubric (German). Vorrede

Rubric (English). Preface

Bid (German). Auff das all glaubig zubeten gereitzt wurden, so hat unser Herr Cristus dem gebet ein ernstlich versicherung angehengkt, sprechendt: Bitten, so werden ir gewert, suchendt, so werden ir finden, klopffet an, so wirt euch auffgethon.

Bid (English). To the end that all the faithful might be stirred up to pray, our Lord Christ hath annexed unto prayer an earnest assurance, saying: Ask, and ye shall be granted; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

A.2 The Church

Witnesses: Schwäbisch Hall 1526, Schwäbisch Hall 1543, Frankfurt 1553, Neckarbischofsheim 1560 and Frankfurt 1589.

Bid (German). Hieruff lassent uns fleyssig bitten fur die gemein cristenlich kirch, fur der kirchen diener, das sie unser Herr Got wolle beschutzen wider all anleuff und versuchung des boßen feinds, darmit sie auff dem starcken felsen, unserm Herrn Cristo, bestendig pleyben. Bittend also:

Bid (English). Hereupon let us diligently pray for the common Christian Church, and for the ministers of the Church, that the Lord our God would defend them against all the assaults and temptation of the wicked enemy, that they may abide steadfast upon the strong rock, our Lord Christ. Pray ye thus:

Prayer (German). Almechtiger, ewiger Got, der du hast allen volckern dein gnad durch Jesum Cristum und sein Evangelion geoffenbaret, erhalt, Herr, das volck deiner barmhertzikait, das dein kirch sampt iren dienern, inn der gantzen welt zerstrewt, dir mit rechtem glauben diene und in bekantnus deins namens bestande.

Prayer (English). Almighty, everlasting God, who hast revealed thy grace unto all peoples through Jesus Christ and his Gospel: preserve, O Lord, the people of thy mercy, that thy Church together with her ministers, scattered abroad in the whole world, may serve thee with right faith and continue in the confession of thy name.

A.3 Civil authority

Witnesses: Schwäbisch Hall 1526, Schwäbisch Hall 1543, Frankfurt 1553, Neckarbischofsheim 1560 and Frankfurt 1589.

Bid (German). Lassendt uns auch bitten auß gebot und bevelh unsers Herrn Jesu Cristi und seiner Apposteln fur unsern allergnedigsten Herrn, den kaiser, fur alle konig und amptlewt des weltlichen Regiments, sonderlich fur ein erbare Oberkait diser stat, auff das wir ein geruwigs und stils leben in aller gotselikait furen mogen. Bittend also:

Bid (English). Let us also pray, by the commandment and bidding of our Lord Jesus Christ and of his apostles, for our most gracious Lord the Emperor, for all kings and officers of the temporal government, and especially for an honourable magistracy of this city, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness. Pray ye thus:

Prayer (German). Barmhertziger, Himelischer Vater, in welchs handt bestehet aller menschen gewalt und Oberkait von dir gesetzt zur straff der bösen und wolfart der frummen, in welchs handt auch steen all Recht und gesatz aller Reich, Wir bitten dich, sihe gnedigklich auff unsern Herrn, den kaiser, und all sein amptlewt, nemlich auff ein Oberkait diser Stat, darmit sie das weltlich schwerdt, inen von dir bevolhen, in glauben nach deinem wort und bevelh furen mogen.

Prayer (English). Merciful, heavenly Father, in whose hand standeth the power and authority of all men, set of thee for the punishment of the wicked and the welfare of the godly, in whose hand also stand all the rights and laws of all kingdoms: we beseech thee, look graciously upon our Lord the Emperor and all his officers, and namely upon the magistracy of this city, that they may bear the temporal sword, committed unto them of thee, in faith, according to thy word and commandment.

A.4 The afflicted

Witnesses: Schwäbisch Hall 1526, Schwäbisch Hall 1543, Frankfurt 1553, Neckarbischofsheim 1560 and Frankfurt 1589.

Bid (German). Lassendt uns auch bitten Got, unsern Herrn, das er die welt von Irthum erlosen wol, auch von kranckhaiten, Tewerung, gefengknus, sterben und aller widerwertikait, so durch den bosen feindt uns zur verderpnus zugefugt werden. Bittend also:

Bid (English). Let us also pray God our Lord, that he would deliver the world from error, and also from sicknesses, dearth, imprisonment, death, and all adversity which by the wicked enemy is brought upon us unto our destruction. Pray ye thus:

Prayer (German). Almechtiger, ewiger Got, ein trost der trawrigen, ein sterck der schwachen, laß fur dein angesicht komen die bit aller deren, so in bekumernus unnd anfechtung zu dir seufftzen, das menigklich dein hilff und beystand in der zeyt der nodt entpfinde.

Prayer (English). Almighty, everlasting God, the comfort of the sorrowful, the strength of the weak: let the prayer of all them that sigh unto thee in trouble and temptation come before thy face, through our Lord Jesus Christ, that every man may feel thy help and succour in the time of need.

A.5 Peace

Witnesses: Schwäbisch Hall 1526, Schwäbisch Hall 1543, Frankfurt 1553, Neckarbischofsheim 1560 and Frankfurt 1589.

Bid (German). Lassendt uns auch bitten umb ein gemeinen friden und besserung der gantzen Cristenhait, das uns got mit zeitlichem und ewigklichem friden gnedigklich begabe. Bittend also:

Bid (English). Let us also pray for a common peace and for the amendment of all Christendom, that God would graciously endue us with temporal and everlasting peace. Pray ye thus:

Prayer (German). Allmechtiger, ewiger Got, ein Herr Himels und der erden, durch welchs gaist alle ding regirt, durch welchs fursehung alle ding geordnet werden, ein Got des Frids, wir bitten dich durch unsern Herrn Jesum Cristum, du wollest unsern sunden vergeben und uns mit dem gaist des frids salben, darmit wir in forcht und zittern dir dienen, zu lob und preys deines namens dienen.

Prayer (English). Almighty, everlasting God, Lord of heaven and earth, by whose Spirit all things are governed, by whose providence all things are ordered, the God of peace: we beseech thee through our Lord Jesus Christ, that thou wouldest forgive our sins and anoint us with the spirit of peace, that we may serve thee in fear and trembling, to the laud and praise of thy name.

A.6 Enemies

Witnesses: Schwäbisch Hall 1526, Schwäbisch Hall 1543 and Neckarbischofsheim 1560. Schwäbisch Hall 1543 lacks the rubric.

Rubric (German). Fur unsere Feind

Rubric (English). For our enemies

Bid (German). Lassendt uns auch bitten fur unsere feind, das Got sie fur in ir aigne erkantnus und sie von irem unrechten abfur. Bittend also:

Bid (English). Let us also pray for our enemies, that God would lead them into the knowledge of themselves and lead them away from their unrighteousness. Pray ye thus:

Prayer (German). Almechtiger, ewiger Got, der du uns bevolhen hast, das wir unsere feindt sollen liben, fur unsere verfolger bitten, wir schreyhen hertzlich zu dir, das du wellest unsere feind gnedigklich heimsuchen und inen ein fruntlich, einhellig gemut unnd hertz mit uns und der gantzen Cristenhait geben.

Prayer (English). Almighty, everlasting God, who hast commanded us to love our enemies and to pray for our persecutors: we cry heartily unto thee, that thou wouldest graciously visit our enemies, and give them a friendly and one-accorded mind and heart with us and with all Christendom.

A.7 Women with child

Witnesses: Schwäbisch Hall 1526, Schwäbisch Hall 1543, Frankfurt 1553, Neckarbischofsheim 1560 and Frankfurt 1589.

Bid (German). Lassent uns auch bitten fur all schwanger frawen, das got sie gnedigklich von kinds banden erlosen wol. Bittend also:

Bid (English). Let us also pray for all women with child, that God would graciously deliver them from the bonds of childbirth. Pray ye thus:

Prayer (German). Allmechtiger, ewiger Gott und Vater, ein schöpffer aller ding, der du man und weyp gnediglich gesegnet und dem weyp iren kumer im gebern zu einem hailigen Creutz durch unsern Herrn Jesum Cristum geweyhet hast, wir bitten dich, Herr Got, du wollest die frucht ires leips, dein aigen geschöpff, erhalten und bewaren und unter dem Creutz inn der bekümmerlichen geburt nicht verderben laßen, sonder gnedigklich entpinden.

Prayer (English). Almighty, everlasting God and Father, Creator of all things, who hast graciously blessed man and woman, saying: Be fruitful and multiply; and hast made the woman's sorrow in bearing an holy cross through our Lord Jesus Christ: we beseech thee, Lord God, that thou wouldest preserve and keep the fruit of her womb, thine own creature, and suffer her not to perish under the cross of the painful birth, but graciously deliver her.

A.8 Fruits of the earth

Witnesses: Schwäbisch Hall 1526, Schwäbisch Hall 1543 and Neckarbischofsheim 1560. Schwäbisch Hall 1543 lacks the rubric.

Rubric (German). Fur die Fruchten der erden

Rubric (English). For the fruits of the earth

Bid (German). Lassendt uns auch bitten fur die frucht der erden, das sie Got wol gesegnen und uns wol geraten lassen. Bittend also:

Bid (English). Let us also pray for the fruits of the earth, that God would bless them and let them prosper well for us. Pray ye thus:

Prayer (German). Almechtiger, barmhertziger, ewiger Got, der du durch dein wort alle ding erschafest und gesegnest, wir bitten dich, das du den somen deins worts unsern Herrn Jesum Cristum, uns wollest mittailn und in unser Hertz pflantzest, dardurch an uns gesegnet werd mit fruchtbarer wachsung und gotlichem gebrauch alles, was uns zur leblichen noturft dienet.

Prayer (English). Almighty, merciful, everlasting God, who through thy word createst and blessest all things: we beseech thee that thou wouldest impart unto us the seed of thy word, our Lord Jesus Christ, and sow him in our heart, whereby there may be blessed unto us, with fruitful increase and godly use, all that serveth us for our bodily need.

A.9 Lord's Prayer

Witnesses: Schwäbisch Hall 1526 and Schwäbisch Hall 1543. The rubric is in Schwäbisch Hall 1526 only.

Rubric (German). Gemein Gebet

Rubric (English). Common prayer

Bid (German). Lassendt uns auch bitten sonst fur alles, so Got, unser Herr, gebetten sein wil, sprechend ein Vater unser.

Bid (English). Let us also pray besides for all things for which God our Lord will be prayed unto, saying an Our Father.

A.10 Lord's Prayer

Witnesses: Schwäbisch Hall 1526.

Rubric (German). Des Herrn Gebet

Rubric (English). The Lord’s Prayer

Prayer (German). Vater unser in dem himel, etc.

Prayer (English). Our Father, which art in heaven, etc.

A.11 Creed

Witnesses: Schwäbisch Hall 1526.

Rubric (German). Die bekantnus des Glaubens

Rubric (English). The confession of the faith

Prayer (German). Ich glaub in Got vater, almechtigen.

Prayer (English). I believe in God the Father Almighty.

A.12 Ten Commandments

Witnesses: Schwäbisch Hall 1526.

Rubric (German). Die zehen gebot

Rubric (English). The Ten Commandments

Prayer (German). Disse wort hat der Herr alle geredt: Ich bin der Herr, etc.

Prayer (English). The Lord spake all these words: I am the Lord, etc.

A.13 Special intercessions

Witnesses: Schwäbisch Hall 1526.

Rubric (German). Das wer nu fur das gemein gebet. Man mocht alwegen gebet hintzusetzen nach zufallenden sachen mit kriegen, pestilentz oder sonderlichen kranckhaiten, etc.

Rubric (English). This, then, were for the common prayer. Prayers might always be added thereto according to matters as they befall, with wars, pestilence, or special sicknesses, etc.

A.14 Communicants

Witnesses: Frankfurt 1589.

Prayer (German). Uber das alles bitten wir, O Herr Jesu Christe, dich, der du dieses Sacraments stiffter und erhalter bist, daß du uns, die wir solches zu entpfahen hie erscheinen, deinen Heiligen Geist laut deiner vielfältigen Verheissung reichlich mittheilen wöllest, der unsere Hertzen stärcke und erhalte in ungezweiffeltem Glauben deiner Wort, in warer Erkanntnuß, Reuw und Leyd unserer Sünde und in festem vertrawen auff dein allein genugthuhung für dieselbigen, damit wir nicht unwirdiglich, sonder wirdiglich der thewren Pfande deines heiligen Leibs und Bluts theilhafftig werden umb deines heiligen Leidens und Sterbens unnd dieses deines Heiligen Testaments Ehre willen, Amen.

Prayer (English). Over and above all this we beseech thee, O Lord Jesu Christ, who art the founder and upholder of this Sacrament, that thou wouldest richly impart unto us, who appear here to receive the same, thy Holy Spirit according to thy manifold promise, who may strengthen and keep our hearts in undoubting faith in thy words, in true knowledge, repentance and sorrow for our sins, and in firm trust in thy sole satisfaction for the same, that we may be partakers, not unworthily but worthily, of the precious pledges of thy holy Body and Blood; for the honour of thy holy sufferings and death and of this thy holy Testament. Amen.

A.15 Blessing

Witnesses: Neckarbischofsheim 1560.

Rubric (German). Appendix.

Rubric (English). Appendix.

Prayer (German). Glaubt, so seyt ir erhert im himmel, wie uns der Herr zugesagt hat: Was ir bitet in ewerm gebet, glaubt nur, das irs Empfangen werdet, so wirts euch werden. Hierbey gesegne und behüte euch der herr, er erzaige euch sein angesicht und erbarme sich über euch und gebe euch seinen ewigen friden. Amen.

Prayer (English). Believe, and ye are heard in heaven, as the Lord hath promised us: Whatsoever ye ask in your prayer, only believe that ye shall receive it, and it shall be done unto you. Herewith the Lord bless you and keep you; he show you his face and have mercy upon you, and give you his everlasting peace. Amen.

6.5 Family B1: Württemberg long form

Brenz's bidding-plus-collect scheme in its ducal form: a preface on prayer (Mt 18:19, 1 Tim 2), then biddings each followed by a collect; used chiefly on high feasts. Spread through Pfalz-Neuburg 1554 to the Palatinate, Zweibrücken, Veldenz and Leiningen.

- Earliest witness (archetype): Württemberg 1553, long form.
- Tradition: Lutheran.
- Language: German.
- Form: preface, then bidding + collect for each intention.
- Place in the service (Württemberg 1553): On Sundays and feast days immediately after the sermon ("auff die Sontag unnd andere Feyertag gleich nach der predig"); the Litany is the second form of the common prayer.

Year	Witness	Territory	Sehling	Form
1553	Württemberg, Große Kirchenordnung (Brenz)	Duchy of Württemberg	Sehling 16, I/29, pp. 256–258	bidding + collect
1556	Kurpfalz, Kirchenordnung (Ottheinrich)	Electoral Palatinate	Sehling 14, Regierungszeit Ottheinrichs, pp. 151–153	bidding + collect
1557	Pfalz-Zweibrücken, Kirchenordnung (Pfalzgraf Wolfgang)	Palatinate-Zweibrücken (and Neuburg)	Sehling 18, I/5, pp. 193–195	bidding + collect

Year	Witness	Territory	Sehling	Form
1566	Leiningen-Westerburg, Kirchenordnung (Graf Philipp)	County of Leiningen-Westerburg	Sehling 19, IV/3, pp. 254–255	preface + bidding + headed collects
1574	Pfalz-Veldenz, Kirchenordnung (Pfalzgraf Georg Johann)	Palatinate-Veldenz (Lützelstein)	Sehling 18, II/8, pp. 505–508	bidding + collect

Each bid ends "Bittend also:" and each collect "durch unsern Herrn Jesum Christum, Amen.", following the family's own majority (Introduction, Representative texts, rule 4).

B1.2 to B1.4 are not one sequence but two local insertions after the preface. B1.2 is Kurpfalz 1556's lead-in to the open confession and absolution, which that order places here. B1.3 and B1.4 are Pfalz-Veldenz 1574's own confession and absolution.

Not in the representative text (a minority reading of its category; see the Prayers sheet or the critical sheets): Pfalz-Veldenz 1574 no. 9 (Peace).

Sequence: B1.1 Exhortation / preface > B1.2 Confession of sins > B1.3 Confession of sins > B1.4 Confession of sins > B1.5 The Church > B1.6 Civil authority > B1.7 The afflicted > B1.8 The erring & unbelievers > B1.9 Peace > B1.10 Enemies > B1.11 Women with child > B1.12 Fruits of the earth > B1.13 Lord's Prayer.

B1.1 Exhortation / preface

Rubric (German). Die vorrede des gmeinen Gebets.

Rubric (English). The preface of the common prayer.

Bid (German). Nach dem wir beieinander in gottes namen versamlet seind und uns bevolhen ist, das wir Gott in aller unser nott sollen anruffen, auch für meniglich unser fürbitt thun, zu welchem wir die zusagung unsers lieben Herrn Christi haben: Wa zwen under euch eins werden auff erden, warumb es ist, das sie bitten wöllen, das soll inen von meinem vatter im himmel widerfaren, und: Bittet, so würdt euch gegeben, suchet, so werdet ir finden, klopfft an, so würdt euch auffgethon.

Bid (English). Forasmuch as we are gathered together in God’s name, and it is commanded us that we should call upon God in all our need and also make our intercession for every man, whereunto we have the promise of our dear Lord Christ: Where two of you shall agree on earth as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven; and: Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

B1.2 Confession of sins

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1556.

Bid (German). Hierauf, dieweil wir für dem thron göttlicher majestat mit tröstlichem gewissen und sicherem glauben in unserm gebet nicht kommen mögen noch dörfen, wir seyen dann zuvor mit Gott versönet und von ime mit genaden aufgenommen, wir kummen aber durch keinen andern weg zur versönung mit Gott, dann so wir unsere sünde erkhennen und glauben, das uns die sünde von wegen des eingebornen sons Gottes, unsers lieben herren Jesu Christi, vergeben und nachgelassen sein, so lasst uns anfencklich unsere sünde vor Gott bekhennen und hernach die absolution von den sünden empfahen, sprechend also: Ich armer sünder etc. ut supra.

Bid (English). Hereupon, forasmuch as we neither can nor may come before the throne of the divine majesty in our prayer with a comforted conscience and sure faith, except we be first reconciled with God and received of him into grace; and we come by no other way unto reconciliation with God, but that we acknowledge our sins and believe that our sins are forgiven and remitted us for the sake of the only-begotten Son of God, our dear Lord Jesus Christ: let us therefore first confess our sins before God and thereafter receive the absolution from our sins, saying thus: I, poor sinner, etc., as above.

B1.3 Confession of sins

Witnesses: Pfalz-Veldenz 1574.

Rubric (German). Beicht und bekantnus.

Rubric (English). Confession and acknowledgement.

Bid (German). Damit unnser gebett nit von Gott veracht und verworffen werde, als das auß unrainem, unbußfertigem hertzen herfliesse, so wöllen wir von aller erst dem allmechtigen unnsere Sünde und missethat bekhennen mit wahrer rew und Laidt und im Namen seines geliebten Sohns Jesu Christi umb verzeyhung auß wahrem glauben pitten. Darumb so erhebt ewer hertzen und sprecht mit mir dise offne Beicht:

Bid (English). That our prayer be not despised and cast away of God, as flowing out of an unclean, impenitent heart, we will first of all confess our sins and misdeeds unto the Almighty with true repentance and sorrow, and in the name of his beloved Son Jesus Christ pray for pardon out of true faith. Therefore lift up your hearts and say with me this open confession:

Prayer (German). Ich armer, elender, sündiger Mensch bekhenne vor Gott, meinem schöpfer unnd Erlöser, das ich laider offt unnd dickh sehr schwerlich gesündigt hab, nicht allein mit groben eusserlichen wortten unnd werckhen, sonnder vilmehr mit innerlicher, angeborner blindheit, schwachheit, zweifflung, ungedult, haß und Neidt, Geitz, Stoltz und hochmuth und mit andern bösen tückhen, die mein himelischer Vatter wol an mir erkhandt, und ichs laider nit so volkhommenlich erkhennen khan. Sie rewen mich aber von hertzen und seind mir laidt, begehre auch von hertzen gnad und verzeyhung von Gott umb seines geliebten Sohnes willen, unnsers herrn und erlösers Jesu Christi, der sein unschuldiges bluth für die sünde der gantzen welt vergossen hat.

Prayer (English). I, a poor, wretched, sinful man, confess before God, my Creator and Redeemer, that I, alas, have oft and many times sinned right grievously, not only with gross outward words and works, but much more with inward, inborn blindness, weakness, doubting, impatience, hatred and envy, covetousness, pride and haughtiness, and with other evil wiles, which my heavenly Father well knoweth in me, and which I, alas, cannot so perfectly know. But they repent me from my heart and grieve me; I desire also from my heart grace and pardon of God, for the sake of his beloved Son, our Lord and Redeemer Jesus Christ, who hath shed his innocent blood for the sins of the whole world.

B1.4 Confession of sins

Rubric (English). Absolution.

Prayer (German). Der allmechtige, Barmhertzige Gott hat sich unnser erbarmet, vergibt uns warhafftiglich all unnsere Sünde umb seines lieben sohns willen, unnsers herrn Jesu Christi, den er umb unnsertwillen in den dodt gegeben, und hat macht geben, khinder Gottes zuwerden allen, die an seinen Namen glauben, gibt uns darzu seinen hailigen Geist, uff das wir glauben und seelig werden. Das verleyehe uns Gott, Vatter, Sohn und heiliger Gaist. Amen.

Prayer (English). The almighty, merciful God hath had mercy upon us, and forgiveth us truly all our sins for the sake of his dear Son, our Lord Jesus Christ, whom he gave into death for our sakes, and hath given power to become the children of God to all that believe on his name; he giveth us moreover his Holy Spirit, that we may believe and be saved. This grant us God, Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Amen.

B1.5 The Church

Witnesses: Württemberg 1553, Kurpfalz 1556, Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557, Leiningen-Westerburg 1566 and Pfalz-Veldenz 1574.

Bid (English). Hereupon let us, out of true confidence in the divine mercy, through our Lord Jesus Christ, pray for the common Christian Church and the ministers thereof. Pray ye thus:

Prayer (German). O allmechtiger ewiger, güttiger Gott und vatter unsers Herrn Jesu Christi, der uns ernstlich bevolhen hat, das wir dich umb Arbeitter in deine ernd bitten sollent, wir bitten dein grundlose barmhertzigkeit, du wöllest uns rechtgeschaffne leerer und diener deines Göttlichen worts zuschicken, und denselben dein heilsames wort in ir hertz und mund geben, das sie deinen bevelch trewlich außrichten unnd nichts predigen, das deinem heiligen wort entgegen seie, auff das wir durch dein himmelisch, ewig wort ermanet, gelert, gespeißt, getröst und gesterckt werden, und thun, was dir gefällig und uns fruchtbarlich ist. Gib, Herr, deiner heiligen Christenheit deinen geist und göttliche weißheit, das dein wort under uns lauff und wachsse unnd mit aller freidigkeit, wie sichs gebürt, geprediget unnd dein heilige, Christliche gemein dardurch gebessert werde, auff das wir mit bestendigem glauben dir dienen und in erkanntnuß deines Namens biß an das end verharren, Amen.

Prayer (English). O almighty, gracious God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath first commanded us that we should pray thee for labourers into thine harvest: we beseech thy bottomless mercy that thou wouldest send us right and true teachers and ministers of thy divine word, and give thy wholesome word into their heart and mouth, that they may faithfully perform thy commandment and preach nothing that is contrary to thy holy word; to the end that we, being by thy heavenly, eternal word admonished, taught, fed, comforted and strengthened, may do that which is well-pleasing unto thee and profitable unto us. Give, O Lord, unto thy holy Christendom thy Spirit and divine wisdom, that thy word may run and grow among us and be preached with all boldness, as it becometh, and that thy holy Christian congregation may be bettered thereby; that we may serve thee with steadfast faith and continue in the knowledge of thy name unto the end. Amen.

B1.6 Civil authority

Bid (English). Let us faithfully pray, by the commandment of our Lord Jesus Christ and of his Apostles, for all temporal magistrates, that we may lead a quiet and still life in all godliness. Pray ye thus:

Prayer (German). Allmechtiger, ewiger Gott, in welches hand besteet aller menschen gewalt und Oberkeit, von dir zur straff der bösen und wolfart der frommen eingesetzt, in welches hand auch steend alle recht und gesetz aller recht auff erden, wir bitten dich, sihe gnediglich auff deine diener, den Römischen Kaiser, alle König, fürsten und ordenlich Oberkeit und sonderlich auff unsern gnedigen Landsfürsten und herrn, auch alle seine Räth und Amptleut, damit sie das weltlich schwerdt, inen von dir bevolhen, nach deinem bevelch in deiner forcht füren mögen, erleucht und erhalte sie bei deinem Göttlichen Namen, gib in, lieber Herr, weißheit und verstand und ein fridlich Regiment, auff das sie alle ire underthonen im frid, ruhe und einigkeit beschirmen und regieren, erlengere inen, O Gott unsers heils, ir tag, auff das wir under irer Herrschaft deinen Göttlichen Namen sampt inen heiligen unnd preisen mögen, durch unsern Herrn Jesum Christum, Amen.

Prayer (English). Almighty, everlasting God, in whose hand standeth all power and authority of men, ordained of thee for the punishment of the wicked and the welfare of the godly, in whose hand also stand all the rights and laws of all realms upon earth: we beseech thee, look graciously upon thy servants, the Roman Emperor, all kings, princes and lawful magistrates, and especially upon our gracious prince and lord of this land, and also all his counsellors and officers, that they may bear the temporal sword, committed unto them of thee, according to thy commandment in thy fear. Enlighten them and keep them in thy divine name; give them, dear Lord, wisdom and understanding and a peaceable government, that they may defend and rule all their subjects in peace, rest and unity; and prolong their days, O God of our salvation, that under their dominion we together with them may hallow and praise thy divine name; through our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

B1.7 The afflicted

Witnesses: Württemberg 1553, Kurpfalz 1556, Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557, Leiningen-Westerburg 1566 and Pfalz-Veldenz 1574. Leiningen-Westerburg 1566 lacks the bid.

Bid (English). Let us pray for all them that are in trouble and temptation by reason of sickness, dearth, war, imprisonment, pestilence, and are burdened and laden with all manner of adversity, that God would graciously show them help and succour in their need. Pray ye thus:

Prayer (German). O Allmechtiger Herr Gott, der du der ellenden seufftzen nicht verschmechst und der betrübten hertzen verlangen nit verachtest, sihe doch an unser gebett, welches wir dir in unser nott fürbringen und erhöre uns gnädiglich, das alles, so beide, von teuffel und menschen, wider uns strebt, zu nicht und von der gnad deiner gütte zertrent werde, auf das wir von aller anfechtung unverseret, dir in deiner gemein dancken und dich all zeit loben, durch unsern Herrn Jesum Christum, Amen.

Prayer (English). O almighty Lord God, who despisest not the sighing of the wretched, and settest not at nought the desire of the sorrowful hearts: look thou upon our prayer, which we bring before thee in our need, and hear us graciously, that all that striveth against us, both from the devil and from men, may be brought to nought and by the grace of thy goodness be scattered; that we, being hurt by no temptation, may give thanks unto thee in thy congregation and praise thee evermore; through our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

B1.8 The erring & unbelievers

Witnesses: Pfalz-Veldenz 1574.

Rubric (German). Für die, so in Irtumb des glaubens, das sie Gott gnediglich bekheren etc.

Rubric (English). For them that are in error of the faith, that God would graciously convert them, etc.

Prayer (German). Herr Gott, himelischer Vatter, der du wilt, das alle Menschen zu deiner erkhantnus khommen und seelig werden. Wir pitten dich ernstlich und mit gantzem hertzen, du wöllest alle, so vom Christlichen glauben abgewichen oder sonnst mit etlichen stuckhen irrig und mit falscher lehr behafft und verfieret seind, vätterlich heimbsuchen unnd wider bringen zu erkantnus ires irthumbs, das sie ein lust und gefallen gewinnen an deiner bestendigen, einfaltigen, ewigen warheit, durch unsern Herrn Jesum Christum, Amen.

Prayer (English). Lord God, heavenly Father, who willest that all men come to the knowledge of thee and be saved: we pray thee earnestly and with our whole heart that thou wouldest visit in fatherly wise all them that are fallen away from the Christian faith, or else are erring in certain articles and are possessed and led astray with false doctrine, and bring them again to the knowledge of their error, that they may win delight and pleasure in thy steadfast, simple, eternal truth; through our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

B1.9 Peace

Witnesses: Württemberg 1553, Kurpfalz 1556, Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557, Leiningen-Westerburg 1566 and Pfalz-Veldenz 1574. Leiningen-Westerburg 1566 lacks the bid.

Bid (German). Laßt uns auch gar ernstlich umb einen gemeinen Landtfriden bitten, das der recht Gotsdienst under uns auffwachse und Christenliche zucht zuneme. Bittend also:

Bid (English). Let us also pray right earnestly for a common peace in the land, that the true service of God may grow up among us and Christian discipline increase. Pray ye thus:

Prayer (German). Allmechtiger, ewiger Gott, ein Künig der ehren und ein Herr himmels unnd der erden, durch wölches Geist alle ding Regiert, durch welches versehung alle ding geordnet werden, der du bist ein Gott des fridens, von dem allein alle einigkeit zu uns kommet. Wir bitten dich durch unsern Herrn Jesum Christum, du wöllest uns unser sünd vergeben und mit deinem Göttlichen frid und einigkeit begnaden, damit wir in forcht und zittern dir dienen zu lob unnd preiß deines Namens, Amen.

Prayer (English). Almighty, everlasting God, a King of glory and a Lord of heaven and of earth, by whose Spirit all things are governed, by whose providence all things are ordered; who art a God of peace, from whom alone all unity cometh unto us: we beseech thee through our Lord Jesus Christ that thou wouldest forgive us our sins and endue us with thy divine peace and unity, that we may serve thee in fear and trembling, to the laud and praise of thy name. Amen.

B1.10 Enemies

Witnesses: Württemberg 1553, Kurpfalz 1556, Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557, Leiningen-Westerburg 1566 and Pfalz-Veldenz 1574. Leiningen-Westerburg 1566 and Pfalz-Veldenz 1574 lack the bid.

Rubric (English). For all women with child.

Bid (German). Lassen uns auch bitten für alle schwangere weiber, das sie Gott gnediglichen von kindesbanden erlösen wölle. Bittend also:

Bid (English). Let us also pray for all women with child, that God would graciously deliver them from the bonds of childbirth. Pray ye thus:

Prayer (German). Allmechtiger, ewiger gott und vatter, ein schöpffer aller ding, der du Mann und Weib gnediglich gesegnet hast und dem weib, iren schmertzen zu zugeberen, zu einem heiligen creutz gesegnet hast, wir bitten dich, güttiger vatter, du wöllest die früchten ires leibs erhalten und bewaren und under dem Creutz in der bekümmerlichen geburt nicht verderben, sonder gnädiglich unnd mit freuden deiner hilff empfinden lassen, durch unsern Herrn Jesum Christum, Amen.

Prayer (English). Almighty, everlasting God and Father, a Creator of all things, who hast graciously blessed man and woman, and hast blessed unto the woman her pains in bearing to be an holy cross: we beseech thee, gracious Father, that thou wouldest keep and preserve the fruits of their womb, and not let it perish under the cross in the sorrowful travail, but graciously and with joy make them to feel thy help; through our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

B1.12 Fruits of the earth

Witnesses: Württemberg 1553, Kurpfalz 1556, Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557, Leiningen-Westerburg 1566 and Pfalz-Veldenz 1574. Leiningen-Westerburg 1566 lacks the bid.

Bid (English). Let us also pray for the fruits of the earth, that God would bless them and graciously vouchsafe them unto us, to enjoy the same in obedience unto him. Pray ye thus:

Prayer (German). Allmächtiger, ewiger Gott, der du durch dein wort alle ding erschaffest unnd gesegnest, wir bitten dich, das du dein wort, unsern Herrn Jhesum Christum, in unser hertz pflantzest, dardurch an uns gesegnet werde mit fruchtbarer wachsung unnd Göttlichem gebrauch alles, was uns zur leiblichen notturfft dienet, durch unsern Herrn Jesum Christum, Amen.

Prayer (English). Almighty, everlasting God, who by thy word createst and blessest all things: we beseech thee that thou wouldest plant thy Word, our Lord Jesus Christ, in our heart, whereby all that serveth us for our bodily need may be blessed unto us with fruitful increase and godly use; through our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

B1.13 Lord's Prayer

Witnesses: Württemberg 1553, Kurpfalz 1556, Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557 and Pfalz-Veldenz 1574.

Bid (German). Lassend uns auch bitten für alles das, darfür unser Herr Gott wil gebetten sein, sprecht: Vatter unser, etc.

Bid (English). Let us also pray for all that for which our Lord God will be prayed, saying: Our Father, etc.

6.6 Family B2: Württemberg short form

The same intentions compressed into a single continuous prayer ("Allmächtiger, ewiger Gott, himmlischer Vater …") after a brief exhortation; the ordinary Sunday form. The most widely copied general prayer in the corpus, reaching Saxony (1580), Magdeburg, Strasbourg, Sayn, Nassau and the Ysenburg counties.

- Earliest witness (archetype): Württemberg 1553, short form.
- Tradition: Lutheran.
- Language: German.
- Form: exhortation + one continuous prayer.
- Place in the service (Württemberg 1553): After the sermon, when time does not allow the long form to be read.

Magdeburg 1562 prescribes the contents of the prayer in indirect speech ("das er auch der weltlichen obrigkeit …"). Where no other witness has a bid, its sentences fill the bid column. B2.2 is its opening, and the bids of B2.6 and B2.9 are its words. They are paraphrases of the prayer, not words said to the people.

The confession and absolution (B2.3, B2.4) are those of the Ysenburg orders of 1582 and 1588 and the Wild- und Rheingrafschaft 1603. B2.12, B2.13 and B2.15 each come from a single witness (Rothenberg 1618, Rothenburg 1559, Nördlingen 1579) and stand where that order has them.

Not in the representative text (a minority reading of its category; see the Prayers sheet or the critical sheets): Hohenlohe 1578 no. 1 (Exhortation / preface); Nördlingen 1579 no. 1 (Exhortation / preface); Ysenburg-Birstein 1588 no. 1 (Exhortation / preface); Sayn 1590 no. 1 (Exhortation / preface); Strassburg 1598 no. 1 (Exhortation / preface); Strassburg 1598 no. 8 (Special intercessions); Wild- und Rheingrafschaft 1603 no. 1 (Exhortation / preface); Wild- und Rheingrafschaft 1603 no. 3 (Confession of sins); Wild- und Rheingrafschaft 1603 no. 10 (Lord's Prayer); Lützelstein 1605 no. 1 (Special intercessions).

B2.1 Exhortation / preface

Witnesses: Württemberg 1553, Kurpfalz 1556, Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557, Rothenburg 1559, Pfalz-Veldenz 1574, Nördlingen 1579 and Kursachsen 1580.

Rubric (German). Ein kürzere form des gemeinen gebets. Nachdem sich aber zu zeitten etlich zufäll begeben, das die gebett nach der leng nicht wol erzeelt mögen werden, So mag alsdann das volgendt gebett, darinn alles anligen der kirchen kurtzlich begriffen, nach der predig fürgesprochen werden:

Rubric (English). A shorter form of the common prayer. But forasmuch as it cometh to pass at times that the prayers cannot well be rehearsed at length, then may the following prayer, wherein all the concerns of the Church are briefly comprehended, be said after the sermon:

Bid (German). Ir geliebten in Christo, dieweil wir alle glider eines leibs seind, welches haupt Christus ist, so soll sich je ein glid des andern annemen und für einander bitten, das sollen wir auß bevelch unsers herrn Christi und seines heiligen Apostels von hertzen gern thun. Bittendt also:

Bid (English). Dearly beloved in Christ, forasmuch as we are all members of one body, whereof Christ is the head, so ought one member to take the part of another and to pray one for another; and this we should do gladly from the heart, by the commandment of our Lord Christ and of his holy Apostle. Pray ye thus:

B2.2 Thanksgiving

Witnesses: Magdeburg 1562.

Rubric (German). Wie sie das gemeine gebet halten. (Am Rande: Erinnerung des gemeinen gebets halben.)

Rubric (English). How they hold the common prayer. (In the margin: Reminder concerning the common prayer.)

Bid (German). Und sollen die kirchen diener auf den dorfern und in den kleinen stedten alhier von unsern visitatorn erinnert werden, das sie in dem gemeinen gebet, so alzeit nach der predigt geschicht, den barmherzigen gott danken für die offenbarung und erhaltung seines gottlichen worts

Bid (English). And the ministers of the Church in the villages and in the small towns here shall be reminded by our visitors that in the common prayer, which is always made after the sermon, they give thanks unto the merciful God for the revelation and preservation of his divine word,

B2.3 Confession of sins

Witnesses: Ysenburg-Ronneburg 1582, Ysenburg-Birstein 1588 and Wild- und Rheingrafschaft 1603. The bid is in Ysenburg-Ronneburg 1582 only.

Bid (German). Bekennet mit mir vor Gott ewer sunde, sprecht vonn hertzenn:

Bid (English). Confess with me your sins before God; say from the heart:

Prayer (German). Herr Gott, himlischer vatter, ich armer, sundiger mensch bekenne mich vor dir, daß ich leyder schwerlich unndt viel wieder dich gesundiget habe mit wortenn, werckenn, gedanckenn, thun unndt lassenn, wie du es an mir, o Gott, erkennest, undt ich leyder nicht bekennenn kann. Es reuet mich undt ist mir leydt vonn hertzenn. Ich beger gnadt unndt vergebung meiner sundenn durch Jesum Christum, deinen liebenn sohnn.

Prayer (English). Lord God, heavenly Father, I, a poor sinful man, confess before thee that I, alas, have sinned grievously and much against thee with words, works, thoughts, doing and leaving undone, as thou, O God, knowest it in me, and I, alas, cannot confess it. It repenteth me and grieveth me from my heart. I desire grace and forgiveness of my sins through Jesus Christ thy dear Son.

B2.4 Confession of sins

Witnesses: Ysenburg-Ronneburg 1582 and Ysenburg-Birstein 1588.

Prayer (German). Allenn denjenigen, so ihnen ihre sundt von herzen lassenn leydt sein, sich vor Gottes zorn furchtenn unndt erschreckenn, begeren aber gnadt und glauben ann Jesum Christum, gedenckenn, ihr leben zubessern, den verkundige ich auß dem bevelch Gottes, daß sich Gott irer erbarmen, die sunde verzeihenn undt daß ewige lebenn schenckenn will umb Jesu Christi, seines liebenn sohns, willenn. Die aber ihre sundt nicht erkennen, Gottes zorn nicht furchtenn, sonder in sunden mit unbußfertigkeitt verharrenn undt fortfahrenn, glauben auch nicht an Jesum Christum, sonder verlassen sich uf ihr eygene werck unndt wirdigkeit oder auf etwaß anders ausserhalb Christo, uber denen bleibt der zorn Gottes biß zur zeitt ihrer besserung.

Prayer (English). To all them that are heartily sorry for their sins, fear and are affrighted before God's wrath, but desire grace and believe on Jesus Christ, and purpose to amend their life, unto them I declare by the commandment of God that God will have mercy upon them, pardon their sins, and give them eternal life for the sake of Jesus Christ his dear Son. But they that acknowledge not their sins, fear not God's wrath, but continue and go on in sins with impenitence, and believe not on Jesus Christ, but trust in their own works and worthiness or in aught else apart from Christ: upon them the wrath of God abideth until the time of their amendment.

Prayer (English). The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen.

6.7 Family C: Bidding exhortation (Strasbourg type)

A bidding exhortation in the Strasbourg manner: the minister tells the people what to pray for, item by item, without addressing God, and ends with the Our Father.

- Earliest witness (archetype): Hanau-Lichtenberg 1573.
- Tradition: Lutheran.
- Language: German.
- Form: bidding exhortation + Our Father.
- Place in the service (Hanau-Lichtenberg 1573): After the sermon; then a psalm is sung by school and congregation, followed by a collect and the blessing. The pastor is to refer to the sermon just preached and to present needs (war, plague, dearth) in the common prayer.

1573	Hanau-Lichtenberg, Kirchenordnung (Graf Philipp IV.)	County of Hanau-Lichtenberg (Alsace)	Sehling 20/2, Hanau-Lichtenberg Nr. 6, pp. 52–53	bidding exhortation + Lord’s Prayer

Sequence: C.1 Exhortation / preface > C.2 The Word & its fruit > C.3 Civil authority > C.4 All estates / households > C.5 Fruits of the earth > C.6 The afflicted > C.7 Special intercessions > C.8 Lord's Prayer.

C.1 Exhortation / preface

Rubric (German). Nach der Predig geschehe das gemein Gebet auff folgende weiß:

Rubric (English). After the sermon let the common prayer be made on this wise:

Bid (German). Lieben freund, Dieweil wir beyeinander versamlet sein und Gottes wort gehöret haben, so wöllen wir alle not der gantzen Christenheit unserm Herrgott fürtragen, ihne bitten, er wöll uns gnedig und barmhertzig sein, alles geben, was uns nutz und not ist, zur leibes notturfft und zur seelen seligkeit:

Bid (English). Dear friends, forasmuch as we are gathered together and have heard God’s word, we will lay all the need of the whole of Christendom before our Lord God, and pray him that he would be gracious and merciful unto us, and give all that is profitable and needful for us, for the necessity of the body and for the salvation of the soul:

C.2 The Word & its fruit

Bid (German). Am ersten so bittet für das Geistlich, das unser lieber Herrgott uns sein heiligs wort wölle lassen predigen und gnad verleihen, das wir solches gerne hören, mit dem hertzen glauben und unser leben darnach richten, auch alle die jenigen, so von solchs Worts wegen in jamer, elend und widerwertigkeit stecken, trösten, stercken und auß allem jamer und elend erretten. Er wölle auch alle, so noch in finsternuß, irrthumb und abgötterey stecken, gnediglich durch sein Wort und Heiligen Geist erleuchten und zu erkantnuß der warheit bringen, auff daß sie mit uns und wir mit ihnen mögen selig werden.

Bid (English). First, pray ye for the spiritual estate: that our dear Lord God would let his holy word be preached unto us, and vouchsafe grace that we may gladly hear the same, believe it with the heart, and order our life thereafter; and that he would comfort, strengthen, and deliver out of all misery and woe all those that for the sake of this Word are in misery, woe and adversity. That he would also graciously enlighten by his Word and Holy Spirit all that are yet in darkness, error and idolatry, and bring them to the knowledge of the truth, that they with us and we with them may be saved.

C.3 Civil authority

Bid (German). Zum andern bittet für das Weltlich Regiment: Erstlich für das Haupt, die Römische Kayserliche Majestat, unsern aller gnedigsten Herren, Darnach für die Glieder, alß Churfürsten, Fürsten und Herren der gantzen Christenheit, In sonderheit aber für unsere gnedige Herren, Frawe und Frewlein von Hanaw, für irer Gnaden Räthe, Amptleut, Diener und die gantze Herrschafft, für ein ersam Gericht und Gemeine alhie, auch die umbligende Nachpaurschafft. Der Allmechtige Gott verleihe der Oberkeit seinen Heiligen Geist und weißheit, das sie Christlich und wol regieren, die Unterthanen in gemeinem friden erhalten und bewaren.

Bid (English). Secondly, pray ye for the temporal government: first for the head, his Roman Imperial Majesty, our most gracious lord; then for the members, as the Electors, princes and lords of all Christendom; but especially for our gracious lords, lady and damsels of Hanau, for their Graces' counsellors, officers, servants and the whole lordship, for a worshipful court and commune here, and also the neighbourhood round about. Almighty God vouchsafe unto the magistrates his Holy Spirit and wisdom, that they may rule in Christian wise and well, and keep and preserve the subjects in common peace.

C.4 All estates / households

Bid (German). Letzlich bittet auch für den Ehelichen stand, der Allmechtige Gott verleihe allen Eheleuten seinen Heiligen Geist, das sie Christlich, fridlich und eintrechtiglich beieinander leben, ihre Kinder und Gesind zu Gottes forcht, auch ehr und tugent mögen aufferziehen.

Bid (English). Lastly, pray ye also for the estate of matrimony: Almighty God vouchsafe unto all married folk his Holy Spirit, that they may live together in Christian wise, peaceably and in concord, and may bring up their children and household in the fear of God, and also in honour and virtue.

C.5 Fruits of the earth

Bid (German). Bittet für die frucht des Feldes, umb ein seliges Wetter und umb alles, so uns von nöten ist.

Bid (English). Pray ye for the fruit of the field, for seasonable weather, and for all that is needful unto us.

C.6 The afflicted

Bid (German). Kinder und Krancken wölle unser Herrgott pflegen und warten, Schwangern und Seugerin fröliche frucht und gedeien geben, die gefangnen loß und ledig machen.

Bid (English). May our Lord God tend and keep children and the sick, give unto women with child and them that give suck joyful fruit and increase, and loose and set free the captives.

C.7 Special intercessions

Bid (German). Und ein jeglicher bedenck sein eigene not und kom mit ir für Gott, den himlischen Vater, und zweiffel nicht, er werde uns gnediglich durch Christum erhören. Und sprecht von gantzem hertzen also:

Bid (English). And let every man consider his own need and come with it before God, the heavenly Father, and doubt not that he will graciously hear us through Christ. And say with your whole heart thus:

C.8 Lord's Prayer

Prayer (German). Unser Vater, der du bist im Himel, Geheiliget werde dein Nam. Zukom dein Reich. Dein will geschehe auff Erden wie im Himel. Unser täglich Brot gib uns heut. Und vergib uns unser Schuld, alß wir vergeben unseren Schuldigern. Füre uns nit in versuchung, Sondern erlöse uns von dem bösen. Dann dein ist das Reich und die Krafft und die Herrligkeit von ewigkeit zu ewigkeit, Amen.

Prayer (English). Our Father, which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, from everlasting to everlasting. Amen.

6.8 Family D: Nürnberg-type Vermahnung zum Gebet

"Vermahnung zum Gebet": an exhortation in the second person ("Lieben Freund, bittet …") listing the intentions, closed by the Our Father. Copied in Waldeck, Erbach, Solms-Laubach and Henneberg.

- Earliest witness (archetype): Nürnberg 1545 (Veit Dietrich).
- Tradition: Lutheran.
- Language: German.
- Form: bidding exhortation + Our Father.
- Place in the service (Nürnberg 1545): In the “Ordnung der messen auf dem land, wo nicht schulen sind”: after the opening German psalm the pastor reads, in place of the Epistle, this exhortation with the Our Father, followed by the Creed, the Ten Commandments and the catechism pieces on Baptism, the Keys and the Supper (the medieval pulpit office, Prone).

The family has two lines, and the representative text joins them. Veit Dietrich's exhortation (Nürnberg 1545, copied in Waldeck 1556) supplies D.3, D.7, D.12 and D.14. The Erbach line (Erbach 1560, Solms-Laubach 1576, Henneberg 1582) supplies most of the rest, and it has the majority for the magistrates (D.6). So the text has two openings: D.3 (Nürnberg) and D.4 (Erbach). To read Veit Dietrich's prayer alone, use the Prayers sheet of the workbook, or the critical sheets.

Not in the representative text (a minority reading of its category; see the Prayers sheet or the critical sheets): Nürnberg 1545 no. 2 (Civil authority); Waldeck 1556 no. 2 (Civil authority); Erbach 1560 no. 7 (All estates / households); Erbach 1560 no. 8 (Lord's Prayer); Solms-Laubach 1576 no. 5 (All estates / households); Solms-Laubach 1576 no. 7 (Special intercessions); Henneberg 1582 no. 5 (All estates / households); Henneberg 1582 no. 9 (Special intercessions).

D.1 Exhortation / preface

Witnesses: Henneberg 1582.

Rubric (German). Nach der predigt sol der kirchendiener das volk zum gebet, fur alle stende und not der christlichen kirchen vermittelst nachfolgender form mit vleis abermals ermanen. ¶ Forma des gemeinen gebets.

Rubric (English). After the sermon the minister shall again diligently exhort the people to prayer for all estates and the need of the Christian Church by means of the following form. ¶ Form of the common prayer.

Bid (German). Geliebten im herrn Christo, weil wir im namen unsers herren Christi jetzt alhie versamlet sind, göttlichen befehl und gebot haben, wir sollen beten, darzu verheissung, was wir im namen Jesu Christi bitten, das es unser gnediger vater im himel uns gern geben wolle.

Bid (English). Beloved in the Lord Christ, forasmuch as we are now here gathered together in the name of our Lord Christ, and have God’s commandment and bidding that we should pray, and moreover the promise that whatsoever we ask in the name of Jesus Christ, our gracious Father in heaven will gladly give it us:

D.2 Thanksgiving

Witnesses: Solms-Laubach 1576.

Rubric (German). Zu ende der predigt sollen die verhandlete stuck kurtzlich repetirt und alßdan, wo personen, so sich miteinander ehelich versprochen, angeben, proclamirt werden, daruf dancksagung und gebett volgen, also: ¶ Dancksagung und gemein gebett

Rubric (English). At the end of the sermon the matters handled shall be briefly repeated, and then, if there be persons that have given in their names as betrothed one to another, they shall be proclaimed; whereupon thanksgiving and prayer shall follow, thus: ¶ Thanksgiving and common prayer

Bid (German). Dieweil wir nun Gottes wortt haben angehort und schuldig seint, Gott dem allmechtigen fur alle seine wollthatt, so er uns täglich erzeigt, zudancken, so wollen wir ime dancksagen vor das werck der erschöpfung, erlösung und heiligung, das er auch noch fur und fur biß an den jungsten tag in seiner erkantnus uns erhelt, zum geistlichen, weltlichen und haußstandt seine gnad verleyhet und uns segenet, seint auch schuldig, umb erhaltung derselben stende und was darzu gehörig, zubitten, haben göttliche verheissung und gewisse zusage, was wir im nhamen Jhesu Christi bitten werden, das unß dasselbige der vatter im hiemel geben wölle.

Bid (English). Forasmuch now as we have heard God’s word, and are bound to give thanks unto God Almighty for all his benefits which he daily showeth us, we will give him thanks for the work of creation, redemption and sanctification; that he still keepeth us evermore in his knowledge until the last day, and vouchsafeth his grace to the spiritual, temporal and household estate, and blesseth us. We are bound also to pray for the preservation of the same estates and what pertaineth thereto; and we have God’s promise and sure assurance that whatsoever we shall ask in the name of Jesus Christ, the Father in heaven will give it us.

D.3 The Word & its fruit

Witnesses: Nürnberg 1545 and Waldeck 1556.

Rubric (German). Vermanung zu bitten für allerlei stende:

Rubric (English). Exhortation to pray for all manner of estates:

Bid (German). Ir auserwelten, bittet Gott, den Vater aller barmherzigkeit, durch Jesum Christum, unsern lieben Herren, umb fruchtbar gedeien des heiligen evangelions, das er rechtgeschaffne arbeiter in seine ernte senden wölle, auch bede - diener und hörer des worts - gnediglich erleuchten zur heiligung seines gebenedeiten namens, merung seines reichs und erfüllung seines göttlichen willens.

Bid (English). Ye elect, pray God the Father of all mercy, through Jesus Christ our dear Lord, for the fruitful increase of the holy Gospel, that he would send right and true labourers into his harvest, and graciously enlighten both ministers and hearers of the word, to the hallowing of his blessed name, the increase of his kingdom and the fulfilling of his divine will.

D.4 The Church

Witnesses: Erbach 1560, Solms-Laubach 1576 and Henneberg 1582.

Bid (German). So last uns erstlich bedencken die noth der gantzen Christenheit und bitten, daß Gott uns sein wort rein und lauter erhalten, auch die jenigen, so noch nit zu rechter erkentniß kommen, herzu führen und seine arme Christenheit gnediglich behüten wölle wider alles fürnehmen des Teuffels.

Bid (English). Let us therefore first consider the need of all Christendom, and pray that God would keep his word pure and clear unto us, and also bring thereto them that are not yet come to the right knowledge, and graciously guard his poor Christendom against all the devices of the devil.

D.5 Peace

Witnesses: Erbach 1560, Solms-Laubach 1576 and Henneberg 1582.

Bid (German). Darnach last uns auch bitten für dieses zeitlich leben, daß uns Gott mit gnedigem fride und seligem Wetter begnaden, vor Theurung, Kriege unnd Pestilentz behüten wölle.

Bid (English). Thereafter let us also pray for this temporal life, that God would bless us with gracious peace and seasonable weather, and keep us from dearth, war and pestilence.

D.6 Civil authority

Witnesses: Erbach 1560, Solms-Laubach 1576 and Henneberg 1582.

Bid (German). Bittet auch für alle Oberkeit, Keyser, König, Fürsten und Herrn, In sonderheit für unsere gnedige Herrschafft allhier, daß Gott ire hertzen durch seinen Geist und wort erleuchten wölle, Auff das Gottes wort und ehre durch sie gefordert unnd nicht verhindert werde, auch wir dester mehr fridens bey ihrem Regiment haben mögen.

Bid (English). Pray ye also for all magistrates, Emperor, kings, princes and lords, especially for our gracious lordship here, that God would enlighten their hearts by his Spirit and word, that God’s word and honour may be furthered and not hindered by them, and that we also may have the more peace under their government.

D.7 All estates / households

Witnesses: Nürnberg 1545 and Waldeck 1556.

Bid (German). Ferner bittet für alle eheleute, hausherrn und frauen, arbeiter, handierer, eehalten, sünder und sünderin, kranke, gefangene, betrübte, verlaßne witwen und waisen und die, so in anfechtung stecken, betrübte, irrige, verfürte gewissen oder was dergleichen sein. Der ewig gütig Gott wölle sich aller erbarmen, ire missetat verzeihen, ehrlichen, fridlichen, erbarn wandel nach seinem wort verleihen und in keiner versuchung sinken lassen, sonder von allem ubel, es sei leiblich oder geistlich, durch reine leer und festen glauben gnediglich erlösen. Amen.

Bid (English). Further, pray ye for all married folk, masters and mistresses of households, labourers, tradesmen, servants, sinners men and women, the sick, the captives, the sorrowful, forsaken widows and orphans, and them that are in temptation, sorrowful, erring and misled consciences, or whatsoever else there be of the like. The eternal, gracious God have mercy upon all, pardon their misdeeds, vouchsafe them an honourable, peaceable, honest conversation according to his word, and let them sink in no temptation, but graciously deliver them from all evil, be it bodily or ghostly, through pure doctrine and firm faith. Amen.

D.8 The persecuted

Witnesses: Erbach 1560 and Henneberg 1582.

Bid (German). Dieweil auch hin und wider inn allen landen viel armer Christen umb deß wort Gottes und der gerechtigkeit willen verfolgt, verjagt, gefencklich eingezogen, elendiglichen gemartert und erwürgt werden, sind wir schuldig, für sie Gott zubitten, das er durch seinen heiligen Geist ire hertzen trösten und stercken, im bekentniß sie fest erhalten und seliglichen ihnen helffen wölle an leib und sehle.

Bid (English). Forasmuch also as here and there in all lands many poor Christians are for the word of God and for righteousness' sake persecuted, driven out, cast into prison, miserably tormented and slain, we are bound to pray God for them, that he would comfort and strengthen their hearts by his Holy Spirit, keep them steadfast in the confession, and help them blessedly in body and soul.

D.9 The afflicted

Witnesses: Erbach 1560, Solms-Laubach 1576 and Henneberg 1582.

Bid (German). Darnach last uns auch bitten für unsere arme Brüder und schwestern, hie unnd inn der gantzen Welt, da entweder schwere kranckheit odder grosse anfechtung sind, das sie Gott mit gnaden erledigen wölle.

Bid (English). Thereafter let us also pray for our poor brethren and sisters, here and in the whole world, where there is either grievous sickness or great temptation, that God would graciously deliver them.

D.10 The erring & unbelievers

Witnesses: Henneberg 1582.

Bid (German). Letztlich bittet auch fur die arme leute, so noch unter dem babstumb in irrtumb und bösem gewissen ligen und die selige erkentnis des worts nicht haben, wie wir, das sie gott zu solchem licht seiner gnaden auch füren und sie mit uns durch rechten glauben an Christum wolle ewig selig machen.

Bid (English). Lastly pray ye also for the poor people that yet lie under the papacy in error and an evil conscience, and have not the blessed knowledge of the word as we have, that God would lead them also to such light of his grace and make them with us eternally blessed through right faith in Christ.

D.11 Women with child

Witnesses: Erbach 1560.

Bid (German). Bittet auch für alle schwangere frawen, das sie von kinds banden gnediglich erlöst werden, für diese unnd alle andere nodturfft der gantzen Christenheit, auch für unsere feinde, das sie möchten bekert unnd zu rechter erkäntniß unsers Herrn Jhesu Christi gebracht werden.

Bid (English). Pray ye also for all women with child, that they may be graciously delivered from the bonds of childbirth; for these and all other necessities of the whole of Christendom; and also for our enemies, that they may be converted and brought to the right knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

D.12 Lord's Prayer

Witnesses: Nürnberg 1545, Waldeck 1556, Solms-Laubach 1576 and Henneberg 1582. Solms-Laubach 1576 lacks the bid. The prayer is in Nürnberg 1545 and Solms-Laubach 1576 only.

Bid (German). Solches alles zu erwerben, sprecht aus rechtem glauben:

Bid (English). To obtain all this, say out of right faith:

Prayer (German). Vater unser..., sonder erlöse uns von ubel; dann dein ist das reich, die kraft und die herrligkeit in ewigkeit. Amen.

Prayer (English). Our Father ..., but deliver us from evil: for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

D.13 Special intercessions

Witnesses: Erbach 1560.

Rubric (German). So mögen auch jeder zeit aus zufallender not, als in kriegen, sterben unnd thewrung, sonderliche gebet, so darzu dienlich, dieselbige zeit hinzu gethan unnd gebraucht werden.

Rubric (English). So also at any time, by reason of need befalling, as in wars, pestilence and dearth, special prayers serving thereto may for that time be added and used.

D.14 Creed

Witnesses: Nürnberg 1545.

Rubric (German). Die artikel unsers glaubens.

Rubric (English). The articles of our faith.

Prayer (German). Ich glaub in Gott, Vater almechtigen, schöpfer himels und der erden, …

Prayer (English). I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth, …

D.15 Blessing

Witnesses: Henneberg 1582.

Rubric (German). Nach solcher vermanung und dem gesprochenen vater unser, sol der prediger nachfolgenden segen uber das volk sprechen:

Rubric (English). After such exhortation and the Our Father said, the preacher shall speak the following blessing over the people:

Prayer (German). Die gnade unsers herren Jesu Christi, die liebe gottes und die gemeinschaft des heiligen geistes sei mit euch allen, amen.

Prayer (English). The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all. Amen.

6.9 Family E: Saxon Gemein Gebet (Melanchthon/Pfeffinger)

The Albertine Saxon "Gemein Gebet" in the Melanchthon/Pfeffinger tradition, a continuous prayer with pronounced petitions against war and for the Elector.

- Earliest witness (archetype): Leipzig 1567.
- Tradition: Lutheran.
- Language: German.
- Form: continuous prayer.
- Place in the service (Leipzig 1567): After the sermon, “mit mund und herzen zu sprechen”.

Year	Witness	Territory	Sehling	Form
1567	Leipzig, Gemein gebet (renewed by Johann Pfeffinger)	Leipzig (Electoral Saxony)	Sehling 1, IV. Theil, Nr. 108, pp. 595–596	continuous prayer

Sequence: E.1 Repentance & forgiveness > E.2 The Church > E.3 Civil authority > E.4 Peace > E.5 Civil authority > E.6 The afflicted.

E.1 Repentance & forgiveness

Rubric (German). Gemein gebet. Nach der predigt mit mund und herzen zu sprechen.

Rubric (English). Common prayer. To be said after the sermon with mouth and heart.

Prayer (German). Almechtiger got und vater unsers herrn Jesu Christi, wir bekennen, das wir mit vielen sünden, wissentlich und unwissentlich vorunreinet sind, und ist uns herzlich leid, das wir wider deinen gerechten willen gethan haben, und bitten, du wollest unsere herzen zu dir bekeren, und uns alle unsere sünde, umb deines lieben sohns Jesu Christi willen vorgeben, und wollest in uns mit deinem heiligen geist rechten glauben und rechten gehorsam anzünden, und uns regieren. So ist auch unser ernstlicher fürsatz, uns mit deiner hülf zu bessern, und in deinem gehorsam zu leben.

Prayer (English). Almighty God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, we confess that we are defiled with many sins, wittingly and unwittingly, and it grieveth us heartily that we have done against thy righteous will; and we beseech thee that thou wouldest turn our hearts unto thee, and forgive us all our sins for thy dear Son Jesus Christ's sake, and kindle in us by thy Holy Spirit right faith and right obedience, and govern us. So is it also our earnest purpose to amend ourselves with thy help and to live in thy obedience.

E.2 The Church

Prayer (German). Wir bitten auch, umb deins lieben sohns, Jesu Christi willen, du wollest unter uns in diesen landen für und für eine kirche samlen, und christlich reine lehre erhalten, treue lehrer und prediger geben, die mit rechter lehr und gutem exempel, zu deinem lob und der leute seligkeit dienen.

Prayer (English). We beseech thee also, for thy dear Son Jesus Christ's sake, that thou wouldest evermore gather a Church among us in these lands, and preserve Christian pure doctrine, and give faithful teachers and preachers, which with right doctrine and good example may serve to thy praise and the salvation of the people.

E.3 Civil authority

Prayer (German). Und bitten von herzen, du wollest umb deines lieben sohns Jesu Christi willen, disen landen fridlich christlich selig regiment geben, und römische keiserliche majestät und unsern herrschaften herzog regenten churfursten und seiner churfürstlichen gnaden zugethane und verwante, mit dem heiligen geist regieren, das ir leben und regierung, dir zu lobe, und inen und den unterthanen zu frieden und seligkeit dienen möge.

Prayer (English). And we beseech thee from our heart that thou wouldest, for thy dear Son Jesus Christ's sake, give unto these lands peaceable, Christian, blessed government, and govern with the Holy Spirit the Roman Imperial Majesty and our lordships, the duke regent Elector and his Electoral Grace's adherents and kinsfolk, that their life and government may serve to thy praise, and to peace and salvation for them and for the subjects.

E.4 Peace

Prayer (German). Wollest auch ire churfürstlichen gnaden sampt derselbigen zugethanen und angehörigen, in diesen beschwerlichen und sonstigen kriges hendeln, durch deine grundlose barmherzigkeit, behüten, schützen und bewaren. Die widerwertigen, unruigen und ungehorsamen, so göttlicher ordnung widerstreben, die herrschaft vorachten, den frieden brechen, und zu blutvergiessen, leut und land vorderbung ursach geben, gnediglich bekeren, oder ihnen steuren und wehren, und den befolnen rechtmessigen kriege, mit seliger wolfart zu gutem, glücklichem, friedlichem ende bringen, auf das vieler christen unschuldiges blutvergiessen, vorwüstung dieser landen, schulen und kirchen, abgewendet und vorhutet werden.

Prayer (English). Wilt thou also by thy bottomless mercy guard, protect and preserve his Electoral Grace, together with his adherents and kinsmen, in these grievous and other matters of war; graciously convert the adversaries, the unquiet and disobedient, which resist the divine ordinance, despise authority, break the peace, and give occasion to bloodshed and the ruin of people and land, or else restrain and withstand them; and bring the lawful war committed unto us to a good, happy, peaceable end with blessed welfare, that the innocent bloodshed of many Christians and the wasting of these lands, schools and churches may be turned away and prevented.

E.5 Civil authority

Prayer (German). Und wollest auch dieser stadt obrigkeit und unterthanen gnediglich regieren und bewahren, und die früchte der erden (die du giebst, das in diesem leiblichen leben die menschen erhalten werden, um dich lernen erkennen und anrufen) und das tegliche brot williglich geben und segnen.

Prayer (English). And wilt thou also graciously govern and preserve the magistrates and subjects of this city, and willingly give and bless the fruits of the earth (which thou givest that men may be preserved in this bodily life, to learn to know thee and call upon thee) and our daily bread.

E.6 The afflicted

Prayer (German). Du weist auch die grosse schwachheit menschlicher natur, und wilt darumb deinen grossen zorn mit barmherzigkeit lindern, von wegen des vordiensts und fürbits deines allerliebsten sohns Jesu Christi unsers herren willen. Darumb bitten wir dich, du wollest unser wolverdienten strafen gnediglich lindern, und alle betrübten, die dich anrufen, mit deinem heiligen geist trösten, das sie in rechtem glauben und rechter anrufung bleiben, und deine barmherzigkeit in ewigkeit preisen. Amen.

Prayer (English). Thou knowest also the great weakness of man's nature, and wilt therefore temper thy great wrath with mercy, for the sake of the merit and intercession of thy most dear Son Jesus Christ our Lord. Therefore we beseech thee that thou wouldest graciously temper our well-deserved punishments, and comfort with thy Holy Spirit all the sorrowful that call upon thee, that they may abide in right faith and right calling upon thee, and praise thy mercy for ever. Amen.

6.10 Family F: Upper German pulpit intercession (Strasbourg/Zürich)

Sequence: F.1 Exhortation / preface > F.2 All men > F.3 Civil authority > F.4 Ministers of the Word > F.5 All estates / households > F.6 Special intercessions > F.7 Women with child > F.8 Schools & youth > F.9 All estates / households > F.10 The afflicted > F.11 Special intercessions > F.12 The persecuted > F.13 The erring & unbelievers > F.14 Against the Turk > F.15 Against the Turk > F.16 Lord's Prayer.

F.1 Exhortation / preface

Rubric (German). Fürbitt für die gemeinen stend:

Rubric (English). Intercession for the common estates:

Bid (German). Dieweil es aber vor Gott unserm hailand gut und angenäm ist, und er uns durch seinen hailigen apostel bevolhen hat, für alle menschen zu bitten, so lassend uns in seinem namen, in dem uns alles guts verhaißen ist, mit warem glauben und herzlichem vertrauen für Gott unsern gütigen Vater treten und also sprechen:

Bid (English). But forasmuch as it is good and acceptable before God our Saviour, and he hath commanded us by his holy Apostle to pray for all men, let us in his name, wherein all good is promised us, come before God our gracious Father with true faith and hearty confidence, and say thus:

F.2 All men

Prayer (German). Allmechtiger ewiger Gott, lieber getreuer Vater im himel, wie sich dein große gnad und gütigkeit reichlich erzaigt gegen allen menschen, also, dieweil wir deine kinder seind, begeren wir uns von herzen, deiner väterlichen miltigait sovil müglich nach zuarten und unser liebe an allen menschen mit unserm getreuen fürbitt, so wir nit weiter können, christelich zu beweisen, und rufen dich also an durch deinen Sun Jesum Christum, unsern lieben Herren und Hailand, für alle stend und anligen deiner hailgen christenhait.

Prayer (English). Almighty, everlasting God, dear and faithful Father in heaven: as thy great grace and goodness showeth itself richly toward all men, so, forasmuch as we are thy children, we desire from our hearts to take after thy fatherly bounty as far as may be, and to show forth our love toward all men in Christian wise by our faithful intercession, since we can do no more; and we call upon thee therefore, through thy Son Jesus Christ, our dear Lord and Saviour, for all the estates and concerns of thy holy Christendom.

F.3 Civil authority

Prayer (German). Erstlich für unsern herr kaiser, künig, all fürsten herren und regenten, sonderlich aber für unser ersame oberkait in diser statt. Verleich inen allen den gaist deiner forcht und weisheit, das si all ir regiment zu lob und preis deines großen namens und fridlicher erhaltung der undertan zu aller erbarkait und gotseligkait anrichtend. Den undertanen aber gib ain willigs, glimpfigs herz, der oberkait in allem, das nit wider dich ist, zu gehorsamen.

Prayer (English). First for our lord the Emperor, the King, all princes, lords and rulers, but especially for our worshipful magistrates in this city. Vouchsafe unto them all the spirit of thy fear and wisdom, that they may order all their government to the praise and glory of thy great name and to the peaceable preservation of the subjects in all honesty and godliness. But unto the subjects give a willing and seemly heart to obey the magistrates in all that is not against thee.

F.4 Ministers of the Word

Prayer (German). Auch bitten wir dich von herzen, verleich allen dienern und verkündigern deines hailgen worts, das si mit gesunder lere und unsträflichem leben deiner hailgen gmaind zu täglicher besserung christelich vorstandend. Sonderlich aber, getreuer Vater, wöllest alle gute mittel jederzeit gnädiglich fügen, damit weder uns noch unsern nachkomen an getreuen ausspendern deiner gehaimnus und des trostlichen evangelii von deinem Sun Jesu Christo nimmer mehr mangle!

Prayer (English). We beseech thee also from our hearts, grant unto all ministers and preachers of thy holy word that with sound doctrine and unblameable life they may preside in Christian wise over thy holy congregation to its daily amendment. But especially, faithful Father, ordain graciously at all times all good means, that neither we nor our posterity may ever lack faithful stewards of thy mysteries and of the comfortable Gospel of thy Son Jesus Christ.

F.5 All estates / households

Prayer (German). Erbarm dich auch, gnediger Gott, über alle hausväter und hausmütern, auch schulmaister und alle die, so kind oder gesind haben, das si dieselbigen gotseliglich nach anweisung deines worts zu deinem preis und nutz deiner kirchen erziehen und regieren! Laß auch lieber Got, deinen frid und segen reichlich walten über all ehleut, damit si in lieb und ainigkait bei ainander wonen und all ehlich beschwerden mit glauben und gedult tragen mögen! Sonderlich aber verleich solchs disen personen, die sich begeren, ehlich mitainander zu verpflichten, mit namen etc.

Prayer (English). Have mercy also, gracious God, upon all fathers and mothers of households, and also schoolmasters and all that have children or servants, that they may bring them up and govern them godly according to the direction of thy word, to thy praise and the profit of thy Church. Let also, dear God, thy peace and blessing prevail richly over all married folk, that they may dwell together in love and unity and bear all the burdens of wedlock with faith and patience. But especially vouchsafe this unto these persons that desire to bind themselves together in marriage, by name, etc.

F.6 Special intercessions

Rubric (German). Hie sollen die hochzeiten verkünd werden und dann darauf weiter also gesprochen:

Rubric (English). Here the marriages shall be published, and then thereupon further said thus:

Prayer (German). Verleich in, barmherziger Vater, disen hailgen stand in deiner forcht anzetreten, das si auch christelich darin leben und denselbigen seliglich beschließen mögen!

Prayer (English). Grant them, merciful Father, to enter upon this holy estate in thy fear, that they may also live therein in Christian wise and close the same blessedly.

F.7 Women with child

Prayer (German). Wöllest auch, o himlischer Vater, die geperenden frauen mit gnaden empinden und si mit ainer wolgetonen und dir gefelligen frucht gnediglich erfröuen!

Prayer (English). Wilt thou also, O heavenly Father, graciously deliver women in travail and gladden them graciously with a well-formed fruit, well-pleasing unto thee.

F.8 Schools & youth

Prayer (German). Auch bitten wir dich, gütiger Vater, für unser unerzogne jugent, das du si durch deinen Hailigen Gaist väterlich aufziehen und nach deinem willen und wolgefallen bilden wöllest, damit si in deiner forcht und glauben an deinen Sun Jesum Christum seliglich aufwachsen und aller dienst deiner gemaind für und für durch si wol und christelich möge ersetzt werden.

Prayer (English). We pray thee also, gracious Father, for our youth not yet brought up, that thou wouldest bring them up in fatherly wise by thy Holy Spirit and form them according to thy will and good pleasure, that they may grow up blessedly in thy fear and in faith in thy Son Jesus Christ, and that every service of thy congregation may evermore be well and christianly supplied by them.

F.9 All estates / households

Prayer (German). Gib dein gnedigs gedeihen und benedeiung allen getreuen eehalten und arbaitern! Die armen begab mit leibsnarung und christlicher glassenhait, die reichen mit gläubiger miltigkait!

Prayer (English). Give thy gracious increase and blessing to all faithful servants and labourers. Endow the poor with bodily sustenance and Christian resignation, the rich with faithful liberality.

F.10 The afflicted

Prayer (German). Erzaig dich ain getreuen milten Vater allen betrübten, angefochtnen herzen von innen oder außen! Den kranken verleich langmütig gedultigkait, den sterbenden ain fröliche himelfart! Und in sonderhait erbarm dich etlicher die unsers fürbitts diser zeit in irem leiden, krankhait und trübsal begeren!

Prayer (English). Show thyself a faithful and bountiful Father to all sorrowful hearts, tempted within or without. Grant unto the sick long-suffering patience, to the dying a joyful going up to heaven. And in especial have mercy upon certain which at this time in their suffering, sickness and tribulation desire our intercession.

F.11 Special intercessions

Rubric (German). Hie soll er die verkündigen, so des gemainen bets begeren, und darauf dann sprechen:

Rubric (English). Here he shall announce them that desire the common prayer, and thereupon say:

Prayer (German). Laß inen, treuer Gott, alles das väterlich widerfaren, das si nach deinem wilen durch unser fürbitt von dir begeren zu erlangen! Gib inen den trost deiner gnaden, das si mitten im leiden und trübsal dein väterlich herz in warem glauben empfinden und in der gedult vil frucht bringen mögen! Sterk alle klainmütige und schwachgläubige!

Prayer (English). Let all that befall them in fatherly wise, faithful God, which according to thy will they desire to obtain of thee through our intercession. Give them the comfort of thy grace, that in the midst of suffering and tribulation they may feel thy fatherly heart in true faith and bring forth much fruit in patience. Strengthen all the fainthearted and weak in faith.

F.12 The persecuted

Prayer (German). Erhalt mit deiner gewaltigen hand alle, die umb deines names und der gerechtigkait willen under dem grausamen Türken oder sunst gefengnus und verfolgung leiden!

Prayer (English). Uphold with thy mighty hand all that for thy name's and for righteousness' sake suffer imprisonment and persecution under the cruel Turk or otherwise.

F.13 The erring & unbelievers

Prayer (German). Weis und lait alle irrige den weg christlicher warhait und des ewigen lebens! Erleucht alle verblende! Erwaich alle verherdte! Widerbring alle abgefalne von christlichen glauben und ainigkait deiner kirchen! Treib aus den unglauben aus aller menschen herzen, damit dein reich täglich je mehr und mehr zukomme und dein aingeborner Sun, unser lieber Herr und Hailand Jesus Christus, der ganzen welt bekant, von ir gelobt und geprisen werde.

Prayer (English). Show and lead all that err into the way of Christian truth and of eternal life. Enlighten all the blinded. Soften all the hardened. Bring back all that are fallen away from the Christian faith and the unity of thy Church. Drive out unbelief from the hearts of all men, that thy kingdom may daily come more and more, and thine only-begotten Son, our dear Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, be known to the whole world and be lauded and praised of it.

F.14 Against the Turk

Rubric (German). Wider den türken und die verfolger des evangelions

Rubric (English). Against the Turk and the persecutors of the Gospel

Bid (German). Schliest auch darneben ein den greulichen erbfeind des christlichen namens, den Türken! Bitten, das in der almechtig Got mit dem atem seines Hailigen Gaists wöll schlahen, damit das der nam Jesu Christi nit durch in gelestert und nit sovil christlichs blut durch in vergossen werd! Für dise und alle andre not der ganzen christenhait, auch für uns selbs und für alle die, für welche wir schuldig seind zu bitten, wöllen wir mit herzlicher demütigkait nit allain mit dem mund, sonder von ganzem herzen zu Gott bitten und also sprechen: Unser vater etc.

Bid (English). Include also therewith the horrible hereditary enemy of the Christian name, the Turk; praying that almighty God would smite him with the breath of his Holy Spirit, that the name of Jesus Christ be not blasphemed by him, nor so much Christian blood shed by him. For this and all other need of the whole of Christendom, and also for ourselves and for all for whom we are bound to pray, we will pray to God with hearty humility, not with the mouth only but with the whole heart, and say thus: Our Father, etc.

F.15 Against the Turk

Rubric (German). Oder also:

Rubric (English). Or thus:

Prayer (German). Du wöllest auch, o getreuer Gott und Vater, dem gewalt des tyrannischen, widerchristischen reichs des Türken, so wider Christum frävenlich setzt, sampt aller abgötterei, tyrannei und gotlosem wesen mit deiner almechtigen kraft weeren und zum schämel der füß Christi stürzen, damit nit dein götlicher nam sampt dem glauben Christi in uns von dem unglaubigen volk und feinden der warheit verspottet und geschmächt, sonder durch deinen Hailigen Gaist erweitert und ausgebrait und der feind durch Christum Jesum abgetriben werde.

Prayer (English). Wilt thou also, O faithful God and Father, with thine almighty power withstand the might of the tyrannous, antichristian kingdom of the Turk, which setteth itself wantonly against Christ, together with all idolatry, tyranny and ungodly being, and cast it down to be the footstool of Christ's feet; that thy divine name, together with the faith of Christ in us, be not mocked and reviled by the unbelieving people and the enemies of the truth, but be enlarged and spread abroad by thy Holy Spirit, and the enemy be driven back through Christ Jesus.

F.16 Lord's Prayer

Rubric (German). Volget das Vater unser:

Rubric (English). The Our Father followeth:

Bid (German). In desselbigen namen, o treuer, gütiger und barmherziger Vater, und aus seinem gehaiß komen wir für dein angesicht und rufen dich an, wie uns unser Herr Jesus Christus selbs geleert und zu beten bevolhen hat, und sprechend:

Bid (English). In his name, O faithful, gracious and merciful Father, and at his bidding, we come before thy face and call upon thee, as our Lord Jesus Christ himself hath taught and commanded us to pray, and say:

Prayer (German). Unser Vater, der du bist in den himlen. Gehailiget werd dein nam! Zukumme dein reich! Dein will geschech auf erden wie im himel! Unser täglich brot gib uns heut und vergib uns unsere schuld, als und wir vergeben unsern schuldigern, und für uns nit in versuchung, sonder erlös uns von dem bösen! Dann dein ist das reich und die kraft und die herrlichait in ewigkait. Amen.

Prayer (English). Our Father, which art in the heavens. Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors; and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

6.11 Family G: Hessian Vermanung zum Gebet

Hessian "Vermanung zum Gebet": a numbered bidding exhortation which the order allows to be shortened or lengthened locally.

- Earliest witness (archetype): Hessen 1566.
- Tradition: Moderate Reformed (Philip of Hesse's church).
- Language: German.
- Form: numbered bidding exhortation.
- Place in the service (Hessen 1566): The fifth part of the service: after the Creed and the sermon, “das gebet vor allerlei stende und allerlei anligende not der kirchen”, justified from Justin Martyr (Apol. I 65) and Tertullian (Apol. 30–39).

G.1 Exhortation / preface

Rubric (German). Es mag aber der diener des worts die ganze kirche zum gebet uf diese weise vermanen: (a. R.: Vermanung zum gebet,)

Rubric (English). But the minister of the word may exhort the whole church to prayer on this wise: (in the margin: Exhortation to prayer)

Bid (German). Ihr geliebten im Herrn, es ist kein mensch, der nit wisse und verstehe, sobald er sein eigen gewissen fragt, daß er hulf, woltat, gnade und barmherzigkeit Gottes zu allen zeiten und allenthalben bedarf, dann wir seind allesampt arme, schwache und gebrechliche menschen. Wir seind aber gelehret vom Herrn Christo, daß wir alles guts, ja was uns nütz und not ist, von unserm himlischen Vatter allein, der allezeit weiß, was wir bedürfen, mit demütigem und bußfertigem herzen aus warem glauben bitten und gewarten sollen; darzu, wenn wir bezeugen wöllen, daß bei uns ein fünklein der brüderlichen und ungefelschten liebe sei, so seind wir schuldig nach dem befelch und exempel Christi, auch vor andere zu bitten und nit allein vor die, so uns guts günnen und tun, sondern auch vor alle stende der menschen, ja auch vor unsere feinde und verfolger, darzü auch fur wasserlei not. Und wie wir zu Gott söllen unser gebet tun insgemein, werden alle gottfürchtigen von dem Geist Gottes unterrichtet. Uber das alles haben wir ein gebott von Christo, daß wir von seinem himlischen Vatter, der da ist und will erkant sein von allen menschen als ein gütiger Herr und warer almechtiger Gott und Vatter, der uns leichtlich könne und auch wölle gnediglich geben, alles was nutz und heilsam ist, in seinem namen bestendiglich begeren sollen. Es hat uns auch unser Herr Christus verheißen, was wir den himlischen Vatter in seinem namen bitten werden, das will er uns willig und reichlich geben. Zuletzt wissen wir auch aus der verheißung Christi, daß eines iglichen gleubigen gebet, ich geschweige der ganzen gemein, im namen Christi ordentlich versamlet, soll erhöret werden umb Christi willen. Daraus volget unwidersprechlich, daß das gemein gebet ein sonderlich merkzeichen und ubung sei der christlichen kirchen und aller gleubigen, welchs dem almechtigen Gott wolgefellig und angenem sei. Derhalben auch wir in dieser unser versamlung mit einmütigem herzen im Geist und in der warheit Gott den Herren nit allein fur uns, sonder auch fur die ganze kirche und alle stende und noturft der menschen anruffen.

Bid (English). Dearly beloved in the Lord, there is no man but knoweth and understandeth, so soon as he asketh his own conscience, that he needeth the help, benefits, grace and mercy of God at all times and in all places; for we are all of us poor, weak and frail men. But we are taught of the Lord Christ that we should ask and look for all good, yea, whatsoever is profitable and needful for us, from our heavenly Father alone, who ever knoweth what we need, with an humble and penitent heart out of true faith. Moreover, if we will witness that there is in us a spark of brotherly and unfeigned love, we are bound by the commandment and example of Christ to pray for others also, and not only for them that wish us well and do us good, but also for all estates of men, yea, also for our enemies and persecutors, and for whatsoever need besides. And how we should make our prayer unto God in common, all the God-fearing are instructed by the Spirit of God. Over and above all this we have a commandment from Christ that we should steadfastly ask in his name of his heavenly Father, who is, and will be known of all men as a gracious Lord and true almighty God and Father, who easily can and also will graciously give us all that is profitable and wholesome. Our Lord Christ hath also promised us that whatsoever we shall ask the heavenly Father in his name, he will give it us willingly and richly. Lastly, we know also from the promise of Christ that the prayer of every believer, to say nothing of the whole congregation lawfully gathered in the name of Christ, shall be heard for Christ's sake. Whence it followeth undeniably that the common prayer is a special mark and exercise of the Christian Church and of all believers, which is well-pleasing and acceptable unto almighty God. Therefore we also in this our assembly, with one mind in the Spirit and in truth, call upon God the Lord not only for ourselves but also for the whole Church and all estates and necessities of men:

G.2 Ministers of the Word

Bid (German). Zum ersten und vor allen dingen fur alle diener Gottes worts und glückseligem lauf des evangelii, damit dasselbige in allen landen möge gepflanzet und ausgebreitet werden und also die zal der christgleubigen wachse und zuneme, wie wir des ein befelch haben von Christo und dem apostel Paulo, nemlich daß den predigern gegeben werde, das wort mit freudigem ufftuen ihres munds zu verkündigen, damit kund und offenbar werde das geheimnus des evangelii von Christo und daß sie in demselbigen freudig handeln und reden, wie sich gebürt, der gemein zur fürderung und freude des glaubens, der kirchen aber und gemein die gnade im heiligen Geiste in Christum beigeleget werde, damit sie in aller lehr und aller erkantnus, nachdem die predige von Christo in ihr kreftig werden, reich gemacht werde, also daß sie kein mangel hab an irgend einer gabe und unstrefflich und wirdig wandel dem evangelio Christi und also stehe in einem geist und in einer seel, zu kempfen im glauben des evangelii, auch sich in keinen wege erschrecken lasse von den widersachern, sondern fest halt am evangelio bis ans ende und warte der offenbarung Jesu Christi.

Bid (English). First and before all things for all ministers of God's word and for the happy course of the Gospel, that the same may be planted and spread abroad in all lands, and so the number of the believers in Christ may grow and increase, as we have commandment thereof from Christ and the Apostle Paul: namely, that utterance may be given unto the preachers to proclaim the word with the joyful opening of their mouth, that the mystery of the Gospel of Christ may be made known and manifest, and that they may deal and speak boldly therein, as it becometh, to the furtherance and joy of the faith of the congregation; and that unto the Church and congregation the grace in the Holy Ghost may be given in Christ, that she may be enriched in all doctrine and all knowledge, as the preaching of Christ becometh mighty in her, so that she come behind in no gift, and walk unblameably and worthily of the Gospel of Christ, and so stand fast in one spirit and in one soul, striving for the faith of the Gospel, and be in nothing terrified by the adversaries, but hold fast to the Gospel unto the end and wait for the revelation of Jesus Christ.

G.3 Civil authority

Bid (German). Zum andern wollen wir auch bitten fur keiser, könige, fürsten, obrigkeit und alle gewaltigen und ein ruig regiment und gemeinen frieden, wie uns von dem apostel Timot. 2 befohlen wird.

Bid (English). Secondly, we will also pray for the Emperor, kings, princes, magistrates and all in authority, and for a quiet government and common peace, as is commanded us by the Apostle in Timothy 2.

G.4 The erring & unbelievers

Bid (German). Zum dritten fur alle diejenigen, so verlangen haben zur erkentnus der warheit, sie seien gleich wer sie wöllen, auch die so in frembden landen verfolget und gemartert werden umb der warheit willen.

Bid (English). Thirdly, for all them that long for the knowledge of the truth, be they who they will; and also them that in foreign lands are persecuted and martyred for the truth's sake.

G.5 Enemies

Bid (German). Zum vierten wollen wir auch bitten fur alle unsere widersacher und verfolger, vornemlich aber fur diejenigen, so aus unwissenheit der warheit widerstreben und die christen unbillicherweise verfolgen, daß ihnen Gott der Herr dies gnediglich vergebe und diese schwere sünde nit zurechnen wolle und daß er solche zum erkentnus der warheit füre, damit sie auch selig werden.

Bid (English). Fourthly, we will also pray for all our adversaries and persecutors, but chiefly for them that out of ignorance resist the truth and persecute the Christians unjustly, that God the Lord would graciously forgive them this and not impute this grievous sin unto them, and that he would lead such to the knowledge of the truth, that they also may be saved.

G.6 The afflicted

Bid (German). Zum fünften fur alle kranken und diejenigen, so ein innerlich oder eußerlich anfechtung haben, auch fur alle, so von wegen des kreuzes, welches ihnen Gott zuschickt, betrübt sind, daß sie mögen getröstet werden, wie wir lesen in der epistel Iacobi cap. 5.

Bid (English). Fifthly, for all the sick and them that have an inward or outward temptation, and also for all that are sorrowful by reason of the cross which God sendeth them, that they may be comforted, as we read in the Epistle of James, chapter 5.

G.7 Deliverance from calamities

Bid (German). Zum sechsten wollen wir insonderheit auch Gott anruffen fur gegenwertige gemeine notturft. Diese bit ist nötig, wann krieg, hunger oder teurung, oder sonst andere not und unfell vorhanden sind.

Bid (English). Sixthly, we will also call upon God especially for the present common necessity. This petition is needful when war, hunger or dearth, or else other need and mishaps are at hand.

G.8 Conclusion

Bid (German). Zum siebenden laßt uns auch bitten fur alle dasjenige, so der ganzen christlichen gemeine angelegen ist, fur alles, darumb Gott will angeruffen sein. Wir wollen auch undereinander fur uns selber bitten, die wir alhie zusamenkomen seind. Und laßt uns erstlich einander verzeihen und darnach Gott anruffen und bitten umb gnad und vergebung der sünden.

Bid (English). Seventhly, let us also pray for all that concerneth the whole Christian congregation, for all for which God will be called upon. We will also pray one for another, for ourselves that are here come together. And let us first forgive one another, and thereafter call upon God and pray for grace and forgiveness of sins.

G.9 Special intercessions

Rubric (German). Diese form des gebets mag man kürzer oder lenger machen, nach einer jeglichen kirchen gelegenheit.

Rubric (English). This form of prayer may be made shorter or longer, according to the circumstances of each church.

6.12 Family H: Bugenhagen pulpit exhortation

Bugenhagen's pulpit exhortation after the sermon in Low German: the people are led through Creed, confession, biddings for all estates and needs, and the Our Father. Hamburg copies it verbatim; Osnabrück prescribes the same contents in indirect speech.

H.1 Creed

Witnesses: Braunschweig 1528 and Hamburg 1529.

Rubric (Low German). Exhortatio edder vormaninge up dem predickstole na der predige:

Rubric (English). Exhortation or admonition from the pulpit after the sermon:

Bid (Low German). Leven frunde in Christo, spreket mit my den loven. Ick love in Got den Vader, almechtigen etc.

Bid (English). Dear friends in Christ, say with me the Creed. I believe in God the Father Almighty, etc.

H.2 Confession of sins

Witnesses: Braunschweig 1528 and Hamburg 1529.

Bid (Low German). Spreket ock de bicht mit my unde bekennet Gade jue sunde, dat uns Got gnedich sy.

Bid (English). Say also the confession with me, and confess your sins unto God, that God may be gracious unto us.

Prayer (Low German). Got sy gnedich my arme sunder. Id feylet my an deme loven, dat ick Got mynen Heren nicht van ganzeme herten leve, my nicht ganzlick up em vorlate in anvechtingen unde aller nöt lives unde der selen. Ick scholde alleyne Got fruchten unde in allen dingen vor ogene hebben, nu fruchte ick my vor de lüde, de my umme der gerechticheit willen konen bose dohn. Ick fruchte vor myn gut, ere, fruntschop unde lyff to vorlesende. Ick sorge vor de neringe unchristlick unde söke in allen dingen dat myne unde nicht, wat Gades is. Ock stelle ick nicht ganz myne salicheit in Jesum Christum, synen eyngebarn Sone, vor uns gegeven. Id feylet my ock an der leve, dat ick mynen negesten nicht leve alse my sulvest, sonder handele wedder en mit bosen vordechtnissen, mit achterkosen, mit worden, mit werken unde kan nicht eyn wort van em wedder mick liden. Ick swige denne mehr unde kan em nicht van herten vorgeven unde bun doch sulcks schuldich to dohn. (spreket:) Amen. Jesus Christus is unse salicheit ewichlick. (spreket:) Amen.

Prayer (English). God be merciful to me a poor sinner. I fail in faith, in that I love not God my Lord with my whole heart, nor trust wholly in him in temptations and in all need of body and soul. I ought to fear God alone and have him before mine eyes in all things; but now I fear the people that can do me evil for righteousness' sake. I fear to lose my goods, honour, friendship and life. I care for my living in unchristian wise, and seek in all things mine own, and not the things that are God's. Neither do I set my salvation wholly in Jesus Christ, his only-begotten Son, given for us. I fail also in love, in that I love not my neighbour as myself, but deal against him with evil suspicions, with backbiting, with words, with works, and can bear no word from him against me. I keep silence then the more, and cannot forgive him from the heart, and yet am bound to do so. Especially I have a burdened conscience in this temptation: N., in this sin: N. (Let every one bewail unto God his secret, grievous sin, unto amendment.) Therefore, almighty God, dear Father, forgive me all my sins, and enlighten my heart with thy truth, that I may hold thee for my gracious Father, and my neighbour for my brother, without all offence, according to thy word; through our Lord Jesus Christ. (Say:) Amen. Jesus Christ is our salvation for ever. (Say:) Amen.

H.3 The Word & its fruit

Witnesses: Osnabrück 1543.

Bid (Low German). Nach der uhtlegginge des evangelii schal de pastor de worde des catechismi affseggen umb des gemeinen volkes willen und darnach vermanen to bidden, ersten vor de sake des hilligen evangelii,

Bid (English). After the exposition of the Gospel the pastor shall say over the words of the catechism for the sake of the common people, and thereafter exhort them to pray: first, for the cause of the holy Gospel;

H.4 Civil authority

Witnesses: Braunschweig 1528 and Hamburg 1529.

Bid (Low German). So lat uns nu vlitich bidden vor keyserlike majestat, vor konnige, vor heren, fursten, furstenrede unde stadrede, eddele lüde, borgermeystere unde richtere unde allen, den dat werlike swert bevalen is, besundergen vor unsen landesfursten unde vor den radt disser stadt, dat Got mit syner gnaden stedes by en sy unde geve en, dat se unstrafflick mogen regeren in den werliken dingen, de en bevalen synt, dat wy under en mögen eyn rowelick unde stille leven vohren mit aller gotsalicheit unde redelicheit.

Bid (English). Let us now pray diligently for the Imperial Majesty, for kings, for lords, princes, princes' counsellors and town councillors, noblemen, burgomasters and judges, and all to whom the temporal sword is committed, especially for our prince of the land and for the council of this city, that God may be always with them with his grace, and grant them that they may rule unblameably in the temporal things that are committed unto them, that we under them may lead a quiet and still life in all godliness and honesty.

H.5 The present congregation

Witnesses: Osnabrück 1543.

Bid (Low German). tom drudden vor de ganzen gemeine und vor alle andere not lives und der sehlen, dar men des vor begeren iß und Gade bekant. Darnach sall werden gesungen: Verlehne uns frede gnädiglich.

Bid (English). thirdly, for the whole congregation and for all other need of body and soul, wherefor it is desired and is known to God. Thereafter shall be sung: Grant us peace graciously.

H.6 Ministers of the Word

Witnesses: Braunschweig 1528 and Hamburg 1529.

Bid (Low German). Biddet ock vor de prestere, de uns armen schapen weyden mit deme wörde unde evangelio Christi, dat se uns mit vulstendigeme herten dat reyne wort Gades vordregen to unser beteringe unde werden behödet vor allen erdöm unde gesterket to alleme besten wedder den düvel unde alle weddersagere, dat jo dat evangelion Christi by uns reyne blive.

Bid (English). Pray ye also for the priests that feed us poor sheep with the word and Gospel of Christ, that they may set forth unto us the pure word of God with a steadfast heart to our amendment, and be kept from all error and strengthened unto all good against the devil and all gainsayers, that the Gospel of Christ may ever remain pure among us.

H.7 Peace

Witnesses: Braunschweig 1528 and Hamburg 1529.

Bid (Low German). Biddet ock umme eynen tidliken frede, vor kranke, swake, elende, anvechtede lüde, vor swangere frauen, vor unse vyende, vor alle nöt lives unde der selen. Amen. Lattet uns bidden den eynen vor den anderen, dat wy alle salich werden. Amen.

Bid (English). Pray ye also for temporal peace; for the sick, the weak, the wretched and tempted folk; for women with child; for our enemies; for all need of body and soul. Amen. Let us pray one for another, that we may all be saved. Amen.

H.8 Lord's Prayer

Witnesses: Braunschweig 1528 and Hamburg 1529.

Bid (Low German). Spreket eyn Vader unse etc.

Bid (English). Say an Our Father, etc.

H.9 Special intercessions

Witnesses: Braunschweig 1528 and Hamburg 1529.

Rubric (Low German). So etlike sunderge gemeyne nöde vohrvallen, alse to bidden vor dat körne, hoppen, früchte, vor eyn tidlick weder, wedder böse tucht unde pestilentie etc., dat kan me wol mit inbringen.

Rubric (English). If any special common needs befall, as to pray for the corn, hops, fruits, for seasonable weather, against evil murrain and pestilence, etc., that may well be brought in therewith.

I.1 Exhortation / preface

Rubric (German). Eine kurtze vermanung und vorbitt, für die christlichen stend zu bitten

Rubric (English). A short exhortation and intercession, to pray for the Christian estates

Bid (German). Dieweil wir nun jetzunder allhie beyeinander versammlet seind nach Gottes bevelch, sein heylsams wort zu hören und volgents auch unser gebett zu tun zu Gott dem Herren, in dem namen Christi umb allerley anligende not der gantzen christenheyt, so wöllen wir Gott den Allmechtigen, unsern himmlischen vatter, auß kindlicher zuversicht mit glaubigem hertzen anruffen und bitten, das er uns gnediglich erhören und geweren wölle, von wegen seiner götlichen warheit und verheyssung, so uns durch seinen lieben son zugesagt ist worden, das uns Got der Herr erstlich und fürnemlich sein heyligs wort, das gnadenreyche evangelion auß vätterlicher trew wölle mitteilen, verleyhen, schützen und erhalten, auf das wir dasselbig reyn und lauter mit rechtem verstand mögen verkündigen, hören und folg tun, das dardurch sein nam unter uns und in aller welt geheyliget und gepreyset werde. Gott der Herr wölle auch alle falsche lehr, irrtum und ketzerey außreuten und uns gnediglich darvor behütten, auf das sein reich zu uns komme und uns regiere mit seinem wort, gnaden und Heiligen Geist, dardurch des Satans, Machomets und Antichristens reich ein ende nemme, verheret und verstöret werde. Damit also sein vätterlicher will geschehe, nit des fleysches, der welt und des Satans will, sondern sein will geschehe hie unter uns auf erden wie droben im hymmel. Darzu wölle Gott der Allmechtig allenthalben verordnen, erhalten, schützen und behüten alle trewe bischof, pfarherrn, prediger und kirchendiener.

Bid (English). Forasmuch as we are now here gathered together according to God’s commandment, to hear his wholesome word and thereafter also to make our prayer unto God the Lord in the name of Christ for all manner of pressing need of the whole of Christendom, we will call upon God the Almighty, our heavenly Father, out of childlike confidence with believing hearts, and pray him that he would graciously hear and grant us, for the sake of his divine truth and promise which hath been made us by his dear Son: that God the Lord would first and chiefly, out of fatherly faithfulness, impart, vouchsafe, defend and preserve unto us his holy word, the gracious Gospel, that we may preach, hear and obey the same purely and clearly with right understanding, that thereby his name may be hallowed and praised among us and in all the world. That God the Lord would also root out all false doctrine, error and heresy, and graciously keep us therefrom, that his kingdom may come to us and rule us with his word, grace and Holy Spirit, whereby the kingdom of Satan, of Mahomet and of Antichrist may come to an end and be laid waste and destroyed; that so his fatherly will may be done, not the will of the flesh, the world and Satan, but his will be done here among us on earth as above in heaven. Moreover, that God Almighty would everywhere ordain, preserve, defend and guard all faithful bishops, pastors, preachers and ministers of the Church.

I.2 Civil authority

Bid (German). Wir wöllen auch bitten für die christlichen oberkeyt, für Keyserliche und Königliche Mayestet, für alle churfürsten, fürsten, herren und alle stend des Reychs. In sonderheyt aber lasset uns bitten für unsere schutzherrn und potentaten, deßgleychen auch für ihre rät, amptleut und diener. Gott der Herr wölle ihnen allen miteinander geben ware forcht Gottes, weyßheyt und verstand, seliglich und wol zu regieren, auf das wir unter ihrem regiment mögen noch lenger haben Gottes wort, zeytlichen fried und narung.

Bid (English). We will also pray for the Christian magistrates, for the Imperial and Royal Majesty, for all Electors, princes, lords and all the estates of the Empire. But especially let us pray for our protecting lords and potentates, and likewise for their counsellors, officers and servants. God the Lord give them all together the true fear of God, wisdom and understanding to rule blessedly and well, that under their government we may yet longer have God’s word, temporal peace and sustenance.

I.3 The persecuted

Bid (German). Wir wöllen auch Gott in sonderheyt ferner anrüffen und bitten, das er die werden christenheit, so allenthalben betrengt, geenstigt und verfolgt wird von den unglaubigen, dem Türken, machometischen, widerchristischen, blutdürstigen leuten, das Got die armen christen gnediglich schützen, retten und im rechten glauben erhalten wölle.

Bid (English). We will also call upon God especially further and pray him for worthy Christendom, which everywhere is oppressed, afflicted and persecuted by the unbelievers, the Turk, Mahometan, antichristian, bloodthirsty people: that God would graciously defend and deliver the poor Christians and keep them in the right faith.

I.4 Peace

Bid (German). Lasset uns auch bitten für alle christliche untertanen, das sie Gott der Herr in schuldiger pflicht und gehorsam gnediglich erhalten wölle und sie behüten vor zwitracht, aufruhr und uns alle also vätterlich schützen und bewaren vor krieg, blutvergiessen, teurung, seuche, pestilentz, hagel, schaur, schedlichem ungewitter, vor allem unziffer, vergiftem luft und dergleichen, auf das wir unser teglich brot in aller stille, fried, ruhe und gesundheyt bekommen mögen.

Bid (English). Let us also pray for all Christian subjects, that God the Lord would graciously keep them in due duty and obedience and guard them from discord and uproar, and so defend and preserve us all in fatherly wise from war, bloodshed, dearth, sickness, pestilence, hail, storm, hurtful tempest, from all vermin, poisoned air and the like, that we may receive our daily bread in all stillness, peace, rest and health.

I.5 Repentance & forgiveness

Bid (German). Lasset uns auch bitten, das uns Gott der Herr unsere schuld gnediglich verzeihen wölle, verschonen unsers gebrechlichen lebens, die alten und vorigen sünd nicht zurechnen, sondern auß gnaden verzeihen in Christo unserm herrn. Wölle uns auch ein solch hertz geben, das wir auß rechtem grund können verzeihen unsern mißgünnern und feinden, damit wir ein liebreich hertz haben gegen unserm nehesten. Gott der Herr wölle uns auch nit in anfechtung füren und nit in versuchung fallen lassen, sondern uns auß gnaden erhalten, damit wir nit in die schedlichen versuchung und anreitzung fallen des fleisches, der welt und des Satans. Sonder Gott der Almechtig wölle uns erlösen von dem bösen, von allem ubel leibs und der seelen, zeitlichem und ewigen schaden.

Bid (English). Let us also pray that God the Lord would graciously forgive us our debt, spare our frail life, not impute the old and former sins, but forgive them of grace in Christ our Lord; that he would also give us such an heart that we can forgive from the right ground them that grudge against us and our enemies, that we may have a loving heart toward our neighbour. That God the Lord would also not lead us into temptation nor let us fall into trial, but keep us of grace, that we fall not into the hurtful temptation and enticement of the flesh, the world and Satan; but that God Almighty would deliver us from evil, from all harm of body and soul, temporal and eternal.

I.6 Women with child

Bid (German). In sonderheit lasset uns bitten für alle schwangere und geberende frawen, für witwen und waysen, für die liebe jugent, für die ehleut, sonderlich wo der böse feind seinen samen geseet hat, zwitracht, verbitterung und uneinigkeit, das sich auch die nachbaurn einig, fridlich, gutwillig, dienstlich und liebreich gegeneinander erzeigen.

Bid (English). In especial let us pray for all women with child and in travail, for widows and orphans, for the dear youth, for married folk, especially where the evil enemy hath sown his seed, discord, bitterness and disunity; that neighbours also may show themselves one toward another united, peaceable, well-willing, serviceable and loving.

I.7 Special intercessions

Bid (German). Bittet zum beschluß für etliche kranke, angefochtne, kleinmütige und trostlose personen, welche sich in sonderheit in ewer christlich gebett trewlich befelhen. Bittet auch für die, für welche wir sonderlich schuldig seind zu bitten, so uns in unser ampt und gebett befolhen sein.

Bid (English). Pray ye in conclusion for certain sick, tempted, fainthearted and comfortless persons, which commend themselves faithfully in especial to your Christian prayer. Pray ye also for them for whom we are especially bound to pray, which are commended to us in our office and prayer.

I.8 Lord's Prayer

Bid (German). Für dise und alle andere not der gantzen christenheyt, auch für uns selber und die unsern, wöllen wir Gott den Herrn von hertzen anruffen. Darumb tut ewer gebet zu Gott dem Almechtigen in dem namen unsers Herrn von gantzem hertzen und bettet mit andacht inniglich von hertzen ein Vatter unser.

Bid (English). For this and all other need of the whole of Christendom, and also for ourselves and ours, we will call upon God the Lord from the heart. Therefore make your prayer to God Almighty in the name of our Lord with your whole heart, and pray with devotion, inwardly, from the heart, an Our Father.

I.9 Conclusion

Rubric (German). Nach dem gebet der beschluß:

Rubric (English). After the prayer, the conclusion:

Prayer (German). Der allmechtige Gott hat unser gebett nach seiner göttlichen verheissung gnediglich erhöret in Christo, unserm herrn. Dem sey lob, ehr, ruhm und preiß immer und ewiglich. Amen. Lasset euch die armen und dürftigen in ewer handreichung trewlich befolhen sein.

Prayer (English). Almighty God hath graciously heard our prayer according to his divine promise, in Christ our Lord. To him be laud, honour, glory and praise, now and for ever. Amen. Let the poor and needy be faithfully commended to you in your almsgiving.

J.1 The Word & its fruit

Witnesses: Lüneburg 1564, Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1569 and Oldenburg 1573.

Rubric (German). Darauf sol das volk abermal zum gebet und danksagung gegen Gott vermanet werden und samptlich vor erhaltung der kirchen Gottes und rechter lere, darzu der treuen warhaftigen lerer und das Gott treue arbeiter in seine ernte senden wolle, für die oberkeit, für zeitlichen friede und gewechs der früchte und in summa für die not der ganzen christenheit und sonderbarer personen, die des christlichen gebets begeren, wie des ungefehrlich eine notel folget.

Rubric (English). Thereupon the people shall again be exhorted to prayer and thanksgiving toward God, and all together for the preservation of the Church of God and of right doctrine, and moreover of the faithful, true teachers, and that God would send faithful labourers into his harvest; for the magistrates, for temporal peace and the growth of the fruits; and in sum for the need of the whole of Christendom and of particular persons that desire the Christian prayer; whereof a draft followeth, after this manner.

Bid (German). Lieben Christen, last uns Gott bitten, das er uns bey seinem göttlichen wort wolle gnediglich erhalten und getreue arbeiter in seine ernte senden, den predigern und kirchendienern seinen heiligen Geist verleihen, das sie dasselbige rein und recht fürtragen und leren, auch mit gottseligem leben fürgehen und das der allmechtige wolle sie und uns vor falscher lere gnediglich behüten und derselbigen steuren und wehren. Das er auch unsern brüdern und schwestern, die mit falscher lere oder sonst mit unrechter gewalt von unchristen oder andern tyrannen angefochten und beschwert werden, gnediglich helfen wolle, das sie in warem glauben und gedult bestendig bleiben, und so möglich, die verfolgung von ihnen genomen oder gemiltert werde.

Bid (English). Dear Christians, let us pray God that he would graciously keep us in his divine word, and send faithful labourers into his harvest; vouchsafe his Holy Spirit unto the preachers and ministers of the Church, that they may set forth and teach the same purely and rightly, and also go before with godly life; and that the Almighty would graciously keep them and us from false doctrine, and restrain and withstand the same. That he would also graciously help our brethren and sisters which are assailed and oppressed with false doctrine or else with unrighteous violence by unchristian men or other tyrants, that they may abide steadfast in true faith and patience, and, if it be possible, that the persecution may be taken from them or mitigated.

J.2 Civil authority

Witnesses: Lüneburg 1564, Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1569 and Oldenburg 1573.

Bid (German). Bittet auch vor weltliche oberkeiten, keyserliche majestät und andere potentaten, auch alle andere, die im ampt der oberkeit sitzen, das der allmechtige wolle diejenige, die durch Gottes wort erleuchtet sein, darbey gnediglich erhalten, denen aber, so noch nicht erleuchtet, seine gnade geben, das sie Gottes wort in ihren landen leiden und annemen. Welche aber das nicht thun wollen und es verfolgen, das er denselbigen steuren und ihr fürnemen schanden machen wolle.

Bid (English). Pray ye also for the temporal magistrates, the Imperial Majesty and other potentates, and all others that sit in the office of magistracy: that the Almighty would graciously keep therein them that are enlightened by God’s word, but give his grace unto them that are not yet enlightened, that they may suffer and receive God’s word in their lands; but that he would restrain them that will not do so and persecute it, and bring their purpose to shame.

J.3 Thanksgiving

Witnesses: Lüneburg 1564, Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1569 and Oldenburg 1573.

Bid (German). Sonderlich danket Gott, das er unsere gnedige landsfürsten und herrn also begnadet hat, das sie Gottes wort lieb haben und in ihrem land predigen lassen und fördern, und bittet, das sie der allmechtige darbey wolle gnediglich erhalten und derselben gottselig langes leben, gesundheit und gnad verleihen, das sie ihr regiment also füren, das es Gott zu ehren und ihren fürstlichen gnaden und derselbigen unterthanen zu gutem gereiche, und wir ein still friedlich leben in aller gottseligkeit unter ihnen füren mögen.

Bid (English). Especially give thanks to God that he hath so graced our gracious princes and lords of the land that they love God’s word and let it be preached and further it in their land; and pray that the Almighty would graciously keep them therein and vouchsafe him godly long life, health and grace, that they may so lead their government that it may redound to the honour of God and to the good of their princely Graces and their subjects, and that we may lead a quiet, peaceable life under them in all godliness.

J.4 Civil authority

Witnesses: Lüneburg 1564, Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1569 and Oldenburg 1573.

Bid (German). Bittet auch vor unsere gnedige landsfürstin, das sie der allmechtig auch in seinem gnedigen schutz haben und sie vor allem unheil behüten und an leib und seel segnen wolle. Bittet auch vor die rethe, ampt und befelhaber, auch den radt dieser stadt, das ihnen Gott wolle gnade geben, das sie wol raten und ihren befohlenen ampten und befehlichen getreulichen fürstehen und ausrichten.

Bid (English). Pray ye also for our gracious princess of the land, that the Almighty would have her also in his gracious protection, guard her from all mischief, and bless her in body and soul. Pray ye also for the counsellors, officers and governors, and also the council of this town, that God would give them grace to counsel well and faithfully to preside over and perform the offices and charges committed unto them.

J.5 The afflicted

Witnesses: Lüneburg 1564, Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1569 and Oldenburg 1573.

Rubric (English). If then aught befall whereof special petition is to be made, as for particular sick persons, for women that are in the pains of childbirth, and whatsoever else of need and matters of the land or of particular persons may befall, that shall be added to this common prayer also in short words.

6.15 Family K: Three collects from the pulpit

After an exhortation the minister reads three collects from the pulpit: thanksgiving or the Church, the magistrates, and a special need, chosen from a bank.

- Earliest witness (archetype): Worms 1560.
- Tradition: Lutheran.
- Language: German.
- Form: exhortation + three collects.
- Place in the service (Worms 1560): On Sundays and feasts, when the choir has finished the first psalm or hymn, the minister goes into the pulpit, exhorts the people to prayer and reads three collects: (1) a thanksgiving for God's gifts or a prayer for the preservation of the Church and God's word (on feasts, a thanksgiving for the feast), (2) for the magistrates, (3) a special prayer as the time requires (peace, protection, fruits of the earth, rain …).

Rubric (English). VI. Of the common prayer. Although at the end of all sermons the people are sufficiently exhorted to pray earnestly and diligently for all the need and concerns of the whole of Christendom in the spiritual, temporal and household government, and also to thankfulness toward God for his great and manifold benefits, yet for the sake of greater remembrance certain other common prayers and collects are also held and read plainly to the people in the following order. On Sundays and feast days, when the choir hath finished the first psalm or spiritual song, the minister goeth into the pulpit and exhorteth the people to prayer, and readeth to them three collects at a time. The first is either a common thanksgiving for all manner of God's gifts, or a prayer for the preservation of the Church and God's word, or, if it be on special feasts, a thanksgiving for those special gifts whereof it is wont to be treated on that feast. The second is of the temporal magistrates. The third is special, according to the occasion of the time: either for peace, or for protection, or for the fruits of the earth, or for rain, etc., and whatsoever like special need and concern may befall, whereof the Christian Church must be put in mind, out of the register following.

K.2 Thanksgiving

Rubric (German). Unter dem sanctus sol der priester folgende oration deudsch beten. ¶ Fur die oberigkeit.

Rubric (English). Under the Sanctus the priest shall pray the following prayer in German. ¶ For the magistrates.

Prayer (German). Barmherziger himlischer vater, in welches hende aller menschen gewalt und obrigkeit stehet, von dir eingesetzt zur straf der ubeltheter und zum schutz der fromen, in welches hende auch stehen alle recht und gesetze aller lender, wir bitten dich, sei gnedig unserm herrn kaiser, allen königen und fürsten, sonderlich unserm landesfursten und herrn N. und dem rath und regenten dieser stadt und aller ordenlichen obrigkeit, damit sie das weltlich schwerd, das du inen befohlen hast, recht füren mügen; umschattige sie mit der kraft des allerhöchsten, erleucht und erhalt sie bei deinem göttlichen namen, lass sie dein göttlichs wort von herzen lieb haben und darüber fest halten und sie ja dasselbig nicht lassen verfolgen, gib inen, lieber herr, weisheit und einen verstand und ein fridsam regiment, auf das sie alle ire unterthanen in der warheit und gerechtigkeit, die dir gefellig ist, regiren und beschirmen, auch, mein lieber gott, friste inen ir leben lang, nach deinem willen und weil das gerichte dein ist und sie an deiner stad sitzen, gib inen gnad, also zu regiren, das dein heiliger name durch sie geheiligt und gepreiset werde, von nu an bis in ewigkeit, das helf inen der herr Jesu Christ, dein geliebter son, amen.

Prayer (English). Merciful heavenly Father, in whose hands standeth all power and authority of men, ordained of thee for the punishment of evildoers and the protection of the godly, in whose hands also stand all the rights and laws of all lands: we beseech thee, be gracious unto our lord the Emperor, all kings and princes, especially unto our prince and lord of the land N., and unto the council and rulers of this city and all lawful magistrates, that they may rightly bear the temporal sword which thou hast committed unto them. Overshadow them with the power of the Highest; enlighten them and keep them in thy divine name; let them love thy divine word from the heart and hold fast thereto, and in no wise suffer it to be persecuted. Give them, dear Lord, wisdom and understanding and a peaceable government, that they may rule and defend all their subjects in the truth and righteousness that is well-pleasing unto thee. Also, my dear God, prolong their life according to thy will; and forasmuch as the judgement is thine and they sit in thy stead, give them grace so to rule that thy holy name may be hallowed and praised through them, from henceforth even for ever. This help them the Lord Jesus Christ, thy beloved Son. Amen.

Prayer (German). O almechtiger gütiger gott und vater unsers herrn Jesu Christi, der du uns ernstlich befohlen hast, das wir dich bitten sollen um arbeiter in deiner ernten, das ist um rechtschaffne prediger deines worts. Wir bitten dein gründlose barmherzigkeit, du wollest uns rechtschaffne lerer und diener deines göttlichen worts zuschicken und denselben dein heilsams wort in das herz und in den mund geben, das sie deinen befelch treulich ausrichten und nichts predigen, das deinem heiligen wort entgegen sei, auf das wir durch dein himlisch ewigs wort ermanet, geleret, gespeist, getröst und gesterkt werden, thun, was dir gefellig und uns fruchtbarlich ist; gib herr deiner heiligen christlichen kirchen deinen geist und göttliche weisheit, das dein wort unter uns laufe und wachse und mit aller freidigkeit, wie sichs gebürt, gepredigt und dein heilige christliche gemein dadurch gebessert werde, auf das wir mit bestendigem glauben dir dienen und in erkentnis deines namens bis an das ende verharren, durch deinen son Jesum Christum, amen.

Prayer (English). O almighty, gracious God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hast earnestly commanded us that we should pray thee for labourers into thine harvest, that is, for right and true preachers of thy word: we beseech thy bottomless mercy that thou wouldest send us right and true teachers and ministers of thy divine word, and give thy wholesome word into their heart and into their mouth, that they may faithfully perform thy commandment and preach nothing that is contrary to thy holy word; to the end that we, being by thy heavenly, eternal word admonished, taught, fed, comforted and strengthened, may do that which is well-pleasing unto thee and profitable unto us. Give, O Lord, unto thy holy Christian Church thy Spirit and divine wisdom, that thy word may run and grow among us and be preached with all boldness, as it becometh, and that thy holy Christian congregation may be bettered thereby; that we may serve thee with steadfast faith and continue in the knowledge of thy name unto the end; through thy Son Jesus Christ. Prayer (English). Almighty God and everlasting Father, a King of glory and a Lord of heaven and of earth, by whose Spirit all things are governed, by whose providence all things are ordered; thou art a God of peace, from whom alone unity cometh unto us: we beseech thee through our Lord Jesus Christ that thou wouldest forgive us our sins and endue us with thy divine peace and unity, that we may serve thy name in fear and trembling, and that thou mayest be praised of us evermore. Amen.

L.4 Repentance & forgiveness

Witnesses: Brandenburg 1540.

Prayer (German). Barmherziger gott und himlischer vater, des barmherzigkeit kein ende hat, der du langmütig, gnedig und von grosser güte und treu bist und vergibst alle missethat, ubertretung und sunde, wir haben leider gesundigt mit unsern vetern, wir haben mishandelt und sind gottlos gewesen und dich oftmals erzürnet, dir allein haben wir gesundigt und ubel fur dir gethan, aber herr, gedenke nicht an unsere vorige missethat, las bald dein barmherzigkeit uber uns gross sein, denn wir sind elend worden, hilf uns gott unsers heils um der ehre willen deines namens, erlöse uns und vergib uns unser sunde, durch deinen son Jesum Christum, amen.

Prayer (English). Merciful God and heavenly Father, whose mercy hath no end, who art longsuffering, gracious and of great goodness and faithfulness, and forgivest all iniquity, transgression and sin: we have, alas, sinned with our fathers, we have done amiss and dealt wickedly and oftentimes provoked thee to wrath; against thee only have we sinned and done evil in thy sight. But, Lord, remember not against us our former iniquities; let thy mercy speedily be great upon us, for we are brought very low. Help us, O God of our salvation, for the glory of thy name; deliver us and forgive us our sins; through thy Son Jesus Christ. Amen.

Rubric (English). On Sunday after the morning sermon the minister shall say:

Bid (German). Ir geliebten in dem herrn, Dieweil wir in den geboten Gottes gleich als in einem spiegel sehen, wie groß und vielfältig unser sünden sind, durch welche wir zeitliche und ewige straf verdienen, so laßt uns diesselbige von hertzen unserm getreuen vater bekennen, sprecht derhalben mit mir also:

Bid (English). Dearly beloved in the Lord, forasmuch as we see in the commandments of God as in a glass how great and manifold our sins are, whereby we deserve temporal and eternal punishment, let us confess the same from the heart unto our faithful Father; say therefore with me thus:

Prayer (German). Ich armer sünder bekenn für dir, meinem Gott und schöpfer, daß ich leider schwerlich und mannigfältig wider dich gesündiget hab, nicht allein mit eusserlichen groben sünden, sonder vilmehr mit innerlicher angeborner blindheyt, unglauben, zweifelung, kleinmütigkeyt, ungedult, hoffart, bösem geitz, heimlichen neid, haß und mißvergunst, auch andern bösen dücken, wie du, mein herr und Gott, an mir erkennest und ich leider nit gnugsam erkennen kan, die reuen mich und sind mir leid und beger von hertzen gnad, durch deinen lieben son Jesum Christum.

Prayer (English). I, poor sinner, confess before thee, my God and Creator, that I, alas, have sinned grievously and manifoldly against thee, not only with outward gross sins, but much more with inward, inborn blindness, unbelief, doubting, faintheartedness, impatience, pride, evil covetousness, secret envy, hatred and grudging, and other evil wiles, as thou, my Lord and God, knowest in me, and I, alas, cannot sufficiently know; they repent me and grieve me, and I desire grace from my heart, through thy dear Son Jesus Christ.

R1.2 Confession of sins

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563, Ysenburg-Birstein 1598 and Schaumburg 1614. Schaumburg 1614 lacks the rubric.

Rubric (German). Darauf soll er den gläubigen die vergebung der sünden und den unbußfertigen das urtheil Gottes verkündigen und also sprechen:

Rubric (English). Thereupon he shall declare unto the faithful the forgiveness of sins, and unto the impenitent the judgement of God, and say thus:

Prayer (German). Nun höret an den gewissen trost der gnaden Gottes, welche er allen gläubigen in seinem evangelio verheisset. Also spricht der herr Christus Johan. am 3.: Also hat Gott die welt geliebt, daß er seinen eingebornen son gab, auf daß alle, die an in glauben, nicht verlorn werden, sonder das ewig leben haben. Sovil nun euer sein, die an ihnen selbst und an iren sünden ein mißfallen haben und vertrauen, daß sie inen durch den verdienst Jesu Christi allein gantz und gar vergeben sind, und den fürsatz haben, je lenger je mehr von sünden abzustehen und dem herrn in warer heiligkeyt und gerechtigkeyt zu dienen, denselbigen (dieweil sie glauben in den son des lebendigen Gottes) verkündige ich aus dem befelch Gottes, daß sie von allen iren sünden (wie er in seinem heiligen evangelio verheißt) in dem himmel entbunden seind durch die volkommene genugthuung des allerheiligisten leidens und sterbens unsers herrn Jesu Christi, Amen. Soviel aber under euch seind, die noch einen gefallen haben an iren sünden und schanden oder in sünden wider ir gewissen beharren, denselbigen verkündige ich auß befelch Gottes, daß der zorn und das urtheil Gottes uber inen bleibt und daß alle ire sünden im himmel gehalten seind und sie von der ewigen verdamnuß nit entbunden mögen werden, biß daß sie sich bekehren.

Prayer (English). Hear now the sure comfort of the grace of God, which he promiseth in his Gospel to all believers. Thus saith the Lord Christ in John the third: God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. As many of you therefore as are displeased with yourselves and your sins, and trust that they are wholly and altogether forgiven them through the merit of Jesus Christ alone, and have the purpose more and more to cease from sins and to serve the Lord in true holiness and righteousness, unto them (forasmuch as they believe in the Son of the living God) I declare by the commandment of God that they are loosed in heaven from all their sins (as he promiseth in his holy Gospel) through the perfect satisfaction of the most holy suffering and death of our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen. But as many among you as yet have pleasure in their sins and shame, or continue in sins against their conscience, unto them I declare by the commandment of God that the wrath and judgement of God abideth upon them, and that all their sins are retained in heaven, and that they cannot be loosed from eternal damnation until they be converted.

R1.3 Thanksgiving

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563, Moers 1581, Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588, Ysenburg-Birstein 1598 and Schaumburg 1614. Ysenburg-Birstein 1598 lacks the rubric. Moers 1581 and Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588 lack the bid.

Rubric (German). Gebet am Sontag nach der predigt und Absolution.

Rubric (English). Prayer on Sunday after the sermon and absolution.

Bid (German). Nachdem wir nun nicht zweifelen, wir und unser gebet seien durch das leiden Jesu Christi geheiliget und Gott angenem, so laßt uns in von hertzen anrüfen und also sprechen:

Bid (English). Forasmuch now as we doubt not that we and our prayer are sanctified through the suffering of Jesus Christ and acceptable unto God, let us call upon him from the heart and say thus:

Prayer (German). Almechtiger Gott, schöpfer himmels und der erden, wir dancken dir auß grund unsers hertzens, daß du uns erschaffen, biß auf disen tag uns und unsere kinder erhalten, gespeiset und erneret hast und noch hinfort erhalten und regieren wilst. Insonderheyt aber dancken wir dir, daß du deinen son Jesum Christum, den du im paradeiß verheissen hast, uns hast zu erkennen geben und unsere sünden durch sein bitter leiden und sterben uns verzihen.

Prayer (English). Almighty God, Creator of heaven and of earth, we give thee thanks from the ground of our heart that thou hast created us, and unto this day hast preserved, fed and nourished us and our children, and wilt yet henceforth preserve and govern us. But especially we give thee thanks that thou hast given us to know thy Son Jesus Christ, whom thou didst promise in Paradise, and hast forgiven us our sins through his bitter suffering and death.

R1.4 The Word & its fruit

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563, Moers 1581, Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588 and Ysenburg-Birstein 1598.

Prayer (German). Und bitten dich, daß du uns zum ebenbildt deines sohns Jesu Christi durch die predig deines worts und kraft deines heiligen geistes erneuern wöllest, auf daß wir mit leib und seel ewig mit dir leben und dich preisen, darzu wir anfenglich erschaffen seind, und wöllest dem satan weren, daß er uns dein heiliges wort nicht auß unsern hertzen reisse, wie er unsern ersten eltern Adam und Even gethon hat.

Prayer (English). And we beseech thee that thou wouldest renew us unto the image of thy Son Jesus Christ through the preaching of thy word and the power of thy Holy Spirit, that we may live with thee eternally in body and soul and praise thee, whereunto we were created in the beginning; and that thou wouldest withstand Satan, that he snatch not thy holy word out of our hearts, as he did to our first parents Adam and Eve.

R1.5 Civil authority

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563, Moers 1581, Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588, Ysenburg-Birstein 1598 and Schaumburg 1614.

Prayer (German). Dieweil du uns auch in diesem leben durch die handt unser oberkeyt, deiner diener, wilst regieren, so bitten wir dich, der du ihre hertzen in deiner hand hast, wöllest ihnen allen, der keyserlichen und königlichen majestat, allen fürsten und herrn, insonderheyt unserm gnedigisten chur- und landsfürsten, hertzog Friderichen, pfaltzgraven, sampt irer churfürstlichen gnaden ehegemahel, jungen herrschaft, rähten und amptleuten (auch einen erbern rath dieser statt oder einer erbaren gemein dieses orts) gnad und einigkeyt verleihen, daß sie ire gantze regierung dahin richten, daß unser herr Jesus Christus, dem du allen gewalt im himmel und auf erden gegeben hast, uber sie und ire underthonen hersche, auf daß das arme volck, die da sind creaturn deiner hend und schaf deiner wayde, für die auch der herr Jesus sein blut vergossen hat, regiert werden in aller heiligkeyt und gerechtigkeyt, daß auch wir umb deinetwillen inen alle gebürliche ehr und treu erzeigen und under inen ein ehrbar, fridsams und christlichs leben füren mögen.

Prayer (English). And forasmuch as thou wilt govern us in this life also by the hand of our magistrates, thy ministers, we beseech thee, who hast their hearts in thy hand, that thou wouldest vouchsafe unto them all, the Imperial and royal Majesty, all princes and lords, especially our most gracious Elector and prince of this land, Duke Frederick, Count Palatine, together with his Electoral Grace's consort, the young lordship, counsellors and officers (and also an honourable council of this city, or an honourable commune of this place), grace and unity, that they may direct their whole government to this end, that our Lord Jesus Christ, unto whom thou hast given all power in heaven and in earth, may reign over them and their subjects; that the poor people, which are the creatures of thy hands and the sheep of thy pasture, for whom also the Lord Jesus hath shed his blood, may be governed in all holiness and righteousness; and that we also for thy sake may show them all due honour and faithfulness, and lead under them an honest, peaceable and Christian life.

R1.6 Fruits of the earth

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563, Moers 1581, Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588 and Ysenburg-Birstein 1598.

Prayer (German). Gib auch deinen segen und benedeiung zu der frucht der erden, auf daß wir dich dardurch als einen vater und ursprung aller barmhertzigkeyt und güter erkennen.

Prayer (English). Give also thy blessing and benediction to the fruit of the earth, that we may thereby acknowledge thee as a Father and fountain of all mercy and good things.

R1.7 All men

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563, Moers 1581, Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588, Ysenburg-Birstein 1598 and Schaumburg 1614.

Prayer (German). Wir bitten dich auch nicht allein für uns, sonder auch für alle menschen der gantzen welt, wöllest dich uber sie allesampt gnediglich erbarmen,

Prayer (English). We pray thee also not for ourselves only, but also for all men of the whole world, that thou wouldest have mercy upon them all graciously;

R1.8 The persecuted

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563, Moers 1581, Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588 and Ysenburg-Birstein 1598.

Prayer (German). insonderheyt aber, die unser mitglieder seind an dem leib Jesu Christi und umb deiner warheyt willen vom Türcken und bapst verfolgen leiden. Wöllest, o vater aller gnaden, solches wüten deiner feind, die deinen son Jesum Christum in seinen gliedern verfolgen, zurückhalten und die verfolgten mit unüberwindtlicher standhaftigkeyt und kraft deines heiligen geists stercken, auf daß sie solche verfolgung von deiner hand mit dancksagung annemen und in ihrem trübsal solche freund empfinden, welche ubertrifft allen verstand.

Prayer (English). but especially upon them that are our fellow members in the body of Jesus Christ and for thy truth's sake suffer persecution from the Turk and the Pope. Restrain, O Father of all grace, such raging of thine enemies, which persecute thy Son Jesus in his members, and strengthen the persecuted with invincible steadfastness and the power of thy Holy Spirit, that they may receive such persecution from thy hand with thanksgiving, and in their tribulation feel such joy as passeth all understanding.

R1.9 The afflicted

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563, Moers 1581, Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588, Ysenburg-Birstein 1598 and Schaumburg 1614.

Prayer (German). Tröste und stercke alle armen, gefangen, krancken, witwen und weysen, schwangere weiber und bekümmerte und angefochtene hertzen und gib ihnen deinen frieden,

Prayer (English). Comfort and strengthen all the poor, the captives, the sick, widows and orphans, women with child, and troubled and tempted hearts, and give them thy peace;

R1.10 Lord's Prayer

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563, Moers 1581, Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588 and Ysenburg-Birstein 1598.

Prayer (German). durch unsern lieben herrn Jesum Christum, welcher uns diese gwisse verheissung gethan hat: Fürwar, fürwar, sage ich euch, was ihr den vater bitten werdet in meinem namen, das wirdt er euch geben, und uns darauf hat befohlen, also zu beten: Unser vater etc.

Prayer (English). through our dear Lord Jesus Christ, who hath made us this sure promise: Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you; and hath commanded us thereupon to pray thus: Our Father, etc.

R2.1 Exhortation / preface

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563 and Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588.

Rubric (German). Oder also:

Rubric (English). Or thus:

Prayer (German). Almechtiger Gott, himlischer vater, der du hast uns verheissen, was wir dich in dem namen deines geliebten sohns Jesu Christi werden bitten, das wöllest du uns gewißlich geben.

Prayer (English). Almighty God, heavenly Father, who hast promised us that whatsoever we shall ask thee in the name of thy beloved Son Jesus Christ, thou wilt surely give it us:

R2.2 The Word & its fruit

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563 and Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588. The rubric is in Kurpfalz 1563 only.

Rubric (German). Geheiliget werde dein nam.

Rubric (English). Hallowed be thy name.

Prayer (German). Wir bitten dich, daß du durch deinen heiligen geist in uns wöllest würcken, daß wir dich recht erkennen und dich in allen deinen wercken, in welchen leuchtet dein allmechtigkeyt, weißheyt, güte, gerechtigkeyt, barmhertzigkeyt und warheyt, heiligen, rühmen und preisen und daß auch wir unser gantzes leben, gedancken, wort und werck dahin richten, daß dein nam umb unsertwillen nicht gelestert, sonder geehret und gepriesen werde.

Prayer (English). We beseech thee that thou wouldest work in us by thy Holy Spirit, that we may rightly know thee, and hallow, extol and praise thee in all thy works, wherein shineth thine almightiness, wisdom, goodness, righteousness, mercy and truth; and that we also may so direct our whole life, thoughts, words and works, that thy name be not blasphemed for our sakes, but honoured and praised.

R2.3 The Church

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563 and Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588. The rubric is in Kurpfalz 1563 only.

Rubric (German). Dein reich kom.

Rubric (English). Thy kingdom come.

Prayer (German). Auch regier uns also durch das scepter deines worts und kraft deines heiligen geistes, daß wir und alle menschen uns deiner majestet von tag zu tag mehr underwerfen und ergeben, erhalt und mehre deine kirch und zerstör alle werck des teufels und alle falsche und böse rahtschläg, die wider dein heiliges wort erdacht werden. Mach zuschanden deine feind durch die macht deiner warheyt und gerechtigkeyt, daß also aller gewalt, der sich wider deine ehr erhebet, von tag zu tag mehr zerstöret und vertilget werde, biß die vollkommenheyt deines reichs herzukomme, wenn du am jüngsten gericht deine herrligkeyt in uns offenbaren und in ewigkeyt alles in allen sein wirst.

Prayer (English). Rule us also so by the sceptre of thy word and the power of thy Holy Spirit, that we and all men may from day to day submit and yield ourselves more unto thy Majesty; preserve and increase thy Church, and destroy all the works of the devil and all false and wicked counsels devised against thy holy word. Confound thine enemies by the might of thy truth and righteousness, that so all power which exalteth itself against thine honour may from day to day be more destroyed and brought to nought, until the perfection of thy kingdom come, when thou shalt reveal thy glory in us at the last judgement and be all in all for ever.

R2.4 All estates / households

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563 and Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588. The rubric is in Kurpfalz 1563 only.

Rubric (German). Dein will geschehe etc.

Rubric (English). Thy will be done, etc.

Prayer (German). Verleihe auch, daß wir und alle menschen unserem eignen willen und allen lüsten unsers fleischs absagen und deinem allein guten willen one alles widersprechen gehorchen, daß also jederman sein ampt und beruf so willig und treulich verrichte wie die engel im himmel.

Prayer (English). Grant also that we and all men may renounce our own will and all the lusts of our flesh, and obey thy will, which alone is good, without any gainsaying; that so every man may perform his office and calling as willingly and faithfully as the angels in heaven.

R2.5 Fruits of the earth

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563 and Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588. The rubric is in Kurpfalz 1563 only.

Rubric (German). Gib uns heut unser teglich brodt.

Rubric (English). Give us this day our daily bread.

Prayer (German). Wöllest uns auch mit aller leiblichen notturft versorgen, uns fried und gut regiment verleihen, auf daß wir dardurch erkennen, daß du der einige ursprung alles guten bist und ein getreuer vater, der da sorget für seine kinder, daß auch on deinen segen weder unser sorgen und arbeit noch deine gaben uns gedeien mögen und wir derhalben unser vertrauen von allen creaturen abziehen und allein auf dich setzen.

Prayer (English). Provide us also with all bodily necessaries, and vouchsafe us peace and good government, that we may thereby acknowledge that thou art the only fountain of all good and a faithful Father who careth for his children, and that without thy blessing neither our care and labour nor thy gifts can prosper us; and that we may therefore withdraw our trust from all creatures and set it upon thee alone.

R2.6 Repentance & forgiveness

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563 and Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588. The rubric is in Kurpfalz 1563 only.

Rubric (German). Vergib uns unser schuldt etc.

Rubric (English). Forgive us our debts, etc.

Prayer (German). Wollest auch uns armen sünderen alle unsere missethat und schulden, auch das böß, so uns noch immerdar anhanget, umb des blutvergiessens Jesu Christi willen nicht zurechnen, wie auch wir diß zeugnuß deiner gnaden in unsern hertzen befinden, daß wir unserm nechsten von hertzen verzeihen und sein nutz begeren zu befürdern.

Prayer (English). Impute not unto us poor sinners all our misdeeds and debts, nor the evil that yet always cleaveth unto us, for the sake of the shedding of the blood of Jesus Christ; even as we also find this witness of thy grace in our hearts, that we forgive our neighbour from the heart and desire to further his good.

R2.7 The present congregation

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563 and Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588. The rubric is in Kurpfalz 1563 only.

Rubric (German). Füre unß nit in versuchung etc.

Rubric (English). Lead us not into temptation, etc.

Prayer (German). Und dieweil wir ja auß uns selbst so schwach sein, daß wir nicht einen augenblick bestehen können und darzu unsere abgesagte feind, der teufel, die welt und unser eigen fleisch, nit aufhören, uns anzufechten, so wöllest uns erhalten und stercken durch die kraft deines heiligen geistes, auf daß wir inen mögen festen widerstandt thuen und in diesem geistlichen streit nit underligen, sonder bestendig bleiben, biß daß wir endtlich den sieg vollkomlich erhalten und in deinem reich mit deinem son, unserm herrn und beschirmer Jesu Christo, ewig regieren.

Prayer (English). And forasmuch as we of ourselves are so weak that we cannot stand one moment, and moreover our sworn enemies, the devil, the world and our own flesh, cease not to assail us: uphold and strengthen us by the power of thy Holy Spirit, that we may make firm resistance against them and not be overcome in this spiritual warfare, but abide steadfast, until at the last we obtain the victory perfectly and reign for ever in thy kingdom with thy Son, our Lord and protector Jesus Christ.

R2.8 Conclusion

Witnesses: Kurpfalz 1563 and Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588.

Prayer (German). Welches alles wir von dir bitten, daß dadurch nit wir, sonder du ewig gepriesen werdest, und daß du solches thun kanst als ein almechtiger Gott und thun wilst wie ein getreuer vater, so gwiß als wir dises von hertzen an dich begeren, durch unsern herrn Jesum Christum, Amen. Unser vater etc.

Prayer (English). All which we ask of thee, that thereby not we but thou mayest be praised for ever; and that thou canst do this as an almighty God, and wilt do it as a faithful Father, as surely as we desire this of thee from the heart; through our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen. Our Father, etc.

R2.9 Creed

Witnesses: Bentheim-Tecklenburg 1588.

Prayer (German). Wollest uns auch geben standthafftigkeit und täglichs zunemen in dem alten, waren und ungezweiffelten Christlichen Glauben, auff daß wir uns durch denselben je lenger, je mehr Christi Jesu und aller seiner Güter theilhafftig machen, von welchem Glauben wir bekantnuß thun, mit Munde und Hertzen sprechende: Ich glaub in Gott Vatter, Almächtigen, etc.

Prayer (English). Give us also steadfastness and daily increase in the old, true and undoubted Christian faith, that thereby we may make ourselves more and more partakers of Christ Jesus and all his benefits; of which faith we make confession with mouth and heart, saying: I believe in God the Father Almighty, etc.

6.20 Family R3: Calvin’s “grande prière” (Strasbourg/Geneva)

Calvin's Strasbourg/Geneva "grande prière" in Latin, for the French refugee church, ending in a paraphrase of the Lord's Prayer.

R3.1 Special intercessions

Rubric (Latin). Concionem horae spatio absolvit ac subiecta precatione concludit. Admonet autem prius Ecclesiam, si qua sunt digna aut necessaria, Nempe si sponsalia sint, si baptismus, si quis pauper aut aegrotus se commendat precibus ecclesiae et caetera eiusmodi. Interea diaconi duo ad ostium a singulis eleemosynam postulant in pauperum usus.

Rubric (English). He endeth the sermon within the space of an hour and concludeth it with the prayer subjoined. But first he admonisheth the Church of aught that is worthy or needful: as, if there be betrothals, if a baptism, if any poor or sick man commend himself to the prayers of the Church, and other things of the kind. Meanwhile two deacons at the door ask alms of every one for the use of the poor.

R3.2 Exhortation / preface

Rubric (Latin). Oratio

Rubric (English). Prayer

Prayer (Latin). Deus omnipotens Pater coelestis, tu quidem promisisti exaudire vota nostra, quacunque de re te appellaverimus in nomine dilecti filii tui Iesu Christi Domini nostri. Nos quoque ille sic docuit sanctos coetus inter nos habere in nomine suo, promissis liberalibus etiam invitans, quod his coetibus nostris adfuturus sit medius, quo uno mediatore et intercessore abs te impetremus, quicquid unanimes petierimus super terram. In primis autem iubes nos orare pro omnibus, quoscunque in potestate supra nos esse voluisti, ac deinceps pro iis rebus, quae ad usus necessarios populi tui atque omnium hominum pertinent. Cui mandato tuo obtemperantes sola fiducia sanctissimi instituti tui ac promissorum tuorum freti huc coram te convenimus in nomen Christi filii tui Domini nostri rogantes ex animo supplices, o Deus idemque Pater optime, in nomine liberatoris unici eiusdemque mediatoris nostri, liberaliter nobis pro tua clementia condones omnia peccata nostraque corda, mentes, cogitatus ac vota omnia sic ad te flectas et pertrahas, qui valeamus te invocare vera et simplici oratione, quae tibi grata sit et accepta.

Prayer (English). Almighty God, heavenly Father, thou hast promised to hear our petitions, in whatsoever thing we call upon thee in the name of thy beloved Son Jesus Christ our Lord. He also hath so taught us to hold holy assemblies among us in his name, inviting us moreover with bountiful promises, that he will be in the midst of these our assemblies, that by him our only Mediator and Intercessor we may obtain of thee whatsoever we shall ask with one accord upon earth. And first of all thou commandest us to pray for all whom thou hast willed to be in authority over us, and thereafter for those things that pertain to the needful uses of thy people and of all men. Obeying this thy commandment, and trusting only in thy most holy ordinance and thy promises, we are come together here before thee in the name of Christ thy Son our Lord, humbly beseeching thee from the heart, O God and most good Father, in the name of our only Deliverer and Mediator, that of thy clemency thou wouldest freely pardon us all our sins, and so bend and draw unto thee our hearts, minds, thoughts and all our desires, that we may be able to call upon thee with true and single prayer, which may be pleasing and acceptable unto thee.

R3.3 Civil authority

Prayer (Latin). Oramus itaque tuam clementiam, o Pater coelestis, pro principibus et hominibus cunctis potestatem gerentibus servis tuis, quibus abs te mandatum est ius dicere populo tuo, nominatim vero pro consulibus et senatu huius civitatis, ut ipsis largiri digneris spiritum tuum, qui vere princeps est et voluntatum moderator, eiusque dona, vim et gratiam in dies magis magisque adaugeas, quo simul vere agnoscant unum ac solum Christum filium tuum Dominum nostrum Regem regum ac principatum tenentem supra omnem potestatem, cui nempe abs te data sit potestas omnis in coelo et in terra, tum certa fide persuasi totis animis studeant vero ac spirituali cultu sese illi approbare regnumque ipsius apud subditos suos provehere et amplificare, quos etiam regant iuxta praescriptum voluntatis tuae ex lege tua, sicuti certo norunt se et illos abs te factos et conditos adeoque oves esse tuorum armentorum, liceat itaque tuo beneficio pace frui, in qua tibi serviamus cum omni sanctitate et honestate liberatique ab inimicis nostris tibi gratias et laudes persolvere queamus.

Prayer (English). We pray therefore thy clemency, O heavenly Father, for princes and all men bearing authority, thy servants, to whom it is committed of thee to do justice to thy people, and by name for the consuls and senate of this city: that thou wouldest vouchsafe to bestow upon them thy Spirit, which is truly a princely Spirit and the governor of wills, and increase more and more from day to day his gifts, power and grace; that they may truly acknowledge the one and only Christ thy Son our Lord, the King of kings, holding the principality above all power, to whom indeed all power in heaven and in earth hath been given of thee; and then, being persuaded with sure faith, may study with all their hearts to approve themselves unto him with true and spiritual worship, and to advance and enlarge his kingdom among their subjects, whom also they may rule according to the prescript of thy will out of thy law, as they surely know that both they and these are made and fashioned of thee, and are the sheep of thy flocks. May it be granted us therefore by thy benefit to enjoy peace, wherein we may serve thee in all holiness and honesty, and, being delivered from our enemies, may render thee thanks and praises.

R3.4 Ministers of the Word

Prayer (Latin). Oramus etiam, Pater verax et liberator unice, pro iis, quos ecclesiae tuae dedisti pastores et salutis animarum procurationem ac sacrosancti evangelii tui ministerium commendasti; eos tuo spiritu sic regas et adiuves, ut sint fideles ministri gloriae tuae, huc studia omnia conferentes, quo palabundus adhuc ovium tuarum grex in unum coeat ad Iesum Christum verum ac summum pastorem principemque episcoporum, uti in eo et per eum in dies magis atque magis crescant cum omni iustitia et sanctimonia vitae. Rursum dignare ecclesias omnes tuas vindicare et eripere e luporum faucibus ac mercenariorum omnium unguibus, qui ambitioni suae serviunt et compendii sui gratia faciunt omnia, nihil minus solliciti, quam ut sacratissimum nomen tuum celebre ac sanctum ubique sit et grex tuus salutem consequatur.

Prayer (English). We pray also, O true Father and only Deliverer, for those whom thou hast given as pastors to thy Church, and to whom thou hast committed the care of the salvation of souls and the ministry of thy most holy Gospel: so govern and help them by thy Spirit, that they may be faithful ministers of thy glory, bending all their endeavours to this, that the flock of thy sheep, yet wandering, may gather together into one unto Jesus Christ, the true and chief Shepherd and Prince of bishops, that in him and through him they may grow more and more from day to day in all righteousness and holiness of life. Vouchsafe again to deliver all thy churches and to snatch them out of the jaws of the wolves and the claws of all hirelings, which serve their own ambition and do all things for their own gain, caring for nothing less than that thy most holy name be everywhere renowned and holy, and thy flock attain unto salvation.

R3.5 All men

Prayer (Latin). Insuper te rogamus, o Deus clementissime et Pater misericors, pro universo hominum genere, ut qui velis agnosci ab omnibus toto orbe terrarum liberator unicus parta redemptione per Christum filium tuum, digneris etiam, quotquot adhuc hodie ab eodem Christo filio tuo longius absunt, vincti sedentes in tenebris et omni salutis ignoratione, spiritu tuo illustratos per praedicationem evangelii in rectam salutis viam reducere, nempe ut agnoscant te verum Deum et quem misisti Iesum Christum. Quos vero iam eo favore dignatus es, ut eorum mentibus illucesceres manifestatione verbi tui, fac in dies omni bono ac benedictionis tuae spiritualis abundantia auctiores ac beatiores evadant, quo tandem aliquando valeamus omnes unanimi consensu vere et ex animo tuam maiestatem adorare et laudibus extollere ac denique nos totos in clientelam tradere unigenito tuo, quem solum nos agnoscimus Dominum regem ac legislatorem nostrum.

Prayer (English). Moreover we beseech thee, O most clement God and merciful Father, for the whole race of men: that as thou wilt be acknowledged of all throughout the whole world as the only Deliverer, redemption having been wrought through Christ thy Son, thou wouldest vouchsafe also to bring back into the right way of salvation, enlightened by thy Spirit through the preaching of the Gospel, all that are yet this day far off from the same Christ thy Son, sitting bound in darkness and in all ignorance of salvation; that they may know thee the true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. And them whom thou hast already vouchsafed that favour, that thou hast shone into their minds by the manifestation of thy word, make them from day to day to grow richer and more blessed in all good and in the abundance of thy spiritual blessing; that at the last we may all be able with one accord truly and from the heart to adore thy Majesty and extol it with praises, and finally to deliver ourselves wholly into the keeping of thine Only-begotten, whom alone we acknowledge as our Lord, King and Lawgiver.

R3.6 The afflicted

Prayer (Latin). Ad haec eos tibi commendamus etiam, o Deus consolator, quos visitas, ut castiges cruce vel quocunque afflictionis genere et populos, quos tu iam peste bellove aut fame urges, singulos denique, quos aliqua per te premit inopia vel carcer aut morbus aut exilium aut quaecunque tandem calamitas, seu corporis illa sit seu animi. Da, ut intelligant tuam erga illos vere paternam benevolentiam, nempe quod ideo castiges et corrigas, ut emendati revertantur ad te ex toto corde suo ac plenam consolationem reportent liberati ab omnibus malis.

Prayer (English). To these things we commend unto thee also, O God of comfort, those whom thou visitest, that thou mayest chasten them with the cross or with any kind of affliction; and the peoples whom thou now pressest with pestilence, war or famine; and lastly every one whom any want sent by thee oppresseth, or prison, or sickness, or exile, or any calamity whatsoever, be it of body or of mind. Grant that they may understand thy truly fatherly goodwill toward them, namely that thou chastenest and correctest them to this end, that being amended they may return unto thee with their whole heart, and, being delivered from all evils, may receive full consolation.

R3.7 The persecuted

Prayer (Latin). Unice vero tibi commendatos volumus fratres nostros electos tuos, quotquot sub tyrannide Antichristi vivunt adhuc dispersi, pabulo vitae spiritualis destituti atque libertate illa filiorum tuorum, ut publice possint nomen tuum invocare, in primis autem eos, qui vincti sunt aut qualicunque modo opprimuntur apud hostes evangelii tui; digneris, o Pater indulgentissime, robur spiritus tui in illis augere, quo firmiores sint nec unquam deficiant, sed constanter perseverent in sancta vocatione tua. Velis illos tuo semper auxilio sustinere ac fulcire, quantum opus esse nosti, simulque consolari in adversis omnibus tuaque cura tueri adversus luporum rabiem, quo per ipsos nomen tuum illustrius fiat tam in vita quam in morte.

Prayer (English). But above all we would have commended unto thee our brethren, thine elect, as many as yet live scattered under the tyranny of Antichrist, destitute of the food of spiritual life and of that liberty of thy children, that they might publicly call upon thy name; and first of all those that are in bonds or in any manner oppressed among the enemies of thy Gospel. Vouchsafe, O most indulgent Father, to increase in them the strength of thy Spirit, that they may be the firmer and never fail, but persevere constantly in thy holy calling. Be pleased ever to uphold and stay them with thy help, so far as thou knowest to be needful, and withal to comfort them in all adversities and defend them by thy care against the rage of the wolves, that through them thy name may be made more glorious both in life and in death.

R3.8 The present congregation

Prayer (Latin). Da denique, o Deus et Pater, nobis iam collectis in unum in nomine Iesu Christi filii tui ad audiendum verbum evangelii et communicandum sacrosanctae ipsius coenae mysteriis, ut vere agnoscamus serioque sentiamus, quam miseri simus ac perditi iam inde a prima nostra origine, in dies magis atque magis iudicium tuum in nos provocantes vitae improbitate, itaque ubi perspexerimus, quam nihil in nobis insit boni quodque nostra caro et sanguis regni tui haereditatem consequi haudquaquam possint, tum animis totis nos ipsos dedamus unice dilecto filio tuo Iesu Christo liberatori nostro unico, ut ita nos possideat et corda nostra inhabitet, quo mortuo ac plane deleto veteri Adamo innovemur in vitae puritatem,

Prayer (English). Grant lastly, O God and Father, unto us that are now gathered together in the name of Jesus Christ thy Son to hear the word of the Gospel and to communicate in the most holy mysteries of his Supper, that we may truly acknowledge and earnestly feel how wretched and lost we are even from our first origin, provoking thy judgement against us more and more from day to day by the wickedness of our life; and so, when we have perceived how there is no good in us, and that our flesh and blood can in no wise obtain the inheritance of thy kingdom, we may give ourselves up with our whole hearts to thy only beloved Son Jesus Christ, our only Deliverer, that he may so possess us and dwell in our hearts that, the old Adam being dead and utterly done away, we may be renewed unto purity of life:

R3.9 Lord's Prayer

Rubric (Latin). Paraphrasis dominicae orationis, 1.–6.

Rubric (English). Paraphrase of the Lord’s Prayer, 1–6

Prayer (Latin). 1. qua nomen tuum, uti par est, supra omnia ubique laudibus extollatur et magnum fiat. 2. Simul etiam ius imperiumque obtineas, imo exerceas etiam in nos omnes, ut magis magisque in dies condiscamus vera obedientia et digna reverentia tuam maiestatem venerari 3. Tuque adeo solus ubique regnes omnium Dominus ac populum tuum sceptro verbi tui et virtute spiritus tui regas et moderere omnesque, qui tibi adversantur, veritatis ac iustitiae tuae potentia debellatos expugnes. Ita fiet, ut potestas omnis atque celsitudo, quae gloriae tuae obluctatur, sensim destruatur funditusque evertatur, donec palam fiat regnum tuum, quod videlicet tu solus rex sis et Dominus, qui ad iudicandum accessurus es. Nos quoque cum creaturis universis tibi per omnia obtemperemus, sicuti novimus Angelos sanctos, qui tecum coelos incolunt, nullum velle aliud habere, quam ut quicquid tibi gratum et placitum fuerit, statim absque remora pro tuae voluntatis arbitrio perficiatur. Nos ita tibi quoque placere studeamus neglectis ac posthabitis cunctis nostrae carnis desideriis et placitis. 4. Donec autem nos coram te ambulamus cum amore et timore nominis tui, tu pro tua bonitate nutrias et pascas omnia sufficiens, quae vitae huic sint necessaria, qui panem nostrum cum pace comedamus, qua tua cura et sollicitudine nostri persuasissimum nobis sit te patrem esse, a quo uno expectanda sint omnia, deposita omni fiducia nostri ac creaturarum omnium, ut in tua unius bonitate ac benevolentia acquiescamus. 5. Quoniam vero, quandiu vita haec manet, nos miseri peccatores in morte media versamur ac fragiles adeo sumus, ut perpetuo prolabamur impingentes ad omnia, semperque aberrantes discedimus a recto, nobis hac in parte sic esto propitius, ut condones haec delicta omnia, quibus iudicio tuo iustissimo nos fecimus obnoxios, eademque condonatione liberes a morte aeterna, cui nostro merito addicti sumus. Ergo malum hoc, quod circumferimus, ne nobis imputes, quemadmodum nos quoque tuo iussu iniuriarum obliviscimur ac vindictae loco bona omnia nostris inimicis precamur. 6. In posterum denique nos tua virtute fulcias, ne rursum carnis infirmitate prolapsi te offendamus. Cumque ea sit nostrarum virium imbecillitas, ut ne ad momentum quidem temporis perstare valeamus atque adeo cincti undique crudelissimis hostibus perpetuam impressionem patiamur a diabolo, mundo et carne, quibuscum nobis continuum est bellum, nos tuo spiritu corrobora et gratiarum tuarum donis munias, ut possimus constanter perstare adversus omne genus tentationis inque spirituali hac lucta sic pergere, ut tandem victoria plena potiti triumphum agamus in regno tuo una cum duce et capite summoque et unico protectore nostro Domino Iesu Christo, Amen.

Prayer (English). 1. whereby thy name, as is meet, may be extolled with praises above all things everywhere and be made great. 2. That thou mayest also hold, yea, exercise thy right and dominion over us all, that we may learn more and more from day to day to worship thy Majesty with true obedience and due reverence; 3. and that thou alone mayest reign everywhere, the Lord of all, and govern and rule thy people by the sceptre of thy word and the power of thy Spirit, and overthrow all that oppose thee, vanquished by the might of thy truth and righteousness. So shall it come to pass that all power and height that striveth against thy glory shall little by little be destroyed and utterly overturned, until thy kingdom be made manifest, to wit, that thou alone art

King and Lord, who art to come to judgement. May we also with all creatures obey thee in all things, as we know that the holy Angels, which dwell with thee in the heavens, will have nothing else but that whatsoever is pleasing and acceptable unto thee be forthwith performed without delay according to the pleasure of thy will; and may we so study to please thee also, all the desires and pleasures of our flesh being neglected and set aside. 4. And so long as we walk before thee with love and fear of thy name, do thou of thy goodness nourish and feed us, supplying all things that be necessary for this life, that we may eat our bread in peace, whereby through thy care and solicitude for us we may be most fully persuaded that thou art the Father from whom alone all things are to be looked for, and, laying aside all trust in ourselves and in all creatures, may rest in thy goodness and benevolence alone. 5. But forasmuch as, so long as this life endureth, we miserable sinners are in the midst of death, and are so frail that we continually slip and stumble at all things, and ever wandering depart from the right: be thou in this behalf so propitious unto us, that thou pardon all these offences whereby we have made ourselves liable to thy most just judgement, and by the same pardon deliver us from eternal death, to which by our desert we are adjudged. Therefore impute not unto us this evil that we carry about, even as we also by thy commandment forget injuries, and instead of revenge pray for all good things for our enemies. 6. And finally, for the time to come uphold us by thy power, lest, falling again through the infirmity of the flesh, we offend thee. And since such is the weakness of our strength that we cannot stand firm even for a moment of time, and being beset on every side with most cruel enemies we suffer continual assault from the devil, the world and the flesh, with which we have perpetual war: strengthen us by thy Spirit and fortify us with the gifts of thy graces, that we may stand constantly against every kind of temptation, and so go on in this spiritual combat that at the last, having obtained full victory, we may triumph in thy kingdom together with our Captain and Head and highest and only Protector, the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

R3.10 Creed

Rubric (Latin). Huic precationi immediate symbolum additur, quo recitato praecentor statim psalmum incipit, cui deinde populus accinit ad finem usque, quo decantato pastor populum dimittit hac bona imprecatione.

Rubric (English). To this prayer the Creed is immediately added; which being recited, the precentor straightway beginneth a psalm, to which the people then sing to the end; which being sung, the pastor dismisseth the people with this good wish.

6.21 Family R4: à Lasco/Micron (London stranger church)

The London Dutch stranger church's prayer after the sermon (German version for East Frisia), still praying for the King of England and the city of London.

- Earliest witness (archetype): London 1554 (à Lasco/Micron).
- Tradition: Reformed.
- Language: German.
- Form: continuous prayer + Our Father.
- Place in the service (London 1554 (Micron)): Sunday morning after the sermon, the prayer for the fruit of the Word, the Decalogue, confession, declaration of loosing and binding, and the Creed; then the Our Father, and baptism, the Supper or marriage; a psalm and the blessing with a charge to remember the poor. “Das grosse gebet vor die gemeine notdurft” is said after every sermon.

R4.1 Thanksgiving

Rubric (German). Nach diser bekäntnuß fahet der diener das gemeine gebet an für allerley not der christlichen gemeine auf dise weise:

Rubric (English). After this confession the minister beginneth the common prayer for all manner of need of the Christian congregation after this manner:

Prayer (German). O almechtiger, himlischer und barmherziger Vater, nachdem es dir gefallen hat, durch deine unentliche barmherzigkeit uns auß der finsternuß der unwissenheit und der römischen abgötterey zu erlösen und uns under andern die geheimnuß des heiligen evangelions deines lieben Sons zu offenbaren, darfür wir dir von ganzen herzen danken, so bitten wir dich demuttiglich, du wollest uns durch die gnade deines Geistes sterken, daß wir den waren christlichen glauben biß ans ende unsers lebens behalten und unser leben darnach richten mögen.

Prayer (English). O almighty, heavenly and merciful Father, forasmuch as it hath pleased thee of thine infinite mercy to deliver us out of the darkness of ignorance and of the Roman idolatry, and, among others, to reveal unto us the mystery of the holy Gospel of thy dear Son, for which we give thee thanks with our whole heart: we humbly beseech thee that thou wouldest strengthen us by the grace of thy Spirit, that we may keep the true Christian faith unto the end of our life and order our life thereafter.

R4.2 The Church

Prayer (German). Wir bitten dich auch, allerheiligster Vater, für die gemeine kirch deines lieben Sohns Jesu Christi, die durch die ganze weite welt zerstreuet ist, in welcher die gottselige lere deines Sohns (nachdem der greuel und abgötterey des römischen antichrists außgerottet ist) geleret und erhalten wird. Wehre von denselbigen alle falsche hirten und lerer und sende gottselige, getreue und ernsthaftige arbeiter in deine ernd, welche nit ihre eigene ehr suchen, sonder allein deine ehre und die erbauung deiner gemeine.

Prayer (English). We pray thee also, most holy Father, for the common Church of thy dear Son Jesus Christ, which is scattered throughout the whole wide world, wherein the godly doctrine of thy Son is taught and maintained (the abomination and idolatry of the Roman Antichrist being rooted out). Keep from her all false shepherds and teachers, and send godly, faithful and earnest labourers into thine harvest, which seek not their own honour, but thine honour only and the edifying of thy congregation.

R4.3 Civil authority

Prayer (German). Und erstlich bitten wir, allergnedigister Vater, für die gemeine dieses reichs Engeland und für alle seine diener und insonderheit für unsern gnedigisten herren könig N. N., wollest ihn behüten und bewaren und mit deinem Geist regieren, auf daß er sein volk unter unserm gemeinem haubt Jesu Christo regieren möge, daß wir ein gerüigs und stilles leben under ihm in aller gottseligkeit und erbarkeit nach deinem wort durch deine gnade füren mögen. Wir bitten auch für der königlichen majestät hoffgesind und den adel, auch für alle herren und oberkeit des ganzen königreichs und vörnemlich für den wollweisen hohen rat königlicher majestet, begabe ihn mit den geist des rats, der sterke und bestendigkeit. Gebe ihnen auch den geist der einigkeit und des friedes, auf daß sie allem dem, das recht und gut ist, in ihrer regierung folgen und also eine christliche ruhe und frieden in disem reich fürdern und erhalten helfen.

Prayer (English). And first we pray, most gracious Father, for the congregation of this realm of England and for all its ministers, and especially for our most gracious lord King N. N.: preserve and keep him and govern him with thy Spirit, that he may rule his people under our common Head Jesus Christ, that we may lead under him a quiet and still life in all godliness and honesty according to thy word by thy grace. We pray also for the King's Majesty's household and the nobility, and for all lords and magistrates of the whole kingdom, and chiefly for the right wise high council of the King's Majesty: endue it with the spirit of counsel, of strength and of constancy. Give them also the spirit of unity and of peace, that in their government they may follow all that is right and good, and so help to further and maintain a Christian quiet and peace in this realm.

R4.4 The present congregation

Prayer (German). Wollest auch das ganze volk dises reichs mit deinem Geist begaben, daß es die stimme deiner propheten willig höre und der lehre deines Sohns Jesu Christi wahr nemme und in derselbigen täglich mehr und mehr zunehme, auch daß es in dem waren gehorsam (denn es der königlichen majestät und dero verordneten schuldig ist) bestendig bleibe, zur wolfart dises reichs und erbauung der christlichen gemeine. Wir bitten weiter deine göttliche gnade für diese statt Londen, daß du von derselbigen allerley plagen (die wir täglich verdienen) abwenden und sie in aller gottseligkeit, fride und gemeiner ruhe erhalten wollest. Regiere auch die oberkeit derselbigen mit deinem Geist, daß sie in deiner forcht treulich und weißlich ihren dienst versehen möge.

Prayer (English). Endue also the whole people of this realm with thy Spirit, that it may willingly hear the voice of thy prophets, and take heed to the doctrine of thy Son Jesus Christ, and increase therein more and more from day to day; and that it may abide constant in the true obedience which it oweth to the King's Majesty and his officers, to the welfare of this realm and the edifying of the Christian congregation. We pray further thy divine grace for this city of London, that thou wouldest turn away from it all manner of plagues (which we daily deserve), and preserve it in all godliness, peace and common quiet. Govern also the magistrates thereof with thy Spirit, that they may perform their office faithfully and wisely in thy fear.

R4.5 The present congregation

Prayer (German). Insonderheit bitten wir dich, o allergütigster Vater, fur dise unsere frembde gemeine, du wollest deine gunst gegen ihr also, wie du sie durch deine wunderbarliche gnade hieher gepflanzet, hinfur beweisen, daß sie von aller weltlicher tyranney und falschen lere durch deine macht und barmherzigkeit geschützet, täglich je mehr und mehr in aller gottseligkeit und warer einigkeit der herzen zunemen möge.

Prayer (English). Especially we pray thee, O most gracious Father, for this our stranger congregation, that thou wouldest henceforth so show thy favour toward her, as thou hast planted her here by thy wonderful grace, that, being defended by thy power and mercy from all worldly tyranny and false doctrine, she may increase daily more and more in all godliness and true unity of hearts.

R4.6 The erring & unbelievers

Prayer (German). Wir bitten dich auch demütiglich für alle könige, fürsten, oberkeiten und völker, so die stimme deines Sohns (dieweil sie mit der antichristischen abgötterey verblendet sind) noch nit haben erkennen können und die lebendige glieder deines Sohns (den sie nit erkennen) feindlich durch unwissenheit verfolgen, du wollest sie mit allen andern verblenten oder (durch irgenteine schwachheit) verfüreten personen zu dem warhaftigen liecht und rechten wege bringen, auf daß wir alle in einen schaffstal under dem einigen hirten unser seelen Christo Jesu versamlet, dich einmütiglich preisen in ewigkeit.

Prayer (English). We pray thee also humbly for all kings, princes, magistrates and peoples which (being blinded with the antichristian idolatry) have not yet been able to know the voice of thy Son, and through ignorance persecute as enemies the living members of thy Son (whom they know not): that thou wouldest bring them, with all other persons blinded or (through any weakness) led astray, to the true light and the right way, that we all, gathered into one sheepfold under the one Shepherd of our souls, Christ Jesus, may praise thee with one mind for ever.

R4.7 The persecuted

Prayer (German). Zum letzten bitten wir auch für alle unsere mitbrüder, uber den ganzen erdkreiß zerstreuet, welche umb der rechten bekantnuß willen deines Sons und seiner lere durch den antichristen under dem kreuz underdrucket sind, und insonderheit wollest trösten mit deinem heiligen Geist N. N. und ihre herzen mit deiner göttlichen kraft in dem rechten glauben von oben herab also sterken, daß sie alles, so du ihnen zusendest, geduldiglich, menlich und mit danksagung tragen mögen; und daß sie ohne furcht bestendig deinen und deines Sohns namen für den menschen herrlich bekennen und groß machen, es sey durch leben oder sterben, wie du das zu deiner ehren erkennest dienstlich sein.

Prayer (English). Lastly we pray also for all our brethren scattered over the whole earth, which for the right confession of thy Son and his doctrine are oppressed under the cross by Antichrist; and especially wilt thou comfort with thy Holy Spirit N. N., and so strengthen their hearts from above with thy divine power in the right faith, that they may bear all that thou sendest them patiently, manfully and with thanksgiving; and that without fear they may steadfastly confess gloriously before men thy name and the name of thy Son and make it great, be it by life or by death, as thou knowest it to serve to thine honour.

R4.8 The afflicted

Prayer (German). Sonderlich bitten wir auch für alle brüder, die du mit krankheit, armut, gefängnuß, verbannung oder anderm elend des geistes oder leibs billich versuchet und geübet hast, daß du sie in ihrer not nicht verlassen, sonder ihr kreuz nach deiner väterlichen barmherzigkeit linderen wollest oder ihnen sterke und gedult geben, daß sie bestendig tragen alles, was du ihnen nach deinem wolgefallen zusendest, auf daß sie auß ihrer straffe verstehen mögen, daß sie von dir, als ihrem barmherzigen, lieben Vater, probieret werden zur bewärung ihres glaubens und also sich zu dir bekeren.

Prayer (English). Especially we pray also for all the brethren whom thou hast justly tried and exercised with sickness, poverty, imprisonment, banishment or other misery of spirit or body, that thou wouldest not forsake them in their need, but mitigate their cross according to thy fatherly mercy, or give them strength and patience to bear steadfastly all that thou sendest them according to thy good pleasure; that they may understand by their chastisement that they are proved of thee, as their merciful, dear Father, for the trial of their faith, and so be converted unto thee.

R4.9 Lord's Prayer

Prayer (German). Alle dise ding begeren wir von dir, allergnedigister Vater, durch deine väterliche gnad und gunst, die du in deinem Sohne gegen uns bewiesen hast. Und in diser ungezweifelten hoffnung ruffen wir demütiglich deinen namen ahn durch denselbigen deinen geliebten Sohn Jesum Christum, wie wir von ihm gelehret sind, sprechende: Unser Vater, der du bist in den himlen etc.

Prayer (English). All these things we desire of thee, most gracious Father, through thy fatherly grace and favour which thou hast shown toward us in thy Son. And in this undoubted hope we humbly call upon thy name through the same thy beloved Son Jesus Christ, as we are taught of him, saying: Our Father, which art in the heavens, etc.

R4.10 Special intercessions

Rubric (German). Hie ist zu merken, daß hie zum oftermal andere gebet zugetan werden, ehe das Vater unser gesprochen wird, insonderheit, wo sonst etwa ein besonder anligen kompt uber die gemeine.

Rubric (English). Here it is to be noted that other prayers are oftentimes added here before the Our Father is said, especially when any special concern cometh upon the congregation.

Chapter 7. The Roman Canon in German Evangelical Masses (1522–1544)

This file gives the offertory and eucharistic rites of the orders in the Sehling corpus that keep pieces of the Roman Canon and of the priest's prayers of the Ordinary, or that put a prayer of their own in the Canon's place. They were found by a search of the whole corpus (§7.1.3) and are printed in order of date.

Each order is printed from the point where the offertory stood (after the Creed or the sermon) to the dismissal. For Kantz, the Kiel Mass and Bugenhagen, the priest's preparation at the altar is included as well. The original comes first and the English follows. Annotations name the Roman text each piece comes from.

- the elevation as a mark of the feast: Chapter 12, §12.10.6;
- the ministrants, deacons and subdeacons at the altar: Chapter 16, §16.4.

The German texts and the Roman comparison texts are given as the Conventions describe.

7.1 Summary of findings

The orders printed here run from Kantz's Nördlingen Mass of 1522 to Bugenhagen's Hildesheim order of 1544. Between them they show what the first generation of evangelical Masses kept of three things:

- the Roman Canon (Te igitur to the doxology Per ipsum);
- the prayers of the Ordinary around it: the offertory prayers, the embolism, the priest's prayers before and after communion, and the words of distribution;
- the rites that go with them: elevation, fraction, the Peace.

§7.1.1 summarises the findings in the order of the Mass. §7.1.2 gives the concordance tables. §7.1.3 says how the corpus was searched and which orders were examined but not printed.

7.1.1 Findings

The offertory.

- The offertory prayers. Luther rejected everything that "sounds of oblation" (§7.3.1). No order keeps Suscipe, sancte Pater, Offerimus tibi or Suscipe, sancta Trinitas.
- What does survive:
  - the offertory chant: Latin in Brandenburg 1540 (§7.12.1); Müntzer's German Ad te levavi (§7.4.1; Radical Reformation); a German hymn "for the offertory" in Lippe (§7.10) and Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 (§7.13.1);
  - a rubric for preparing the chalice: Döber (§7.8.1), Volprecht (§7.7.2), Bugenhagen's orders (§7.15.1);
  - the Orate fratres, recast as a request for prayer: Worms (Moderate Reformed; "mein und ewer gebet", §7.6.1), Kantz and Bremen (§7.2.1, §7.9.2), and Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed), where it becomes a bidding on Rom 12:1 to offer "our bodies" (§7.5.1, §7.5.3);
  - Veni, sanctificator* replaced by the Whitsun antiphon Veni, Sancte Spiritus and a collect: Kantz (§7.2.2), Bremen, Kiel (§7.11.1);
  - the Secret's closing *Per omnia saecula saeculorum. Amen, sung before the Preface dialogue: Müntzer (§7.4.1; Radical Reformation), Lippe (§7.10), Göttingen (§7.13.1).
- One prayer over the gifts. Only Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 has one: Osiander's prayer "Wir bringen … dise deine gaben" (§7.14.2). It borrows from Quam oblationem, Unde et memores and Supplices, and asks for the Spirit. Sehling's editor, after P. Graff, calls it the first Lutheran order with a kind of epiclesis (Sehling 8, p. 45, n. 12).

The Preface and Sanctus.

- The common Preface in German: Worms (Moderate Reformed), Kantz, Bremen.
- Proper Prefaces in German: Müntzer (Radical Reformation; Blessed Virgin, reworded so that God, not Mary, is praised), Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed; Cross), Lippe (Trinity), Kiel and Göttingen (Easter).
- Luther's short Preface. Luther cut the Preface off at per Christum Dominum nostrum and joined the Verba to it (§7.3.2). The Nürnberg Latin Mass (§7.7.1), Döber (§7.8.2) and Volprecht (§7.7.2) follow him.
- The Sanctus after the Verba: Luther, Döber, Volprecht and Pfalz-Neuburg.

The Canon.

- The only continuous Canon is Worms 1524 (Moderate Reformed; §7.6.3–7.6.9). It runs from Te igitur to Supplices te rogamus in German, abridged:
  - there are no saints in Communicantes (only its closing clause), no Memento of the dead, no Nobis quoque and no Per ipsum;
  - the sacrificial nouns become "bread and wine" and "our prayer";
  - emperor and king replace pope and bishop.
- Elsewhere single Canon prayers survive:
  - Quam oblationem, recast as a petition that the bread and wine "may become unto us" the body and blood: Kantz (§7.2.4). Bremen changes it to a prayer that "we may firmly believe" this (§7.9.3).

    - Unde et memores, as a thanksgiving "after the elevation": Strasbourg (§7.5.1; Moderate Reformed). A later hand wrote the Worms text of the prayer into the Strasbourg manuscript.
- The Canon's intercession (the petitions of Te igitur and the Memento) survives in three ways:
    - in the Canon's own place after the Sanctus: Strasbourg (§7.5.1; Moderate Reformed); an optional prayer in Döber taken from Strasbourg (§7.8.11); four collects in Brandenburg (§7.12.2); three in Pfalz-Neuburg (§7.14.4); one in Göttingen (§7.13.1);
    - as one long prayer "anstatt des Canon": Strasbourg 1525 (§7.5.2; Moderate Reformed);
    - as the general prayer after the sermon, which Bugenhagen calls "unse Canon" (§7.15.4).
- The Canon critique. The Brandenburg-Nürnberg order of 1533, repeated in Brandenburg 1540 and Pfalz-Neuburg 1543, demands that the offering clauses of the Canon be replaced by "Wir gedenken des opfers deines einigen Sons" (Appendix 7.A). Sehling's register points to this critique under "Embolismus" (11:183, 13:65), because his note there explains the Würzburg embolism's added saints.

The words of institution.

- Scripture or Canon. Most orders read the Verba from 1 Cor 11 or a harmony of the Gospels. A distinct line keeps the Canon's own Qui pridie: elevatis oculis, benedixit, novi et aeterni testamenti, sometimes mysterium fidei. The line runs through Kantz, the Nürnberg Latin Mass, Schwarz at Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed), Müntzer (Radical Reformation), Bremen, Lippe and Kiel.
- Where Müntzer's wording travelled. Müntzer's wording (Radical Reformation) reached Lippe, Kiel and Göttingen's proper Masses through the Erfurt Kirchenämter of 1525–26 (§7.10, §7.13).
- The elevation is kept by Luther (at the Benedictus), Worms (Moderate Reformed), the Nürnberg Latin Mass, Müntzer (Radical Reformation), Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed; cup only), Brandenburg and Pfalz-Neuburg. Kantz moves it to the communion ("Secht …"). Schleswig-Holstein 1542 permits it.

The Our Father and the embolism.

- Praeceptis salutaribus moniti is recast in German almost everywhere, e.g. "Last uns beten, wie uns der herr Christus Jesus befohlen hat …".
- The embolism Libera nos, quaesumus. Luther struck it out. What remains elsewhere:
    - its conclusion only ("Durch unsern Herren Jesum … lebt und herrscht"): Worms (Moderate Reformed), Kantz, Bremen, Lippe;
    - its sung ending *Per omnia saecula ("Durch alle ewigkeit der ewigkeit"): Müntzer (Radical Reformation), Lippe;
    - one line of its body ("O Herr, erlös uns von allen sichtigen und unsichtigen feinden …"): Döber (p. 54; Sehling: "Rest des Embolismus") and Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed).

The fraction.

- Forbidden. Luther forbids the fraction and commixture: "nec frangatur hostia nec in calicem misceatur" (§7.3.3). Worms (Moderate Reformed) repeats the prohibition (§7.6.11).
- Kept in two orders only, at the Roman place (the close of the embolism, before the Peace), and neither with the commixture:
    - the 1524 edition of Kantz's Mass, "Hie neme der priester das brot und breche es, so vil ers bedarf" (§7.2.5);
    - Müntzer's Allstedt order (Radical Reformation), where the priest "der communicanten halben das sacrament teilet" (§7.4.3).
- The *Deutsche Messe (1526) has no fraction.
- Reformed breaking of bread. Every other mention of breaking the bread in the corpus comes from Reformed orders from the 1550s on (à Lasco, the Palatinate, Anhalt, the Upper Palatinate, Hessen-Kassel). There the bread is broken at the distribution on the ground of 1 Cor 10:16 and Acts 2:42. It is a new rite, not a survival.

The Peace and the Agnus Dei.

- Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum survives widely: Worms (Moderate Reformed), Luther (as a "public absolution"), the Nürnberg Latin Mass, Müntzer (Radical Reformation), Volprecht, Brandenburg, Pfalz-Neuburg, Lippe and Göttingen. Kantz moves it into the communion.
- The *Agnus Dei is kept in German or Latin by nearly all. Luther has it sung during communion.

The priest's prayers before communion.

- All three kept. Domine Iesu Christe, qui dixisti, Domine Iesu Christe, Fili Dei vivi and Perceptio Corporis tui stay in Latin in Brandenburg (§7.12.5) and Pfalz-Neuburg (§7.14.6). Volprecht has all three in German (§7.7.2).
  - The "Libera nos" in these orders is the petition inside Fili Dei vivi ("Libera nos per hoc sacrosanctum corpus et sanguinem tuum"), made plural. It is not the embolism.
- Fili Dei vivi* alone is kept in German by:
  - Kantz and Bremen, abridged. Bremen changes "by this thy holy body and blood" to "by thy bottomless mercy".
  - Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed), prayed by all.
  - Döber and Kiel, said by the people line by line after the priest (§7.8.8, §7.11.3).
- Domine, non sum dignus appears once, in German, in Kiel (§7.11.3).
- Qui dixisti becomes the closing collect of the Mass in Göttingen (§7.13.3).

The words of distribution.

- The *custodiat (Corpus Domini nostri Iesu Christi custodiat animam tuam in vitam aeternam) is the most widespread survival. It appears in about thirty orders of the corpus, from Worms (Moderate Reformed) and Volprecht (1524) to 1609:
  - Worms (Moderate Reformed), Döber, Kantz, Bremen, the Nürnberg Form und Ordnung, Göttingen and many later orders;
  - most in the wording of the Albertine Saxon Agenda of 1539, "Der leib unsers herrn Jesu Christi, fur dich in tod gegeben, sterke und beware dich im glauben zum ewigen leben";
  - Brandenburg 1540 uses it only for the communion of the sick (Sehling 3, pp. 79–80).
- Calicem salutaris accipiam (Ps 116:13) survives in Worms (Moderate Reformed), Kantz, Bremen and Volprecht.

After communion.

- Quod ore sumpsimus* and Corpus tuum, Domine. Luther made these two ablution prayers the postcommunion (§7.3.5). Brandenburg and Pfalz-Neuburg keep them in Latin; Volprecht has both in German; Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed) has Quod ore as its complenda.
- Roman postcommunions and collects reused:
  - Döber's Largire sensibus nostris (Wednesday in Holy Week). Sehling thought Döber's prayer newly composed; the identification is new here.
  - the Trinity Proficiat: Volprecht, Lippe;
  - the collect Protector in te sperantium: Kantz.
- The priest's final *Placeat tibi, sancta Trinitas survives in Kantz, the sacrifice turned into "unser lob und danksagung" (§7.2.7).
- The *Nunc dimittis follows communion in Worms (Moderate Reformed), Döber, Kantz and Bremen.

The priest's preparation and thanksgiving.

- Bugenhagen's preparatory prayer is the evangelical counterpart of the prayers at the foot of the altar (§7.15):
  - in Wolfenbüttel 1543 and Hildesheim 1544, the priest kneels with the sexton and prays the Pater noster and the versicles Domine, non secundum peccata nostra … Adiuva nos, Deus;
  - in Schleswig-Holstein 1542 he says the Confiteor privately and prays for preachers, king and realm.
- After Mass, Hildesheim and Schleswig-Holstein have him kneel again and "thank God secretly for himself".

How the orders are related.

- Kantz → Bremen (a Low German version) and the opening prayers of Kiel.
- Müntzer (Radical Reformation) → (Erfurt Kirchenämter) → Lippe, Kiel, Göttingen.
- Strasbourg (Moderate Reformed) → Worms (Moderate Reformed; the same Mass) and Döber's optional intercession.
- Luther's *Formula missae → the Nürnberg Latin Mass, Döber, Volprecht, Brandenburg.
- Nürnberg 1533 → the exhortation and Canon critique of Brandenburg 1540 and Pfalz-Neuburg 1543.
- Brandenburg 1540 → Calenberg-Göttingen 1542.

7.1.2 Concordance tables

One row per order, in date order; the section number is given with each. "—" means absent; italic means a rubric only or a permission. "Canon form" of the Verba means the wording of Qui pridie (elevatis oculis, benedixit, novi et aeterni testamenti), as against the wording of 1 Cor 11 and the Gospels.

7.1.3 Method, and orders examined but not printed

The corpus (`eko.db`, all volumes of Sehling) was searched with regular expressions for:

- the priest's prayers Qui dixisti, Fili Dei vivi, Perceptio, Domine non sum dignus, Corpus … custodiat, Quod ore sumpsimus and Corpus tuum;
- Canon incipits and the Canon form of the Verba ("hub auf seine augen", "neuen und ewigen");
- offertory language and blessing of the gifts;
- the fraction ("breche", "teilet", frangatur, fractio);
- the embolism;
- Sehling's register entries Offertorium, Kanongebet, Messkanon, canon missae, Epiklese, Konsekration and Postcommunio.

Every hit was read in context. The following orders were examined and are not printed:

Order	Why not printed
Luther, Deutsche Messe, 1526 (Sehling 1, doc 3)	No Canon or Ordinary prayers (see §7.3.6).

Order	Why not printed
Homberg, Reformatio ecclesiarum Hassiae, 1526 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 8, doc 2247, pp. 44–45)	Rules only: "Canon ille missarius, et universae orationes, in quibus reperitur sacrificii aut hostiae vox a nemine ultra in hac coena dicatur". Luther's German Mass is prescribed.
Braunschweig 1528, Hamburg 1529 / Lübeck 1531, Pomerania 1535 (Bugenhagen)	Latin Preface and Sanctus on feasts only, otherwise as §7.15.
Heilbronn 1530 (Sehling 17, doc 770, pp. 276–277)	Quotes Te igitur, Quam oblationem and Supra quae only to refute them.
Transylvania, Honterus, 1543/47 (Sehling 24, docs 1669–1670)	"reiecto canone": Preface, Sanctus, Our Father and Verba, with the Saxon custodiat (1547).
Corvinus, Kirchenordnung 1542 (Sehling 21, doc 1460)	Luther's paraphrase and the Verba. The distribution "Nym hen, edt und gedencke …" is Strasbourg's "Gedenckent, glaubent" type (§7.5.2; Moderate Reformed), not the custodiat.
Schwäbisch Hall 1543 (Sehling 17, doc 762) and its communion of the sick, 1537 (doc 761)	Custodiat only ("Der Leib unsers Herrn Christi bewar dich zum ewigen leben").
Later Upper German orders, e.g. Sehling 16, V, 1560 (doc 742), after Basel 1526 (Reformed)	A prayer before communion that echoes the Perceptio: "uf das wir dein Nachtmal uns nit zum gericht empfahen, sonder zu dem ewigen leben".
Reformed orders (Kurpfalz from 1563, Anhalt, Hessen-Kassel, à Lasco)	No Canon prayers; the breaking of bread is a new rite (§7.1.1).

7.2 Nördlingen, Kaspar Kantz, Von der Evangelischen Mesß, 1522

Von der Evangelischen Mesß. Mit schönen Christlichen Gebetten vor und nach der empfahung des Sacraments. Durch Caspar Kantz von Nördlingen. Sehling 12, VIII.1, pp. 285–288 (`eko.db` doc 369). Sehling's base text is the print of 1522. The apparatus gives the changes of the second edition, Die rechte evangelische und apostolische Mesß, 1524 ("II").

This is the earliest German evangelical Mass in the corpus. It is the source of the Bremen Mass of 1525 (§7.9), and its opening prayers reappear in the Kiel Low German Mass (§7.11). The Mass has no offertory. In its place Kantz puts:

- an address and absolution;
- a recast Orate fratres;
- the Veni Sancte Spiritus antiphon.

Then comes the common Preface and Sanctus. The Canon is cut down to one prayer, a recast Quam oblationem that flows into Qui pridie. The rubric in front of it says: "Only now does the evangelical Mass begin".

7.2.1 Address, absolution and the recast Orate fratres

> Zum ersten soll der priester oder ein anderer ein ermanung tun von dem sacrament oder sunst etwas tröstlichs us dem heiligen evangelio sagen, wie im der Geist Gottes eingibt etc. Darnach mag er die beisitzer mit solchen oder andern worten anreden: Allerliebsten in Christo! Uf das ir mit frölichem, begirigem herzen entpfahent den zarten fronleichnam und rosenfarbes blut unsers seligmachers Jesu Christi, so demütigent eure herzen gegen Gott, bekennent im eure sünd und gebrechen mit herzlicher begir und sänen nach seiner göttlichen gnad und hilf! So will ich jetzt, euer erwölter priester, euch mitteilen die heiligen absolution und Gott für euch bitten. Der allmechtig, barmherzig Gott vergeb euch euer sünd! Und ich, us bevelch unsers Herren Jesu Christi an statt der heiligen kirchen, sag euch frei, ledig und los aller euer sünden in dem namen des Vaters und Suns und des Heiligen Geists. Amen. Dieweil ich aber auch beschwert bin mit mancherlei gebrechen, so bitten Gott treulich für mich, das ich disen seinen dienst im zu lobe, euch und mir zu trost und heil möge fleißig usrichten und volenden. Psalm 123: Unser hilf soll sein in dem namen des Herren, der himmel und erden erschaffen hat.

First the priest, or another, shall make an exhortation concerning the sacrament, or else say somewhat comfortable out of the holy Gospel, as the Spirit of God giveth it him, etc. Thereafter he may address them that sit by with such or other words: Dearly beloved in Christ! That ye may with joyful and desirous hearts receive the tender body and rose-coloured blood of our Saviour Jesus Christ, humble your hearts before God, confess unto him your sins and infirmities with hearty desire, and long after his divine grace and help! So will I now, your chosen priest, impart unto you the holy absolution, and pray God for you. The almighty and merciful God forgive you your sins! And I, by the commandment of our Lord Jesus Christ, in the stead of the holy Church, pronounce you free, quit and loosed of all your sins, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Amen. But forasmuch as I also am burdened with manifold infirmities, pray God faithfully for me, that I may diligently perform and finish this his service to his praise, to your comfort and mine, and to our salvation. Psalm 123: Our help shall be in the name of the Lord, who hath made heaven and earth.

Note.

- The absolution. Sehling's note: it is put together from the Indulgentiam at the beginning of the Mass and the absolution of private confession.
- The request for prayer. "Dieweil ich aber auch beschwert bin … so bitten Gott treulich für mich" is, in Sehling's words, a "free recasting of the Orate, fratres". The Roman request is ut meum ac vestrum sacrificium acceptabile fiat. Here the priest asks for help to perform "this his service".
- The versicle. Adiutorium nostrum in nomine Domini (Ps 124:8, numbered 123 in the Vulgate) belongs to the prayers at the foot of the altar.
- The 1524 edition drops the lay minister ("oder ein anderer") and the psalm verse, and heads the absolution "Die absolution".

7.2.2 Veni Sancte Spiritus and collect (in place of Veni sanctificator)

> Darnach soll der priester niderknien und sagen: Nu laßt uns beten; sprechend alle heimlich mit mir: Kumm, Heiliger Geist, erfülle die herzen deiner gläubigen und entzind in inen das feur deiner göttlichen liebe, der du durch manigfaltigkeit der zungen die völker der ganzen welt versamlet hast in einigkeit des glaubens. Alleluja. O Herr, allmechtiger Gott, hilf, das bei uns sei und wone dein Heiliger Geist, das er uns erleuchte und lern alle warheit, beschütze und sterke in aller widerwertigkeit, durch Christum, unsern Herren! Amen.

Thereafter the priest shall kneel down and say: Now let us pray; say ye all secretly with me: Come, Holy Ghost, fill the hearts of thy faithful, and kindle in them the fire of thy divine love, who through the diversity of tongues hast gathered the peoples of the whole world in the unity of the faith. Alleluia. O Lord, almighty God, grant that thy Holy Ghost may be and dwell with us, that he may enlighten us and teach us all truth, and defend and strengthen us in all adversity; through Christ our Lord! Amen.

Note.

- The antiphon. This is the Whitsun Vigil antiphon Veni, Sancte Spiritus, reple tuorum corda fidelium. Sehling notes that the diocese of Augsburg prayed it in the Mass in place of the offertory prayer Veni, sanctificator. The rubric keeps the posture of the offertory prayers (kneeling, "heimlich") but has the whole congregation say them.
- The collect. This is not a Roman offertory prayer. It resembles the Whitsuntide collect Adsit nobis, quaesumus, Domine, virtus Spiritus Sancti … et ab omnibus tueatur adversis, with "lern alle warheit" from John 16:13. The same collect opens the Bremen (§7.9) and Kiel (§7.11) Masses.

7.2.3 Preface and Sanctus

> Prefation oder vorred der meß: Erhebt euer herzen zu Gott und laßt uns danksagen Gott unserm Herren; denn das ist billich und recht! Ja, warlich ist es billich und recht, auch heilsam, das wir an aller orten und zu aller zeit dir, Herr, heiliger Vater, allmechtiger, ewiger Gott, danksagen durch Christum, unsern Herren, durch welchen alle engel und die himmelischen krefte anbeten, eeren und loben dein herrliche majestat. Mit denselbigen, bitten wir, wöllest zulassen und annemen unsere stimm, das wir dich auch loben und sprechen on ende: Sanctus: Heiliger, heiliger, heiliger Herre Gott Sabaoth; voll seind himmel und erd deiner herlichkeit. Osanna in den höchsten! Gebenedeit sei, der da kompt in dem namen des Herren. Glück und heil in den höchsten!

The Preface, or foreword of the Mass: Lift up your hearts unto God, and let us give thanks unto God our Lord; for that is meet and right! Yea, verily it is meet and right, and also wholesome, that we should in all places and at all times give thanks unto thee, O Lord, holy Father, almighty, everlasting God, through Christ our Lord, through whom all angels and the heavenly powers worship, honour and praise thy glorious majesty. With the same, we beseech thee, vouchsafe to admit and receive our voice, that we also may praise thee and say without end: Sanctus: Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Sabaoth; heaven and earth are full of thy glory. Hosanna in the highest! Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord. Luck and salvation in the highest!

Note.

- The dialogue. It is reduced to the priest's words, with the responses run in: Sursum corda … Gratias agamus … Dignum et iustum est.
- The Preface. This is the common Preface (Vere dignum … per Christum Dominum nostrum. Per quem maiestatem tuam laudant Angeli, adorant Dominationes … cum quibus et nostras voces ut admitti iubeas deprecamur). The ranks of angels are merged into "alle engel und die himmelischen krefte".
- The Sanctus. The second Hosanna is rendered "Glück und heil" (Ps 118:25, "O Lord, send now prosperity").

7.2.4 Quam oblationem and Qui pridie

> Nun hebt sich erst die evangelisch meß an. O allergütigister Vater, barmherziger, ewiger Gott, hilf, das dises brot und der wein uns werde und sei der warhaftig leib und das unschuldig blut deines allerliebsten Suns, unsers Herren Jesu Christi, welcher an dem tag vor seinem leiden nam das brot in seine heiligen hende, sah auf gen himmel zu dir, seinem allmechtigen Vater, saget dank, segnet und brach das brot und gab es seinen jüngern sprechende: Nemet hin und essent! Das ist mein leib, der für euch geben wirt. Desgleichen nach dem obentmal, nam er den kelch in sein heilige hend, danket, segnet und gab in seinen jüngern und sprach: Nement hin und trinkent alle daraus! Das ist der kelch des neuen und ewigen testaments in meinem blut, das für euch und für vil vergossen wirt zu vergebung der sünden. Als oft ir das tut, so tuts in meiner gedechtnis!

Here beginneth first the evangelical Mass. O most gracious Father, merciful, everlasting God, grant that this bread and the wine may become and be unto us the true body and the innocent blood of thy most dear Son, our Lord Jesus Christ; who on the day before his passion took the bread into his holy hands, looked up to heaven unto thee, his almighty Father, gave thanks, blessed, and brake the bread, and gave it to his disciples, saying: Take, and eat! This is my body, which is given for you. Likewise after the supper he took the cup into his holy hands, gave thanks, blessed, and gave it to his disciples, and said: Take, and drink ye all of it! This is the cup of the new and everlasting testament in my blood, which is shed for you and for many for the remission of sins. As oft as ye do this, do it in remembrance of me!

Note.

- The rubric. "Nun hebt sich erst die evangelisch meß an": everything before is preparation. The Canon proper begins here, with the one Canon prayer that is kept.
- The recast Quam oblationem. Sehling calls it "the prayer after the conclusion of the Canon prayer Quam oblationem". The Roman text is Quam oblationem tu, Deus, in omnibus, quaesumus, benedictam, adscriptam, ratam, rationabilem acceptabilemque facere digneris: ut nobis Corpus et Sanguis fiat dilectissimi Filii tui Domini nostri Iesu Christi. Kantz keeps the petition ut nobis … fiat and the superlative dilectissimi. He drops the oblation and its five adjectives. The object becomes "dises brot und der wein".
- Qui pridie keeps elevatis oculis in caelum ad te Deum Patrem suum omnipotentem ("sah auf gen himmel zu dir, seinem allmechtigen Vater"), both benedixit, and novi et aeterni testamenti. It drops mysterium fidei.
  - "für euch und für vil" is pro vobis et pro multis.
  - "Als oft ir das tut, so tuts in meiner gedechtnis" is Haec quotiescumque feceritis, in mei memoriam facietis.
- The 1524 edition has "nachtmal" for "obentmal", and "in sein eerwirdigen hende, saget aber dank, segnet ihn" (venerabiles manus).

7.2.5 Our Father with the conclusion of the embolism; Agnus Dei; Fili Dei vivi

> Laßt uns beten: Vater unser, der du bist im himmel, geheiliget werd dein nam! Zukumm dein reich! Dein will der werd als im himmel und auf der erd! Unser täglich brot gib uns heut und vergib uns unser schuld, als wir vergeben unsern schuldigern! Und für uns nit in versuchung, sonder erlöse uns von übel! Durch unsern Herren Jesum, deinen Sun, welcher > mit dir und dem Heiligen Geist, ein warer Gott, lebt und herrscht in ewigkeit. Amen. Agnus Dei: O du lamb Gottes, der du tregst die sünd der welt, erbarm dich unser und gib uns deinen frid! Amen. Ein andechtigs gebet vor der entpfahung des sakraments: O Herr Jesu Christe, du ewigs wort des Vaters, du Heiland der welt, du warer, lebendiger Gott und mensch, erlös uns durch disen deinen heiligen fronleichnam und rosenvarbes blut von allen sünden! Hilf, das wir erfüllen deine gebot zu aller zeit und von dir nit gescheiden werden in ewigkeit! Amen.

Let us pray: Our Father, which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name! Thy kingdom come! Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth! Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors! And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil! Through our Lord Jesus, thy Son, who with thee and the Holy Ghost, one true God, liveth and reigneth for ever. Amen. Agnus Dei: O thou Lamb of God, that bearest the sin of the world, have mercy upon us and give us thy peace! Amen. A devout prayer before the receiving of the sacrament: O Lord Jesu Christ, thou everlasting Word of the Father, thou Saviour of the world, thou true, living God and man, deliver us by this thy holy body and rose-coloured blood from all sins! Help us that we may fulfil thy commandments at all times, and never be parted from thee for ever! Amen.

Note.

- The end of the embolism. As at Worms (§7.6.10; Moderate Reformed), the Our Father runs straight into the conclusion of Libera nos, quaesumus ("Per eundem Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum, Filium tuum, qui tecum vivit et regnat in unitate Spiritus Sancti Deus"). The body of the embolism is gone.
- The fraction, in the 1524 edition only. The 1524 edition adds the doxology "denn dein ist das reich und die kraft und die herligkeit in ewigkeit. Amen." It then adds a rubric before the conclusion:

  > Hie neme der priester das brot und breche es, so vil ers bedarf, und sprech:

  Here let the priest take the bread and break it, as much as he needeth, and say:

  - Where the rubric falls. Sehling's note 7 points out that the Roman fraction came at these same words, at the end of the embolism. There the priest broke the host in three and dropped one piece into the chalice. In 1524 the conclusion "Durch unsern Herren …" stands isolated after the doxology's Amen, so the breaking marks the old place.
  - Was it new in 1524? Sehling judges (notes 7–9) that the 1522 edition did not know the fraction. There the priest shows "ein hostien", any host, while in 1524 he shows "die", the host just broken.
  - No commixture. Neither edition drops a piece into the cup.
- The Agnus Dei. It is sung once, with dona nobis pacem.
- Fili Dei vivi*. The prayer before communion is an abridged Domine Iesu Christe, Fili Dei vivi … libera me per hoc sacrosanctum Corpus et Sanguinem tuum ab omnibus iniquitatibus meis et universis malis: et fac me tuis semper inhaerere mandatis, et a te numquam separari permittas.

  - The opening clause (qui ex voluntate Patris …) gives way to a string of titles.
  - The prayer is plural throughout.
  - The 1524 edition heads it "Oratio".

7.2.6 Communion, with the custodiat and Calicem salutaris

> Nach disem gebet entpfahe der priester das sakrament, ist er anders geschickt darzu, und nem darnach ein hostien in die hand, zeige oder weise die den communicanten und sprech also: Secht, allerliebsten, das ist warlich der heilig leichnam unsers Herren Jesu Christi, der für euch gelitten hat den bittern tod. Nement hin und essent in, das er euch speis, neer und beware in das ewig leben! Amen. Der frid sei mit euch allen! So er sie nu alle communiciert hat mit dem heiligen fronleichnam Christi, sprech er also: Laßt uns auch trinken den kelch des heils und anrufen den namen unsers Herren! Und wenn er getrunken hat, soll er sich mit dem kelch oder becher zu inen keren und also sprechen: Secht, das ist warlich der teur schatz des kostbarlichen bluts unsers Herren Jesu Christi, damit ir erkauft seit. Nement hin und teilents miteinander zu abwäschung euer sünden!

After this prayer let the priest receive the sacrament, if he be otherwise prepared thereto, and then take a host in his hand, show or point it to the communicants, and say thus: Behold, dearly beloved, this is verily the holy body of our Lord Jesus Christ, which suffered for you the bitter death. Take and eat it, that it may feed, nourish and preserve you unto everlasting life! Amen. Peace be with you all! When he hath now communicated them all with the holy body of Christ, let him say thus: Let us also drink the cup of salvation and call upon the name of our Lord! And when he hath drunk, he shall turn him to them with the chalice or cup, and say thus: Behold, this is verily the precious treasure of the costly blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, wherewith ye are bought. Take it, and divide it among you, to the washing away of your sins!

Note.

- "Secht …". The showing of the host with "Behold" takes the place of the elevation (Sehling: "Die Elevation, die Kantz also vom Konsekrationsakt in die Kommunion verlegt hat"). It also recalls the Ecce Agnus Dei of the late-medieval communion of the people.
- "… das er euch speis, neer und beware in das ewig leben" is the custodiat formula (Corpus Domini nostri Iesu Christi custodiat animam tuam in vitam aeternam), spoken to all at once.
- "Der frid sei mit euch allen". The Pax Domini has moved from before the Agnus Dei to the communion. The 1524 edition makes it "Der frid sei mit dir!", said to each communicant.
- "Laßt uns auch trinken den kelch des heils …" is the priest's Calicem salutaris accipiam, et nomen Domini invocabo (Ps 116:13), from his prayers at the sumption. It is turned into a plural invitation.
- The cup. "teilents miteinander" echoes Luke 22:17.

7.2.7 Thanksgiving: Nunc dimittis, Te Deum, collects

> So das geschehen ist, soll der priester niderknien und danksagen: O Herr, nu laß im frid deine diener nach deinem wort; denn unsere augen haben gesehen dein Heiland, welchen du bereitet hast vor dem angesicht aller völker, ein liecht zu erleüchten die heiden und zu einer glori deins volks Israel. Dir sei lob, eer und dank, o du heilige, gebenedeite, herrliche dreivaltigkeit, Gott Vater, Sun und Heiliger Geist! Amen. Item zu danksagung mag man sprechen: Te Deum laudamus. Gott, dich loben wir; dich, Herr, bekennen wir. […] Nunc dimittis servum tuum, Domine, secundum verbum tuum in pace […]. Gloria Patri etc., sicut erat in principio et nunc et semper et in secula seculorum. Amen. O gütiger, barmherziger Got, ein sterk aller, die in dich hoffen, hilf, das wir also wandlen durch das zeitlich, uf das wir nit verlieren das ewig, durch Christum, unsern Herren. Amen. O du heilige dreivaltigkeit, laß dir wolgefallen unser lob und danksagung! Mach vest und stet das werk, das du in uns verbracht[!] hast! Hilf, das uns fruchtbar und fürderlich sei in das ewig leben! Amen.

When that is done, the priest shall kneel down and give thanks: O Lord, now lettest thou thy servants depart in peace according to thy word; for our eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all peoples, a light to lighten the Gentiles, and to be the glory of thy people Israel. Unto thee be praise, honour and thanks, O thou holy, blessed, glorious Trinity, God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost! Amen. Item, for thanksgiving one may say: Te Deum laudamus. We praise thee, O God; we acknowledge thee to be the Lord. […] Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word […]. Glory be to the Father, etc., as it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen. O gracious and merciful God, the strength of all that hope in thee, help us so to walk through things temporal that we lose not the things eternal; through Christ our Lord. Amen. O thou holy Trinity, let our praise and thanksgiving be well-pleasing unto thee! Make firm and steadfast the work which thou hast wrought in us! Grant that it may be fruitful and profitable unto us unto everlasting life! Amen.

Note.

- The Nunc dimittis. Made plural ("deine diener", "unsere augen"). Sehling notes it was among the priest's silent prayers at this point in some German churches.
- The first collect. Sehling identifies it as the collect of the third Sunday after Pentecost, Protector in te sperantium, Deus … ut sic transeamus per bona temporalia, ut non amittamus aeterna, not a postcommunion.
- The Trinity prayer is the Placeat. Sehling thought it "wohl von Kantz geschaffen". It is in fact the priest's last prayer of the Roman Mass, said before the blessing: Placeat tibi, sancta Trinitas, obsequium servitutis meae: et praesta, ut sacrificium, quod oculis tuae maiestatis indignus obtuli, tibi sit acceptabile, mihique et omnibus, pro quibus illud obtuli, sit, te miserante, propitiabile.
  - "laß dir wolgefallen unser lob und danksagung" is placeat tibi … obsequium.
  - The sacrifice offered becomes "das werk, das du in uns verbracht hast": God's work in us, not ours before him.
  - "fruchtbar und fürderlich … in das ewig leben" takes the place of propitiabile.
- What follows. The order ends by permitting the Latin Te Deum and the Magnificat "for thanksgiving". There is no blessing.

7.3 Wittenberg, Luther, Formula missae et communionis, 1523

Sehling 1, Martin Luther's Ordnungen Nr. 4, pp. 4–9 (eko.db doc 2; the database dates the document 1889, the year of Sehling's volume). The order is in Latin. It is included because it is the model the German Masses answer to. Brandenburg 1540 (§7.12) takes its Latin communion prayers from the permissions given here. The Nürnberg Latin order of 1524 (§7.7.1) takes its shortened Preface from it.

Luther states the rule first: everything that "sounds of oblation", with the whole Canon, is to go. What is "pure and holy" stays. The paragraphs below are numbered as in the print.

7.3.1 The rule, and the preparation of bread and wine

> Octavo, sequitur tota illa abominatio, cui servire coactum est quicquid in missa praecessit, unde et offertorium vocatur. Et abhinc omnia fere sonant ac olent oblationem. […] Proinde omnibus illis repudiatis quae oblationem sonant, cum universo canone, retineamus, quae pura et sancta sunt, ac sic missam nostram ordiamur. I. Sub symbolo vel post canonem apparetur panis et vinum ad benedictionem ritu solito, nisi quod nondum constitui mecum, miscendane sit aqua vino, quamquam huc inclino, ut merum potius vinum paretur absque aquae mixtura […]. Tamen contra libertatem non introducam legem superstitiosam.

Eighthly, there followeth all that abomination, to which everything that went before in the Mass was forced to serve, whence also it is called the offertory. And from here on almost everything soundeth and savoureth of oblation. […] Therefore, all those things being rejected which sound of oblation, together with the whole Canon, let us retain those things which are pure and holy, and so begin our Mass. I. During the Creed, or after the canon [sermon], let bread and wine be made ready for the blessing in the accustomed manner; save that I have not yet determined with myself whether water be to be mixed with the wine, though I incline to this, that pure wine rather be prepared without the mixture of water […]. Yet I will not bring in a superstitious law against liberty.

Note.

- "post canonem". This is Sehling's reading. The Weimar edition (WA 12, 211) reads post concionem, "after the sermon". That fits the paragraph before, which lets the vernacular sermon come after the Creed.
- What goes. The offertory prayers (Suscipe, sancte Pater; Offerimus tibi; Veni, sanctificator; Suscipe, sancta Trinitas), the Orate fratres, the Secret and the whole Canon, as all "sounding of oblation".
- What stays is set out in §§II–VIII below.

7.3.2 Preface, Verba, Sanctus with elevation

> II. Apparato pane et vino mox procedatur ad hunc modum: 'Dominus vobiscum', respon.: 'Et cum spiritu tuo'. 'Sursum corda', respon.: 'Habeamus ad dominum'. 'Gratias agamus domino deo nostro'. Respon.: 'dignum et iustum est. Vere dignum et iustum est, equum et salutare, nos tibi semper et ubique gratias agere, domine sancte, pater omnipotens, aeterne deus, per Christum dominum nostrum'. III. Deinde: 'Qui pridie quam pateretur, accepit panem gratias agens, fregit deditque discipulis suis dicens: Accipite, comedite, hoc est corpus meum, quod pro vobis datur. Similiter et calicem, postquam caenavit, dicens: Hic calix est novi testamenti in meo sanguine, qui pro vobis et pro multis effundetur in remissionem peccatorum. Haec quotiescunque feceritis, in mei memoriam faciatis.' Haec verba Christi velim modica post prefationem interposita pausa in eo tono vocis recitari, quo canitur alias oratio dominica in canone, ut a circumstantibus possit audiri, quamquam in his omnibus libertas sit piis mentibus, vel silenter vel palam ea verba recitare. IV. Finita benedictione Chorus cantet Sanctus et sub cantu Benedictus elevetur panis et calix, ritu hactenus servato, vel propter infirmos, qui hac repentina huius insignioris in missa ritus [mutatione] forte offendentur, praesertim ubi per conciones vernaculas docti fuerint, quid ea petatur elevatione.

II. The bread and wine being made ready, let him straightway proceed after this manner: "The Lord be with you"; answer, "And with thy spirit". "Lift up your hearts"; answer, "Let us lift them up unto the Lord". "Let us give thanks unto the Lord our God". Answer: "It is meet and right. It is very meet and right, fitting and wholesome, that we should at all times and in all places give thanks unto thee, O Lord, holy Father, almighty, everlasting God, through Christ our Lord". III. Then: "Who the day before he suffered took bread, giving thanks, brake it, and gave it to his disciples, saying: Take, eat; this is my body, which is given for you.

Likewise also the cup, after he had supped, saying: This cup is the new testament in my blood, which shall be shed for you and for many for the remission of sins. As oft as ye shall do these things, ye shall do them in remembrance of me." These words of Christ I would have recited, after a short pause interposed after the Preface, in that tone of voice in which the Lord's Prayer is otherwise sung in the Canon, so that they may be heard by them that stand about; although in all these things let godly minds have liberty to recite those words either silently or aloud. IV. The blessing being ended, let the choir sing the Sanctus, and during the singing of the Benedictus let the bread and cup be elevated after the rite hitherto kept, chiefly for the sake of the weak, who might perhaps be offended by a sudden change of this more notable rite in the Mass, especially where they have been taught by sermons in the vulgar tongue what is sought by that elevation.

Note.

- The Preface. It is cut off after per Christum Dominum nostrum. The Verba follow as a relative clause on Christum ("Qui pridie …"). This is the form Nürnberg took up in 1524 (§7.7.1) and the German orders of Volprecht (§7.7.2) and Döber (§7.8.2) translated.
- Qui pridie is reduced to the Gospel and Pauline wording.
  - Gone are in sanctas ac venerabiles manus suas, elevatis oculis, benedixit, aeterni and mysterium fidei.
  - "quod pro vobis datur" (Luke 22:19) and "hic calix est novi testamenti in meo sanguine" (1 Cor 11:25) come from Scripture, not the Missal.
- "benedictio". Luther calls the recitation of the Verba the "benedictio".
- The Sanctus and elevation. The Sanctus, which in the Roman Mass comes before the Canon, is moved after the Verba. The elevation is kept "ritu hactenus servato", during the Benedictus.

7.3.3 Our Father; no embolism, no fraction; the Peace as absolution

> V. Post haec legatur oratio dominica. Sic: 'Oremus. Preceptis salutaribus moniti etc.' omissa oratione sequenti: 'Libera nos quesumus', cum omnibus signis, quae fieri solent super hostiam et cum hostia super calicem, nec frangatur hostia nec in calicem misceatur. Sed statim post orationem dominicam dicatur: 'Pax domini etc.' quae est publica quaedam absolutio a peccatis communicantium, vox plane evangelica, annuncians remissionem peccatorum, unica illa et dignissima ad mensam domini preparatio, si fide apprehendatur, non secus atque ex ore Christi prolata. Unde vellem eam nunciari verso ad populum vultu, quemadmodum solent episcopi, quod unicum est vestigium episcoporum priscorum in nostris episcopis.

V. After these things let the Lord's Prayer be read, thus: "Let us pray. Taught by wholesome precepts, etc.", the prayer following, "Deliver us, we beseech thee", being omitted, with all the signs that are wont to be made over the host and with the host over the chalice; and let the host not be broken, nor mixed into the chalice. But straightway after the Lord's Prayer let there be said "The peace of the Lord, etc.", which is a kind of public absolution from the sins of the communicants, a voice plainly evangelical, announcing remission of sins, that one and most worthy preparation for the Lord's table, if it be laid hold on by faith, no otherwise than as spoken from the mouth of Christ. Wherefore I would have it announced with the face turned to the people, as bishops are wont to do, which is the only trace of the ancient bishops left in our bishops.

Note.

- The embolism (Libera nos, quaesumus, Domine, ab omnibus malis …) is struck out, with its signs of the cross made over the host and the chalice with a fragment.
- The fraction and commixture are forbidden. "nec frangatur hostia nec in calicem misceatur". Worms 1524 (Moderate Reformed) repeats this in German (§7.6.11). Of the evangelical orders in the corpus, only Kantz's second edition (1524, §7.2.5) and Müntzer's Allstedt order (§7.4.2; Radical Reformation) break the bread at this point.
- The Peace. Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum is reinterpreted as a public absolution. Worms (Moderate Reformed) and Brandenburg keep it in that sense.

7.3.4 Communion: Agnus Dei, Fili Dei vivi, custodiat

> VI. Deinde communicet tum sese, tum populum, interim cantetur Agnus dei. Quod si orationem illam: 'Domine Ihesu Christe, fili dei vivi, qui ex voluntate patris etc.' ante sumptionem orare voluerit, non male orabit, mutato solum numero singulari in pluralem, 'nostris' et 'nos' pro 'meis' et 'me'. Item et illam: 'Corpus domini etc. custodiat animam meam, vel tuam, in vitam aeternam'. Et 'sanguis domini nostri custodiat animam tuam in vitam aeternam'.

VI. Then let him communicate first himself, then the people; meanwhile let the Agnus Dei be sung. But if he will pray before the sumption that prayer, "O Lord Jesus Christ, Son of the living God, who by the will of the Father, etc.", he shall not pray amiss, only changing the singular number into the plural, "our" and "us" for "my" and "me". Likewise also that other: "The body of the Lord, etc., preserve my soul, or thy soul, unto life eternal". And "The blood of our Lord preserve thy soul unto life eternal".

Note.

- What is permitted. Of the three prayers before the priest's communion, only Domine Iesu Christe, Fili Dei vivi is allowed, and it is made plural. Domine Iesu Christe, qui dixisti and Perceptio corporis are not mentioned. Brandenburg 1540 nevertheless kept all three (§7.12.5).
- The custodiat. It serves both for the priest ("meam") and for each communicant ("tuam").
- The Agnus Dei. It is sung during communion, not before it.

7.3.5 Communion chant; Quod ore sumpsimus and Corpus tuum for the postcommunion;

Benedicamus; blessing

> VII. Si communionem cantare libet, cantetur. Sed loco complendae seu ultimae collectae, quia fere sacrificium sonant, legatur in eodem tono oratio illa: 'Quod ore sumpsimus, domine'. Poterit et illa legi: 'Corpus tuum, domine, quod sumpsimus etc.' mutato numero in pluralem. 'Qui vivis et regnas etc.' 'Dominus vobiscum etc.' Loco 'Ite missa' dicatur: 'Benedicamus domino', adiecto (ubi et quando placet) alleluia in suis melodiis. Vel ex vespertinis 'Benedicamus' mutuentur. VIII. Benedictio solita detur. Vel accipiatur illa Numeri 6. quam ipse dominus digessit, d.: 'Benedicat nos dominus et custodiat nos, ostendat nobis faciem suam et misereatur nostri, convertat dominus faciem suam ad nos et det nobis pacem.' Vel illa psal. 96.: 'Benedicat nos deus deus noster, benedicat nos deus et metuant eum omnes fines terrae. Amen.'

VII. If it please them to sing the communion, let it be sung. But in the place of the complenda or last collect, because they almost all sound of sacrifice, let that prayer be read in the same tone: "What we have taken with our mouth, O Lord". That other also may be read: "Thy body, O Lord, which we have received, etc.", the number being changed into the plural. "Who livest and reignest, etc." "The Lord be with you, etc." In the place of "Ite, missa est" let there be said "Let us bless the Lord", with Alleluia added (where and when it pleaseth) in its own melodies; or let the Benedicamus be borrowed from Vespers. VIII. Let the accustomed blessing be given. Or let that of Numbers 6 be taken, which the Lord himself appointed, saying: "The Lord bless us and keep us, show us his face and have mercy upon us; the Lord turn his face unto us and give us peace." Or that of Psalm 96 [67]: "God, even our own God, bless us; God bless us, and let all the ends of the earth fear him. Amen."

Note.

- The postcommunion. The variable postcommunions (complenda) are rejected because "they almost all sound of sacrifice". The two priest's prayers said at the ablutions take their place, read aloud in the collect tone:
  - Quod ore sumpsimus, Domine, pura mente capiamus, et de munere temporali fiat nobis remedium sempiternum;
  - Corpus tuum, Domine, quod sumpsi, et Sanguis, quem potavi, adhaereat visceribus meis …, made plural.

  Brandenburg 1540 and Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 kept both in Latin (§7.12.8, §7.14.8). Volprecht (§7.7.2) and Strasbourg (§7.5.1; Moderate Reformed) turned Quod ore into German.
- Benedicamus Domino replaces Ite, missa est.
- The blessing. Luther's use of Numbers 6 is the origin of the Aaronic blessing at the end of the Lutheran Mass.

7.3.6 The Deutsche Messe of 1526 (for comparison)

Luther's German Mass (Sehling 1, Nr. 8; doc 3) keeps none of the Canon or of the priest's prayers:

- In place of the Canon stands a public paraphrase of the Our Father, with an admonition to the communicants: "Nach der predigt sol folgen eine offentliche paraphrasis des vater unsers und vermanung an die so zum sacrament gehen wollen …".

- The Verba. Luther suggested giving the bread straight after the bread-word, "ehe man den kilch segenet", and the cup after the cup-word.
- The elevation is kept: "Das aufheben wollen wir nicht abthun sondern behalten, darumb das es fein mit dem deudschen sanctus stimmet …".
- No fraction, no Pax.
- The thanksgiving is a new collect, "Wir dancken dir, almechtiger herre gott, das du uns durch dise heilsame gabe hast erquicket …". Bugenhagen's orders (§7.15) and Brandenburg 1540 (§7.12.8) carry it.

This is why most Lutheran orders after 1526 have no Canon remnants. The orders in this file are those that, like the Formula missae, kept something of the old text.

7.4 Allstedt, Thomas Müntzer, Deutsch evangelisch Messe, 1524, and Ordnung des teutschen ampts, 1523/24

- The Mass. Deutsch evangelisch messze, etwan durch die Bebstischen pfaffen im latein zu grossem nachteil des Christen glaubens vor ein opffer gehandelt … Sehling 1, Nr. 46, pp. 497–503 (`eko.db` doc 51). It gives five Masses (Advent, Christmas, Passion, Easter, Whitsun) with their propers set to the old chant. The ordinary is printed in full with the first, the Advent Mass, on pp. 500–501. It is given here.
- The commentary. Ordnung und berechnunge des teutschen ampts zu Alstadt, 1523, printed at Allstedt 1524. Sehling 1, Nr. 47, pp. 504–506 (doc 52). It explains the Mass item by item and gives the rubrics the Mass itself lacks.

Müntzer was no Lutheran but a leader of the Radical Reformation; yet his German Mass is the most conservative in the corpus in wording. It keeps:

- the offertory chant, with the Secret's Per omnia saecula saeculorum;
- the full proper Preface;
- the Roman Qui pridie with mysterium fidei;
- the end of the embolism, with the fraction (per the Ordnung);
- Pax Domini.

His wording was taken over in the Lippe Mass (§7.10), the Kiel Low German Mass (§7.11) and, for the Preface dialogue, Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 (§7.13).

7.4.1 Offertory, Preface, Sanctus (Advent)

> O herr, zu dir hab ich erhaben meine sele; o gott, mein gott, auf dich vorlass ich mich und werd nit zu schanden, das mich meine feinde nicht bespotten, durch alle ewigkeit der ewigkeit. Amen. Der herre sei mit euch. Und mit deinem geiste. Unser herzen in die höe. Haben wir zu dem herren. Wir sagen dank dem herren, unserem gotte. Es ist wirdig und ist recht. Warlich, es ist billich und recht und ist heilsam, das wir dir, herr, o heiliger vater, almechtiger, ewiger got, allzeit und allenthalben danksagen. Dann du dein heilige menscheit von der junkfrauen Maria hast empfangen durch die umbschetigung des heilgen geistes, das sie mit unvorruckter keuscheit das ewige licht zur welt gebracht hat, Jesum Christum, unseren herren. Durch wilchen loben die engel dein herligkeit und ehr erbieten die engel, do du innen hirschest; es entsetzten sich die gewaltigen engel; dozu die himmel und der himmel krefte und die heiligen seraphin preisen dich on unterlass mit einmütiger freuden. Drumb bitten wir dich, o herr, das du woltest unsere stimmen mit in zu lassen, das wir dich mit warem bekentnis mügen loben one ende, sagende: Heilger, heilger, heilger herre gott Sabaoth. Himmel und erde seint erfullet mit deinem preise. Ozianna in dem höchsten. Gesegnet sei, der do kumpt im namen des herren. Ozianna in den höchsten.

O Lord, unto thee have I lifted up my soul; O God, my God, in thee I trust, and shall not be put to shame, that mine enemies mock me not; world without end. Amen. The Lord be with you. And with thy spirit. Our hearts on high. We have them unto the Lord. We give thanks unto the Lord our God. It is worthy and it is right. Verily it is meet and right and it is wholesome that we should at all times and in all places give thanks unto thee, O Lord, holy Father, almighty, everlasting God. For thou hast received thy holy manhood of the Virgin Mary by the overshadowing of the Holy Ghost, that she with unblemished chastity brought forth unto the world the everlasting light, Jesus Christ our Lord. Through whom the angels praise thy glory, and the angels in whom thou reignest do thee honour; the mighty angels tremble; and the heavens and the powers of the heavens and the holy seraphim praise thee without ceasing with one accord of joy. Therefore we beseech thee, O Lord, that thou wouldest let our voices be admitted with them, that we may praise thee with true confession without end, saying: Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Sabaoth. Heaven and earth are filled with thy praise. Hosanna in the highest. Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord. Hosanna in the highest.

Note.

- The offertory chant. "O herr, zu dir hab ich erhaben meine sele …" is the offertory chant of the first Sunday of Advent, Ad te, Domine, levavi animam meam: Deus meus, in te confido, non erubescam: neque irrideant me inimici mei (Ps 25:1–2). The Ordnung says "Wir halten kein opfer in der geheim gotis": the offertory prayers are gone, but not the chant.
- "durch alle ewigkeit der ewigkeit. Amen." This is Per omnia saecula saeculorum. Amen, the audible end of the silent Secret, which led into the Preface dialogue. The Secret itself is gone; its last words remain. The same place in Lippe (§7.10) has it as the first words of the "Prefatio", and Göttingen 1542 (§7.13) has "Gott sey preis von ewigkeit zu ewigkeit. Amen."
- The Preface is the Preface of the Blessed Virgin, not the Advent or Christmas Preface. Its text is Et te in [festivitate] beatae Mariae semper Virginis collaudare … Quae et Unigenitum tuum Sancti Spiritus obumbratione concepit: et virginitatis gloria permanente, lumen aeternum mundo effudit, Iesum Christum Dominum nostrum. Per quem maiestatem tuam laudant Angeli, adorant Dominationes, tremunt Potestates. Caeli caelorumque Virtutes, ac beata Seraphim, socia exsultatione concelebrant.
  - Müntzer takes out the praise of Mary. God himself becomes the subject: "du [hast] dein heilige menscheit … empfangen".
  - The Virgin's virginitatis gloria permanente becomes "mit unvorruckter keuscheit".
  - The ranks of angels are rendered one by one: Dominationes "die engel, do du innen hirschest"; tremunt Potestates "es entsetzten sich die gewaltigen engel".
- "mit warem bekentnis" is supplici confessione.

7.4.2 The Verba, the Our Father, the end of the embolism, the Peace, Agnus Dei

> Einen tag zuvorn, do Jesus wolte leiden, nam er das brot in seine heiligen hende und hub auf seine augen in himmel zu dir, gott seinem almechtigen vater, und sagte dir dank und gesegnete es und brach es und gab es seinen jüngern, sagende: Nempt hin und esset darvon. Das ist mein leichnam, der vor euch dargegeben wirt. Des selbigen gleichen, do man gessen hatte, nam er den kelch in seine heiligen wirdigen hende und sagete dir dank und gesegnete den und gab in seinen jüngern, sagende: Nempt hin und trinket all daraus. Dis ist der kilch meines blutes des neuen und ewigen bundes, ein geheimnis des glaubens, der vor euch und vor viel vorgossen wirt in vorgebunge der sunde. So oft ir dis thut, solt ir meiner dobei gedenken. Dorumb last uns alle bitten, wie uns Jesus Christus, der sohn gotes, hat geleret, sagende: Vater unser, der du bist in himmeln, geheiliget werde dein name, zu kum dein reich, dein will geschee als im himmel und auf erden. Unser teglich brot gib uns heute und vorlass uns unsere schulde, wie wir vorlassen unsern schuldigern. Und fur uns nicht in vorsuchunge, sondern erlöse uns von übel. Amen. Durch alle ewigkeit der ewigkeit. Amen. Der fride des herren sei allzeit mit euch. Und mit deinem geist. O lamp gotes, wilchs do tregt die sunde der welt, erbarm dich unser. O lamp gotes, wilchs do tregt die sunde der welt, gib uns deinen fride.

The day before, when Jesus would suffer, he took the bread into his holy hands, and lifted up his eyes to heaven unto thee, God, his almighty Father, and gave thanks unto thee, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to his disciples, saying: Take, and eat thereof. This is my body, which is given for you. In like manner, when they had eaten, he took the cup into his holy and worthy hands, and gave thanks unto thee, and blessed it, and gave it to his disciples, saying: Take, and drink ye all thereof. This is the cup of my blood of the new and everlasting covenant, a mystery of faith, which is shed for you and for many for the forgiveness of sins. As oft as ye do this, ye shall remember me thereby. Therefore let us all pray, as Jesus Christ, the Son of God, hath taught us, saying: Our Father, which art in the heavens, hallowed be thy name, thy kingdom come, thy will be done, as in heaven, so on earth. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. Amen. World without end. Amen. The peace of the Lord be alway with you. And with thy spirit. O Lamb of God, which beareth the sin of the world, have mercy upon us. O Lamb of God, which beareth the sin of the world, give us thy peace.

Note.

- The Verba are the Roman Qui pridie, not the Scriptural text. "Einen tag zuvorn, do Jesus wolte leiden" is Qui pridie quam pateretur. The following are all kept:

- in sanctas ac venerabiles manus suas ("in seine heiligen [wirdigen] hende");
- elevatis oculis in caelum ad te Deum Patrem suum omnipotentem ("hub auf seine augen in himmel zu dir, gott seinem almechtigen vater");
- tibi gratias agens ("sagte dir dank"), still addressed to the Father in the second person;
- benedixit ("gesegnete es");
- Accipite et manducate ex hoc omnes ("esset darvon");
- novi et aeterni testamenti ("des neuen und ewigen bundes");
- mysterium fidei ("ein geheimnis des glaubens");
- Haec quotiescumque feceritis, in mei memoriam facietis.

Only "der vor euch dargegeben wirt" (Luke 22:19) is added. The Ordnung (below) has the same text, with crosses at the two blessings.

- "Dorumb last uns alle bitten, wie uns Jesus Christus … hat geleret, sagende" is Oremus: Praeceptis salutaribus moniti, et divina institutione formati, audemus dicere.
- "Durch alle ewigkeit der ewigkeit. Amen." after the Our Father is Per omnia saecula saeculorum. Amen, the sung ending of the embolism Libera nos. The embolism is gone and its ending stays. The Ordnung puts the fraction here (§7.4.3).
- "Der fride des herren sei allzeit mit euch. Und mit deinem geist" is Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum. Et cum spiritu tuo, with the Roman response.
- The *Agnus Dei is printed twice in the Mass and three times in the Ordnung.

7.4.3 The Allstedt Ordnung on the Sacrament: Verba, elevation, fraction

> Zum neunten: So singet man die form der termung oder des abentessens im tone der prefation, lauts diser wort folgende: Einen tag zuvorn, do Jesus wolte leiden, nam er das brot in seine heiligen, wirdigen hende, und hub auf seine augen in himmel zu dir, got, seinem almechtigen vater, sagete dir danke und gesegnete ✠ das und brach es, und gab es seinen jugern, sagende: Nemet hin und esset all darvon. Elevando manu dicit: Das ist mein leichnam, der vor euch dargegeben wirt. Vertens se minister, accipiens calicem coram vulgo dicit: Desselbigen gleichen do man gessen hatte, nam er den kelch in seine heiligen, wirdigen hende, und sagete dir dank, und gesegnete ✠ den und gab in seinen jugern, sagende: Dis ist der kelch meines blutes, des neuen und ewigen testamentes, ein geheim des glaubens, der vor euch und vor viel vorgossen wirt in vorzeihunge der sunde. Rursus vertens se ad altare dicit: So oft und dick ir das thut, solt ir meiner darbei gedenken etc. Zum zehenden. Balt nach der elevation singet man im selben ton flux drauf also: Darumb last uns alle bitten, wie uns Jesus Christus, der warhaftig son gotis, hat geleret, sagende: Vater unser, der du bist in himmeln etc.; und alles volk singet drauf: Amen. Darnach wirt es stille, ein wenig, athem zu holen, unter wilcher zeit der priester der communicanten halben das sacrament teilet und singet: Durch alle ewigkeit der ewigkeit. So antwort das gemein volk: Amen. Der priester wider: Der fride des herren sei alzeit mit euch. So antwort das volk: Und mit deinem geist. Bald nach disem, auf das ein geheim gotis, der tod und auferstehung Christi betrachtet werde, das selbe weiter zu erkleren, singet alles volk das gezeugnis Joannis des teufers Christi zu dreimal: O lamb gottes, wilchs du weg nimpst die sunde der welt etc.; do zu singt man aus dem evangelio Luce 17: Erbarme dich unser, und zum letzten: Gib uns deinen fride. […] Auf solchen glauben gibt man dann den leuten das hochwirdigste sacrament unter dem agnus dei, on die bepstische heuchlische beicht.

Ninthly: Then is sung the form of the consecration, or of the supper, in the tone of the Preface, according to these words following: The day before, when Jesus would suffer, he took the bread into his holy and worthy hands, and lifted up his eyes to heaven unto thee, God, his almighty Father, gave thanks unto thee, and blessed ✠ it, and brake it, and gave it to his disciples, saying: Take, and eat ye all thereof. Lifting it up with his hand he saith: This is my body, which is given for you. The minister turning, and taking the cup, saith before the people: In like manner, when they had eaten, he took the cup into his holy and worthy hands, and gave thanks unto thee, and blessed ✠ it, and gave it to his disciples, saying: This is the cup of my blood, of the new and everlasting testament, a mystery of faith, which is shed for you and for many for the forgiveness of sins. Turning again to the altar he saith: As oft and often as ye do this, ye shall remember me thereby, etc. Tenthly. Soon after the elevation one singeth straightway in the same tone thus: Therefore let us all pray, as Jesus Christ, the true Son of God, hath taught us, saying: Our Father, which art in the heavens, etc.; and all the people sing thereupon: Amen. Thereafter it becometh still a little while, to take breath, during which time the priest divideth the sacrament for the sake of the communicants, and singeth: World without end. Then the common people answer: Amen. The priest again: The peace of the Lord be alway with you. Then the people answer: And with thy spirit. Soon after this, that a mystery of God, the death and resurrection of Christ, may be considered, and to explain the same further, all the people sing the witness of John the Baptist of Christ three times: O Lamb of God, which takest away the sin of the world, etc.; thereto is sung out of the Gospel, Luke 17: Have mercy upon us; and at the last: Give us thy peace. […] Upon such faith the people are then given the most worthy sacrament under the Agnus Dei, without the popish hypocritical confession.

Note.

- The fraction. "unter wilcher zeit der priester der communicanten halben das sacrament teilet und singet: Durch alle ewigkeit der ewigkeit". This is exactly the Roman place and manner: the priest broke the host during the last words of the embolism and sang Per omnia saecula saeculorum over the broken host before the Pax.
  - The reason is new. The priest breaks "der communicanten halben", for the sake of the communicants, to share the bread. It is not a rite of the Mass for its own sake.
  - No commixture is mentioned.
  - Luther had forbidden the fraction in the same year (§7.3.3).
- "termung". This is Müntzer's word for the consecration ("die wort der termung"; "die consecration ein termung, wilche nicht allein von einem, sonder durch die ganze vorsamlete gemein geschicht"). Sehling does not gloss it.
- The elevation. The bread is elevated at the bread-word ("Elevando manu"). The cup is shown to the people ("coram vulgo").
- Communion is given during the Agnus Dei, "on die bepstische heuchlische beicht". The Ordnung adds that after communion "sagt man got dank uber das volk und gesegnet den herrn etc.": the postcommunion and the Benedicamus (§7.4.4).

7.4.4 Postcommunion and Benedicamus (Advent Mass)

> O herr gott, steh hart bei uns, das wir von unsern greulichen lastern mügen abzichtung thun, nach dem wir uns durch den geist Christi, deines sohnes, mit dir unwiderruflich vorbunden haben durch dis heilige zeichen seines zarten fleischs und teuren blutes, der mit dir lebet und regiret in einigkeit des heiligen geistes etc. Last uns gesegnen den herren. Gott sei ewiglich dank.

O Lord God, stand hard by us, that we may make renunciation of our grievous vices, forasmuch as we have bound ourselves irrevocably unto thee through the spirit of Christ, thy Son, by this holy sign of his tender flesh and precious blood; who with thee liveth and reigneth in the unity of the Holy Ghost, etc. Let us bless the Lord. Thanks be to God for ever.

Note.

- The postcommunion. It is not a Roman text. The sacrament as a "heiliges zeichen" of a covenant bond fits Müntzer's teaching. "Zart fleisch und teures blut" are the vocabulary of late-medieval eucharistic devotion (compare Kantz's "zarten fronleichnam und rosenfarbes blut", §7.2.1).
- Benedicamus Domino / Deo gratias replaces Ite, missa est, as in the Formula missae.
- The Whitsun postcommunion. The other Masses have their own postcommunions. The Whitsun one ("O herr vorlei uns die gnad des heiligen geists, auf das der thau deiner güte, unsern grund des herzens in seiner besprengung fruchtbar mache", Sehling 1, 504) renders the Roman Whitsun postcommunion Sancti Spiritus, Domine, corda nostra mundet infusio: et sui roris intima aspersione fecundet. Calenberg-Göttingen 1542 took it over (§7.13.4).

7.5 Strasbourg, the early German Masses, 1524–1525

Sehling 20, Straßburg, Nr. 3 "Die frühen Agenden", pp. 120–162 (`eko.db` doc 1279). These are Moderate Reformed orders: Strasbourg's Reformation under Bucer and Capito stood between Wittenberg and Zurich until the Interim. Sehling prints six forms:

	Form	Pages
a	Theobald (Diebold) Schwarz's manuscript agenda, "Anfang der evangelischen meß", 1524	120–123

	Form	Pages
b	Teutsche Meß und Tauff, wie sye yetzund zu Straßburg gehalten werden, 1524	130–134
c	Ordenung und inhalt Teutscher Mess, Augsburg reprint, 1524	135
d	Teutsch Kirchenampt mit lobgsengen, 1524/25	136–141
e	Ordnung des Herren Nachtmal, so man die mesß nennet, 1525	142–150
f	Straßburger kirchen ampt, 1525	151–162

The Worms Mass (§7.6) is the Strasbourg Mass of 1524 in use at Worms. Its Canon prayers (Te igitur to Supplices) are not in Schwarz's text. A later hand added one of them, the Unde et memores, to the manuscript, along with mysterium fidei (noted in §7.5.1). Döber took his optional intercession from Strasbourg (§7.8.11).

Across these six forms the Canon is replaced step by step:

- a–d: a single intercession in the place of Te igitur, with the Verba and a short prayer after the elevation.
- e (1525): one long prayer "anstatt des Canon" after a shortened common Preface and Sanctus. The Verba are read afterwards as a lesson, and there is no elevation.
- f: the same prayer, revised, with no Preface or Sanctus at all.

7.5.1 Schwarz's Mass, 1524 (form a)

> Ad populum versus dicat: Lieben brüder und schwestern, bitten Gott, den vatter, durch unsern hernn Jesum Christum, das er uns den heiligen geist, den tröster, zuschicke, das er mache unser leib zu eim lebendigen, heiligen, wolgefalligen opfer, das do ist der vernunfftig gotts dienst, der Gott gefelt. Das beschehe uns allen, Amen. Versus populum adhuc stans dicat: Der herr sey mit euch. Prefatio Erhebt euwere hertzenn. Sagen danck dem herren, unserem Gott. Es geburt sich furwor und ist billich, recht und heilsam, das wir dir alweg an allen orten danck sagen. O herr, heiliger, almechtiger vatter, ewiger Gott, der du unser heil durch das holtz des creutzs verschafft hast, uff das das leben von solchem keme, von welchem der todt uffgangen ist, und uff das der feyndt, so durch das holtz übertrettung uns alle in Adam überwunden hatt, wider uß gehorsam, so am holtz geleistet ist, bestritten wurde, durch Christum Jesum, unsern hern, durch welches maiestat und herlichkeyt dich die engel und alle hymmelsche ritterschafft loben, mit glichem frolocken samenthafft ryemen und preysen, zu welchen du auch unsere stymmen annemen wöllest, bitten wir mit undertheniger bekantnuß und sagen: Sanctus Sanctus. Heiliger, heiliger herr, Gott der herscharen, voll synd die hymmel und erden von deiner herlichkeyt. Ach, mach uns selig in der höhe. Benedictus Er ist zu loben, der do kumpt im namen des herren. Ach, selige uns in der höhe.

Turned toward the people let him say: Dear brethren and sisters, pray God the Father, through our Lord Jesus Christ, that he send us the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, that he may make our bodies a living, holy, well-pleasing sacrifice, which is the reasonable service of God that pleaseth God. May this befall us all, Amen. Toward the people, still standing, let him say: The Lord be with you. The Preface Lift up your hearts. Let us give thanks unto the Lord our God. It becometh us truly, and is meet, right and wholesome, that we should alway and in all places give thanks unto thee, O Lord, holy, almighty Father, everlasting God, who hast wrought our salvation through the wood of the cross, that life might come from thence whence death arose, and that the enemy who by the transgression of the tree had overcome us all in Adam might be vanquished again by the obedience rendered on the tree; through Christ Jesus our Lord, through whose majesty and glory the angels and all the heavenly host praise thee, and together with like exultation extol and magnify thee; with whom we pray thee to receive our voices also, with humble confession, saying: Sanctus Sanctus. Holy, holy Lord, God of hosts, the heavens and earth are full of thy glory. Ah, save us in the highest. Benedictus Praised be he that cometh in the name of the Lord. Ah, save us in the highest.

Note.

- The bidding replaces the Orate fratres. The Roman request that "my sacrifice and yours may be acceptable" becomes a prayer for the Spirit, who makes "our bodies" the sacrifice (Rom 12:1). The only sacrifice named is that of the worshippers.
- The Preface is the Preface of the Cross (Passiontide): qui salutem humani generis in ligno Crucis constituisti: ut unde mors oriebatur, inde vita resurgeret: et qui in ligno vincebat, in ligno quoque vinceretur: per Christum Dominum nostrum. Per quem maiestatem tuam laudant Angeli …. Form b prints further proper Prefaces (Christmas, Epiphany, Easter, Ascension, Whitsun) "for when thou hast read … Ewiger Gott".

- The Sanctus. "Ach, mach uns selig" and "Ach, selige uns" translate Hosanna.

> Laventur manus. Tacite. Deinde stans per modum orantis: Levatis, si placet, manibus: Almechtiger, barmhertziger vatter, die weil dein sun, unser herr Jesus, zugesagt hatt, was wir bitten in synem namen, das werdest du uns geweren, und zu dem, dyweil dein geist auch bevolhen hatt, das wir fur unser oberkeyt bitten sollen, bitten wir von hertzen, du wollest die gemütter des keysers, der fursten und herren, vorab unser hern und öberen eins ersamen raths, zu erkantnuß dyner guthe und des evangelions bewegen, auch das du deynem sun durch den heiligen geist underthenig machest alle volcker, uff das sie selbs willigk seyn verheissung erkennen, annemen und behutten. Und vor ab disser gemeyn verleyhe, das sie zuneme in erkantnuß des evangelions und seynes sussen jochs und gemachsamen burden. Dyweyl nun, almechtiger, ewiger Gott, geliebter und barmhertziger vatter, Welcher am nechsten tag vor seym lyden das brott nam in sein heilige hend und dir, Gott, seynem hymmelschen vatter, dancksaget, segnets, brachs und gabs seynen jungern und sprach: Nemmet hien und essend. Das ist meyn lyb, der fur euch geben wurt. Ad calicem: Des glichen noch dem nachtmal nam er den kelch in sein heilige hende und danckt und sprach: Nement hien und trinckent alle daruß. Das ist der kelch meins bluts, des neuwen und ewigen testaments, das fur euch und vil vergossen wurt zu vergebung der sunden. Elevatio calicis: Als offt ir das thunt, so thut es in meyner gedechtnuß.

Let the hands be washed. Silently. Then standing in the manner of one praying: With hands lifted up, if it please: Almighty, merciful Father, forasmuch as thy Son, our Lord Jesus, hath promised that whatsoever we ask in his name thou wilt grant us; and moreover, forasmuch as thy Spirit also hath commanded that we should pray for our rulers: we pray thee from our hearts that thou wouldest move the minds of the emperor, the princes and lords, and first of all of our lords and superiors of the honourable Council, to the knowledge of thy goodness and of the Gospel; and also that thou wouldest make all peoples subject to thy Son through the Holy Ghost, that they themselves may willingly know, receive and keep his promise. And above all grant unto this congregation that it may increase in the knowledge of the Gospel and of his sweet yoke and easy burden. Forasmuch now, almighty, everlasting God, beloved and merciful Father, — Who on the next day before his passion took the bread into his holy hands, and gave thanks unto thee, God, his heavenly Father, blessed it, brake it, and gave it to his disciples, and said: Take, and eat. This is my body, which shall be given for you. At the cup: Likewise after the supper he took the cup into his holy hands, and gave thanks, and said: Take, and drink ye all thereof. This is the cup of my blood, of the new and everlasting testament, which shall be shed for you and many for the forgiveness of sins. The elevation of the cup: As oft as ye do this, do it in remembrance of me.

Note.

- The lavabo. "Laventur manus. Tacite" keeps the priest's washing of hands from the offertory, moved to after the Sanctus.
- The posture. "Levatis … manibus", "per modum orantis": the priest stands with raised hands, as for the Canon.
- The intercession replaces Te igitur. It stands where Te igitur stood, and like Te igitur it prays for the Church and its rulers, with emperor and council in place of pope and bishop.
  - It breaks off at "Dyweyl nun, almechtiger, ewiger Gott, geliebter und barmhertziger vatter," and the relative "Welcher" of Qui pridie follows. The sentence is left unfinished in the manuscript. A second hand added a continuation (Sehling's apparatus q, later struck out): "O aller gnedigster vatter, dein einiger sun … welche du der welt geben hast durch Christum Jesum, unsern herren." This is the germ of the long 1525 prayer (§7.5.2).
  - Döber prints the same intercession as an option "nach der prefation oder für das Sanctus" (§7.8.11). Form d calls it "Almechtiger, barmhertziger vatter, Dieweil dein sun …".
- Qui pridie keeps "am nechsten tag vor seym lyden" (pridie quam pateretur), "segnets" (benedixit) and novi et aeterni testamenti.
  - It adds "der fur euch geben wurt" (1 Cor 11:24).
  - A later hand adds after the cup-word "Die heimlikeit des gloubens", mysterium fidei.
  - The bread is not elevated. The cup is elevated at Haec quotiescumque.
- Form b's rubrics. Form b marks this passage "Anfang der rechten, woren mess" and, after it, "Ende der mess oder des nachtmals Christi, dann vor- und nachgeende wort seind alle zuo bewegung und zuo erfrischen den glauben und nit als hauptstuck der mess ingefürt". That is: only the Verba are the Mass. All that stands before and after is there to move and refresh faith, and may be changed or left out.

> Post elevationem Wie groß ist dein güthe, das du uns on allen unsern verdienst die sund nit allein verzigen hast, sonder uns zu einer versicherung verlossen den leib und blut unsers herren Jesu Christi under dem brot und weyn. Wie dan sonst alle andere verheissungen du alwegen mit eusserlichen zeichen betzeugt hast. Darumb haben wir itzundt grosse, unwidertreibliche sicherheyt deiner gnaden und wissen, das wir dein kinder sind, dein erben und miterben Christi, und mögen frey betten, wie uns dein eingeborner sun gelernet hat, und sagen: Vatter unser, der du bist in dem hymelen, geheiliget werd dein nam. Zu kum dein rych. Dein wil geschehe, als im hymmel und uff erden. Unser teglich brot gib uns heut. Und vergib uns unsere schuld, also und wir vergeben unsern schuldigern. Und nit infure uns in versuchung, sonder erlöse uns vom ubel, Amen. Herr, erlöße uns von allen sichtbaren und unsichtbaren feinden, von dem teuffel, der welt, vor unserm eignen fleisch, durch Christum Jesum, unsern hern, Amen. Agnus dei Du lemblin Gottes, der du hiennymbst die sund der welt, erbarm dich unser. Du lemblin Gottes, verlyhe uns den friden.

After the elevation How great is thy goodness, that without any merit of ours thou hast not only forgiven us our sins, but hast left us for an assurance the body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ under the bread and wine; as thou hast alway witnessed all other promises besides with outward signs. Therefore have we now great and irresistible assurance of thy grace, and know that we are thy children, thine heirs and joint-heirs with Christ, and may freely pray, as thine only-begotten Son hath taught us, and say: Our Father, which art in the heavens, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so on earth. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, even as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil, Amen. Lord, deliver us from all enemies visible and invisible, from the devil, the world, and from our own flesh; through Christ Jesus our Lord, Amen. Agnus Dei Thou Lamb of God, that takest away the sin of the world, have mercy upon us. Thou Lamb of God, grant us peace.

Note.

- "Post elevationem". The prayer stands where Unde et memores stood, after the consecration. It thanks God for the body and blood left "under the bread and wine" as a pledge, and leads into the Our Father like Praeceptis salutaribus ("mögen frey betten" is audemus dicere).
- The later hand at Strasbourg. At this point it wrote into the margin the German Unde et memores that Worms prints: "Des halben, here, wier, dine diener, bedrachten des selbigen dines sünes … liden und sterben, ufferstendnis von der helle und auch die erlich uffart zu den himlen diner götlichen maiestat, da mit anbietten unser diemiettiges gebet, daruf du mit genaedigen heitteren augen schauen …" (compare §7.6.8).
  - It also corrected "den leib und blut" to "die gedechtniß des leibs und blut", and "under" to "in".
  - It added the doxology to the Our Father.
- The embolism. "Herr, erlöße uns von allen sichtbaren und unsichtbaren feinden …" is the embolism reduced to one line. Döber has the same line (§7.8.5), and Sehling calls it there "Rest des Embolismus". There is no fraction.

> Adhortatio ad populum brevis. Communicatio Laßt unß bitten: Herr Jesu Christe, du sun des lebendigen Gotts, der du uß vetterlichem willen und mitwürckung des heiligen geists durch dein todt die welt zum leben bracht hast, erlöße uns durch dißen deinen heyligen leib und blut von allen unsern ungerechtigkeiten und boßheyten und verlyhe, das wir alweg gehorsamen deinen gebotten und von dir nyemer ewigklich abgesundert werden, Amen. Complenda Laßt uns bitten: Das wir mit mund haben zu uns genomen, verlyhe uns, herr, uff das wir dasselbig mit reynem gemüt annemen, und das uns von der zeytlichen goben werde eyne ewige artzenyg, durch Christum Jesum, unsern herrn, Amen. Vel aliam aliquam, que Christiana videtur. Ad populum: Der herr sey mit euch. Benedictio Der segen Gott, des vatters ✠ und des suns ✠ und des heiligen geists ✠, sey mit uns und bleib alweg, Amen.

A short exhortation to the people. The communion Let us pray: Lord Jesu Christ, thou Son of the living God, who by the Father's will and the working of the Holy Ghost hast through thy death brought the world to life: deliver us by this thy holy body and blood from all our iniquities and wickednesses, and grant that we may alway obey thy commandments, and never for ever be separated from thee, Amen. The complenda Let us pray: What we have taken to us with the mouth, grant us, Lord, that we may receive the same with a pure mind, and that of the temporal gift there may be made unto us an everlasting medicine; through Christ Jesus our Lord, Amen. Or some other which seemeth Christian. To the people: The Lord be with you. The blessing The blessing of God, the Father ✠ and the Son ✠ and the Holy Ghost ✠, be with us and remain alway, Amen.

Note.

- Fili Dei vivi is said aloud as the prayer of all ("Laßt unß bitten") before the communion. Form b adds the rubric "Hie teylt man auß dem volck … beyde sacrament, den leyb und bluot des herrn under brot und weyn". Döber (§7.8.8) and the Kiel

Mass (§7.11) have the same German text, said by the people after the priest.
- The *complenda is Quod ore sumpsimus in full. It is the "complenda" Luther had recommended (§7.3.5).
- The blessing keeps three crosses.
- Form d (the Kirchenampt) adds after the Agnus a rubric for the exhortation: "darinn sy allein tringen uff die fruchtbar gedechtnuß und heilsam verkündung des tods Christi". At the distribution the priest says "alleyn die wort des nachtmals". Luther's "Gott sei gelobet" follows as the communion hymn, then the Aaronic blessing. The complenda is gone.

7.5.2 The Ordnung des Herren Nachtmal, 1525 (form e): the prayer "anstatt des Canon"

> Darnach bereit der diener den kelch und spricht dann zu dem Volck: Liebe brüder und schwestern, bitten alle Gott, unsern vatter, das er uns sende seinen heylgen geist, der uns lere uff opfferen die opffer Gottes, ein zerbrochnen geist und zerschlagen hertz, und daß wir unsere leib zum opffer geben, das da lebendig, heylig und ym wolgefellig ist, welches unser vernunfftiger gottsdienst ist, damit wir Got auch danck sagen und preiß uff opfferen, und er uns zeig sein heyl. Der herr wil eüch alle erhören. So laßt uns nun uffheben unsere hertzen zu dem herren und danck sagen ym, unserm herren und Got. Dann es ist ye recht, billich und heilsam, das wir dir allzeyt und allenthalben lob und danck sagen. Heylger herr, allmechtiger vatter, ewiger gott, Und das durch Jesum Christum, unsern heyland, durch welchen dich auch die engel loben und alle hymlische krefft preisen, mit welchen wir auch bitten und flehen, wellest auch unser stymmen zu lassen, die wir mit demütiger verjechung sprechen: Sanctus Heylig, heylig, heylig bistu, der herr und Gott der herscharen, Vol sind himel und erden deiner herrlichkeit. Hosianna, hilff uns, aller höchster. Gebenedeyt bist du auch, der du kumpst in dem namen des herren, ein sun David. Hosianna, ach hilff uns, aller höchster, das dein reich zu nemm und werd gesterckt.

Thereafter the minister prepareth the chalice, and then speaketh to the people: Dear brethren and sisters, pray ye all God our Father that he send us his Holy Ghost, who may teach us to offer up the sacrifices of God, a broken spirit and a contrite heart; and that we give our bodies a sacrifice, living, holy and well-pleasing unto him, which is our reasonable service; that we may also offer up thanks and praise unto God, and he may show us his salvation. The Lord will hear you all. So let us now lift up our hearts unto the Lord, and give thanks unto him, our Lord and God. For it is indeed right, meet and wholesome that we should at all times and in all places give praise and thanks unto thee, holy Lord, almighty Father, everlasting God, and that through Jesus Christ our Saviour, through whom the angels also praise thee and all the heavenly powers magnify thee; with whom we also pray and beseech thee that thou wouldest admit our voices also, who with humble confession say: Sanctus Holy, holy, holy art thou, the Lord and God of hosts; full are heaven and earth of thy glory. Hosanna, help us, most Highest. Blessed art thou also, that comest in the name of the Lord, a son of David. Hosanna, ah help us, most Highest, that thy kingdom may increase and be strengthened.

Note.

- The bidding is expanded with Ps 51:17 ("die opffer Gottes, ein zerbrochnen geist") and Heb 13:15 ("danck sagen und preiß uff opfferen"). The Orate fratres has become a prayer to offer the sacrifices Scripture allows.
- The Preface is the common Preface, reduced to its frame. The dialogue is folded into one sentence spoken by the minister.

> Und anstatt des Canon braucht man diß nachgend gebett: Allmechtiger Gott und vatter unsers heylands Jesu Christi, der du uns durch den selbigen allerliebsten sun, unsern herren, verheissen hast, was wir dich bitten in seinem namen, wöllest uns geweren, und aber durch deinen heyligen geist bevolhen hast, zu bitten für alle oberkeit und alle menschen, So bitten wir dich von hertzen, durch den selbigen, deinen allerliebsten sun, unsern heylandt, du wöllest das hertz aller fürsten und herren und sunderlichen unser oberkeit, eins ersamen raths, erleüchten mit erkantnüß deines heyligen Evangelii, uff das sy dich für iren rechten, einigen oberherren erkennen und uns, werck deiner hend und schefflin deiner weyd, nach deinem willen und gefallen regieren. Und allen menschen wöllestu verleyhen, zu erkantnüß deiner warheit zu kummen, Und diser deiner gemein, hye zu gegen in deinem namen versamlet seind, deinen heyligen geist, den tröster, der dein gsatz in unsere hertzen schreibt, damit hyn genommen werd unsere angeborne blintheit und thumkeit, durch die wir unser sünd und übel nit allein nit mögen erkennen, sunder gefallen uns selbs wol darin. Darumb, o barmhertziger Gott, aller liebster, mach in uns durch deinen heyligen geyst unsere sünd lebendig, uff das wir ir enpfinden und ire schnödigkeit und schand erkennen mögen, Und dahär, sint dem mal wir in uns selber nichts dann sünd, todt und hell befinden, zu deiner gnad und barmhertzigkeit woren hunger und durst überkummen, damit wir doch zum teil bedencken mögen, mit recht gschaffnem glauben annemen unnd mitt ewiger danckbarkeit preysen deine > überschwenckliche, unermeßliche gnad und güte, die du uns in dem bewysen hast, das du deinen eingebornen sun hast wöllen mensch (das ist, uns armen sündern gleich) werden, für uns leiden und sterben und durch seinen todt uns von sünden, todt und hell erlösen. So gib uns nun, himlischer vatter, das wir dises todts, durch welchen wir von allem übel zum ewigen leben erlößt sind, Heylsame gedechtnüß nimmer auß hertzen lassen, damitt auch wir mit ym, unserm heylandt, den sünden absterben, zu leben der gerechtigkeit, in aller gedult und lieb gegen dem nechsten, mitt frölicher warnung, Harrende auff die selige hoffnung unnd zukunfft des selbigen, unsers lieben Herren unnd erlösers. Und verlyhe, das wir uff dißmal auch zu solcher heilsamer, nottiger gedechtnüß sein heyligs nachtmal halten mögen mit solchem hertzen, das wir nitt das zeytlich noch unsers söchen, dann den auffgang deyn reychs, beger der sünden loß unnd zu aller frumkeit gefürdert zu werden, Damit unser keiner schuldig werd an dem leib noch blut unsers heylandts Jhesu Christi, noch ym selb das gericht noch verdamnüß niesse, Wo er sich hye bekant, ein glidt Christi zu syn, und glauben, daß er allein durch das opffer, so er einmal für uns am creütz dir, o vatter, uff geopffert hat sein leib und blut, und aber solcher glaub, der durch die lieb gegen meniglich tätig ist, nit hett, und tryb also so vil an ym das gespöt mit dem nachtmal unsers herren, sunder das wir aller hyemit im woren glauben sein todt, für uns gelitten, bedencken und uffnemen, Das wir gewißlich glauben, du wöllest unser gnediger, barmhertziger vatter sein, der du uns zu kindern und erben hast uffgenommen, gleichförmig zu werden deinem aller liebsten und erstgebornen sun Jhesu Christo, wiewol mir noch hie wie in sünden also auch in stäter trübsal leben, das wir auch uns alle durch einander als wore brüder und deine kinder halten, bereyt, dir zu gefallen, guts zethun, auch dein ruth und bewerung mit aller gedult allweg uffzunemen, und also gantz gutwillig erwarten, wann du uns vom leib der sünden erlöst. Disen glauben, hoffnung und lieb wöllestu, himlischer vatter, in uns stercken und befestigen, uff das wir in der warheit und rechten geist zu dir ruffen und bitten mögen, wie uns unser einiger leermeister gelert hat, und sprechen: Unser vatter in dem hymel, Dein namm sey heylig. […] Dann dein ist das reich und die krafft und die herrligkeit in ewigkeit, Amen.

And instead of the Canon the following prayer is used: Almighty God, and Father of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who by the same thy most dear Son, our Lord, hast promised that whatsoever we ask thee in his name thou wilt grant us, and hast moreover by thy Holy Ghost commanded us to pray for all rulers and all men: we beseech thee from our hearts, through the same thy most dear Son, our Saviour, that thou wouldest enlighten the heart of all princes and lords, and specially of our rulers, the honourable Council, with the knowledge of thy holy Gospel, that they may acknowledge thee for their right and only Sovereign, and govern us, the work of thy hands and the sheep of thy pasture, according to thy will and pleasure. And vouchsafe unto all men to come to the knowledge of thy truth; and unto this thy congregation, here present and gathered in thy name, thy Holy Ghost, the Comforter, who writeth thy law in our hearts, that our inborn blindness and folly may be taken away, whereby we not only cannot know our sin and evil, but are well pleased with ourselves therein. Therefore, O merciful God, most dear, make our sin alive in us by thy Holy Ghost, that we may feel it and know its vileness and shame; and that thence, seeing we find in ourselves nothing but sin, death and hell, we may obtain a true hunger and thirst for thy grace and mercy, that we may yet in part consider, receive with rightly-formed faith, and praise with everlasting thankfulness thy overflowing, unmeasurable grace and goodness, which thou hast shown us in this, that thou wouldest have thine only-begotten Son become man (that is, like unto us poor sinners), suffer and die for us, and by his death redeem us from sin, death and hell. Grant us now therefore, heavenly Father, that we may never let the wholesome remembrance of this death, whereby we are redeemed from all evil unto everlasting life, go out of our hearts; that we also with him, our Saviour, may die unto sin and live unto righteousness, in all patience and love toward our neighbour, with joyful watching, awaiting the blessed hope and coming of the same our dear Lord and Redeemer. And grant that we may at this time also keep his holy Supper unto such wholesome and needful remembrance with such a heart that we seek not things temporal nor our own, but the rising of thy kingdom, and desire to be loosed from sin and furthered unto all godliness; that none of us become guilty of the body or the blood of our Saviour Jesus Christ, nor eat judgement and damnation to himself, if he here confess himself to be a member of Christ, and believe that alone by the sacrifice which he once offered up for us on the cross unto thee, O Father, his body and blood, and yet had not such faith as is active through love toward all, and so made a mockery with the Supper of our Lord; but that we all herewith in true faith may consider and receive his death suffered for us; that we may surely believe that thou wilt be our gracious and merciful Father, who hast taken us to be children and heirs, to be conformed to thy most dear and first-begotten Son Jesus Christ, although we still live here as in sins, so also in continual tribulation; that we also may all hold one another as true brethren and thy children, ready to do good to please thee, also to take up thy rod and trial alway with all patience, and so to wait altogether willingly for the time when thou shalt deliver us from the body of sin. This faith, hope and love vouchsafe, heavenly Father, to strengthen and establish in us, that we may call and pray unto thee in truth and in right spirit, as our only Master hath taught us, and say: Our Father, which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. […] For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever, Amen.

Note.

- The rubric. "Und anstatt des Canon braucht man diß nachgend gebett". The heading says outright what the prayer is for.
- How it grows out of Schwarz. It begins with Schwarz's Te igitur substitute (§7.5.1) and continues with the second hand's addition there. It runs into the Our Father, as Schwarz's Post elevationem did, but without Verba between.
- Canon themes, recast:
  - intercession for rulers and "diser deiner gemein, hye zu gegen" (Te igitur, Memento … omnium circumstantium);
  - the remembrance of the Son's death, resurrection and coming ("dises todts … heylsame gedechtnüß", "harrende auff … zukunfft"), which does the work of the anamnesis of Unde et memores;
  - a petition for a fruitful communion (Supplices … ut quotquot … sumpserimus), turned into a warning against eating judgement (1 Cor 11:27–29).
- The one sacrifice. The only sacrifice named is Christ's own, "so er einmal für uns am creütz dir, o vatter, uff geopffert hat sein leib und blut" (Heb 9:28; 10:14). Here the critique the Brandenburg-Nürnberg order would make in 1533 is already in the prayer itself (see Appendix 7.A).
- No Verba. This prayer is not followed by the Verba but by the Our Father. The Verba come after an admonition (below), read as a lesson from 1 Cor 11. There is no elevation.

> Nach disem gebet ermanet der diener das volck, zu betrachten das leyden des herren nach yngegebnen gnaden, und beschleüßts gwonlich also: So wöllen nun vernemen, wie der herr sein nachtmal gestalten hab, und was er zu thun befolhen hat. Unnd liset die wort des nachtmals auß der ersten Epistel Pauli am 11. capitel zu den Corinthern mit dapffern worten wie hye nach: Der herr Jhesus, in der nacht, da er verraten ward, nam er das brot und, als er gedanckt hatt, brach ers unnd gab es seinen jüngeren und sprach: Nement hyn unnd essen. Diß ist mein leib, der für eüch hyn gegeben wirt. Solchs thunt zu meiner gedechtnüß. Des selben gleichen auch den kelch, nach dem sye zu obent gessen hatten, und sprach: Diß ist der kelch, das neüw Testament in meinem blut, das für eüch unnd für vil zu ablösung der sünd vergossen würt. Sollichs thut, so offt ir gedrinckt, in meiner gedechtnüß. Darnach spricht der diener zu dem volck: So kumment nun här, die ir wöllent mitt mir des herren nachtmal halten und entpfahen. Er wöl uch dazu geschickt machen und verleyhen, sein todt mit rechtem glauben zu bedencken und mit warer danckbarkeit verkünden. Und in dargebung des brots und des kelchs des herren spricht er also: Gedenckent, glaubent, verkündent, das Christus für uch gestorben ist.

After this prayer the minister exhorteth the people to consider the passion of the Lord, according to the grace given, and commonly concludeth it thus: Let us now hear how the Lord ordained his Supper, and what he hath commanded to be done. And he readeth the words of the Supper out of the first Epistle of Paul to the Corinthians, the eleventh chapter, with earnest words, as here followeth: The Lord Jesus, in the night in which he was betrayed, took the bread, and when he had given thanks, he brake it, and gave it to his disciples, and said: Take, and eat. This is my body, which is given for you. This do in remembrance of me. After the same manner also the cup, when they had supped at evening, and said: This is the cup, the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you and for many for the loosing of sin. This do, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. Thereafter the minister saith to the people: Come ye now hither, that will with me keep and receive the Supper of the Lord. May he make you meet thereto, and grant you to consider his death with right faith and to show it forth with true thankfulness. And in the giving of the bread and of the cup of the Lord he saith thus: Remember, believe, and show forth that Christ died for you.

Note.

- The Pax. "So kumment nun här …" takes the place of the Pax and the invitation to communion.
- "Gedenckent, glaubent, verkündent …" replaces the custodiat. Form f keeps it.

7.5.3 Straßburger kirchen ampt, 1525 (form f)

The last form drops the Preface and Sanctus. After the Creed comes an explanatory rubric and a still longer bidding:

> Noch endung des glaubens, uff das die unchristlichen opffermessen dem volck nitt ein anstoß bringen und auff das verstanden werde, wie Christus für uns ein mal geopfert sey zur volkomnen gnugthuung unser sünd, Spricht der pfarher zu zeyten also: Lieben brüder unnd schwester, Bitten Gott, den vatter, durch unsern herrn Jesum Christum, der in todt zur erlösung unser seelen geben ist, das er uns den heyligen geyst zusende, der uns lere auffopffern nit Christum, der sich selb ein mal für uns geopffert hatt unnd von niemane mag geopffert werden, sonder die gottgefelligen waren opffer, alls ein zerbrochnen geist, ein zerschlagen hertz, und das wir unser leyb zum opffer, das lebendig, heylig und im wolgefellig > sey, begeben, Welchs unser vernünfftiger gotts dienst ist, in dem wir Gott eer, preyß und dancksagung opfferen. Der herr wölle eüch erhören und sein heyl erzeygen, Amen.

After the ending of the Creed, that the unchristian sacrificial Masses may not be a stumbling-block to the people, and that it may be understood how Christ was once offered for us for the full satisfaction of our sins, the pastor sometimes speaketh thus: Dear brethren and sisters, pray God the Father, through our Lord Jesus Christ, who was given into death for the redemption of our souls, that he send us the Holy Ghost, who may teach us to offer up, not Christ, who offered himself once for us and can be offered by no man, but the true sacrifices well-pleasing to God, as a broken spirit, a contrite heart; and that we yield our bodies a sacrifice, living, holy and well-pleasing unto him, which is our reasonable service, wherein we offer unto God honour, praise and thanksgiving. The Lord hear you and show you his salvation, Amen.

Note.

- The last trace of the Orate fratres. It is now a polemic against the Mass-sacrifice. Sehling refers to Bucer's argument from Hebrews in the same years.
- What follows. "Der herr sey mit eüch. Lassent uns bitten:" introduces the revised prayer of form e, "Almechtiger, barmhertziger Got und vater …". It is shorter on the magistrates and longer on the unity of the members of Christ's body ("des glider wir alle sein … durch die gelenck der liebe, mitt dem band des fridens … ingeleibt").
- The Supper itself. The Our Father; an exhortation (a specimen from St. Peter the Younger, Reminiscere 1525, is printed); the Verba from 1 Cor 11; the invitation; the distribution with "Gedencken, glauben und verkünden …".
- The end of the Canon at Strasbourg. Nothing of the Roman Canon is left but its intercession and its remembrance, both prayed in the congregation's own words.

7.6 Worms, Deutsche Messe, 1524

Form und Ordenung der Evangelischen deutschen Messen, wie sie zu Worms gehalten wird. Sehling 19, III, Nr. 1, pp. 124–129. Like its Strasbourg original, it is a Moderate Reformed order.

The preface says this Mass is kept "zu Straßburg und Worms". This is the Strasbourg German Mass of 1524 (§7.5) in use at Worms, with the Canon prayers that Schwarz's Strasbourg manuscript lacks.

It keeps more of the Canon than any other order in the corpus. The Canon runs in its proper order from Te igitur to Supplices te rogamus, each prayer translated and trimmed. There are three kinds of change:

- Sacrificial nouns replaced.
  - haec dona, haec munera, haec sancta sacrificia illibata becomes "diß dein brot und wein";
  - hostiam puram becomes "unser demütiges gebet";
  - hanc oblationem becomes "uns und … unser gebet".
- Office-holders replaced. Pope and bishop give way to emperor, king and rulers.
- Saints dropped. The saints, the dead and the doxology Per ipsum are gone.

The Canon still stands between the Sanctus and the Our Father, where it belongs.

7.6.1 Preparation of the chalice (Orate fratres)

> Bereytung des kelchs. Liben Brüder und schwestern, bitten got, das mein und ewer gebet angenem sei. Der herr sei mit euch. Antwort: Und mit deinem geyst.

The preparing of the cup. Dear brethren and sisters, pray God that my prayer and yours may be acceptable. The Lord be with you. Answer: And with thy spirit.

Note. This is Orate, fratres, ut meum ac vestrum sacrificium acceptabile fiat apud Deum Patrem omnipotentem, with sacrificium replaced by gebet. It follows the Creed directly. There is no offertory chant and there are no offertory prayers.

7.6.2 Preface and Sanctus

> Prefatio. Erhebt euwer hertzen zu gott. Antwort: Wir erhebens zu gott. Last unns dancksagen gott unßerem herrenn. Antwort: Das ist billich unnd recht. Ja, Warlich ist es billich und recht, auch heylsam, das wir an allen orten zu aller zeit dir, heyliger vater, Almechtiger, ewiger got, dancksagen durch Christum unsern herren: Durch welchen alle Engel und die himmlischen kräft anbetten, Eren unnd lobenn dein herliche maiestat, mit den selbigen bittenn wir, wöllest zuloßenn unnd annemen unßer stimm, das wir dich auch loben unnd sprechen on endt: Heyliger, Heyliger, Heyliger herr gott Sabaoth, vol sind hymmel und erde deiner herlickeyt. Osianna in den höchsten. Bene ✠ deiet sei, der do kümpt in dem namen des herren. Glück und heyl in den höchsten.

The Preface. Lift up your hearts unto God. Answer: We lift them up unto God. Let us give thanks unto God our Lord. Answer: It is meet and right. Yea, verily it is meet and right, and also wholesome, that we should in all places and at all times give thanks unto thee, holy Father, almighty, everlasting God, through Christ our Lord: through whom all the angels and the heavenly powers worship, honour and praise thy glorious majesty; with the same we beseech thee that thou wouldest admit and accept our voice, that we also may praise thee and say without end: Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Sabaoth; full are heaven and earth of thy glory. Hosanna in the highest. Bless ✠ ed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord. Prosperity and salvation in the highest.

Note. This is the common Preface. Per quem maiestatem tuam laudant Angeli, adorant Dominationes, tremunt Potestates … cum quibus et nostras voces ut admitti iubeas deprecamur is condensed. The second Hosanna is translated as "Glück und heyl" (prosperity and salvation). The sign of the cross at Benedictus is kept.

7.6.3 Te igitur

> Darumb, aller güttigster vatter, bitten und begeren wir undertheniglich durch Jesum Christum, deinen sun, unsern heren, du wöllest diß dein brot und wein anschawen, gesegnen und bene ✠ deien. Auch unser gebet, so wir zu dem ersten für deine heylige Christliche kirchen thun, genediglichen annemen, dieselbigen befriden, behüten, vereynigen und regieren, durch den gantzen umbkreyß der weltt mit keyser, künig und allen unseren öbersten, mit sampt allen deinen Christgläubigen.

Wherefore, most gracious Father, we humbly pray and desire through Jesus Christ thy Son our Lord, that thou wouldest look upon, bless and ble ✠ ss this thy bread and wine; and also graciously accept our prayer, which we make in the first place for thy holy Christian Church, and give peace to the same, keep, unite and govern it throughout the whole compass of the world, with the emperor, the king and all our rulers, together with all thy faithful Christians.

Note. Compare Te igitur, clementissime Pater, per Iesum Christum Filium tuum Dominum nostrum supplices rogamus ac petimus, uti accepta habeas et benedicas haec dona, haec munera, haec sancta sacrificia illibata, in primis quae tibi offerimus pro Ecclesia tua sancta catholica: quam pacificare, custodire, adunare et regere digneris toto orbe terrarum: una cum famulo tuo Papa nostro N. et Antistite nostro N. et omnibus orthodoxis …

- Gifts and offering. The gifts become "diß dein brot und wein". "Quae tibi offerimus" becomes the prayer "so wir … thun".
- Office-holders. Pope and bishop give way to emperor, king and "all our rulers".
- Verbs for the Church. The four verbs for the Church (pacificare, custodire, adunare, regere) are kept exactly.
- Blessing. Accepta habeas et benedicas is translated twice over ("gesegnen und bene ✠ deien"), as a bless-and-bless doublet.

7.6.4 Memento of the living, with the end of Communicantes

> O herr, gedenck aller deiner diener und dienerin und aller umstender, deren glauben und andacht dir wyssen ist, für der selen und leibs heyl wir dich bitten, uff das wir alle durch hilff deines schirms bewaret werden durch Jesum Christum, unseren herren.

O Lord, remember all thy servants and handmaidens, and all that stand round about, whose faith and devotion is known unto thee, for whose health of soul and body we pray thee; that we all may be preserved by the help of thy protection; through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Note. This is Memento, Domine, famulorum famularumque tuarum N. et N., et omnium circumstantium, quorum tibi fides cognita est et nota devotio.

- Offering removed. Pro quibus tibi offerimus: vel qui tibi offerunt hoc sacrificium laudis becomes "für … wir dich bitten".

- Ending borrowed from Communicantes. The ending "uff das wir alle durch hilff deines schirms bewaret werden" is the last clause of Communicantes: ut in omnibus protectionis tuae muniamur auxilio.
- Saints dropped. The list of saints between these two points is gone.

7.6.5 Hanc igitur

> Darumb bitten wir: O herr, wöllest dich unser und aller unser gebet genediglich annemen und alle unsere zeit noch deinem friden ordnen, von ewiger verdamniß erlösen und under die scharen deiner außerwelten zelen durch Christum, unseren herren, Amen.

Wherefore we pray: O Lord, vouchsafe graciously to take unto thee us and all our prayer, and to order all our days in thy peace, to deliver us from eternal damnation, and to number us among the flocks of thine elect; through Christ our Lord. Amen.

Note. This is Hanc igitur oblationem servitutis nostrae … quaesumus, Domine, ut placatus accipias: diesque nostros in tua pace disponas, atque ab aeterna damnatione nos eripi, et in electorum tuorum iubeas grege numerari. "Oblationem" becomes "uns und aller unser gebet".

The same words, "von der ewigen verdamnus erlösen", are what the 1533/1543 critique singles out as sacrificial (Appendix 7.A).

7.6.6 Quam oblationem

> O aller güttigster vatter, barmhertziger, ewiger got, hilff und schaff, das dises brot und der wein uns werd und sei der warhafftig leib und das unschüldig blut deines aller liebstenn suns, unsers herren Jesu Christi.

O most gracious Father, merciful, everlasting God, help and grant that this bread and the wine may become and be unto us the true body and the innocent blood of thy most dearly beloved Son, our Lord Jesus Christ.

Note. This is Quam oblationem tu, Deus, in omnibus, quaesumus, benedictam, adscriptam, ratam, rationabilem, acceptabilemque facere digneris: ut nobis Corpus et Sanguis fiat dilectissimi Filii tui Domini nostri Iesu Christi.

"Uns werd und sei" renders nobis … fiat exactly. The five adjectives of offering are dropped.

7.6.7 Qui pridie, Simili modo, Haec quotiescumque

> Welcher an dem tag vor dem, als er gelitten hat, Nam er das brot, saget danck, Segnet ✠ und brach das brot und gab es seinen jüngeren, sprechendt: Nemen[t] hinn und essent, das ist mein leib, der für euch geben wirt. Auffhebung des Sacraments. Des gleichen nach dem abentmal. Nam er den kelch, dancket, Segnet ✠ und gab ien seinen jüngeren und sprach: Nement hinn, drincket alle daruß, das ist der kelch des newen und ewigen testaments in meinem blut, das für euch und für vil vergossen wirt, zu vergebung der sünden. Dises, so manches mal ir das thut, so thut das mir zu eyner gedechtnuß. Auffhebung des kelchs.

Who, on the day before he suffered, took the bread, gave thanks, bless ✠ ed and brake the bread, and gave it to his disciples, saying: Take and eat, this is my body, which is given for you. The elevation of the Sacrament. Likewise after the supper he took the cup, gave thanks, bless ✠ ed, and gave it to his disciples, and said: Take, drink ye all thereof; this is the cup of the new and everlasting testament in my blood, which is shed for you and for many for the remission of sins. This, as oft as ye do it, do it in remembrance of me. The elevation of the cup.

Note. The Verba keep the Roman Canon's frame:

- "an dem tag vor dem, als er gelitten hat" renders Qui pridie quam pateretur;
- "des newen und ewigen testaments" renders novi et aeterni testamenti;
- "Dises, so manches mal ir das thut" renders Haec quotiescumque feceritis.

Two things are dropped: elevatis oculis in caelum and mysterium fidei. "Der für euch geben wirt", from Luke and Paul, is added to the bread word.

7.6.8 Unde et memores and Supra quae

> Des halbenn, herr, wir deine diener betrachten des selbigen deines suns, unsers herren Jesu Christi leiden und sterben, aufferstentnuß von der hellenn unnd auch herliche auffart zu den hymmelen, deiner götlichen maiestat, da mit anbieten unser demütiges gebet, daruff du mitt genedigem gütigen angesicht schawen und dir das gefallen lassest durch Jesum Christum, unsern herren.

Wherefore, O Lord, we thy servants, considering the passion and death of the same thy Son our Lord Jesus Christ, his resurrection from hell, and also his glorious ascension into the heavens, do therewith offer unto thy divine majesty our humble prayer; whereupon thou wouldest look with a gracious and kindly countenance, and let it be well-pleasing unto thee; through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Note. This is Unde et memores, Domine, nos servi tui … eiusdem Christi Filii tui Domini nostri tam beatae passionis, nec non et ab inferis resurrectionis, sed et in caelos gloriosae ascensionis: offerimus praeclarae maiestati tuae de tuis donis ac datis hostiam puram …, joined to Supra quae propitio ac sereno vultu respicere digneris: et accepta habere ….

- What is offered. The Canon's offerimus is kept ("anbieten"), but what is offered is "unser demütiges gebet", not the hostia.
- Literal rendering. "Aufferstentnuß von der hellenn" renders ab inferis resurrectionis literally.
- Types dropped. The Old Testament types (Abel, Abraham, Melchizedek) are gone.

7.6.9 Supplices te rogamus

> Almechtiger got, wir bitten dich demütiglichen, schaff, das unser gebet unnd begird uff den höchsten altar für das angesicht deiner götlichenn maiestat fürbracht werdt, da mitt wir alle so von diesem aller heyligsten abentmol des leibs, fleysch und bluts deines sunes entpfahen, mitt allem götlichen segen und gnaden erfüllet werdenn. Durch den selben Jesum Christum, unseren herren. Amen.

Almighty God, we humbly beseech thee, grant that our prayer and desire may be brought upon the highest altar before the face of thy divine majesty; that we all, who from this most holy supper receive the body, flesh and blood of thy Son, may be filled with all divine blessing and grace. Through the same Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Note. This is Supplices te rogamus, omnipotens Deus: iube haec perferri per manus sancti Angeli tui in sublime altare tuum, in conspectu divinae maiestatis tuae: ut quotquot ex hac altaris participatione sacrosanctum Filii tui Corpus et Sanguinem sumpserimus, omni benedictione caelesti et gratia repleamur. Per eundem Christum …

- What is carried up. "Haec" (the gifts) becomes "unser gebet unnd begird".
- The angel. The angel who carries them is dropped.
- The altar. Ex hac altaris participatione becomes "von diesem aller heyligsten abentmol".

7.6.10 Our Father, with the conclusion of the embolism

> Last uns betten. Auß ermanung der seligen gebot und götlicher ordnung underwißen, dörffen wir sagen: Vatter unser, der du bist in den hymmeln. etc. Durch Jesum Christum, unsern herren, deinen sun, welcher mit dir und dem heyligen geyst, eyn warer got, lebt und herschet. Amen.

Let us pray. Out of the admonition of the blessed commandments, and by divine ordinance instructed, we are bold to say: Our Father, which art in the heavens, etc. Through Jesus Christ our Lord, thy Son, who with thee and the Holy Ghost, one true God, liveth and reigneth. Amen.

Note. The introduction to the Our Father is Praeceptis salutaribus moniti, et divina institutione formati, audemus dicere.

The doxology after it is the ending of the embolism, Per eundem Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum Filium tuum, qui tecum vivit et regnat in unitate Spiritus Sancti Deus. The body of the embolism (Libera nos, quaesumus, Domine, ab omnibus malis …, with its saints) is dropped. Only its conclusion remains.

7.6.11 Fraction forbidden; the Peace as absolution

> Der prister darff die hostia nit brechen, noch in kelch fellen. Der frid des herren sei alwegen mit euch. Das ist die rechte Evangelische absolucio, so den glaubigen der sünd ablas verkündet, die eynige und würdigste bereittung zu der entpfengnüs > des leibs und bluts Christi. Möcht wol vom prister, gegen dem volck gekört, gesprochen werdenn.

The priest may not break the host, nor let it fall into the cup. The peace of the Lord be alway with you. This is the right evangelical absolution, which proclaimeth unto the faithful the remission of sin, the only and most worthy preparation for the receiving of the body and blood of Christ. It may well be spoken by the priest turned toward the people.

Note. The fraction and the commixture (Haec commixtio …) are forbidden. Sehling compares Luther's Formula missae. Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum is kept, and the rubric explains it as a public absolution.

7.6.12 Agnus Dei and communion

> Agnus dei. Du lemlin gottes, das du hinnimpst die sund der welt, Erbarm dich uber uns. Und verleihe uns den friden. Hie teyle der prister den leib und blut denen, so es begeren. Er selbs niess es nit, er hab dan sonderlichen hunger dazu. Secht, aller liebsten, das ist warlichen der heylig leychnam unsers herren Jesu Christi, der für euch gelitten hat den biteren todt. Nemet hinn und essen ien, das er euch speiß, nere und bewar in das ewig leben. Der leib des herren Jesu Christi behüt dein seel in das ewig leben. Nimpt der prister den kelch und spricht: Last uns auch drincken den kelch des heyls und anruffen den namen des herren. Secht, das ist warlichen der thewer schatz des kostbarlichen bluts unsers herren Jesu Christi, da mit ir erkaufft seindt. Nement hinn und theylens mitt eynander zu abweschung ewrer sündt. Amen. Das blut unsers herren Jesu Christi behüt dein seel und mein seel in das ewig leben.

Agnus Dei. Thou little Lamb of God, that takest away the sin of the world, have mercy upon us. And grant us peace. Here let the priest distribute the body and blood to them that desire it. He himself shall not partake of it, unless he have a special hunger thereto. Behold, dearly beloved, this is verily the holy body of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath suffered for you the bitter death. Take and eat it, that it may feed, nourish and preserve you unto everlasting life. The body of the Lord Jesus Christ preserve thy soul unto everlasting life. The priest taketh the cup and saith: Let us also drink the cup of salvation and call upon the name of the Lord. Behold, this is verily the dear treasure of the precious blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, wherewith ye are bought. Take and divide it among yourselves, unto the washing away of your sins. Amen. The blood of our Lord Jesus Christ preserve thy soul and my soul unto everlasting life.

Note.

- Communion formulas. "Der leib … behüt dein seel in das ewig leben" is Corpus Domini nostri Iesu Christi custodiat animam tuam in vitam aeternam. The cup formula is Sanguis Domini nostri … in the same way.
- The priest's cup verse. "Last uns auch drincken den kelch des heyls" is the priest's Calicem salutaris accipiam, et nomen Domini invocabo (Ps 116:13), put into the plural.
- "Secht". Each "Secht" (Ecce) introduces a showing of the element to the people.
- "Theylens mitt eynander". This is Luke 22:17.
- The priest's own communion. The priest communicates only "if he have a special hunger thereto".

7.6.13 Postcommunion, Benedicamus, blessing, Nunc dimittis

> Der herr sei mitt euch. Antwort: Und mitt deinem geist. Last uns betten: O herr Jesu Christe, dein aller heyligster leib, den wir handt genossen, und dein unschuldiges blut, das wir haben gedruncken, wel uns nitt sein zu der verdamnuß, noch zu dem gericht, sonder nach deiner gütte zu eynnem schirm und artznei der selen und des leibs, eyn fürdernuß zu dem ewigen leben, der du lebest und regierst in ewigkeyt. Amen. Der herr sei mit euch. Antwort: Und mitt deinem geyst. Last uns gott gebenedeien. Danck, lob, ere unnd preiß sei gott durch Christum, unsern herren, Amen. Benedictio: Der segen des Almechtigen gottes, vatters, suns und heyligen geyst, sei mit euch und bleib alweg bei euch. Amen. Nunc dimittis: O her, laß im frid deinen diener noch deinem wort, Dann unsere augen haben gesehen dein heylandt, welchen du bereyt hast vor dem angesicht aller völcker, das liech[t] zu erleuchten die heyden und zu eyner glori deines völcks Israel, dir sei lob, ere und danck, gebenedeiet, heilige dreivaltickeyt, got vatter, sun und heyliger geyst. Amen.

The Lord be with you. Answer: And with thy spirit. Let us pray: O Lord Jesus Christ, may thy most holy body which we have partaken, and thy innocent blood which we have drunk, be unto us neither unto damnation nor unto judgement, but, according to thy goodness, unto a defence and medicine of the soul and of the body, a furtherance unto everlasting life; who livest and reignest for ever. Amen. The Lord be with you. Answer: And with thy spirit. Let us bless God. Thanks, praise, honour and glory be to God through Christ our Lord. Amen. The Blessing: The blessing of Almighty God, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, be with you and remain alway with you. Amen. Nunc dimittis: O Lord, let thy servant depart in peace according to thy word; for our eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all peoples, the light to lighten the Gentiles and to be the glory of thy people Israel. To thee be praise, honour and thanks, blessed, holy Trinity, God Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Amen.

Note.

- The postcommunion. It joins two of the priest's communion prayers. The first is Perceptio Corporis tui, Domine Iesu Christe … non mihi proveniat in iudicium et condemnationem: sed pro tua pietate prosit mihi ad tutamentum mentis et corporis, et ad medelam percipiendam. The second is Corpus tuum, Domine, quod sumpsi, et Sanguis, quem potavi …. Both are made into a public collect.
- The dismissal. "Last uns gott gebenedeien" is Benedicamus Domino, and the response is an expanded Deo gratias.
- The blessing. It is Benedicat vos omnipotens Deus, Pater et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus.

7.7 Nürnberg, 1524–1525: the parish churches, Volprecht, and the Form und Ordnung

Three Nürnberg orders sit alongside Döber's Mass (§7.8):

Order	Sehling	`eko.db` doc	Pages
Gottesdienstordnung der Pfarrkirchen (St. Sebald, St. Lorenz), June 1524, Latin	11, I.5	249	46–47
Deutsche Messe des Priors Volprecht (Augustinians), 1524	11, I.3	247	41–42
Form und Ordnung einer Christlichen Messe, 1525	11, I.7	251	57

The parish order is Latin and follows the Formula missae closely. Volprecht's German Mass is the most conservative in the corpus after Worms (Moderate Reformed). It keeps all three of the priest's prayers before communion and both ablution prayers, translated.

7.7.1 The parish churches, 1524 (Latin)

> Symbolo finito, offertorio ac canone minore omissis incipit Celebrans: Dominus vobiscum. Sursum corda. Gratias agamus Domino Deo nostro. Vere dignum et iustum est, equum et salutare, nos tibi semper et ubique gratias agere, Domine sancte pater omnipotens, eterne Deus, per Christum Dominum nostrum. Hic finitur prefatio. Chorus: Sanctus, sanctus. Celebrans autem subiungit legendo: Qui pridie, quam pateretur, accepit panem in sanctas ac venerabiles manus suas et elevatis oculis in celum ad te, Deum Patrem omnipotentem, tibi gratias agens benedicit, fregit, dedit discipulis suis dicens: Accipite et manducate ex hoc omnes! Hoc est enim corpus meum. Elevatur panis. Simili modo, postquam cenatum est, accipiens et hunc preclarum calicem in sanctas ac venerabiles manus suas, item tibi gratias agens benedixit, dedit discipulis suis dicens: Accipite et bibite ex eo omnes! Hic est enim calix sanguinis mei, novi et eterni testamenti, misterium fidei, qui pro nobis et pro multis effundetur in remissionem peccatorum. Elevatur calix. Finito Osanna in excelsis celebrans incipit, Oremus preceptis salutaribus moniti etc.: Pater noster, qui est in etc. Posthac admonetur populus sacramentum sumpturus his verbis: […] Subiungit deinde celebrans: Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum. Chorus respondet. Incipiatur dein populus comunicari, officiante panem prebente et ministro calicem. Sub comunione chorus canit: Agnus Dei et comunionem. Tardius aut velocius iuxta hominum communicantium numerum administrato sacramento, siquid superest a celebrante et ministrantibus sumitur. Demum offitium cum oratione, quam complendam vocant, concludatur.

The Creed ended, the offertory and the lesser canon being omitted, the celebrant beginneth: The Lord be with you. Lift up your hearts. Let us give thanks unto the Lord our God. It is very meet and right, fitting and wholesome, that we should at all times and in all places give thanks unto thee, O Lord, holy Father, almighty, everlasting God, through Christ our Lord. Here the Preface endeth. Choir: Holy, holy. But the celebrant addeth, reading: Who the day before he suffered took bread into his holy and venerable hands, and with eyes lifted up to heaven unto thee, God the almighty Father, giving thanks unto thee, blesseth, brake, gave to his disciples, saying: Take and eat ye all of this! For this is my body. The bread is elevated. In like manner, after they had supped, taking also this excellent cup into his holy and venerable hands, again giving thanks unto thee, he blessed, gave to his disciples, saying: Take and drink ye all of it! For this is the cup of my blood, of the new and everlasting testament, the mystery of faith, which shall be shed for us and for many unto the remission of sins. The cup is elevated. The Hosanna in excelsis being ended, the celebrant beginneth, Let us pray: Taught by wholesome precepts, etc.: Our Father, which art in, etc. After this the people who are to receive the sacrament are admonished in these words: [...] Then the celebrant addeth: The peace of the Lord be alway with you. The choir answereth. Then let the people begin to be communicated, the officiant offering the bread and the minister the cup. During the communion the choir singeth the Agnus Dei and the communion. The sacrament having been administered more slowly or more quickly according to the number of persons communicating, if anything remaineth it is consumed by the celebrant and the ministers. Lastly let the office be concluded with the prayer which they call the complenda.

Note.

- "offertorio ac canone minore omissis". Sehling explains that the offertory part of the Mass was often called the canon minor, the Canon proper being the canon maior. Both are left out.
- The Preface is cut short at per Christum Dominum nostrum, as in the Formula missae (§7.3.2). But here the Sanctus is sung after it.
- Qui pridie is the full Roman text, mysterium fidei included. It is read quietly ("legendo") during the Sanctus and Benedictus, with the two elevations. Sehling (note 17) reads the rubric so: in June 1524 the words were still said in Latin and quietly, as the Formula missae allowed ("vel silenter vel palam"). By March 1525 Nürnberg reported that they were sung aloud "in dem tone oder melodei der prefation", with the Sanctus after them.
  - The print reads "pro nobis", where the Roman text has pro vobis.
  - "paterctur" and "cafix" are corrected here.
- The exhortation is the Nürnberg one printed at §7.8.7.
- Pax Domini follows the exhortation, as in Döber.
- No embolism, no fraction.
- The postcommunion. The complenda is the proper postcommunion of the day. Luther had rejected the variable postcommunions (§7.3.5).

7.7.2 Volprecht, 1524

> Hic sacerdos praeparat calicem. Statim eo praeparito [!] dicat: Der Herr sei mit euch! Antwort: Und mit deinem gaist! Briester: Hebt auf die herzen! Antwort: Wir hebens zum Herrn! Briester: Laßt uns danksagen Gott unsern Herren! Antwort: Das ist billig und recht. Prefatio: Warlich ist es billich und recht. Das ist ziemlich und hailwertig, das wir allwegen und allzeit danksagen, du heiliger Herr, allmechtiger Vater, ewiger Gott, durch Christum unsern Herrn, welcher in der nacht, da er verraten ward, hat er genummen das brot, dank gesagt Gott seinem himlischen Vater, das brochen und geben seinen jungern sprechende: Kommet und esset! Das ist mein leib, der fur euch dargeben wird. Das tut zu meiner gedechtnus! Deshalben gleichen nahm er auch den kelch, nachdem sie zu abent gessen hetten, saget dank Gott seinem himlischen Vater und gab in inen sprechende: Nemet hin! Trinket aus im alle! Das ist der kelch, das neu testament in meinem blut, welches fur euch und fur vil vergossen wird zu verzeihung der sund. Solches tut, so oft ihrs trinkt, zu meiner gedechtnus! Heilig, heilig, heilig ist Gott der Herr allmechtig. Himmel und erden sein voll deiner glori. Mach uns selig in der hohe! Gebenedeiet sei, der da kumpt in dem namen des Herrn! Mach uns selig in der hohe!

Here the priest prepareth the chalice. As soon as it is prepared let him say: The Lord be with you! Answer: And with thy spirit! Priest: Lift up the hearts! Answer: We lift them up unto the Lord! Priest: Let us give thanks unto God our Lord! Answer: That is meet and right. Preface: Verily it is meet and right. It is seemly and wholesome that we should always and at all times give thanks, thou holy Lord, almighty Father, everlasting God, through Christ our Lord; who in the night in which he was betrayed took the bread, gave thanks unto God his heavenly Father, brake it, and gave it to his disciples, saying: Come and eat! This is my body, which is given for you. This do in remembrance of me! After the same manner he took also the cup, when they had eaten at evening, gave thanks unto God his heavenly Father, and gave it to them, saying: Take! Drink ye all of it! This is the cup, the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you and for many for the forgiveness of sins. This do, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me! Holy, holy, holy is God the Lord almighty. Heaven and earth are full of thy glory. Save us in the highest! Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord! Save us in the highest!

Note.

- The chalice. "Hic sacerdos praeparat calicem" is all that is left of the offertory, as in Döber (§7.8.1). It stands after the Creed, where the Roman offertory stood.
- The Preface and Verba. The Preface cut off at per Christum Dominum nostrum runs into the Verba on the pattern of the Formula missae. Sehling: "selbständige Übersetzung der von Luther geschaffenen Einleitung des Einsetzungsberichtes". The Verba are from 1 Cor 11 and the Gospels, not from Qui pridie.

- The Sanctus comes after the Verba. "Mach uns selig" translates Hosanna (Sehling: "Hilf doch!").

> Briester: Last uns bitten durch heilsame gebet erinnert: Vater unser, der du bist in dem himmel, geheiligt werd dein nam! Zukum dein reich! Dein will der geschee als im himmel und auf erden! Unser täglich brod gieb uns heut und vergib uns unser schuld als wir vergeben unser schuldigern! Und nit einfur uns in versuchung, sonder erlös uns vom ubl! Amen. Der briester kert sich zum volk sprechende: Der frid des Herren sei allzeit mit euch! Antwort: Und mit deinem geist! O du lemlein Gottes, welches du weg nimbst die sund der welt, erbarm dich unser! O du lemlein Gottes, welches du weg nimbst die sund der welt, erbarm dich unser! O du lemlein Gottes, welches du weg nimbst die sund der welt, erbarm dich unser und gib uns den frid!

Priest: Let us pray, admonished by wholesome precepts: Our Father, which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name! Thy kingdom come! Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth! Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors! And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil! Amen. The priest turneth to the people, saying: The peace of the Lord be alway with you! Answer: And with thy spirit! O thou Lamb of God, that takest away the sin of the world, have mercy upon us! O thou Lamb of God, that takest away the sin of the world, have mercy upon us! O thou Lamb of God, that takest away the sin of the world, have mercy upon us and give us peace!

Note.

- "Last uns bitten durch heilsame gebet erinnert". This is Oremus: Praeceptis salutaribus moniti, with praecepta ("precepts") read as "gebet".
- The *Pax is kept with its Roman response. There is no embolism and no fraction.

> O Herr Jesu Christe, du hast gesagt deinen jungern: Den frid gebe ich euch; meinen frid laß ich euch; nit gib ich ihn euch, wie die welt gibt, Hirumb, mein Herr, sich nit an unser sund, sonder den glauben deiner christlichen kirchen, die wir dan glauben und nit sehen, welche du nach deinem gottlichen willen, bewaren, vereinigen, regiren wollest mit deinem himlischen Vater und dem Heiligen Geist in ewigkeit. Amen. Alia oratio: O Herr Jesu Christe, du Sun des lebendigen Gottes, der du aus dem willen deines Vaters mit mitwurkung des Heiligen Geistes durch deinen tod die welt widerumb lebendig gemacht hast. Erlos uns durch die nemung deines leibs und bluts von allen unsern sunden und von allem ubl und gieb uns, das wir allzeit deinen göttlichen gepoten anhangen und nimmermer von dir geschiden werden! Der du mit Gott, deinem himlischen Vater und dem Heiligen Geist lebst und regirst in ewigkeit. Amen. Alia oratio: Die empfahung deines fleisch und bluts, Jesu Christe, das wir arme sünder nießen in vergebung unser sünd, gestatt uns nit zu einem urtel oder verdambnus, sonder sei unser beschirmung hie und dort in ewigkeit! Amen.

O Lord Jesu Christ, thou hast said unto thy disciples: Peace I give unto you; my peace I leave with you; not as the world giveth, give I it unto you. Wherefore, my Lord, look not upon our sins, but upon the faith of thy Christian Church, which we believe and see not; which vouchsafe thou, according to thy divine will, to keep, unite and govern, with thy heavenly Father and the Holy Ghost, for ever. Amen. Another prayer: O Lord Jesu Christ, thou Son of the living God, who by the will of thy Father, with the working together of the Holy Ghost, hast by thy death made the world alive again: deliver us by the taking of thy body and blood from all our sins and from all evil, and grant us that we may at all times cleave unto thy divine commandments, and never more be parted from thee! Who with God thy heavenly Father and the Holy Ghost livest and reignest for ever. Amen. Another prayer: Let the receiving of thy flesh and blood, Jesu Christ, which we poor sinners partake unto the forgiveness of our sins, not be suffered to turn to us unto judgement or damnation, but be our defence here and there for ever! Amen.

Note. These are the priest's three prayers before communion, in German, twenty years before Brandenburg kept them in Latin (§7.12.5). Sehling thought only one of them was meant to be chosen ("Alia oratio").

1. Domine Iesu Christe, qui dixisti.
   - John 14:27 is given in full, including "not as the world giveth" (not in the Roman prayer).
   - "die wir dan glauben und nit sehen" is added.
   - The Tridentine verbs are pacificare et coadunare. Volprecht's "bewaren, vereinigen, regiren" are instead the custodire, adunare et regere of Te igitur, as in Brandenburg's Latin (§7.12.5).
2. Fili Dei vivi.
   - Per hoc sacrosanctum Corpus et Sanguinem tuum becomes "durch die nemung deines leibs und bluts", "by the taking". The deliverance comes through receiving, not through the consecrated elements.
   - Inhaerere is kept ("anhangen").

    - The prayer is plural.
3. Perceptio Corporis tui. The body and blood are named ("fleisch und bluts").
    - Praesumo disappears; "in vergebung unser sünd" is added.
    - Tutamentum mentis et corporis, et ad medelam percipiendam is shortened to "beschirmung hie und dort".

> Hic sumit corpus Christi dicendo: Der leib unsers Herrn Jesus Christi, der für uns dargeben ist, bewar mein sel in das ewig leben! Amen. Last uns auch trinken den kelch des heils und anrufen den namen des Herrn! Hic sumit sanguinem dicendo: Das blut unsers Herrn Jesu Christi, das fur uns vergossen ist, bewar mein sel in das ewig leben! Amen. Statim dicat: Das wir haben empfangen mit dem mund, gib, allmechtiger Gott, das wirs auch empfahen mit reinem herzen, das aus einer zeitlichen gab uns werd ein ewigs erznei! Alia oratio: Der leib und das blut des Herrn, das wir empfangen haben, hang allzeit inwendig an unsern herzen und gib, allmechtiger Gott, das in uns nit bleib ein makel der sünd, der du uns hast gespeist mit deinem heiligen sacramenten!

Here he receiveth the body of Christ, saying: The body of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is given for us, preserve my soul unto everlasting life! Amen. Let us also drink the cup of salvation and call upon the name of the Lord! Here he receiveth the blood, saying: The blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is shed for us, preserve my soul unto everlasting life! Amen. Straightway let him say: What we have received with the mouth, grant, almighty God, that we may receive it also with a pure heart, that of a temporal gift it may become unto us an everlasting medicine! Another prayer: May the body and the blood of the Lord, which we have received, cleave alway inwardly unto our hearts; and grant, almighty God, that there remain not in us a stain of sin, who hast fed us with thy holy sacraments!

Note.

- The priest's communion.
    - Custodiat. "Bewar mein sel in das ewig leben" is Corpus Domini nostri Iesu Christi custodiat animam meam in vitam aeternam. "der für uns dargeben ist" is added.
    - Calicem salutaris. "Last uns auch trinken den kelch des heils" is Calicem salutaris accipiam (Ps 116:13), plural, as in Kantz (§7.2.6).
- The ablution prayers.
    - Quod ore sumpsimus is complete: Quod ore sumpsimus, Domine, pura mente capiamus: et de munere temporali fiat nobis remedium sempiternum.
    - Corpus tuum is made plural: Corpus tuum, Domine, quod sumpsi, et Sanguis, quem potavi, adhaereat visceribus meis: et praesta, ut in me non remaneat scelerum macula, quem pura et sancta refecerunt sacramenta. "Visceribus" becomes "inwendig an unsern herzen".
    - Sehling again thinks only one of the two was meant.
- No communion of the people is provided for in the text. The exhortation printed after the Mass (the Nürnberg exhortation, §7.8.7) is for those who "zu Gottes disch wollten gein, vor oder unter der mess".

> Communio: Wir loben Gott der himmel und bekennen vor allermeniglich lebendigen, das er mit uns gehandelt hat nach seiner barmherzigkeit. Briester: Der Herr sei mit euch! Antwort: Und mit deinem geist! Briester: Last uns bitten! Die empfahung deines sacraments, o Herr, unser Gott, welchen wir haben genumen, kum uns zu hail laibs und auch der selen und zu bekenntnis der ewigen heiligen Trivaltigkeit und unzertailten Einigkeit durch unsern Herrn Jesum Christum, deinen Sohn, der mit dir lebt und herrscht in einigkeit des Heiligen Geists immer und ewiglich! Amen. Briester: Der Herr sei mit euch! Antwort: Und mit deinem geist! Darnach spricht der priester den segen also: Der Herr gesegne euch und behüt euch! Der Herr erleucht sein angesicht uber euch und sei euch gnedig! Der Herr heb sein angesicht auf euch und geb euch den frid! Antwort: Amen. Briester: Last uns den Herrn lob und dank sagen! Antwort: Gott sei gedankt. Finis misse.

Communion: We praise the God of heaven, and confess before all that live, that he hath dealt with us according to his mercy. Priest: The Lord be with you! Answer: And with thy spirit! Priest: Let us pray! May the receiving of thy sacrament, O Lord our God, which we have taken, come unto us for the health of body and also of soul, and for the confession of the eternal holy Trinity and undivided Unity; through our Lord Jesus Christ, thy Son, who with thee liveth and reigneth in the unity of the Holy Ghost, ever and everlastingly! Amen. Priest: The Lord be with you! Answer: And with thy spirit! Thereafter the priest speaketh the blessing thus: The Lord bless you and keep you! The Lord make his face shine upon you and be gracious unto you! The Lord lift up his countenance upon you and give you peace! Answer: Amen. Priest: Let us give praise and thanks unto the Lord! Answer: Thanks be to God. The end of the Mass.

Note.

- The Mass is that of Trinity Sunday, from the Bamberg missal. The communion chant is Benedicimus Deum caeli, et coram omnibus viventibus confitebimur ei: quia fecit nobiscum misericordiam suam (Tob 12:6).
- The postcommunion is the Roman postcommunion of Trinity Sunday: Proficiat nobis ad salutem corporis et animae, Domine Deus noster, huius sacramenti susceptio: et sempiternae sanctae Trinitatis, eiusdemque individuae Unitatis confessio. Lippe uses it too (§7.10).
- The ending. "Last uns den Herrn lob und dank sagen / Gott sei gedankt" is the Benedicamus Domino / Deo gratias. The Aaronic blessing (Luther's suggestion, §7.3.5) stands before it.

7.7.3 Form und Ordnung einer Christlichen Messe, 1525

> Nach dem hebt der priester die prefation an, dominicaliter: Dominus vobiscum! Chorus: Et cum spiritu tuo! Sursum corda etc. bis daher, per Christum Dominum nostrum. Darnach hebt er das Qui pridie an und, alsbald der priester elevirt hat, hebt der chor das Sanctus an. Nach demselben singt der priester das Pater noster, mit dem anfang: Oremus praeceptis salutaribus etc. Nach dem Pater noster list der priester oder ministrant die exhortation gegen dem volk: Mein allerliebsten in Gott etc. So dasselbig ein end hat, kert sich der priester gegen dem volk und singt: Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum! Chorus: Et cum spiritu tuo! Darnach hebt der chor das Agnus Dei an, wie dann hernach volgt. Dieweil communicirt der priester das volk und spricht mit ersten: Der leib unsers Herrn Jesu Christi bewar dein seel zum ewigen leben! Darnach: Das blut unsers Herrn Jesu Christi beware dein seel zum ewigen leben! […] Nach dem Agnus Dei von stund an hebt der chor ein psalm an für das commun oder sunst ein lied. Nach demselbigen beschleußt der priester die meß mit einer collecten. Darnach mit dem Benedicamus Domino, dominicaliter.

After that the priest beginneth the Preface, in the Sunday tone: The Lord be with you! Choir: And with thy spirit! Lift up your hearts, etc., as far as "through Christ our Lord". Thereafter he beginneth the Qui pridie, and as soon as the priest hath elevated, the choir beginneth the Sanctus. After the same the priest singeth the Pater noster, with the beginning: Let us pray: Taught by wholesome precepts, etc. After the Pater noster the priest or minister readeth the exhortation toward the people: My dearly beloved in God, etc. When that is ended, the priest turneth toward the people and singeth: The peace of the Lord be alway with you! Choir: And with thy spirit! Thereafter the choir beginneth the Agnus Dei, as followeth hereafter. Meanwhile the priest communicateth the people and saith first: The body of our Lord Jesus Christ preserve thy soul unto everlasting life! Then: The blood of our Lord Jesus Christ preserve thy soul unto everlasting life! […] Immediately after the Agnus Dei the choir beginneth a psalm for the communion, or else a hymn. After the same the priest concludeth the Mass with a collect. Thereafter with the Benedicamus Domino, in the Sunday tone.

Note.

- The shape. This is the Mass of the parish churches (§7.7.1) as sung by 1525: shortened Preface, Qui pridie (Sehling: presumably sung in Latin), elevation, Sanctus, Praeceptis salutaribus and the Our Father, the exhortation, Pax Domini.
- What is new is the German custodiat at the distribution, in the second person.
- What follows in the print. The German Sanctus and Agnus Dei printed after the rubrics ("Lamb Gottes, das du wek nimbst die sünd der welt …") are omitted here.

7.8 Nürnberg, Döber's Deutsche Messe, 1525

Andreas Döber's German Mass for the Neues Spital, Nürnberg. Sehling 11, I.6, pp. 52–55.

Döber follows the order Luther proposed in the Formula missae (1523), as Nürnberg's parish churches had done in 1524. There is no offertory. A truncated Preface runs straight into the Verba, and the Sanctus follows the Verba. Of the Canon, only the Verba remain in place. The Roman prayers after the Our Father survive as three things: a remnant of the embolism, a German Agnus Dei, and the Domine Iesu Christe, Fili Dei vivi, which is turned into a prayer for the people to repeat.

7.8.1 Preparation of the gifts (after the Gradual)

> Nach der epistel volgt das gradual. Nach demselben bereit der priester den kelch mit sambt dem brot. […] Nach dem alleluia fragt der priester den ministranten, ob sich jemand hab angesagt, das heilig sacrament zu empfahen. Darauf bereit er zu und, so dasselbig geschehen ist, wendt er sich zum volk oder legts buch aufs pult und lists evangelion Johan 6.

After the Epistle followeth the Gradual. After the same the priest prepareth the cup together with the bread. […] After the Alleluia the priest asketh the server whether any have announced himself to receive the holy sacrament. Thereupon he maketh ready; and when that is done, he turneth himself to the people, or layeth the book upon the desk, and readeth the Gospel, John 6.

Note. This is all that is left of the offertory: a silent preparation, moved in front of the Gospel, with no prayers. The Nicene or Apostles' Creed follows the Gospel. The Mass then goes on at once to the Preface.

7.8.2 Preface

> Nach dem hebt der priester die prefation an: Der Herr sei mit euch! Das volk: Und mit deinem geist! Der priester: Erhebet euer herzen zu Got! Das volk: Wir haben unser herzen erhaben. Der priester: Last uns danksagen Got, unserm Herrn! Das volk: Es ist billich und recht. Der priester: Ja warlich, es ist billich und recht, auch heilsam, das wir an allen orten dir, Herr, heiliger Vater, almechtiger, ewiger Gott, dank sagen durch Christum unsern Herren. Amen.

After that the priest beginneth the Preface: The Lord be with you! The people: And with thy spirit! The priest: Lift up your hearts unto God! The people: We have lifted up our hearts. The priest: Let us give thanks unto God our Lord! The people: It is meet and right. The priest: Yea verily, it is meet and right, and also wholesome, that we should in all places give thanks unto thee, O Lord, holy Father, almighty, everlasting God, through Christ our Lord. Amen.

Note. This is Luther's shortened Preface from the Formula missae. It was meant to end at per Christum Dominum nostrum and to run straight into the relative clause Qui pridie. Sehling notes that Döber's "Amen" breaks that join, and shows that Döber "did not understand its sense".

7.8.3 The Verba

> Darnach spricht der priester und nimbts brod in die hend: Welcher in der nacht, do er verraten ward, nam er das brot in sein heilige hend, saget dank seinem himlischen Vater, segnets, brachs und gabs seinen jüngern und sprach zu ihnen: Nembt hin und esset! Das ist mein leib, der für euch dargeben würd. Das tut zu meiner gedechtnus! Und zeigts dem volk. Nun nimbt er den kelck in die hand: Desgleichen auch nam er den kelch in sein heilige händ, saget dank seinem himlischen Vater, segnets und gabs seinen jüngern und sprach: Nembt hin und drinkt aus disem alle! Das ist der kelch des neuen testaments mit meinem plut, das für euch und für vil vergossen wirt zur verzeihung der sünden. Also oft ir das tut, so tuts zu meiner gedechtnus! Und zeigts dem volk.

Thereafter the priest saith, and taketh the bread into his hands: Who, in the night in which he was betrayed, took the bread into his holy hands, gave thanks unto his heavenly Father, blessed it, brake it, and gave it to his disciples, and said unto them: Take and eat! This is my body, which is given for you. This do in remembrance of me! And he showeth it to the people. Now he taketh the cup into his hand: Likewise also he took the cup into his holy hands, gave thanks unto his heavenly Father, blessed it, and gave it to his disciples, and said: Take and drink ye all of this! This is the cup of the new testament with my blood, which is shed for you and for many for the forgiveness of sins. As oft as ye do this, do it in remembrance of me! And he showeth it to the people.

Note. The frame is the Canon's:

- "in sein heilige hend" renders in sanctas ac venerabiles manus suas;
- "saget dank seinem himlischen Vater" renders ad te Deum Patrem suum omnipotentem, tibi gratias agens;
- "Also oft ir das tut" renders Haec quotiescumque feceritis.

The opening, though, is Paul's "in der nacht, do er verraten ward" (1 Cor 11:23), not Qui pridie. In the 1524 order of the parish churches (Sehling 11, I.5, p. 47) the Verba were still said in Latin, Qui pridie … Hoc est enim corpus meum … mysterium fidei.

7.8.4 Sanctus

> Nach diesem spricht er das Sanctus, wie hernach volgt. Das sanctus: Heiliger, heiliger, heiliger Herr Got Sabaoth. Vol sind die himel und ertrich deiner glori und herrlicheit. Ach, mach uns selig in der höhe! Gebenedeiet sei der da kumbt im namen des Herrn! Selig mach uns in den höhen!

After this he saith the Sanctus, as followeth. The Sanctus: Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Sabaoth. Full are the heavens and the earth of thy glory and majesty. Ah, save us in the height! Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord! Save us in the heights!

Note. Hosanna is translated by its meaning, "help/save us" ("mach uns selig"), as in Volprecht's Mass of 1524.

7.8.5 Our Father and the remnant of the embolism

> Darnach soll der priester sprechen, wie Matthei am 6. stehet: Als die jüngern zu dem Herrn Jesu kamen, baten in, er solt sie beten leren, do sprach er: Wenn ihr beten wölt, so solt ir nit vil plappern, wie die heuchler tun; denn sie meinen, wenn sie vil wort machen, so werden sie erhört. Sonder sprecht also wie denn hernach volgt: Vater unser, der du bist in den himeln, geheiliget werd dein name! Zukum uns dein reich! Dein wil geschehe als im himel und auf erden! Unser teglich brot gib uns heut und vergibe uns unsere schuld, als und wir vergeben unsern schuldigern! Und nit einfür uns in versuchung, sonder erlös uns von übel! Amen. Und spricht weiter: O Herr, erlös uns von allen sichtigen und unsichtigen feinden, von dem Teufel, von der welt, von unserm eigen fleisch durch Christum Jesum, unsern Herren. Amen.

Thereafter the priest shall say, as it standeth in Matthew the sixth: When the disciples came unto the Lord Jesus and besought him that he should teach them to pray, he said: When ye will pray, ye shall not babble much, as the hypocrites do; for they think that when they make many words they shall be heard. But say thus, as hereafter followeth: Our Father, which art in the heavens, hallowed be thy name! Thy kingdom come unto us! Thy will be done as in heaven and in earth! Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debts, as we also forgive our debtors! And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil! Amen. And he saith further: O Lord, deliver us from all visible and invisible enemies, from the devil, from the world, from our own flesh; through Christ Jesus our Lord. Amen.

Note.

- The introduction to the Our Father. Praeceptis salutaribus moniti is replaced by Christ's own warrant (Mt 6:7; Lk 11:1). Sehling calls it an "Umgestaltung der Einleitung".
- The embolism. The prayer after the Our Father is what Sehling calls the "Rest des Embolismus". It keeps the Libera nos … Domine form and the Per … Christum ending. The "evils past, present and to come", the saints and the petition for peace give way to the Lutheran triad of devil, world and flesh.

7.8.6 Salutation and Agnus Dei

> Darnach wendt sich der priester zum volk und spricht: Der Herr sei mit euch! Das volk: Und mit deinem geist! Nach dem spricht der priester: Du lamb Gottes, das du weknimbst die sünd der welt, erbarm dich unser! Du lamb Gottes, das du weknimbst die sünd der welt, gib uns den frid!

Thereafter the priest turneth to the people and saith: The Lord be with you! The people: And with thy spirit! After that the priest saith: O thou Lamb of God, that takest away the sin of the world, have mercy upon us! O thou Lamb of God, that takest away the sin of the world, give us peace!

Note. Dominus vobiscum stands where Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum stood.

7.8.7 The exhortation (Osiander)

> Nach disem wend sich der priester zum volk und spricht die exhortation, wie dann hernach volgt. Mein allerliebsten in Got! Dieweil wir jetzo das abentessen unsers Herren Jesu Christi wöllen bedenken und halten, darin uns sein flaisch und plut zur speis und zum trank, nicht des leibs, sondern der selen gegeben wirt, söllen wir pillich mit großem vleiß ain jedlicher sich selbs prüfen, wie Paulus sagt, und alsdann von disem prot essen und von disem kelch trinken. Dann es soll nicht dann nur ain hungerige seel, die ir sünd erkennt, Gottes zorn und den tod fürcht und nach der gerechtigkait hungerig und durstig ist, dis heilig sacrament empfahen. So wir aber uns selbs prüfen, finden wir nichts in uns dann sünd und tod, kunden auch uns selbs in keinen weg daraus helfen. Darumb hat unser lieber Herr Jesus Christus sich uber uns erparmet, ist umb unsertwillen mensch worden, das er für uns das gesetz erfüllet und lide, was wir mit unsern sünden verschuldet hetten, und daß wir das je festiglich glauben und uns frölich darauf verlassen möchten, nam er nach dem abentessen das prot, saget dank, prachs und sprach: Nempt hin und esset! Das ist mein leib, der für euch dar gegeben wirt, als wölt er sagen: Daß ich mensch bin worden und alles, was ich tu und leide, das ist alles euer aigen, für euch und euch zu gut > geschehen. Des zu gewissen warzaichen gib ich euch mein leib zur speis. Desgleichen auch den kelck und sprach: Nempt hin, und trinkt aus disem alle! Das ist der kelch des neuen testaments mit meinem plut, das für euch und für vil vergossen wirt, zur verzeihung der sünd. So oft ir das tut, solt ir mein darbei gedenken! Als wölt er sprechen: Dieweil ich mich euer angenommen, und euer sünd auf mich geladen hab, will ich mich selbs für die sünde in den tod opfern, mein plut vergießen, gnad und vergebung der sünd erwerben und also ain neu testament aufrichten, darin der sünd ewig nicht soll gedacht werden. Des zum gewisen warzeichen gib ich euch mein plut zu trinken. Wer nun also von disem prot isset, und von disem kelch trinket, das ist: Wer diesen worten, die er horet, und disen zaichen, die er empfahet, festiglich glaubet, der bleibt in Christo und Christus in im und lebet also ewiglich. Darbei söllen wir an seines tods gedenken und ime darumb danksagen, ain jedlicher sein creuz auf sich nemen und ime nachfolgen und zuvor ainer den andern lieb haben, wie er auch uns geliebt hat, dann wir vil sein ain prot und ain leib, die wir alle aines prots taihaftig sein und aus ainem kelch trinken. Das verleihe uns Got allen, das wirs wirdiglich empfahen. Amen.

After this the priest turneth to the people and saith the exhortation, as hereafter followeth. My dearly beloved in God! Forasmuch as we will now consider and keep the supper of our Lord Jesus Christ, wherein his flesh and blood are given us for meat and for drink, not of the body but of the soul, we ought rightly with great diligence every one to examine himself, as Paul saith, and so to eat of this bread and drink of this cup. For none but a hungry soul, which knoweth its sin, feareth God's wrath and death, and is hungry and thirsty after righteousness, ought to receive this holy sacrament. But when we examine ourselves, we find nothing in us but sin and death, and could in no wise help ourselves out thereof. Therefore hath our dear Lord Jesus Christ had mercy upon us, and for our sakes is become man, that he might fulfil the law for us and suffer that which we had deserved with our sins. And that we might steadfastly believe this and joyfully rely thereupon, he took after the supper the bread, gave thanks, brake it, and said: Take and eat! This is my body, which is given for you; as if he would say: That I am become man, and all that I do and suffer, that is all your own, done for you and for your good. For a sure token thereof I give you my body for meat. Likewise also the cup, and said: Take and drink ye all of this! This is the cup of the new testament with my blood, which is shed for you and for many for the forgiveness of sins. As oft as ye do this, ye shall remember me thereby! As if he would say: Forasmuch as I have taken your cause upon me and laden your sins upon myself, I will offer myself unto death for sin, shed my blood, obtain grace and forgiveness of sins, and so set up a new testament, wherein sin shall be remembered no more for ever. For a sure token thereof I give you my blood to drink. Whosoever now eateth thus of this bread and drinketh of this cup, that is, whosoever firmly believeth these words which he heareth and these signs which he receiveth, he dwelleth in Christ and Christ in him, and so liveth for ever. Hereby shall we remember his death and give him thanks therefor, every one take up his cross and follow him, and above all love one another, as he also hath loved us; for we being many are one bread and one body, who are all partakers of one bread and drink of one cup. God grant us all this, that we may receive it worthily. Amen.

Note. Sehling does not reprint the text here. He points to the order of the parish churches of 1524 (Sehling 11, I.5, p. 48), whose base text is Osiander's exhortation from the provosts' Grundt und ursach (1524).

The text above is that base text with Döber's readings (Sehling's siglum D) taken from his apparatus:

- Mein allerliebsten;
- kunden auch uns selbs in keinen weg;
- das er für uns;
- zur verzeihung;
- ewig nicht soll gedacht;
- zum gewisen warzeichen;
- in Christo without dem Herren;
- lieb haben;
- the closing sentence Das verleihe uns Got allen …, which p. 54 confirms.

One point is uncertain. For "Des zu [ainem] gewissen warzaichen" (the bread) the apparatus is garbled; it seems to say D lacks ainem.

In Nürnberg this exhortation stood where the Latin Verba had been read silently. Once the Verba were sung aloud in German, Sehling notes, the exhortation "doubled" them.

7.8.8 Domine Iesu Christe, Fili Dei vivi, said by the people

> Nach diser exhortation wendt sich der priester zum altar und spricht zum volk: Sprecht mir nach: O Herr Jesu Christe, du ewigs wort des Vaters, du Heiland der welt, du warer, lebendiger Got und mensch, erlöse uns durch deinen heiligen fronleichnam und rosenfarbes blut von allen sünden! Hilf, das wir erfüllen deine gebot zu allen zeiten und von dir nicht gescheiden werden in ewigkeit! Amen.

After this exhortation the priest turneth to the altar and saith to the people: Say after me: O Lord Jesus Christ, thou eternal Word of the Father, thou Saviour of the world, thou true, living God and man, deliver us by thy holy body and rose-red blood from all sins! Help that we may fulfil thy commandments at all times, and be not separated from thee for ever! Amen.

Note. This is Domine Iesu Christe, Fili Dei vivi, qui ex voluntate Patris, cooperante Spiritu Sancto, per mortem tuam mundum vivificasti: libera me per hoc sacrosanctum Corpus et Sanguinem tuum ab omnibus iniquitatibus meis, et universis malis: et fac me tuis semper inhaerere mandatis, et a te numquam separari permittas. Sehling calls it "leicht umgestaltet", as in Volprecht's Mass.

- Opening. The Trinitarian opening is replaced by titles of Christ.
- Number and speaker. Me becomes uns.
- Words for body and blood. Fronleichnam is the old word for the Lord's body (as in Fronleichnamsfest, Corpus Christi). Rosenfarbes blut is a late-medieval devotional epithet.
- Who says it. The priest's private preparation before his communion is now said by the people after him.

7.8.9 Communion

> Nun communicirt er das volk von ersten, ob er will, und so er in den leib Christi darreicht, spricht er zu in: Der leib Christi bewar dein seel zum ewigen leben! Desgleichen spricht er auch, wenn ers nimbt. Und darnach nimbt er den kelch und spricht: Das blut unsers lieben Herren Jesu Christi, das für mich und für euch vergossen ist in vergebung der sünde, bewar mein seel zum ewigen leben! Und wenn er sumirt hat, bind er den kelch ein.

Now he communicateth the people first, if he will; and when he reacheth them the body of Christ, he saith unto them: The body of Christ preserve thy soul unto everlasting life! The same he saith also when he taketh it himself. And thereafter he taketh the cup and saith: The blood of our dear Lord Jesus Christ, which is shed for me and for you unto the forgiveness of sins, preserve my soul unto everlasting life! And when he hath consumed, he bindeth up the cup.

Note. These are Corpus Domini nostri Iesu Christi custodiat animam tuam in vitam aeternam and the priest's Sanguis Domini nostri Iesu Christi custodiat animam meam …, with "das für mich und für euch vergossen ist in vergebung der sünde" added.

"Bind er den kelch ein" means he wraps the chalice in its bag.

7.8.10 Nunc dimittis, postcommunion, dismissal and blessing

> Nach demselben spricht er zum volk: Sprecht mir nach: O Herr, nun laß im frid deinen diener nach deinem wort; dann unsere augen haben gesehen deinen heiland, welchen du bereitet hast vor dem angesicht aller völker, ein licht, zu erleuchten die heiden und zu einer glori deines volks Israhel. Dir sei lob, ehr und dank, o du heilige, gebenedeite, herliche Dreifeldigkeit, Got Vater, Got Sun und Heiliger Geist! Amen. Nach disem kert sich der priester zu dem volk und spricht also: Der Herr sei mit euch! Das volk: Und mit deinem geist! Darnach die collecten spricht zum volk: Last uns bitten: O Herr, allmechtiger Got, verleih uns in unser gemüt und herzen, das wir durch den zeitlichen tod deines Suns, welche dise wirdige geheimnus bedeuten, das wir getrauen, das du uns geben hast das ewig leben durch den Christum, unsern Herrn. Amen. Zu dem letzten kert er sich umb zum volk und spricht: Der Herr sei mit euch! Das volk: Und mit deinem geist! Der priester: Saget dank dem Herren! Das volk: Got sei lob und dank! Der priester: Neigt eur herz zu Got, so will ich euch den segen geben! Und spricht: Der Herr gebenedei dich und behüt dich und erleucht sein angesicht über dich und erbarm sich dein und wend sein angesicht zu dir und geb dir den ewigen frid im namen des Vaters und Suns und des Heiligen Geists! Amen. Gehet hin im frid des Herren! Nun gehet der priester hinweg vom altar. So habt ir das end diser evangelische meß. Got wöl uns verleihen, was uns nütz sei zu seel und leib! Amen.

After the same he saith to the people: Say after me: O Lord, now let thy servant depart in peace according to thy word; for our eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all peoples, a light to lighten the Gentiles and to be the glory of thy people Israel. To thee be praise, honour and thanks, O thou holy, blessed, glorious Trinity, God the Father, God the Son and Holy Ghost! Amen. After this the priest turneth to the people and saith thus: The Lord be with you! The people: And with thy spirit! Thereafter he saith the collect to the people: Let us pray: O Lord, almighty God, grant unto us in our mind and heart that, through the temporal death of thy Son, which these worthy mysteries signify, we may trust that thou hast given us everlasting life; through the Christ our Lord. Amen. Last of all he turneth about to the people and saith: The Lord be with you! The people: And with thy spirit! The priest: Give thanks unto the Lord! The people: God be praise and thanks! The priest: Incline your hearts unto God, and I will give you the blessing! And he saith: The Lord bless thee and keep thee, and lighten his countenance upon thee, and have mercy upon thee, and turn his countenance unto thee, and give thee everlasting peace; in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost! Amen. Go ye in the peace of the Lord! Now the priest goeth away from the altar. So have ye the end of this evangelical Mass. God grant us that which is profitable for soul and body! Amen.

Note.

- The collect. It follows the Roman postcommunion of Wednesday in Holy Week: Largire sensibus nostris, omnipotens Deus: ut per temporalem Filii tui mortem, quam mysteria veneranda testantur, vitam te nobis dedisse perpetuam confidamus. Sehling calls it "anscheinend neu geschaffen"; the Roman source is identified here for the first time. Note that testantur ("bear witness to") is rendered bedeuten.
- The dismissal. "Saget dank dem Herren … Got sei lob und dank" answers to Benedicamus Domino / Deo gratias. Sehling reads "Gehet hin im frid des Herren" as a paraphrase of Ite, missa est.

7.8.11 Optional intercession in the place of Te igitur

> Es volgt ein gemein gebet, an einem feiertag zu sprechen, wenn vil volks da ist, nach der prefation oder für das Sanctus, wie man wil. Almechtiger, ewiger Got und barmherziger Vater. Dieweil dein Sun, unser Herr Jesus Christus, zugesagt hat, was wir bitten in seinem namen, das werdestu uns gewehren, und zu dem, dieweil dein Geist auch bevohlen hat, das wir für unser oberigkeit bitten sollen, bitten wir von herzen, du wöllest die gemüter des kaisers, der fürsten und herrn, vorab unser herren und öbern ains ersamen rats zu erkantnus deiner güte und des evangelions bewegen, auch das du deinem Sun durch den Hailigen Gaist undertenig machest alle völker, auf das si selbs willig sein verheißung erkennen, annemen und behüten, und vorab diser gemein verleihe, das si zuneme in erkantnus des evangelions und seines süßen jochs und gemachsamen bürden. Diweil nu, almechtiger, ewiger Got, geliebter und barmherziger Vater, dein ainiger Sun, unser Herr Jesus, in die welt kumen ist zu ainem arzt der kranken und nit der gesunden und aber unser blindheit die gegenwertige schand der sunden durch sich selbs nit sehen noch für krankhait erkennen mag, dann wir leider vergift sind und in unser irrung und übertretung uns selbs gefallen, die gebot Gottes hassen, die laster lieben, so biten wir, du wöllest durch Got den Heiligen Geist dein gesatz in unser herzen schreiben und die verborgen sünd in uns lebendig machen und also uns verleihen, das wir brüfen und empfinden mögen, wie unmüglich es uns ist, guts zu tun, damit wir ein hunger und durst gewinnen zu der genaden und gerechtigkait, so vor dir allein gilt, welche du der welt geben hast durch Christum Jesum unsern Herren. Nach disem volgt das Qui pridie. Gott sei lob!

There followeth a common prayer, to be said on a feast day when much people is present, after the Preface or before the Sanctus, as one will. Almighty, everlasting God and merciful Father: forasmuch as thy Son our Lord Jesus Christ hath promised that whatsoever we ask in his name, thou wilt grant it us; and moreover, forasmuch as thy Spirit also hath commanded that we should pray for our magistrates: we beseech thee from our hearts that thou wouldest move the minds of the emperor, the princes and lords, and above all of our lords and superiors of an honourable council, unto the knowledge of thy goodness and of the Gospel; and also that thou wouldest make all peoples subject unto thy Son through the Holy Ghost, that they themselves may willingly acknowledge, receive and keep his promise; and above all grant unto this congregation that it may increase in the knowledge of the Gospel, and of his sweet yoke and easy burden. Forasmuch now, almighty, everlasting God, beloved and merciful Father, as thine only Son our Lord Jesus is come into the world to be a physician of the sick and not of the whole, and yet our blindness cannot of itself see the present shame of sin nor know it for a sickness, for we are, alas, poisoned, and please ourselves in our error and transgression, hate the commandments of God and love vices: we pray thee that thou wouldest, through God the Holy Ghost, write thy law in our hearts and make the hidden sin alive in us, and so grant us that we may prove and perceive how impossible it is for us to do good; that we may gain a hunger and thirst after the grace and righteousness which alone availeth before thee, which thou hast given to the world through Christ Jesus our Lord. After this followeth the Qui pridie. God be praised!

Note. Sehling traces the prayer to the Strasbourg order of 1524 (Moderate Reformed). Its rubric puts it exactly where Te igitur stood: after the Preface, before the Sanctus in Döber's order, and leading into Qui pridie. It intercedes for the emperor, princes and council, for all peoples, and for "this congregation". These are the intentions of Te igitur and the Memento, turned into an evangelical prayer for faith and for the knowledge of sin.

7.9 Bremen, Eyne evangelysce Misse, 1525 (Kantz in Low German)

Eyne evangelysce Misse myt etlijke schone gebede … Bremen 1525. Sehling 7, III, Nr. 1, pp. 403–407 (eko.db doc 2216).

The Mass itself is Kantz's order of 1522 (§7.2) in Low German. Before it stand three devotional prayers for the communicant. The second is a "betrachtinge by der Misse", a meditation during Mass. Its opening confession of the Real Presence is the nearest thing in the order to a Canon.

The foreword warns that the prayers are no rule: they are meant to show "what faith and desire are needed to receive the testament of Christ in a Christian manner".

7.9.1 The meditation during Mass

> Eyn betrachtinge by der Misse Almechtige, ewige Got, mijn here Jesu Christe, Ick gelove, dat in dussem brode jegenwordich sy dijn hillige ware licham unde in dussem wijne dijn durbar blot angenamen hefst, um Adam unde al syne nakomelinge to verlosen van den ewigen dode. Unde heft uns gelaten in dussem hochwerdigen Sacramente eyn seker, wisse teken dijner waraftiger beloftenisse, de sunden to vergeven, dat dijne worde betugen, de in der Missen gesproken werden: Nemet hen unde etet. Dat is mijn licham, dat voer iw gegeven wert. Nemet hen unde drincket dar alle af. Dit is mijn bloet, dat vor iw vergaten wert to vergevinge der sunden. Up sulken trosteliken toseggen begere ick wt mynen gantsen herten, in rechter tovorsicht unde guden vortruwen, dat du my nicht latest leddich unde hongerich ungespiset van hier gan, sunder spisen wilst unde laven myt dijn levendige woert, Welker uns vercundiget vergevinge unser sunden dorch dyn licham unde bloet, Uppe dat ick in warer liften jegen dy unde broderlike trwe jegen mynen nechsten bevestiget mach werden.

A meditation at the Mass Almighty, everlasting God, my Lord Jesu Christ, I believe that in this bread is present thy holy true body, and in this wine thy precious blood, which thou hast taken upon thee to redeem Adam and all his posterity from everlasting death. And thou hast left us in this most worthy Sacrament a sure and certain sign of thy true promise to forgive sins, which thy words witness that are spoken in the Mass: Take and eat. This is my body, which is given for you. Take and drink ye all thereof. This is my blood, which is shed for you for the forgiveness of sins. Upon such comfortable promise I desire from my whole heart, in right confidence and good trust, that thou let me not go hence empty and hungry, unfed, but wilt feed and refresh me with thy living word, which proclaimeth unto us the forgiveness of our sins through thy body and blood; that I may be established in true love toward thee and brotherly faithfulness toward my neighbour.

Note.

- Who is addressed. The prayer is addressed to Christ as "Almechtige, ewige Got" and confesses the Real Presence "in dussem brode … in dussem wijne".
- The Verba are quoted from "the words spoken in the Mass": the priest's words are now heard by the congregation.
- The Roman background. It is the priest's private preparation for communion, of the kind in the late-medieval Praeparatio ad missam, given to the laity.

7.9.2 The Mass: preparation

The preparation follows Kantz (§7.2.1–7.2.2) closely:

- the exhortation "Alderlevesten in Christo, Uppe dat gy myt vroliken unde begerliken herten entfangen mogen den kosteliken schat unde dat testamente des vlesches unde blodes Christi Jesu …";
- the absolution;
- "Bicht des presters", the recast Orate fratres: "biddet oeck Got trwelick vor my, dat he my mijne sunden vergevende, bequeme make iw syn tekene to delen" ("that he … make me meet to distribute his signs to you");
- Ps 124:8;
- the Veni Sancte Spiritus antiphon, said "hemelick" by all;
- Kantz's collect, "O Here, almechtige Got, help, dat by uns sy unde wane dyn hillige geist …".

7.9.3 Preface, Sanctus, Quam oblationem and Qui pridie

> Prefacio ofte vorrede der Missen Vorhevet iw herten to Gade unde latet uns danckseggen Gade, unsen heren. Went et is billick, recht unde heilsam, dat wy in allen orden unde to aller tyt dy here, hillige vader, almechtige, ewige Got, danckseggen dorck Christum, unsen leven heren, Dorch welken alle engelen unde hemmelsche crachte anbeden, eren unde laven dyne hillige maiesteit. Myt den sulvigen bidden wy, wilt to laten unde annemen unse stemme, dat wy dy oeck laven unde spreken sunder ende: Sanctus: Dat is: Hillige, Hillige, Hillige, here Got der herscaren. Vul synt hemmel unde erde dijner herlicheit. Osanna in den hogesten. Gebenediet sy, de dar kumpt in den name des heren. Gelucke unde heil in den hogesten. Hier hevet sick erst de Evangelische Misse an Eyn gebeth vor an to Gade O Alder guedigeste vader, barmhertige, ewige Got, giff uns, dat wy vast geloven, dat dit brot unde wijn wert dat waraftige lijf unde blot dijnes alder levesten sonnes, unses heren Jesu Christi, Welcker an deme dage vor synem lijdent nam dat brot in sijne hilligen hande, sach up to dem hemmel to dy, synem almechtigen vader, sede danck unde brack dat brot unde gaf dat synen jungeren, sprekende: Nemet hen unde etet, dat is mijn licham, dat vor iuw gegeven wert. Des gelijken, na dem aventmal, nam he den kellick in syne hillige hande, danckede synen vader unde gaf synen jungeren unde sprak: Nemet hen unde drincket alle daruth, dat is de kellick des nijgen unde ewigen testamentes in mijnen blode, dat vor iuw unde vor vele vorgaten wert to vorgevinge der sunden. So vaken alse gy dat doet, so doet dat in mijne gedechtenisse.

The Preface, or foreword of the Mass Lift up your hearts to God, and let us give thanks unto God our Lord. For it is meet, right and wholesome that we should in all places and at all times give thanks unto thee, O Lord, holy Father, almighty, everlasting God, through Christ our dear Lord, through whom all angels and heavenly powers worship, honour and praise thy holy majesty. With the same we beseech thee, vouchsafe to admit and receive our voice, that we also may praise thee and say without end: Sanctus: That is: Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of hosts. Full are heaven and earth of thy glory. Hosanna in the highest. Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord. Luck and salvation in the highest. Here beginneth first the Evangelical Mass A prayer to God beforehand O most gracious Father, merciful, everlasting God, grant us that we may firmly believe that this bread and wine becometh the true body and blood of thy most dear Son, our Lord Jesus Christ; who on the day before his passion took the bread into his holy hands, looked up to heaven unto thee, his almighty Father, gave thanks, and brake the bread, and gave it to his disciples, saying: Take and eat, this is my body, which is given for you. Likewise, after the supper, he took the cup into his holy hands, thanked his Father, and gave it to his disciples, and spake: Take and drink ye all thereout, this is the cup of the new and everlasting testament in my blood, which is shed for you and for many for the forgiveness of sins. As often as ye do this, do it in my remembrance.

Note.

- The recast Quam oblationem. Sehling's note: "Dieses Gebet entspricht weitgehend dem Gebet Quam oblationem des Missale Romanum". Kantz's petition "hilf, das dises brot und der wein uns werde und sei …" (ut nobis … fiat) has become "giff uns, dat wy vast geloven, dat dit brot unde wijn wert …". The prayer no longer asks that the bread become the body. It asks that we believe that it does.
- The Verba. Kantz's two benedixit ("segnet") are dropped.

7.9.4 Our Father, Agnus Dei, Fili Dei vivi, communion, Nunc dimittis

> Lat uns bidden: Unse vader, de du bist in den hemmel. Gehilget werde dijn name. Tokamen sy uns dijn ryke. Dijn wille de gesche alse in den hemmel, so oeck up der erden. Unse dagelikes brot gif uns huden. Unde vorgif uns unse schult, alse wy vorgeven unse schuldeneren. Unde vore uns nicht in vorsokinge, Sunder vorlose uns van allen quaden. Dorch unsen heren, Jesum Christum, dijnen sone, de myt dy unde dem hilligen geiste, eyn war Got, levet unde regneret in ewicheit. Agnus Dei O du lam Gades, de du dregest de sunde der welt, vorbarme dy unser unde gif uns dijnen vrede. Eyn gebet vor der entfanginge des hochwerdigen Sacramentes O Here Jesu Christe, du ewige wort dijnes vaders, Du heilant der werlt, levendig Got, vorlose uns dorch dijne grondelose barmherticheit van allen sunden. Nemet dit unde delet under malkanderen to afwasschinge iwer sunden. Went dit alles geschen is, so scal de prester myt der gantzer Christen gemene dancken unde laven den heren myt dussen lavesanck seggende: O Here, nu latet in vrede dijnen knecht na dijnen worden, want unse ogen hebben gesien dijnen heilant, den > du bereidet hefst voer den angesichte alles volckes, Eyn lecht, to vorluchtende de heiden unde to eyner glorie dijnes volkes Ysrahel. Dy sy lof unde danck, o du hillige, benedide drevoldicheit, Got vader, sonne, hillige geist.

Let us pray: Our Father, which art in heaven. Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come unto us. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so also on earth. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debt, as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from all evil. Through our Lord Jesus Christ, thy Son, who with thee and the Holy Ghost, one true God, liveth and reigneth for ever. Agnus Dei O thou Lamb of God, that bearest the sin of the world, have mercy upon us and give us thy peace. A prayer before the receiving of the most worthy Sacrament O Lord Jesu Christ, thou everlasting Word of thy Father, thou Saviour of the world, living God, deliver us through thy bottomless mercy from all sins. Help us that we may fulfil thy commandments at all times, and never be parted from thee for ever. Hereafter shall the priest give the most worthy Sacrament to them that desire it with a hungry, sinful heart, saying thus: Be comforted. For behold, this is the body of our Lord Jesus Christ, which suffered for you the bitter death. Take and eat, that it may feed you and preserve you unto everlasting life. When they have all been communicated with the body of Christ, the priest shall take the cup with the precious blood of Christ, and say thus: Now will we also drink the cup of salvation and call upon the name of the Lord. Behold, ye troubled, sinful hearts, and be comforted. For this is the precious, costly treasure of the blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, wherewith ye are bought. Take this and divide it among yourselves to the washing away of your sins. When all this is done, the priest shall with the whole Christian congregation thank and praise the Lord with this song of praise, saying: O Lord, now let thy servant depart in peace according to thy words, for our eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people, a light to lighten the Gentiles and for a glory of thy people Israel. To thee be praise and thanks, O thou holy, blessed Trinity, God the Father, Son, Holy Ghost.

Note.

- As in Kantz (§7.2.5–7.2.7):
  - the conclusion of the embolism after the Our Father;
  - one Agnus Dei;
  - an abridged Fili Dei vivi;
  - the custodiat ("spise unde beware in dat ewige levent");
  - Calicem salutaris;
  - the Nunc dimittis with a Trinitarian doxology.
- What changes from Kantz:
  - Fili Dei vivi. Kantz's "erlös uns durch disen deinen heiligen fronleichnam und rosenvarbes blut" (per hoc sacrosanctum Corpus et Sanguinem tuum) becomes "dorch dijne grondelose barmherticheit". Bremen removes the one phrase that ascribed the deliverance to the consecrated elements.
  - The communicants are "de dat myt eynen hungerigen, sundigen herten begerent".
  - Omitted. The showing of the host and the Pax are gone. No fraction, as in Kantz's first edition.
- What follows. A German Te Deum.

7.10 Lippe, Deutsche Messe, [1525–1538] (Müntzer in Low German)

Sehling 22, IX (Lippe, Nachtrag), Nr. 1, pp. 565–569 (`eko.db` doc 1549). It is a manuscript Mass with notes, for Trinity Sunday.

Its eucharistic part is Müntzer's German Mass (§7.4; Radical Reformation) in Low German, taken into a Lutheran order:

- the Per omnia saecula before the Preface;
- the Roman Qui pridie with "hoff up syne ogen" and "eyn gheheymnys des ghelavens";
- "Darumme ladt uns alle bydden als uns Jhesus Christus … heyfft gheleret";
- the Per omnia saecula after the Our Father;
- Pax Domini.

Its propers are those of Volprecht's Trinity Mass (§7.7.2): Rom 11:33–36, John 15:26–16:4, the Alleluia Benedictus es, Domine, Deus patrum nostrorum, and the Proficiat postcommunion.

Müntzer's own German Mass has no Trinity Mass. The Erfurt Kirchenamt of 1525, which reprinted Müntzer's Masses, added one (Sehling 6, III, p. 812 n. 26, to Calenberg-Göttingen 1542, §7.13). An Erfurt print of this kind is the likely source of the Lippe text.

> Dat offertorium Vor dat offertorium synget me eyn geystlick leidt, dat ys eyn psalme. Prefatio Durch alle ewicheit der ewicheit amen. De here sy myt iw. Und myt dynem geiste. Unse herten yn de hoge. Hebben wy tho dem heren. Wy seggen danck dem heren, unserem Gade. Edt ys byllyck unde recht. Warlyck, edt is byllick unde recht, dartho ock yst seer heilsam, dat wy dy altydt und yn allen enden danck seggen. Here, heillyge vader, almechtige, ewyge Godt, welcker du myt dynem eyngebornen soen und dem hilligen geiste eyn enyge Godt bist, eyn enyger here bist. Nicht yn eynycheit der personen, sonder yn der enycheit eynes sunderliken wesens. Den dat wy durch dyn sulvest apenbarynge von dyner herlicheit gheloven, even dat sulffte holden wy underscheiden van dynem sone und dem hilligen geiste, up dat yn der bekentnysse der waren und ewyghen godtheit de eghenschop yn den personen und enyccheit [!] yn dem wesen und de ghelicheit yn der majestat recht werde anghebetet, welke de engel laven, erwerdigen de ertzeengel, dartho Cherubin und Seraphin, de ane unterladt myt eyndrechtiger stemmen syngen: Heillich, hyllich, hillich bist her Godt der herscharen, hymmel und erde syndt vorfullet myt dynem prise. Ach, help uns, de du byst yn den hochsten. Ghesegnet sy, de dar kumpt ym namen des heren. Ach gyff gheluck und heyl yn den hochsten.

The offertory For the offertory a spiritual song is sung, that is, a psalm. The Preface World without end. Amen. The Lord be with you. And with thy spirit. Our hearts on high. We have them unto the Lord. We give thanks unto the Lord our God. It is meet and right. Verily it is meet and right, and moreover very wholesome, that we should always and in all places give thanks unto thee, Lord, holy Father, almighty, everlasting God, who with thine only-begotten Son and the Holy Ghost art one only God, art one only Lord; not in the oneness of a person, but in the oneness of a single being. For that which by thine own revelation we believe of thy glory, even the same we hold, without difference, of thy Son and of the Holy Ghost; that in the confession of the true and everlasting Godhead, the propriety in the persons and the unity in the being and the equality in the majesty may be rightly worshipped; which the angels praise, the archangels honour, and thereto Cherubim and Seraphim, who without ceasing sing with one accord of voice: Holy, holy, holy art thou, Lord God of hosts, heaven and earth are filled with thy praise. Ah, help us, thou that art in the highest. Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord. Ah, give luck and salvation in the highest.

Note.

- The offertory. It keeps its name and its place, as a German hymn.
- "Durch alle ewicheit der ewicheit amen" heads the "Prefatio". It is the Per omnia saecula saeculorum. Amen that ended the silent Secret, as in Müntzer (§7.4.1).
- The Preface is the Trinity Preface, rendered fully:
    - Qui cum unigenito Filio tuo et Spiritu Sancto unus es Deus, unus es Dominus: non in unius singularitate personae, sed in unius Trinitate substantiae …;
    - … et in personis proprietas, et in essentia unitas, et in maiestate adoretur aequalitas. Quam laudant Angeli atque Archangeli, Cherubim quoque ac Seraphim ….

  "In der enycheit eynes sunderliken wesens" renders in unius Trinitate substantiae loosely.
- The Sanctus. "Ach, help uns" is Hosanna.

> Eynen dach thovoren, do Jhesus wolde lyden, nam he dat brodt yn syne hilligen hende und hoff up syne ogen yn den hemmel tho dy, Godt, synem almechtigen vader, und sachte dy danck und segende dat und brack dat und gaff dat synen jungeren, seggende: Nemet hen und ethet darvan, dat ys myn lichnam, de vor iw dar gegeven wert. Hyr ghyfft he den luden dat sacrament, de syk willen berichten laten. Darna nympt he den kelck in de handt und spreckt: Des sulven gheliken, als me ghetten hadde, nam he den kelck yn syne hilligen, werdigen hende und sachte dy danck und seghende en und gaff en synen jüngeren, seggende: Nempt hen und dryncket all dar uth. Dat ys de kelck mynes blodes, des nyggen und ewygen bundes, eyn gheheymnys des ghelavens, de vor iw und vor viel vorgatten wert yn vorgevynge der sunde. Also vaken gy dat doen, so schol ghy myner darby gedencken. Hyr ghyfft he den lüden, de syk berichten laten, ok den kelck, under des synget me dat leydt: Godt sy gelavet edder: Jhesus Christus unse heylandt edder dat düdesche sanctus.

The day before, when Jesus would suffer, he took the bread into his holy hands, and lifted up his eyes to heaven unto thee, God, his almighty Father, and said thanks unto thee, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to his disciples, saying: Take and eat thereof, this is my body, which is given for you. Here he giveth the sacrament to the people who will be communicated. Thereafter he taketh the cup in his hand and saith: In like manner, when they had eaten, he took the cup into his holy and worthy hands, and said thanks unto thee, and blessed it, and gave it to his disciples, saying: Take and drink ye all thereout. This is the cup of my blood, of the new and everlasting covenant, a mystery of faith, which is shed for you and for many for the forgiveness of sins. As often as ye do this, ye shall remember me thereby. Here he giveth the people who are communicated the cup also; meanwhile the hymn "O Lord, We Praise Thee" is sung, or "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior", or the German Sanctus.

Note.

- The Verba are word for word Müntzer's Qui pridie (§7.4.2), with mysterium fidei.
- The order of communion. As Luther proposed in the Deutsche Messe, the bread is given after the bread-word and the cup after the cup-word. So the Our Father, the Pax and the Agnus Dei come after communion.

> Darumme ladt uns alle bydden als uns Jhesus Christus, de sone Gades, heyfft gheleret, seggende: Wader unse, de du byst yn den hemmelen, ghehylliget werde dyn name, tho kame dyn rike. Dyn wylle ghesche up erden alse ym hemmel. Unse dachlike brodt gyff uns hute und vorgyff uns unse schuldt, als wy vorgeven unsen schuldeners, und vore uns nicht yn vorsokynge, sonder vorlose uns van dem ovel, amen. Dat ghesche dorch unsen heren Jhesum Christum, dynen soen, welker myt dy und dem hyllighen geiste eyn waer Godt, levet und herschet yn ewicheit, amen. Durch alle ewycheit der ewicheit amen. De fryde des heren sy altydt myt iwe und myt dynem geiste. O laem Gades, de du dregst de sunde der werlt, erbarm dick unser. O lam Gades, de du dregst de sunde der werlt, gyff uns dynen frede. Dat commun Vor dat commun synget me eynen psalme edder geistlick lavesanck. Darna sprickt de pharher tho dem volcke: De here sy myt iw. Antwert: Unde myt dynem geiste. O here Godt, ladt uns tho nütte komen des lyves unde der seelen, de entfangynge des hyllighen Sacramentes und de ewighe bekentnysse der hillyghen und der sulffstendigen unghedeilden dreyvoldycheit, de du levest und regerest eyn enych Godt dorch alle ewicheit thor ewicheit, amen. Ladt uns benedyen den hern, Gade sy ewich danck. De here benedye dy unde behode dy unde erluchte syn anghesichte aver dy unde erbarme syck dyner unde wende syn anghesichte tho dy unde gheve dy den frede, amen.

Therefore let us all pray, as Jesus Christ, the Son of God, hath taught us, saying: Our Father, which art in the heavens, hallowed be thy name, thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debt, as we forgive our debtors, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil, amen. This be done through our Lord Jesus Christ, thy Son, who with thee and the Holy Ghost, one true God, liveth and reigneth for ever, amen. World without end. Amen. The peace of the Lord be alway with you, and with thy spirit. O Lamb of God, that bearest the sin of the world, have mercy upon us. O Lamb of God, that bearest the sin of the world, give us thy peace. The communion For the communion a psalm or spiritual song of praise is sung. Thereafter the pastor saith to the people: The Lord be with you. Answer: And with thy spirit. O Lord God, let the receiving of the holy Sacrament, and the everlasting confession of the holy and self-subsistent undivided Trinity, profit us for body and soul; who livest and reignest one only God, world without end, amen. Let us bless the Lord; thanks be to God for ever. The Lord bless thee and keep thee, and make his face shine upon thee, and have mercy upon thee, and turn his face unto thee and give thee peace, amen.

Note.

- The embolism's two endings. Lippe has both:
  - Kantz's "Dat ghesche dorch unsen heren …", the conclusion Per eundem Dominum;
  - Müntzer's "Durch alle ewycheit der ewicheit", the chant ending Per omnia saecula.

  There is no fraction rubric.
- Pax Domini is kept with its response. The response is run on in the manuscript.
- The postcommunion is the Roman Proficiat of Trinity Sunday, as in Volprecht (§7.7.2).
- The blessing. "Ladt uns benedyen den hern, Gade sy ewich danck" is Müntzer's Benedicamus. The Aaronic blessing follows.

7.11 Schleswig-Holstein, a Low German Mass from Kiel, [after 1526]

Sehling 23, A, Nr. 1, pp. 55–57 (`eko.db` doc 1576; introduction in doc 1568, p. 39). The manuscript, with notes, was bound into a book of the Kiel preacher Rudolf von Nimwegen († 1542). Sehling's editor dates it after 1526 because it draws on Döber (1525) and on Luther's Deutsche Messe (1526).

The order also draws on:

- Kantz (§7.2): the Veni Sancte Spiritus and its collect.
- Müntzer (§7.4): the Roman Qui pridie, with "hoff up syne ogen".
- Döber (§7.8): the Fili Dei vivi said by the people after the priest.

It is the only order in the corpus with a German Domine, non sum dignus.

7.11.1 Before the altar: absolution by the sexton, Veni Sancte Spiritus, collect > Minister legit: Myseriator. De coster list: Miseriator. De almechtyge, barmhartyge Got vorgeve uns unße sunde. Unde yck, uth bevele unßes heren Jesu Christi, segge jwe, de gy Gades gnaden truwen unde loven synen worden, frigh, leddich unde loß alle jwe sunde. Im name des vaders unde des sones unde des hylgen geistes. De prester: Amen. De prester lyst: Kum, hilge geist, erfülle de hartenn dyner gelovygen unde entfenge in en dat vor dyner gotliken leve, de du dorch menychfoldycheyt der tungenn de volcker der gantzenn warldet vorsamelt heffst in enycheit des waren gelovens. Costos: Amen. De prester list: O here, almechtige Got, gyff, dat by uns sy unde wane dyne hilge geist, dat he uns erluchte unde lere alle warheyt. Sterke unde boschutte yn aller wedderwardicheyt, dorch Christum, unsen herren. De coster: Amen.

The minister readeth: Misereatur. The sexton readeth: Misereatur. The almighty, merciful God forgive us our sins. And I, by the commandment of our Lord Jesus Christ, say unto you that trust in God's grace and believe his words, free, quit and loosed of all your sins. In the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. The priest: Amen. The priest readeth: Come, Holy Ghost, fill the hearts of thy faithful and kindle in them the fire of thy divine love, who through the diversity of tongues hast gathered the peoples of the whole world in the unity of the true faith. Sexton: Amen. The priest readeth: O Lord, almighty God, grant that thy Holy Ghost may be and dwell with us, that he may enlighten us and teach all truth. Strengthen and defend in all adversity; through Christ our Lord. The sexton: Amen.

Note.

- The absolution. "Myseriator" (Misereatur) and the absolution are Kantz's (§7.2.1), but read by the sexton. The priest only adds the Amen. Sehling's editor points to Hadeln 1526 for the same practice.
- The prayers. The antiphon and collect are Kantz's (§7.2.2), said before the priest goes to the altar. Then the antiphon is sung again, with notes, and a troped Kyrie follows.

7.11.2 Preface and the bread-word

> De Here sy myt jw. Unße harte yn de hogde. Wy seggen danck dem heren, unßem Gade. Warlich, ydt ys werdich unde recht, billich unde ys heilsam, dat wy, Here, almechtyge Godt, dy allenthalven danck seggen, unde sunderliken yn desser tydt tho pryßenn, wente Cristus, unse paschelam, ys vor uns geoffert. He ys dat wäre lam Gades, welk darwech genamen hefft de ßunde der werlde, de dorch synen tytliken dot unsen ewygen dot vorstoret hefft. Unde als he upgestan ys, hefft he wedder gebracht dat levent. Eyne dach to voren, do Jesus Christus wolde liden, nam he dat brot yn syne hillygen, werdigen hende unde hoff up syne ogen in den hemmel tho dy, Got, synem alemechtigen vader, unde ßede dy dank unde gesegende ydt unde brack dat unde gaff yt synen jüngeren, seggende: Nemet hen unde ethet alle darvan. Dyt ys myn licham, de dar vor jw gegeven verth in vorgevinge der sunde. Nu hevet dat cor an to syngende: Jhesus Christus, unse hylant. Eyn versch dar van.

The Lord be with you. Our hearts on high. We give thanks unto the Lord our God. Verily it is worthy and right, meet and wholesome, that we, O Lord, almighty God, should in all places give thanks unto thee, and specially at this time praise thee, for Christ our Passover lamb is offered for us. He is the true Lamb of God, which hath taken away the sin of the world, who by his temporal death hath destroyed our eternal death; and when he rose again, he hath brought life again. The day before, when Jesus Christ would suffer, he took the bread into his holy and worthy hands, and lifted up his eyes to heaven unto thee, God, his almighty Father, and said thanks unto thee, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to his disciples, saying: Take and eat ye all thereof. This is my body, which is given for you for the forgiveness of sins. Now the choir beginneth to sing: "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior". One verse thereof.

Note.

- The Preface is the Easter Preface: Te quidem, Domine, omni tempore, sed in hac potissimum die gloriosius praedicare, cum Pascha nostrum immolatus est Christus. Ipse enim verus est Agnus, qui abstulit peccata mundi. Qui mortem nostram moriendo destruxit, et vitam resurgendo reparavit.
  - The manuscript breaks off before the Et ideo and the Sanctus (Sehling: "Der Text bricht an dieser Stelle ab").
  - "Ys vor uns geoffert" keeps immolatus est (1 Cor 5:7).
- The bread-word is Müntzer's Qui pridie, with "in vorgevinge der sunde" added to the bread.
- Separate consecration. Only the bread is consecrated now. The cup is consecrated after the communion of the bread (§7.11.4), as Luther had suggested.

7.11.3 Exhortation, Fili Dei vivi, Domine non sum dignus

> Dar na kert sick de prester myt dem licham Cristi thom volchke. Unde de communicanten setten syck al up de reghe vor dat altar, dat sacramente tho entfangende. Unde de prester deyt eyn vormanynge unde secht, den licham Christi yn der hant haldende: Goden frunde, Cristus, unser heylant, hefft uns in synem latesten affschede nagelaten eyn harlich klenade als synen licham unde blot eyner geystlyken artzedye unde spyse, dar wy syner scholen by gedencken, dorch welkeren licham unde blot he uns eyn enych testamente der salicheyt hefft upgerichtet unde dat sulvyge testamente synes flesches unde blödes myt synem bytteren lydende bokrefftyget. Unde ßo vaken wy uns myt sunden folet besweret unde uns na dysser spise unde na dyssem drancke hungeret unde dorstet, schole wy yth myt eyneme gruntligen unde fasten geloven entfangen. Unde so vaken wy yth tho uns nemen, schole wy andechtich ßyn, synes bytteren lydendes eme danck und loff tho seggen vor syne woldath unde dat unß desse spyse mege syn helplich unde tröstlich thom ewygem levende. Amen. Spreket my na myt ynnygem harten: O Here Jesu Christi, du sone des levendygen Gades, de du uth vederlykem willen, dorch medewarkinge des hilgen gestes, dorch dynen bytteren doth de werlt heffst wedder levendich ghemaket dorch den geloven, erlöse uns armen kynder Ade dorch dyssen dynen hylgen licham unde unschuldigen bloth van allen unsen ungerechticheyden unde bosheyden unde vorlene uns, dat vy alle tydt gehorßam dynen gebaden myt lust unde leve volgen unde van dy nummer affgesundert werden. Amen. O Here, ick en byn nycht werdich dorch myn vordenst dynes werdigen lichames unde blödes, sunder make my werdich dorch dyne gotlike tosage, make my salich dorch dyn heylsame wort. Amen.

Thereafter the priest turneth with the body of Christ to the people. And the communicants seat themselves all in a row before the altar to receive the sacrament. And the priest maketh an exhortation and saith, holding the body of Christ in his hand: Good friends, Christ our Saviour hath left us at his last departing a glorious jewel, to wit his body and blood, for a spiritual medicine and food, whereby we shall remember him; through which body and blood he hath set up for us an only testament of salvation, and confirmed the same testament of his flesh and blood with his bitter passion. And as often as we feel ourselves burdened with sins, and hunger and thirst after this food and after this drink, we shall receive it with a thorough and firm faith. And as often as we take it unto us, we shall be mindful to give him thanks and praise for his bitter passion, for his benefit, and that this food may be helpful and comfortable unto us unto everlasting life. Amen. Say after me with inward heart: O Lord Jesu Christ, thou Son of the living God, who by the Father's will, through the working together of the Holy Ghost, hast by thy bitter death made the world alive again through faith: deliver us poor children of Adam, by this thy holy body and innocent blood, from all our iniquities and wickednesses, and grant us that we may at all times follow thy commandments obediently with desire and love, and never be separated from thee. Amen. O Lord, I am not worthy by my merit of thy worthy body and blood; but make me worthy by thy divine promise, make me whole by thy wholesome word. Amen.

Note.

- The priest holds the host during the exhortation. The exhortation takes the place of the Canon's remembrance.
- Fili Dei vivi is the Strasbourg and Döber German text (§7.5.1, §7.8.8), said after the priest by the communicants. Three phrases are added:
  - "dorch den geloven" (the world made alive "through faith");
  - "uns armen kynder Ade";
  - "myt lust unde leve".
- Domine, non sum dignus. The Roman text is Domine, non sum dignus, ut intres sub tectum meum: sed tantum dic verbo, et sanabitur anima mea (Mt 8:8). It was said by the priest, and by the people before communion. The Kiel text changes it:
  - It drops the centurion's roof.
  - It makes the worthiness a question of merit ("dorch myn vordenst").
  - It asks that Christ's "divine promise" make the communicant worthy.

- "make my salich dorch dyn heylsame wort" keeps sed tantum dic verbo, et sanabitur.

7.11.4 Communion of the bread; the cup-word and communion of the cup; blessing

> Nu vordelet de prester den licham Christi den communicanten, unde dat cor hevet an dat ander versus alßo: Dat wy des nummer vorgeten, gaff etc. Unde singet ßo lange, dat de licham Christi vordelet is. Dar na swicht dat chor stille. Unde de prester hevet vordan an, dat bloth Christi tho consecrerende unde secht: Des sulven gelyken, do men gegeten hade, nam he den kelk yn syne hylligen, werdigen hende unde ßede dy dank unde gesegende den unde gaff an synen jüngeren, seggende: Nemet hen unde drincket alle daruth. Dyt ys de kelk mynes blödes, des nygen unde ewygen testamentes, de vor jw unde vor vele vorgaten wert yn vorgewinghe der sunde. Szo vaken gy dith don, ßo dot dat yn myner gedechnisse. Nu gifft de prester den communicanten dat bloth Christi, unde dat chor singet: Jesus Christus, unser, edder den lavesanck: Got, de sy gelavet unde gebenediet etc. Unde singet ßolange dat bloth Christi vordelet is. Darna ßo ker sick de prester wedder to dem wolke [sic] unde secht: De Here sy myt jw. Unde beslut de mysse myt ener collecten. Unde na der collecten secht de prester noch eyn mal: De Here sy myt jw. Dar na list he disse nagescreven segenynge aver dat volck unde secht, Numeri VI. capite: De Here segene jw unde bohode jw. De Her erluchte syn anghesichte aver jw unde sy jw gnedich. De Here hewe syn angesichte uppe jw unde ghewe jw frede, dorch Cristum, unßen heren. Dat Chor antwardet: Amen. Dar na synget men eynen psalm, dat men de misse dar mede besluth.

Now the priest distributeth the body of Christ to the communicants, and the choir beginneth the second verse thus: "Dass wir des nimmer vergessen, gab etc.", and singeth so long till the body of Christ is distributed. Thereafter the choir is silent. And the priest beginneth further to consecrate the blood of Christ, and saith: In like manner, when they had eaten, he took the cup into his holy and worthy hands, and said thanks unto thee, and blessed it, and gave it to his disciples, saying: Take and drink ye all thereout. This is the cup of my blood, of the new and everlasting testament, which is shed for you and for many for the forgiveness of sins. As often as ye do this, do it in my remembrance. Now the priest giveth the communicants the blood of Christ, and the choir singeth "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior", or the song of praise "O Lord, We Praise Thee", etc., and singeth so long till the blood of Christ is distributed. Thereafter the priest turneth again to the people and saith: The Lord be with you. And concludeth the Mass with a collect. And after the collect the priest saith once more: The Lord be with you. Thereafter he readeth this blessing written hereafter over the people, and saith, Numbers the sixth chapter: The Lord bless you and keep you. The Lord make his face shine upon you and be gracious unto you. The Lord lift up his countenance upon you and give you peace, through Christ our Lord. The choir answereth: Amen. Thereafter a psalm is sung, wherewith the Mass is concluded.

Note.

- "dat bloth Christi tho consecrerende". The rubric calls the cup-word a consecration.
- The cup-word is Müntzer's Simili modo, but "testamentes" (not "bundes"), and without mysterium fidei.
- No Our Father, no Pax, no Agnus Dei. The Our Father is said with the Creed and the Verba on weekdays without communicants, and at the communion of the sick.

7.12 Brandenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1540

Church order of the Elector Joachim II, 1540. Sehling 3, Mark Brandenburg Nr. 3, pp. 67–71.

The order is conservative. The Latin chants stay. The offertory chant stays. The Preface and Sanctus are sung in Latin. The Verba are sung aloud in German. The prayers the priest said before communion (Domine Iesu Christe qui dixisti, Fili Dei vivi, Perceptio) and after it (Corpus tuum, Quod ore sumpsimus) are kept in Latin.

In the Canon's own place, under the Sanctus, the priest says four new German collects. For the Pfalz-Neuburg version of these, Sehling notes: "Diese Gebete sind an die Stelle der in der römischen Messe teils vor teils nach der Konsekration gesprochenen Fürbittgebete gesetzt".

The order's rationale (p. 67) is given before the Mass:

> Es sollen auch verba consecrationis nach der prefation offentlich gesungen oder gesprochen werden, wie denn solchs von alters in der kirchen auch ublich gewesen […]. Daraus abzunemen, mit was grunde solche wort den leien mögen verboten werden. Allein der ursach, das man sich vielleicht besorget, sie mochten mit der zeit aus dem gewar und innen > werden, das inen das sacrament des kelchs sowol zustünde als den priestern und villeicht daneben erfaren die ungeschicklichkeit ires canons, darauf sie fast alle seligkeit gestelt und doch denselben heimlich gelesen […].

The words of consecration shall also be sung or spoken openly after the Preface, as this also hath been customary in the Church of old […]. Whence may be gathered with what ground such words may be forbidden to the laity: only for this cause, that it was perhaps feared they might in time become aware thereby, and find out, that the sacrament of the cup belonged to them as well as to the priests; and perhaps besides discover the unfitness of their Canon, whereon they have set well-nigh all salvation, and yet read the same secretly […].

7.12.1 Creed, offertory, Preface, Sanctus

> Darauf sol der priester singen, credo in unum deum, das patrem, in thumen und stiften sol latinisch, aber in den pfarren deudsch: Wir gleuben all an einen gott gesungen werden; darauf sol der priester singen: Dominus vobiscum absque oremus; darauf sol der gesang, den man hievor pro offertorio gehalten hat, gesungen werden; darauf sol der priester die gewönliche prefation singen und folgend das latinisch sanctus alles in latin gesungen werden. Unter dem sanctus sol der priester folgende oration deudsch beten.

Thereupon the priest shall sing Credo in unum Deum; the Patrem shall be sung in cathedrals and collegiate churches in Latin, but in the parishes in German, "We All Believe in One True God". Thereupon the priest shall sing Dominus vobiscum without Oremus; thereupon the chant which heretofore was kept for the offertory shall be sung; thereupon the priest shall sing the customary Preface, and next the Latin Sanctus, all sung in Latin. Under the Sanctus the priest shall pray the following prayer in German.

Note.

- The offertory. "Dominus vobiscum absque oremus" keeps the greeting before the offertory but drops the Oremus that led into the offertory prayers. The offertory chant itself survives ("der gesang, den man hievor pro offertorio gehalten hat"). No offertory prayers are said.
- In villages. On p. 71 the order adds that "in den kleinen flecken … und auf den dörfern" the offertory "von der dominica oder festen" may be replaced by a German psalm after the sermon: "darauf sol folgen die latinische prefation, das sanctus, die communio und ferrer der beschlus".
- The Preface. "Die gewönliche prefation" is the Latin Preface of the day. It is not printed.

7.12.2 The four collects under the Sanctus (in place of the Canon's intercessions)

> Fur die oberigkeit. Barmherziger himlischer vater, in welches hende aller menschen gewalt und obrigkeit stehet, von dir eingesetzt zur straf der ubeltheter und zum schutz der fromen, in welches hende auch stehen alle recht und gesetze aller lender, wir bitten dich, sei gnedig unserm herrn kaiser, allen königen und fürsten, sonderlich unserm landesfursten und herrn N. und dem rath und regenten dieser stadt und aller ordenlichen obrigkeit, damit sie das weltlich schwerd, das du inen befohlen hast, recht füren mügen; umschattige sie mit der kraft des allerhöchsten, erleucht und erhalt sie bei deinem göttlichen namen, lass sie dein göttlichs wort von herzen lieb haben und darüber fest halten und sie ja dasselbig nicht lassen verfolgen, gib inen, lieber herr, weisheit und einen verstand und ein fridsam regiment, auf das sie alle ire unterthanen in der warheit und gerechtigkeit, die dir gefellig ist, regiren und beschirmen, auch, mein lieber gott, friste inen ir leben lang, nach deinem willen und weil das gerichte dein ist und sie an deiner stad sitzen, gib inen gnad, also zu regiren, das dein heiliger name durch sie geheiligt und gepreiset werde, von nu an bis in ewigkeit, das helf inen der herr Jesu Christ, dein geliebter son, amen.
> Ein ander. O almechtiger gütiger gott und vater unsers herrn Jesu Christi, der du uns ernstlich befohlen hast, das wir dich bitten sollen um arbeiter in deiner ernten, das ist um rechtschaffne prediger deines worts. Wir bitten dein gründlose barmherzigkeit, du wollest uns rechtschaffne lerer und diener deines göttlichen worts zuschicken und denselben dein heilsams wort in das herz und in den mund geben, das sie deinen befelch treulich ausrichten und nichts predigen, das deinem heiligen wort entgegen sei, auf das wir durch dein himlisch ewigs wort ermanet, geleret, gespeist, getröst und gesterkt werden, thun, was dir gefellig und uns fruchtbarlich ist; gib herr deiner heiligen christlichen kirchen deinen geist und göttliche weisheit, das dein wort unter uns laufe und wachse und mit aller freidigkeit, wie sichs gebürt, gepredigt und dein heilige christliche gemein dadurch gebessert werde, auf das wir mit bestendigem glauben dir dienen und in erkentnis deines namens bis an das ende verharren, durch unsern herrn etc.

> Ein ander. Almechtiger gott und ewiger vater, ein könig der ehren und ein herr himels und der erden, durch welches geist alle dinge regiret, durch welches fursehung alle dinge geordnet werden, du bist ein gott des friedes, von dem allein einigkeit zu uns komt, wir bitten dich durch unsern herrn Jesum Christum, du wollest uns unser sunde vergeben und mit deinem göttlichen friden und einigkeit begnaden, damit wir in forcht und zittern deinem namen dienen und allezeit von uns gepreiset werdest, amen.
> Barmherziger gott und himlischer vater, des barmherzigkeit kein ende hat, der du langmütig, gnedig und von grosser güte und treu bist und vergibst alle missethat, ubertretung und sunde, wir haben leider gesundigt mit unsern vetern, wir haben mishandelt und sind gottlos gewesen und dich oftmals erzürnet, dir allein haben wir gesundigt und ubel fur dir gethan, aber herr, gedenke nicht an unsere vorige missethat, las bald dein barmherzigkeit uber uns gross sein, denn wir sind elend worden, hilf uns gott unsers heils um der ehre willen deines namens, erlöse uns und vergib uns unser sunde durch deinen son Jesum Christum, amen.

For the magistrates. Merciful heavenly Father, in whose hands standeth all power and authority of men, ordained of thee for the punishment of evildoers and the protection of the godly, in whose hands also stand all the rights and laws of all lands: we beseech thee, be gracious unto our lord the Emperor, all kings and princes, especially unto our prince and lord of the land N., and unto the council and rulers of this city and all lawful magistrates, that they may rightly bear the temporal sword which thou hast committed unto them. Overshadow them with the power of the Highest; enlighten them and keep them in thy divine name; let them love thy divine word from the heart and hold fast thereto, and in no wise suffer it to be persecuted. Give them, dear Lord, wisdom and understanding and a peaceable government, that they may rule and defend all their subjects in the truth and righteousness that is well-pleasing unto thee. Also, my dear God, prolong their life according to thy will; and forasmuch as the judgement is thine and they sit in thy stead, give them grace so to rule that thy holy name may be hallowed and praised through them, from henceforth even for ever. This help them the Lord Jesus Christ, thy beloved Son. Amen.

Another. O almighty, gracious God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hast earnestly commanded us that we should pray thee for labourers into thine harvest, that is, for right and true preachers of thy word: we beseech thy bottomless mercy that thou wouldest send us right and true teachers and ministers of thy divine word, and give thy wholesome word into their heart and into their mouth, that they may faithfully perform thy commandment and preach nothing that is contrary to thy holy word; to the end that we, being by thy heavenly, eternal word admonished, taught, fed, comforted and strengthened, may do that which is well-pleasing unto thee and profitable unto us. Give, O Lord, unto thy holy Christian Church thy Spirit and divine wisdom, that thy word may run and grow among us and be preached with all boldness, as it becometh, and that thy holy Christian congregation may be bettered thereby; that we may serve thee with steadfast faith and continue in the knowledge of thy name unto the end; through our Lord, etc.

Another. Almighty God and everlasting Father, a King of glory and a Lord of heaven and of earth, by whose Spirit all things are governed, by whose providence all things are ordered; thou art a God of peace, from whom alone unity cometh unto us: we beseech thee through our Lord Jesus Christ that thou wouldest forgive us our sins and endue us with thy divine peace and unity, that we may serve thy name in fear and trembling, and that thou mayest be praised of us evermore. Amen.

Merciful God and heavenly Father, whose mercy hath no end, who art longsuffering, gracious and of great goodness and faithfulness, and forgivest all iniquity, transgression and sin: we have, alas, sinned with our fathers, we have done amiss and dealt wickedly and oftentimes provoked thee to wrath; against thee only have we sinned and done evil in thy sight. But, Lord, remember not against us our former iniquities; let thy mercy speedily be great upon us, for we are brought very low. Help us, O God of our salvation, for the glory of thy name; deliver us and forgive us our sins, through thy Son Jesus Christ. Amen.

Note. The texts and translations are the same as in `general_prayers.db` (family L). Sehling traces the collects for the ministers and for peace to Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533. The one for the magistrates is an expanded form of the Nürnberg collect. The penitential fourth, woven from Ps 106:6, Ps 51:4 and Ps 79:8–9, stands where the Canon's prayers for forgiveness stood (Hanc igitur's ab aeterna damnatione nos eripi, the Nobis quoque peccatoribus).

7.12.3 The Verba, sung, with elevation

> Darnach verba consecrationis deudsch singen und eleviren wie folgt: Unser herr Jesus in der nacht, do er verraten ward, nam er das brot, danket seinem himlischen vater, gebenedeiet es und brachs und gabs seinen jungern und sprach: Nemet hin und esset, das ist mein leib, der fur euch dargeben wird, das thut zu meiner gedechtnis. Hic modica inclinatione, leva illud reverenter in altum. Deinde calicem accipe cum ambabus manibus, et dic. Desselben gleichen nam > er auch den kelch nach dem abendmal, danket und benedeiet in und gab den seinen jüngern und sprach: Trinket alle daraus, das ist mein blut des neuen testamentes, das vor euch und vor vil vergossen wird zur vergebung der sunden, solchs thut, so oft irs trinket, zu meinem gedechtnis. Leua calicem in altum. Nach der elevation sol man in Thumen und stiften einen latinischen gesang singen, als das responsorium tua est potencia etc., in den pfarren aber einen deudschen gesang. Es wolt uns gott gnedig sein oder sei lob und dank mit hohem preis.

Thereafter the words of consecration shall be sung in German, and the elevation made, as followeth: Our Lord Jesus, in the night in which he was betrayed, took the bread, gave thanks unto his heavenly Father, blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to his disciples, and said: Take and eat, this is my body, which is given for you; this do in remembrance of me. Here, with a slight inclination, lift it up reverently on high. Then take the cup with both hands, and say: Likewise also he took the cup after the supper, gave thanks and blessed it, and gave it to his disciples, and said: Drink ye all of it, this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for you and for many for the remission of sins; this do, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. Lift the cup on high. After the elevation, in cathedrals and collegiate churches a Latin chant shall be sung, as the responsory Tua est potentia, etc.; but in the parishes a German song: "May God Bestow on Us His Grace", or "Praise and thanks with high price".

Note.

- The Verba. They are the Pauline and Lutheran form. "Danket seinem himlischen vater" keeps an echo of tibi gratias agens. The print's gebenedeietes is divided here as "gebenedeiet es".
- Rubrics. The Latin rubrics are those of the missal: elevat … reverenter, accipit calicem ambabus manibus.
- The chant. The Latin responsory after the elevation takes the place of the Benedictus sung at the elevation.

The elevation in the order of the Mass is treated in Chapter 2, §2.11, and as a mark of the feast in Chapter 12, §12.10.6.

7.12.4 Our Father and the Peace

> Darauf sol, wie hernach folget, das pater noster deudsch gesungen werden. Last uns beten, wie uns der herr Christus Jesus befohlen hat, das wir aus rechter zuversicht und vertrauen dorfen sagen: Vater unser, der du bist im himel, geheiliget werde dein name, zukome dein reich, dein wil geschehe als im himel auch auf erden, unser teglich brod gib uns heute und vergib uns unser schulde als wir vergeben unsern schuldigern und für uns nicht in versuchung, sondern erlös uns von dem ubel, denn dein ist das reich und die kraft und die herrlichkeit in ewigkeit. Dicat omnis populus, amen. Vertens se ad populum cantat. Der fried des herren sei mit euch allen. Dicat omnis populus, amen.

Thereupon the Pater noster shall be sung in German, as followeth. Let us pray, as the Lord Christ Jesus hath commanded us, that out of right confidence and trust we may be bold to say: Our Father, which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name, thy kingdom come, thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth; give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors; and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Let all the people say, Amen. Turning himself to the people he singeth: The peace of the Lord be with you all. Let all the people say, Amen.

Note. "Wie uns der herr Christus Jesus befohlen hat, das wir … dorfen sagen" recasts Praeceptis salutaribus moniti … audemus dicere.

There is no embolism. Pax Domini sit semper vobiscum is kept, with the people answering Amen where the Roman response is Et cum spiritu tuo.

7.12.5 Agnus Dei and the priest's three prayers before communion (Latin)

> Agnus dei qui tollis peccata mundi, miserere nobis. Agnus dei qui tollis peccata mundi, miserere nobis. Agnus dei qui tollis peccata mundi, donna [sic] nobis pacem. Das agnus dei sol auch latinisch gesungen werden. Inclina te. Domine Iesu Christe, qui dixisti apostolis tuis, pacem meam do vobis, pacem meam relinquo vobis, ne respicias peccata mea, sed fidem ecclesiae tuae, eamque secundum voluntatem tuam pacificare custodire adiuvare et regere digneris, qui cum deo, patre et spiritu sancto vivis et regnas deus per omnia saecula saeculorum, amen. Inclinatus dicat. Domine Iesu Christi, fili dei vivi, qui ex voluntate patris cooperante spiritu sancto per mortem propriam mundum vivificasti. Libera nos per hoc sacrosanctum corpus et sanguinem tuum ab omnibus iniquitatibus et universis malis nostris: Et fac nos tuis semper obedire mandatis, et a tua misericordia nunquam in perpetuum separari permittas. Qui vivis et regnas deus per omnia saecula saeculorum, amen. ALIA ORATIO. Sacramentum corporis tui domine Iesu Christe, quod nos indigni tui sumere > cupimus, non nobis proveniat in iudicium et condemnationem, sed pro tua pietate prosit nobis ad tutamen mentis et corporis, et ad medelam percipiendam, qui vivis et regnas cum deo patre in unitate spiritussancti deus per omnia saecula saeculorum, amen.

O Lamb of God, that takest away the sins of the world, have mercy upon us. O Lamb of God, that takest away the sins of the world, have mercy upon us. O Lamb of God, that takest away the sins of the world, grant us peace. The Agnus Dei shall also be sung in Latin. Bow thyself. O Lord Jesus Christ, who saidst unto thine apostles, My peace I give unto you, my peace I leave with you: regard not my sins, but the faith of thy Church; and vouchsafe to pacify, keep, help and govern her according to thy will; who with God the Father and the Holy Ghost livest and reignest God, world without end. Amen. Bowing, let him say: O Lord Jesus Christ, Son of the living God, who by the will of the Father, the Holy Ghost working with thee, hast by thine own death given life to the world: deliver us by this thy most holy body and blood from all our iniquities and all our evils; and make us ever to obey thy commandments, and suffer us never to be separated from thy mercy for evermore. Who livest and reignest God, world without end. Amen. Another prayer. Let the sacrament of thy body, O Lord Jesus Christ, which we unworthy desire to receive, not turn to us unto judgement and condemnation; but of thy goodness let it profit us unto the defence of mind and body, and unto the obtaining of healing; who livest and reignest with God the Father in the unity of the Holy Ghost, God, world without end. Amen.

Note. These are the three prayers the priest said before his communion. Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 (note 20–21) reports that in 1540 two were said, the third being an alternative to the second.

1. Domine Iesu Christe, qui dixisti.
   - The two halves of John 14:27 are inverted: "do … relinquo", where the Roman text has Pacem relinquo vobis, pacem meam do vobis.
   - The verbs "pacificare custodire adiuvare et regere" are those of the Canon's Te igitur (pacificare, custodire, adunare et regere), with adiuvare for adunare. The Tridentine text has only pacificare et coadunare.
2. Fili Dei vivi.
   - The Roman singular (libera me … meis … fac me … inhaerere … a te) is made plural and congregational.
   - Inhaerere becomes obedire.
   - A te numquam separari becomes a tua misericordia nunquam in perpetuum separari.
   - This petition, "Libera nos per hoc sacrosanctum corpus et sanguinem tuum", is not the embolism Libera nos, quaesumus.
3. Perceptio corporis tui appears as Sacramentum corporis tui.
   - It is plural, and praesumo becomes cupimus.
   - Tutamen stands for tutamentum. The stray tui after indigni is as printed.

7.12.6 The exhortation (Osiander, Nürnberg 1533)

> Deinde vertens se ad populum legat hanc adhortationem. Ir allerliebsten in gott, dieweil wir itzt das abendmal unsers herrn Jesu Christi wollen bedenken und halten, darin er uns sein fleisch zu einer speis und sein blut zu einem trank, den glauben damit zu sterken, gegeben hat, sollen wir billich mit grossem fleiss ein jeder sich selbs prüfen, wie der heilig Paulus uns vermanet: denn dis heilig sacrament ist zu einem sondern trost und sterk gegeben den armen betrübten gewissen die ire sunde bekennen, gottes zorn und den tod forchten und nach der gerechtigkeit hungerig und durstig sind. So wir uns aber selbs prüfen und ein jeder in sein eigen gewissen gehen, wie uns der heilig Paulus leret, werden wir gewislich nicht anders finden, denn allerlei greuliche sund und den tod, den wir mit der sunde verschuldet haben, und können doch uns selbs in keinem wege daraus helfen. Darum hat unser lieber herr Jesus Christus sich uber uns erbarmet und ist um unser sunde willen mensche worden, auf das er das gesetz und allen willen gottes fur uns zu gut erfüllet und den tod und alles, was wir mit unsern sunden verschuldet hetten, fur uns und zu unser ledigung auf sich neme und erlitte, und das wir je das festiglich glauben und durch den glauben frölich in seinem willen mochten leben, nam er nach dem abendmal das brod, sagt dank, brachs und sprach: Nemet hin und esset, das ist mein leib, der fur euch dargeben wird, das ist, das ich mensch bin worden und alles, das ich thue und leide, ist alles euer eigen, fur euch und euch zu gut geschehen; des zu einem gewissen anzeigen und zeugnis gib ich euch mein leib zur speise. Desgleichen nam er auch den kelch und sprach: Nemet hin und trinket aus diesem alle, das ist der kelch des neuen testaments in meinem blut, das fur euch und fur viel vergossen wird zu vergebung der sunde, so oft ir das thut, solt ir mein darbei dabei [sic] gedenken, das ist, dieweil ich mich eur angenomen und eur sunde auf mich geladen hab, will ich mich selbs fur die sunde in tod opfern, mein blut vergiessen, gnad und vergebung der sunde erwerben und also ein neu testament aufrichten, darinnen die > sunde vergeben und ewig nicht mehr sol gedacht werden, des zu einem gewissen anzeigen und zeugnis, gib ich euch mein blut zu trinken. Wer nu also von diesem brod isset und von diesem kelch trinket, auch diesen worten, so er von Christo höret und diesen zeichen, die er von Christo empfahet, festiglich glaubt, der bleibt in dem herrn Christo und Christus in im, und wird ewiglich leben; darbei sollen wir nu sein gedenken und seinen tod verkündigen, nemlich, das er fur unser sunde sei gestorben und zu unser rechtfertigung wider auferstanden und im darum danksagen, ein jeder sein creuz auf sich nemen und im nachfolgen und nach seinem gebot einander lieben, wie er uns geliebt hat; denn wir sind alle ein brod und ein leib, dieweil wir alle eins brods teilhaftig sind und aus einem kelch trinken.

Then turning himself to the people let him read this exhortation. Dearly beloved in God, forasmuch as we will now consider and keep the supper of our Lord Jesus Christ, wherein he hath given us his flesh for a meat and his blood for a drink, therewith to strengthen faith, we ought rightly every one with great diligence to examine himself, as the holy Paul exhorteth us; for this holy sacrament is given for a special comfort and strength unto the poor troubled consciences that confess their sins, fear God's wrath and death, and are hungry and thirsty after righteousness. But when we examine ourselves, and every one goeth into his own conscience, as the holy Paul teacheth us, we shall surely find nothing else but all manner of horrible sin, and death, which we have deserved with sin; and yet we cannot in any wise help ourselves out thereof. Therefore hath our dear Lord Jesus Christ had mercy upon us, and for our sins' sake is become man, to the end that he might fulfil the law and all the will of God for us and for our good, and take upon himself and suffer death and all that we had deserved with our sins, for us and for our deliverance. And that we might steadfastly believe this, and through faith live joyfully in his will, he took after the supper the bread, gave thanks, brake it, and said: Take and eat, this is my body, which is given for you; that is, that I am become man, and all that I do and suffer is all your own, done for you and for your good; for a sure token and witness whereof I give you my body for meat. Likewise he took also the cup, and said: Take and drink ye all of this, this is the cup of the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you and for many for the remission of sins; as oft as ye do this, ye shall remember me thereby; that is, forasmuch as I have taken your cause upon me and laden your sins upon myself, I will offer myself unto death for sin, shed my blood, obtain grace and forgiveness of sins, and so set up a new testament, wherein sins are forgiven and shall be remembered no more for ever; for a sure token and witness whereof I give you my blood to drink. Whosoever now eateth thus of this bread and drinketh of this cup, and firmly believeth these words which he heareth of Christ and these signs which he receiveth of Christ, he dwelleth in the Lord Christ and Christ in him, and shall live for ever. Hereby shall we now remember him and show forth his death, namely that he died for our sins and rose again for our justification, and give him thanks therefor; every one take up his cross and follow him, and according to his commandment love one another, as he hath loved us: for we are all one bread and one body, seeing we are all partakers of one bread and drink of one cup.

Note. This is Osiander's Nürnberg exhortation (§7.8.7) as revised for Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533 (Sehling 11, 195). It comes after the Latin priest's prayers and immediately before the distribution. Darbei dabei is a doublet in the print.

7.12.7 Communion

> Darauf sol angefangen werden das responsorium discubuit Jesus latinisch und ob der communicanten viel weren, das man damit nicht zureichen mocht, sol man dem volk deudsch anfahen zu singen, gott sei gelobet, oder Jesus Christus, unser heiland, welcher gesenge einer, ob auch gleich das discubuit zureichet, dennoch gleichwol nach der communion sol gesungen werden. Nunc communicantes accedunt et cum eis corpus dominicum porrigitur dicat sacerdos. Nim hin und iss, das ist der leib Christi, der fur dich geben ist. Ad calicem dicat diaconus. Nim hin und trink, das ist das blut des neuen testaments, das fur deine sunde vergossen ist.

Thereupon shall be begun the responsory Discubuit Jesus in Latin; and if the communicants were many, so that it might not suffice therewith, one shall begin to sing to the people in German "O Lord, We Praise Thee" or "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior"; one of which songs, even though the Discubuit suffice, shall nevertheless be sung after the communion. Now the communicants approach, and when the Lord's body is reached to them, let the priest say: Take and eat, this is the body of Christ, which is given for thee. At the cup let the deacon say: Take and drink, this is the blood of the new testament, which is shed for thy sins.

Note. The communion formula is Lutheran, not Roman. Corpus Domini nostri … custodiat is not used. The Latin responsory Discubuit Jesus (from the Maundy Thursday office) serves as the communion chant.

7.12.8 Thanksgiving and the two Latin ablution prayers

> Deinde vertens se ad populum legat sequentem graciarum actionem. Last uns bitten. O almechtiger ewiger gott, wir sagen deiner göttlichen mildigkeit lob und dank, das du uns mit deinem heilsamen fleisch und blut deines einigen sons Jesu

> Christi, unsers herrn, gespeiset und getrenket hast, und bitten dich demütiglich, du wollest durch deinen heiligen geist in uns wirken, wie wir dis heilig sacrament mit dem munde haben empfangen, das wir auch also dein göttlich gnad, vergebung der sunde, vereinigung mit Christo und ewigs leben, so darinnen angezeigt und zugesagt ist, mit festem glauben mögen begreifen und ewiglich behalten. Wir danken dir auch, allmechtiger gott, das du uns durch diese heilsame gabe des leibes und bluts Christi, deines sons, hast erquicket, und bitten dein barmherzigkeit, das du uns solchs gedeihen lassest zum starken glauben gegen dir und zu brünstiger lieb unter uns allen, durch unsern herrn Jesum Christum, deinen son, der mit dir in ewigkeit des heiligen geists lebt und herschet, warer gott imer und ewiglich, amen. Deinde inclinet se et dicat. Corpus tuum domine quod nos peccatores sumpsimus, et calix quem potauimus, adhaereat visceribus nostris, et praesta omnipotens deus, ut ibi nulla remaneat peccati macula, ubi tua pura et sancta introierunt sacramenta, per eundem Christum dominum nostrum. Quod ore sumpsimus domine pura mente capiamus, et fiat nobis remedium sempiternum, per Christum dominum nostrum.

Then turning to the people let him read the following thanksgiving. Let us pray. O almighty, everlasting God, we give praise and thanks unto thy divine bounty that thou hast fed us and given us to drink with the wholesome flesh and blood of thine only Son Jesus Christ our Lord; and we humbly beseech thee that thou wouldest work in us by thy Holy Spirit, that as we have received this holy sacrament with the mouth, so we may also with firm faith apprehend and for ever retain thy divine grace, forgiveness of sins, union with Christ and everlasting life, which are therein set forth and promised. We thank thee also, almighty God, that thou hast refreshed us through this wholesome gift of the body and blood of Christ thy Son; and we beseech thy mercy that thou wouldest let the same prosper in us unto strong faith toward thee and unto fervent love among us all; through our Lord Jesus Christ thy Son, who with thee in eternity [read: unity] of the Holy Ghost liveth and reigneth, true God, ever and eternally. Amen. Then let him bow and say: May thy body, O Lord, which we sinners have received, and the cup which we have drunk, cleave unto our inward parts; and grant, O almighty God, that no stain of sin may remain there where thy pure and holy sacraments have entered; through the same Christ our Lord. What we have received with the mouth, O Lord, may we take with a pure mind, and may it be unto us an everlasting remedy; through Christ our Lord.

Note.

- The German thanksgiving. It comes from Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533. "In ewigkeit des heiligen geists" is evidently a slip for "in einigkeit"; Pfalz-Neuburg reads einigkeit.
- The two Latin prayers. They are the priest's prayers at the ablutions.
  - Corpus tuum is in the plural, with the wording "ut ibi nulla remaneat peccati macula, ubi … pura et sancta introierunt sacramenta". The Tridentine text reads "ut in me non remaneat scelerum macula, quem pura et sancta refecerunt sacramenta".
  - Quod ore sumpsimus lacks et de munere temporali. Pfalz-Neuburg restores it.
- The blessing. Sehling notes that the 1540 and 1542 prints end here. The blessing printed in Mylius's edition is not in them.

7.13 Calenberg-Göttingen, Kirchenordnung, 1542

Church order of Duchess Elisabeth for the principality of Calenberg-Göttingen, drawn up by Antonius Corvinus, 1542. Sehling 6, III, pp. 813–817 (`eko.db` doc 2036), with the Masses for the church year on pp. 819–834 (doc 2037).

The Sacrament is taken from Brandenburg 1540 (§7.12), put into German throughout:

- the collect for the magistrates prayed by the priest under the Sanctus;
- the Pax Domini;
- the Brandenburg thanksgiving.

To these Göttingen adds a custodiat at the distribution, which Brandenburg lacks.

Brandenburg's Latin Domine Iesu Christe, qui dixisti becomes a German postcommunion collect. The proper Masses for the church year take many of their introits, collects, readings and Prefaces from Müntzer's German Mass (§7.4; Radical Reformation). Sehling's notes to doc 2037 say so at each place, e.g. p. 821 n. 84: "Vgl. dieselbe Präfation bei Müntzer, Deutsch ev. messe v. 1524". The route is given in Sehling's note 26 (p. 812): "Corvinus hat hier auf dem Wege über die Erfurter Kirchenämter z. T. die Altargesänge und liturgischen Texte Thomas Müntzers übernommen". The Erfurt Kirchenamt of 1525 added a Trinity Mass to Müntzer's five, and a second Erfurt print added the Ascension, the Sacrament and the Apostles.

7.13.1 Offertory, Preface, Sanctus, and the collect under the Sanctus

> Darnach gehet der priester wider vor den altar und singet der chor in mitteler zeit: Es wolt uns Gott gnedig sein etc. ader Gott der Vater wone uns bey etc. Darnach singet der priester: Der Herre sey mit euch! Antwort der chor: Und mit deinem geiste. Darnach volget das offertorium. Anstat des offertorii sol man mit der gemein einen deutschen psalm singen. Gott sey preis von ewigkeit zu ewigkeit. Amen. Der Herre sey mit euch, und mit deinem geiste. Hebet auf euer herzen! Die erheben wir zum Herren. Lasset uns danksagen dem Herren, unserm Gotte! Das ist billich und ist recht! Warlich ist das billich und recht und heilsam, das wir dir danken, heiliger Herr, almechtiger Vater, ewiger Gott, durch Christum, unsern Herren, der das ware osterlamb ist, der ist warlich das lamb, das der welt sünde tregt, der unsern todt mit seinem sterben verstöret hat und das leben mit seiner auferstehunge erworben hat. Darumb singen wir mit seinen engeln und erzengeln deiner ehr ein lobgesang, ohn end sprechende: Das Sanctus. Jesaia dem propheten das geschach, das er im geist den Herren sitzen sach auf einem hohen thron in hellem glanz, seines kleides saum den chor füllet ganz. […] Heilig ist Gott, der Herre Zebaoth! Heilig ist Gott, der Herre Zebaoth! Heilig ist Gott, der Herre Zebaoth! Sein ehr die ganze welt erfüllet hat. […] Unter dem Sanctus bete der priester dieser oration oder collecten eine. Für die oberkeit. Barmherziger himlischer Vater, in welches hende aller menschen gewalt und oberkeit stehen, von dir eingesetzt zur straffe der übeltheter und zum schutz der fromen, in welches hende auch stehen alle rechte und gesetze aller lender, wir bitten dich, sey gnedig unserm keiser, allen königen und fürsten, sonderlich unser landesfürstinnen und der jungen herschaft, rath und regenten dieser stad und aller ordentlicher obrigkeit, damit sie das weltliche schwerd, das du ihnen befolhen hast, recht füren mügen. Umbschetige sie mit der kraft des allerhöchsten, erleuchte und erhalt sie bey deinem göttlichen namen! Las sie dein göttlichs wort von herzen lieb haben und darüber vesthalten und sie ja dasselbige nicht lassen verfolgen. Gib ihn, lieber Herr, weisheit und einen verstand und ein friedsam regiment, auf das sie alle ihre underthan in der warheit und gerechtigkeit, die dir gefellig ist, regiren und beschirmen. Auch, mein lieber Gott, friste ihn ihr leben lang nach deinem willen. Und weil das gerichte dein ist und sie an deiner stat sitzen, gib ihn gnade, also zu regiren, das dein heiliger name durch sie geheiliget und gepreiset werde von nu an bis in ewigkeit. Das helf ihn der Herr Jhesu Christ, dein geliebter Sohn. Amen.

Thereafter the priest goeth again before the altar, and the choir singeth in the meantime: "May God Bestow on Us His Grace", etc., or "Triune God, Be Thou Our Stay", etc. Thereafter the priest singeth: The Lord be with you! The choir answereth: And with thy spirit. Thereafter followeth the offertory. In the stead of the offertory a German psalm shall be sung with the congregation. Praise be to God from everlasting to everlasting. Amen. The Lord be with you, and with thy spirit. Lift up your hearts! We lift them up unto the Lord. Let us give thanks unto the Lord our God! That is meet and is right! Verily this is meet and right and wholesome that we should give thanks unto thee, holy Lord, almighty Father, everlasting God, through Christ our Lord, who is the true Passover lamb; he is verily the Lamb that beareth the sin of the world, who hath destroyed our death by his dying, and hath won life by his rising again. Therefore we sing with his angels and archangels a song of praise to thine honour, saying without end: The Sanctus. Isaiah the prophet, it befell him that he in the spirit saw the Lord sitting upon a high throne in bright splendour; the hem of his garment filled all the choir. […] Holy is God, the Lord of Sabaoth! Holy is God, the Lord of Sabaoth! Holy is God, the Lord of Sabaoth! His glory hath filled the whole world. […] Under the Sanctus let the priest pray one of these prayers or collects. For the magistrates. Merciful heavenly Father, in whose hands stand the power and authority of all men, ordained by thee for the punishment of evil-doers and for the protection of the godly; in whose hands also stand all the rights and laws of all lands: we beseech thee, be gracious unto our emperor, all kings and princes, specially unto our sovereign lady and the young lordship, the council and governors of this city and all orderly authority, that they may rightly bear the temporal sword which thou hast committed unto them. Overshadow them with the power of the Most High, enlighten them and keep them in thy divine name! Let them love thy divine word from the heart and hold fast thereby, and never suffer the same to be persecuted. Give them, dear Lord, wisdom and understanding and a peaceable government, that they may govern and defend all their subjects in the truth and righteousness that is pleasing unto thee. Also, my dear God, prolong their life according to thy will. And because the judgement is thine and they sit in thy stead, give them grace so to govern that thy holy name may be hallowed and praised through them from henceforth for evermore. This help them the Lord Jesus Christ, thy beloved Son. Amen.

Note.

- "Anstat des offertorii". The offertory keeps its name and place ("Darnach volget das offertorium") as a German hymn.
- "Gott sey preis von ewigkeit zu ewigkeit. Amen." This is Per omnia saecula saeculorum. Amen, the end of the Secret, sung before the Preface dialogue. Müntzer has it in the same place as "durch alle ewigkeit der ewigkeit. Amen" (§7.4.1).
- The Preface is the Easter Preface. Sehling's note refers it to the Roman Easter Preface.
- The Sanctus is Luther's German Sanctus (Deutsche Messe).

- The collect is the first of Brandenburg's four collects under the Sanctus (§7.12.2), adapted to a duchess-regent ("unser landesfürstinnen und der jungen herschaft"). As there, it stands in the place of the Canon's intercessions. The Masses for the church year (doc 2037) repeat it or give other collects "so der priester unter dem Sanctus betet".

7.13.2 Our Father, Verba, communion with the custodiat, the Peace

> Last uns beten, wie uns der Herr Christus Jesus bevolen hat, das wir aus rechter zuversicht und vertrauen dorfen sagen: Vater unser, der du bist im himel, geheiliget werde dein nahme, zukom dein reich, dein will geschehe als im hymel und auf erden. Unser teglich brod gib uns heute, und vergib uns unser schulde, als wir vergeben unsern schüldigern! Und führ uns nicht in versuchung, sondern erlöse uns von dem übel; denn dein ist das reich und die kraft und die herligkeit in ewigkeit. Amen. Verba consecrationis. Unser Herr Jhesus in der nacht, da er verrhaten ward, nam er das brod, danket seinem himlischen Vater und brachs und gabs seinen jüngern und sprach: Nemet hin und esset, das ist mein leib, der fur euch dargegeben wird, das thut zu meinem gedechtnis. Desselbigengleichen nam er auch den kelch nach dem abentmal, danket und gab den seinen jüngern und sprach: Trinket alle daraus, das ist mein blut des neuen testamentes, das vor euch und vor vil vergossen wird zur vergebung der sünden, sölchs thut, so oft ihrs trinkt, zu meinem gedechtnis! Hiemach sol der priester den leuhten das sacrament reichen und sagen: Nim hin und iss, das ist der leib Christi, der vor dich gegeben ist, der behüte deine sele zum ewigen leben. Amen. Nim hin und trink, das ist das blut des neuen testaments, das vor deine sünde vergossen ist, das sterke deine sehle zum ewigen leben. Amen. Und sing man indes das Discubuit odder Jhesus Christus, unser heiland etc. oder Gott sey gelobet. Wenn die letzten zugehen, so beschliesse der chor mit demselbigen versen. Darnach singe der priester: Der friede des Herrn sey mit euch! Der chor singt: Und mit deinem geiste!

Let us pray, as the Lord Christ Jesus hath commanded us, that out of right confidence and trust we may be bold to say: Our Father, which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name, thy kingdom come, thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors! And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil; for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen. The words of consecration. Our Lord Jesus, in the night in which he was betrayed, took the bread, gave thanks unto his heavenly Father, and brake it, and gave it to his disciples, and said: Take and eat, this is my body, which is given for you; this do in remembrance of me. After the same manner he took also the cup after the supper, gave thanks, and gave it to his disciples, and said: Drink ye all of it, this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for you and for many for the forgiveness of sins; this do, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me! Hereafter the priest shall give the sacrament to the people and say: Take and eat, this is the body of Christ, which is given for thee; the same preserve thy soul unto everlasting life. Amen. Take and drink, this is the blood of the new testament, which is shed for thy sins; the same strengthen thy soul unto everlasting life. Amen. And meanwhile let the Discubuit be sung, or "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior", etc., or "O Lord, We Praise Thee". When the last go up, let the choir close with the same verses. Thereafter let the priest sing: The peace of the Lord be with you! The choir singeth: And with thy spirit!

Note.

- The Our Father. Brandenburg's recast Praeceptis salutaribus (§7.12.4) is kept.
- The custodiat. "der behüte deine sele zum ewigen leben" is the custodiat. "das sterke deine sehle" varies it for the cup. Brandenburg's own formula ("Nim hin und iss …") has no custodiat.
- The *Pax Domini follows the communion, as a greeting of peace before the thanksgiving. The Roman response is kept.
- The communion chant. Discubuit Iesus is the responsory that Brandenburg also prescribes (§7.12.7).

7.13.3 Thanksgiving, Agnus Dei, and Qui dixisti as the final collect

> Hirauf volgt die danksagung, so man in allen messen nach geschehener communion thun sol, und keret sich der priester zu dem volk und spricht: O almechtiger, ewiger Gott, wir sagen deiner göttlicher mildigkeit lob und dank, das du uns mit deinem heilsamen fleisch und blut deines einigen Sons Jhesu Christi, unsers Herrn, gespeiset und getrenket hast, und bitten dich demütiglich, du wollest durch deinen heiligen Geist in uns wirken, wie wir diss heilige sacrament mit dem munde haben entpfangen, das wir auch also deine götliche gnaden, vergebunge der sünden, voreinigunge mit Christo und ewiges leben, so darinnen angezeigt und zugesagt ist, mit festem glauben mögen begreifen und ewiglich behalten. Wir danken dir auch, almechtiger Gott, das du uns durch die heilsame gabe deines leibes und bluts hast erquicket, und bitten dein barmherzigkeit, das du uns solchs gedeien lassest zu starkem glauben gegen dir und zu brünstiger liebe gegen uns allen durch unsern Herrn Jhesum Christum, deinen Sohn, der mit dir in ewigkeit des heiligen Geists lebt und > herschet, warer Gott ymmer und ewiglich. Amen. Gehet hin im frieden! Das Agnus Dei. O lamb Gottes unschuldig, am stam des kreuzs geschlachtet, allezeit gefunden düldig, wiewol du werst verachtet, all sund hastu getragen, sonst müsten wir verzagen, erbarm dich unser, o Jhesu! Hieauf volgt die collect, die singet der priester. O Herr Jhesu Christe, der du deinen apostelen gesagt hast: Meinen friden geb ich euch, meinen friden lass ich euch!, wollest unser sünde nicht gedenken, sonder ansehen den glauben deiner gemein. Die wöllestu im friden erhalten, bewaren und regiren, der du mit dem Vater und dem heiligen Geiste, warer Gott, herschest und regirest in ewigkeit. Amen. Hienach volget die benedictio: Der Herre segne dich und behüte dich! Der Herre erleuchte sein angesicht über dir und sey dir gnedig! Der Herre hebe sein angesicht auf dich und gebe dir friede! Singet der priester: Lasset uns den Herren preisen, alleluja! Der chor: Danket dem Herren, alleluja! Beschliesse mit dem Da pacem, Verley uns friden etc. mit der collecten.

Hereupon followeth the thanksgiving, which shall be made in all Masses after the communion is done; and the priest turneth to the people and saith: O almighty, everlasting God, we give praise and thanks unto thy divine bounty, that thou hast fed and given us to drink with the wholesome flesh and blood of thine only Son Jesus Christ, our Lord; and we humbly beseech thee that thou wouldest work in us by thy Holy Ghost, that as we have received this holy sacrament with the mouth, so we may also lay hold on thy divine grace, forgiveness of sins, union with Christ and everlasting life, which are therein shown and promised, with firm faith, and keep them for ever. We thank thee also, almighty God, that thou hast refreshed us through the wholesome gift of thy body and blood; and we beseech thy mercy that thou wouldest let it prosper unto us to strong faith toward thee and to fervent love toward us all; through our Lord Jesus Christ, thy Son, who with thee in the eternity of the Holy Ghost liveth and reigneth, true God, ever and everlastingly. Amen. Go in peace! The Agnus Dei. O Lamb of God, unspotted, slain upon the tree of the cross, found patient at all times, although thou wast despised; all sins hast thou borne, else must we have despaired; have mercy upon us, O Jesu! Hereupon followeth the collect, which the priest singeth. O Lord Jesu Christ, who hast said to thine apostles: My peace I give unto you, my peace I leave with you!, vouchsafe not to remember our sins, but look upon the faith of thy congregation; which vouchsafe thou to keep in peace, to preserve and to govern; who with the Father and the Holy Ghost, true God, rulest and reignest for ever. Amen. Hereafter followeth the blessing: The Lord bless thee and keep thee! The Lord make his face shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee! The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee and give thee peace! The priest singeth: Let us praise the Lord, alleluia! The choir: Give thanks unto the Lord, alleluia! Let him conclude with the Da pacem, "Grant Peace, We Pray, in Mercy, Lord", etc., with the collect.

Note.

- The thanksgiving is Brandenburg's, made of two parts (§7.12.8). Brandenburg's Latin ablution prayers after it are dropped.
- "Gehet hin im frieden!" is Ite, missa est in German.
- The *Agnus Dei is Decius' hymn, moved after the thanksgiving.
- The final collect is Domine Iesu Christe, qui dixisti in German. It is the priest's prayer for the peace of the Church, said in the Roman Mass before the kiss of peace and kept by Brandenburg in Latin before communion (§7.12.5). Sehling's note: "Die folgende Kollekte ist in der KO für die Mark Brandenburg von 1540 … in lat. Fassung enthalten. Vgl. dazu Röm. Meßbuch … (Ordo Missae, Friedensgebet)". Here it becomes a collect sung aloud to close the Mass.
  - The verbs "erhalten, bewaren und regiren" follow Brandenburg's pacificare custodire … regere (§7.12.5).
  - "den glauben deiner gemein" puts "congregation" for ecclesiae tuae.
- The Easter Benedicamus. "Lasset uns den Herren preisen, alleluja / Danket dem Herren, alleluja" is the Easter Benedicamus Domino, alleluia / Deo gratias, alleluia.

7.13.4 From the Masses for the church year

The proper Masses (doc 2037) end with proper collects in the same slot. For Whitsun it is Müntzer's closing prayer (Sehling: "Kollekte aus Müntzers Deutsch ev. messe v. 1524"), which is a German version of the Roman Whitsun postcommunion Sancti Spiritus, Domine, corda nostra mundet infusio: et sui roris intima aspersione fecundet (§7.4.4):

> O Herr, verleihe uns die gnad des heiligen Geists, auf das der tau deiner güte unsern grund des herzens in seiner besprengung fruchtbar mache […].

O Lord, grant us the grace of the Holy Ghost, that the dew of thy goodness may make the ground of our heart fruitful by its sprinkling […].

7.14 Pfalz-Neuburg, Kirchenordnung, 1543

Church order of Count Palatine Ottheinrich, 1543. Sehling 13, I.2, pp. 70–76 (Mass). Canon critique: pp. 64–65, Appendix 7.A.

Sehling notes that the Mass follows Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533, with additions from Brandenburg 1540. Its shape differs from both in three ways:

1. No Preface. Osiander's exhortation is moved to before the consecration.
2. A new prayer over the elements. Before the Verba the priest says Osiander's newly written prayer over the hosts and cup. In it he "brings before thy divine majesty these thy gifts, bread and wine". It serves as both an offertory and an epiclesis.
3. The Sanctus after the Verba. The Sanctus follows the Verba, and the Brandenburg collects are said under it.

After the Our Father, the Brandenburg Latin prayers follow. There are two changes to them: Fili Dei vivi reads "ecclesiam tuam vivificasti", and Sacramentum corporis adds "et sanguinis".

7.14.1 Creed, sermon, and the exhortation before the Lord's Supper

> Nach dem evangelio sol der priester das Credo und der chor das Patrem lateinisch singen oder, wo kein chor ist, mag es der priester selbs singen oder sprechen und das volk dieweil das teutsch gesang: Wir glauben all in einen Gott lassen singen. […] Wo man nun unter der messe prediget, da soll der priester alsbald nach der predig wider uber den altar gehn und, damit das volk dester fleißiger und andechtiger alles, was hernach folget, vernehme, sol er oder einer aus den ministranten, wann man die hat, nachfolgende vermanung gegen dem volk lesen. Vermanung vor dem abendmal. Ir allerliebsten in Got! Dieweil wir jetzo das heilig abendmal unsers Herrn Jesu Christi wöllen bedenken und halten, darin er uns sein fleisch zu einer speis und sein blut zu einem trank, den glauben darmit zu sterken, gegeben hat, sollen wir billich mit großem fleiß ein jeder sich selbs prüfen, wie uns der heilig Paulus vermanet; dann dis heilig sacrament ist zu einem sondern trost und sterk gegeben den armen, betrübten gewissen, die ire sünd empfinden und bekennen, Gottis zorn und den tod förchten und nach der gerechtigkeit hungerig und durstig sein. So wir aber uns selbs prüfen und ein jeder in sein eigen gewissen gehet, wie uns der heilig Paulus lehret, werden wir gewißlich nicht anders finden, dann allerlei greuliche sünd und den tod, den wir mit der sünd verschuldet haben, und können doch uns selbs in keinen weg daraus helfen. Darumb hat unser lieber Herr Jesus Christus sich uber uns erbarmet und ist umb unserer sünde willen mensch worden, auf das er das gesetz und allen willen Gottis fur uns und uns zu gut erfüllet und den tod und alles, was wir mit unsern sünden verschuldet hetten, fur uns und zu unserer erledigung auf sich neme und erlitte. Und auf das wir das je festiglich glauben und durch den glauben frölich in seinem willen möchten leben, nam er nach dem abendmal das brot, sagte dank, brachs und sprach: Nembt hin und esset! Das ist mein leib, der für euch dargegeben wirt, das ist: Das ich mensch bin worden und alles, das ich tue und leide, ist alles euer eigen, für euch und euch zu gut geschehen. Des zu einem gewissen anzeigen und zeugnus gib ich euch mein leib zur speise. Desselben gleichen nam er auch den kelch und sprach: Nempt hin und trinket aus disem alle! Das ist der kelch des neuen testaments in meinem blut. So oft ir das tut, solt ir mein darbei gedenken. Das ist: Dieweil ich mich euer angenomen und euer sünd auf mich geladen hab, will ich mich selbs für die sünd in tod opfern, mein blut vergießen, genad und vergebung der sünd erwerben und also ein neu testament aufrichten, darin die sünd vergeben und ewig nicht mer soll gedacht werden. Des zu einem gewissen anzeigen und zeugnus gib ich euch mein blut zu trinken. Wer nun also von disem brot isset und von disem kelch trinkt, auch disen worten, die er von Christo höret, und disen zeichen, die er von Christo empfahet, festiglich glaubet, der bleibt in dem Herrn Christo und Christus in im und wirt ewiglich leben. Darbei sollen wir nun sein gedenken und seinen tod verkündigen, nemlich, das er für unser sünd sei gestorben und zu unserer rechtfertigung wider auferstanden, und ihm darumb danken, ein jeder sein creuz auf sich nemen und im nachvolgen und nach seinem gebot einander lieben, wie er uns geliebt hat; dann wir sein alle ein brot und ein leib, dieweil wir alle eins brots teilhaftig sein und aus einem kelch trinken.

After the Gospel the priest shall sing the Credo and the choir the Patrem in Latin; or, where there is no choir, the priest may himself sing or say it, and meanwhile let the people sing the German song "We All Believe in One True God". […] Where now one preacheth during the Mass, the priest shall forthwith after the sermon go again to the altar; and, that the people may the more diligently and devoutly perceive all that followeth, he, or one of the ministers if there be any, shall read the following exhortation toward the people. Exhortation before the Supper. Dearly beloved in God! Forasmuch as we will now consider and keep the holy supper of our Lord Jesus Christ, wherein he hath given us his flesh for a meat and his blood for a drink, therewith to strengthen faith, we ought rightly every one with great diligence to examine himself, as the holy Paul exhorteth us; for this holy sacrament is given for a special comfort and strength unto the poor, troubled consciences which feel and confess their sins, fear God's wrath and death, and are hungry and thirsty after righteousness. But when we examine ourselves, and every one goeth into his own conscience, as the holy Paul teacheth us, we shall surely find nothing else but all manner of horrible sin, and death, which we have deserved with sin; and yet we cannot in any wise help ourselves out thereof. Therefore hath our dear Lord Jesus Christ had mercy upon us, and for our sins' sake is become man, to the end that he might fulfil the law and all the will of God for us and for our good, and take upon himself and suffer death and all that we had deserved with our sins, for us and for our deliverance. And to the end that we might steadfastly believe this, and through faith live joyfully in his will, he took after the supper the bread, gave thanks, brake it, and said: Take and eat! This is my body, which is given for you; that is: that I am become man, and all that I do and suffer is all your own, done for you and for your good. For a sure token and witness whereof I give you my body for meat. Likewise he took also the cup, and said: Take and drink ye all of this! This is the cup of the new testament in my blood. As oft as ye do this, ye shall remember me thereby. That is: forasmuch as I have taken your cause upon me and laden your sins upon myself, I will offer myself unto death for sin, shed my blood, obtain grace and forgiveness of sins, and so set up a new testament, wherein sins are forgiven and shall be remembered no more for ever. For a sure token and witness whereof I give you my blood to drink. Whosoever now eateth thus of this bread and drinketh of this cup, and firmly believeth these words which he heareth of Christ and these signs which he receiveth of Christ, he dwelleth in the Lord Christ and Christ in him, and shall live for ever. Hereby shall we now remember him and show forth his death, namely that he died for our sins and rose again for our justification, and give him thanks therefor; every one take up his cross and follow him, and according to his commandment love one another, as he hath loved us: for we are all one bread and one body, seeing we are all partakers of one bread and drink of one cup.

Note. This is the Brandenburg text (§7.12.6), which Sehling traces from 1540 back to 1533. It is moved from before the distribution to before the consecration. There are two changes:

- The cup word stops at "in meinem blut". It lacks "das fur euch und fur viel vergossen wird zu vergebung der sunde".
- The consciences "feel and confess" their sins ("empfinden und bekennen").

7.14.2 Osiander's prayer over the hosts and cup (offertory and epiclesis)

> Nach diser vermanung sol der priester uber die hostien und den kelch, die nach anzal und gelegenheit der personen, so zum heiligen sacrament gehn wöllen, auf den altar verordnet sein sollen, dises nachfolgendes gebet sprechen: Gebet. Herr Jesu Christe, du einiger warer son des lebendigen Gottis, der du dein leib fur uns alle in den bittern tod hast dargeben und dein bluot zu vergebung unserer sünd vergossen, darzu denselben dein leib und dasselbig dein bluot allen deinen jungern zu essen und zu trinken und deines tods darbei zu gedenken hast befolhen. Wir bringen fur deine götliche majestat dise deine gaben, brot und wein, und bitten, du wöllest dieselben durch dein götliche gnad, gute und kraft heiligen, segnen und schaffen, das dises brot dein leib und diser wein dein blut sei, und allen denen, die darvon essen und trinken, zum ewigen leben lassen gedeihen, der du mit Got dem Vater in einigkeit des Heiligen Geists lebst und regirest immer und ewiglich. Amen.

After this exhortation the priest shall say this following prayer over the hosts and the cup, which shall be set upon the altar according to the number and occasion of the persons that will go to the holy sacrament: Prayer. Lord Jesus Christ, thou only true Son of the living God, who hast given thy body for us all into the bitter death, and shed thy blood for the forgiveness of our sins, and hast moreover commanded all thy disciples to eat the same thy body and to drink the same thy blood, and therewith to remember thy death: we bring before thy divine majesty these thy gifts, bread and wine, and beseech thee that thou wouldest, by thy divine grace, goodness and power, hallow and bless the same, and make that this bread be thy body and this wine thy blood, and let them prosper unto everlasting life unto all them that eat and drink thereof; who with God the Father in the unity of the Holy Ghost livest and reignest ever and eternally. Amen.

Note. Sehling calls this an offertory prayer newly written by Osiander, and cites Graff's study of the epiclesis in Reformation orders. Addressed to Christ, not to the Father, it gathers four parts of the Canon into one prayer said over the elements:

Osiander 1543	Roman source
"Herr Jesu Christe, du einiger warer son des lebendigen Gottis"	Domine Iesu Christe, Fili Dei vivi

Osiander 1543	Roman source
"Wir bringen fur deine götliche majestat dise deine gaben, brot und wein"	Unde et memores: offerimus praeclarae maiestati tuae de tuis donis ac datis; also Te igitur: haec dona, haec munera
"du wöllest dieselben … heiligen, segnen und schaffen, das dises brot dein leib und diser wein dein blut sei"	Quam oblationem: benedictam … facere digneris, ut nobis Corpus et Sanguis fiat
"allen denen, die darvon essen und trinken, zum ewigen leben lassen gedeihen"	Supplices: ut quotquot ex hac altaris participatione … sumpserimus, omni benedictione caelesti et gratia repleamur

It meets the demand of the critique printed earlier in the same order (Appendix 7.A) only half-way. The verb there objected to, opfern, becomes bringen … fur deine götliche majestat, and the gifts are "thy gifts, bread and wine", not the body and blood.

7.14.3 The Verba, sung, with elevation

> Alsobald nach disem gebet sol er anfahen, die verba consecrationis zu singen oder mit lauter, wolvernemlicher stimme zu sprechen, wie er andre gesang vormals gesungen oder gesprochen hat, wie hernach folget, und sol sich fleißigen, das seine geberd mit den worten sich vergleichen, das ist: Wann er singt: Nam er das brot…, so sol er auch die großen hostien nemen und seiner brust gleich halten, bis die wort volendet sein. Desgleichen, wenn er singt: Nam er den kelch…, sol er mit dem kelch auch also tun, wie vorgemelt ist. Unser Herr Jesus in der nacht, da er verraten ward, nam er das brot, danket und brachs und gabs seinen jungern und sprach: Nembt hin und esset! Das ist mein leib, der für euch gegeben wirt. Das tut zu meinem gedechtnus! Hie sol er die großen hostia mit geneigtem haupt aufheben und dem volk zaigen, darnach auch den kelch nemen und halten, bis er die volgenden wort singt oder spricht: Desselben gleichen nam er auch den kelch nach dem abendmal und danket und gab in den und sprach: Trinkt alle daraus! Das ist mein blut des neuen testamentes, das für euch und fur vil vergossen wird zu vergebung der sünden. Solchs tut, so oft irs trinkt, zu meinem gedechtnus! Hie sol er den kelch auch aufheben und dem volk zaigen.

As soon as this prayer is ended he shall begin to sing the words of consecration, or to say them with a loud, well-audible voice, as he hath aforetime sung or said other chants, as hereafter followeth; and he shall take care that his gestures agree with the words; that is, when he singeth "He took the bread …", he shall also take the large host and hold it level with his breast until the words be ended. Likewise, when he singeth "He took the cup …", he shall do so with the cup also, as aforesaid. Our Lord Jesus, in the night in which he was betrayed, took the bread, gave thanks, and brake it, and gave it to his disciples, and said: Take and eat! This is my body, which is given for you. This do in remembrance of me! Here he shall lift up the large host with bowed head and show it to the people; thereafter take also the cup and hold it, until he sing or say the following words: Likewise also he took the cup after the supper, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, and said: Drink ye all of it! This is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for you and for many for the remission of sins. This do, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me! Here he shall lift up the cup also and show it to the people.

Note. The Verba are sung to the Our Father tone, following Luther's suggestion in the Formula missae and the Nürnberg melody of 1533. The large host is kept, a relic of the Roman fraction host. The elevation is kept, with a bowed head.

7.14.4 Sanctus with three collects

> Darnach sol der chor das Sanctus lateinisch singen oder, wo kein chor ist, mag es der priester selbs singen oder sprechen und anstatt desselben das volk darfur ein gut teutsch geistlich lied lassen singen, und unter demselben gesang sol er dieweil dise nachfolgende gebet sprechen. Folgen die gebet, so der priester unter oder nach dem Sanctus sprechen sol. Fur die weltlichen obrigkeit. Barmherziger, himlischer Vater, in welches hende aller menschlicher gewalt und obrigkeit stehet, von dir eingesetzt zur straf der ubelteter und zum schutz der frommen, in welches hende auch stehn alle recht und gesetz aller lender! Wir bitten dich, sei gnedig unserm herrn keiser, allen königen und fürsten, sonderlich unserm landsfürsten und herrn N. und dem rat und regenten diser statt und aller ordenlichen obrigkeit, damit sie das weltliche schwert, das du inen befolhen hast, recht füren mögen. Umbschatte sie mit der kraft deiner götlichen majestat! Erleucht und erhalt sie bei deinem götlichen namen! Laß sie dein göttlich wort von herzen lieb haben und sich demselbigen unterwerfen! Gib inen, lieber Herr, weisheit und verstand und ein fridsam regiment, auf das sie alle ire untertonen in der warheit und gerechtigkeit, die dir gefällig ist, regirn und beschirmen! Friste in auch, mein lieber Got, ir leben lang nach deinem willen > und, dieweil das gericht dein ist und sie an deiner statt sitzen, so gib in gnad, also zu regirn, das dein heiliger name durch sie geheiliget und gepreiset werde von nun an bis in ewigkeit! Amen.

> Fur die diener des worts. O allmechtiger, gütiger Gott und Vater unsers Herren Jesu Christi, der uns ernstlich befolhen hat, das wir dich umb arbeiter in dein ernt bitten sollen! Wir bitten dein grundlose barmherzigkeit, du wöllest uns rechtgeschaffene lerer und diener deines götlichen worts zuschicken und denselben dein heilsames wort in ir herz und mund geben, das sie deinen befelch treulich ausrichten und nichts predigen, das deinem heiligen wort entgegen sei, auf das wir durch dein himelisch, ewig wort ermanet, gelert, gespeist, getröst und gesterkt werden und tun, was dir gefellig und uns fruchtbarlich ist. Gib, Herr, deiner heiligen christenheit deinen Geist und götliche weisheit, das dein wort unter uns lauf und wachs und mit aller freidigkeit, wie sichs gebürt, gepredigt und dein heilige, christliche gemein dardurch gebessert werd, auf das wir mit bestendigem glauben dir dienen und in erkanntnus deines namens bis ans ende verharren.
> Umb christliche einigkeit. Barmherziger Got und ewiger Vater, ein könig der ehren und ein herr himels und und der erden, durch welches Geist alle ding regirt, durch welches fürsehung alle ding geordnet werden! Du bist ein Got des frides, von dem alle einigkeit zu uns kompt. Wir bitten dich, du wöllest uns unser sünd vergeben und mit deinem götlichen frid und einigkeit begnaden, damit wir in forcht und zittern deinem namen immer und ewiglich dienen und dein götliche majestat allzeit von uns gepreist werde, durch unsern Herrn Jesum Christum, deinen son, der mit dir in einigkeit des Heiligen Geists lebt und regirt immer und ewiglich. Amen.

Thereafter the choir shall sing the Sanctus in Latin; or, where there is no choir, the priest may himself sing or say it, and in place thereof let the people sing a good German spiritual song; and under the same singing he shall meanwhile say these following prayers. There follow the prayers which the priest shall say under or after the Sanctus. For the temporal magistrates. Merciful heavenly Father, in whose hands standeth all power and authority of men, ordained of thee for the punishment of evildoers and the protection of the godly, in whose hands also stand all the rights and laws of all lands: we beseech thee, be gracious unto our lord the Emperor, all kings and princes, especially unto our prince and lord of the land N., and unto the council and rulers of this city and all lawful magistrates, that they may rightly bear the temporal sword which thou hast committed unto them. Overshadow them with the power of thy divine Majesty; enlighten them and keep them in thy divine name; let them love thy divine word from the heart and submit themselves thereto. Give them, dear Lord, wisdom and understanding and a peaceable government, that they may rule and defend all their subjects in the truth and righteousness that is well-pleasing unto thee. Also, my dear God, prolong their life according to thy will; and forasmuch as the judgement is thine and they sit in thy stead, give them grace so to rule that thy holy name may be hallowed and praised through them, from henceforth even for ever. Amen.

For the ministers of the word. O almighty, gracious God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath earnestly commanded us that we should pray thee for labourers into thine harvest: we beseech thy bottomless mercy that thou wouldest send us right and true teachers and ministers of thy divine word, and give thy wholesome word into their heart and mouth, that they may faithfully perform thy commandment and preach nothing that is contrary to thy holy word; to the end that we, being by thy heavenly, eternal word admonished, taught, fed, comforted and strengthened, may do that which is well-pleasing unto thee and profitable unto us. Give, O Lord, unto thy holy Christendom thy Spirit and divine wisdom, that thy word may run and grow among us and be preached with all boldness, as it becometh, and that thy holy Christian congregation may be bettered thereby; that we may serve thee with steadfast faith and continue in the knowledge of thy name unto the end.

For Christian unity. Merciful God and everlasting Father, a King of glory and a Lord of heaven and of earth, by whose Spirit all things are governed, by whose providence all things are ordered: thou art a God of peace, from whom all unity cometh unto us. We beseech thee that thou wouldest forgive us our sins and endue us with thy divine peace and unity, that we may serve thy name in fear and trembling for ever and ever, and thy divine Majesty be praised of us evermore; through our Lord Jesus Christ thy Son, who with thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost liveth and reigneth ever and eternally. Amen.

Note. These are Brandenburg's first three collects (§7.12.2), with two changes to the collect for the magistrates:

- "Umbschatte sie mit der kraft deiner götlichen majestat" replaces "mit der kraft des allerhöchsten". It removes the Marian echo of Luke 1:35.
- "Sich demselbigen unterwerfen" replaces "darüber fest halten und sie ja dasselbig nicht lassen verfolgen". The magistrates are to submit to the Word, not merely protect it.

Brandenburg's fourth, penitential collect is dropped. Sehling's note on this passage explains the placing: "Diese Gebete sind an die Stelle der in der römischen Messe teils vor teils nach der Konsekration gesprochenen Fürbittgebete gesetzt. Sie wurden sonst in evangelischen Kirchenordnungen ohne Ersatz gestrichen, weil sie den von der Reformation abgelehnten Opfercharakter der Messe zur Grundlage haben." In other words, elsewhere the Canon's intercessions were cut without replacement, because they rest on the sacrificial character of the Mass.

7.14.5 Our Father and the Peace

> Wann dann das Sanctus oder andrer gesang geendet und dise gebet gesprochen sein, so sol er das Vater unser singen oder mit lauter stimme sprechen, wie hernach folget: Last uns beten! Vater unser, der du bist im himel, geheiligt werd dein name! Zukom dein reich! Dein will geschehe als im himel auch auf erden! Unser teglich brot gib uns heut! Und vergib uns unser schulde, als wir vergeben unseren schuldigern! Und für uns nicht in versuchung, sonder erlös uns vom ubel! Dann dein ist das reich und die kraft und die herlichkeit in ewigkeit. Chorus: Amen. Darnach wende er sich zum volk. Der frid des Herren sei mit euch allen! Chorus: Amen.

When then the Sanctus or other singing is ended and these prayers are said, he shall sing the Our Father or say it with a loud voice, as hereafter followeth: Let us pray! Our Father, which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Choir: Amen. Thereafter let him turn to the people. The peace of the Lord be with you all! Choir: Amen.

Note. Of Praeceptis salutaribus only Oremus is left. There is no embolism.

7.14.6 Agnus Dei and the priest's three prayers (Latin)

> Darnach sol der chor oder, wo kein chor ist, der priester selbs das Agnus Dei, wie der brauch ist, singen oder aber sprechen und die weil das volk abermals ein gut teutsch geistlich gesang lassen singen, und unter demselbigen sol der priester auch dise nachvolgende gebet sprechen. Agnus Dei, qui tollis peccata mundi, miserere nobis! Agnus Dei, qui tollis peccata mundi, miserere nobis! Agnus Dei, qui tollis peccata mundi, dona nobis pacem! Domine Jesu Christe, qui dixisti apostolis tuis: Pacem meam do vobis, pacem relinquo vobis, ne respicias peccata mea, sed fidem ecclesiae tuae, eamque secundum voluntatem tuam pacificare, custodire, adjuvare et regere digneris, qui cum Deo Patre et Spiritu Sancto vivis ac regnas, Deus per omnia secula seculorum! Amen. Alia oratio: Domine Jesu Christe, fili Dei vivi, qui ex voluntate Patris cooperante Spiritu Sancto ecclesiam tuam vivificasti. Libera nos per hoc sacrosanctum corpus et sanguinem tuum ab omnibus iniquitatibus et universis malis nostris et fac, nos semper obedire mandatis, et a tua misericordia nunquam in perpetuum separari permittas, qui vivis ac regnas, Deus per omnia secula seculorum! Amen. Alia oratio: Sacramentum corporis et sanguinis tui, Domine Jesu Christe, quod nos indigni sumere cupimus, non nobis proveniat in judicium et condemnationem, sed pro tua pietate prosit nobis ad tutamen mentis et corporis et ad medelam percipiendam, qui vivis et regnas cum Deo Patre in unitate Spiritus Sancti, Deus per omnia secula seculorum! Amen.

Thereafter the choir, or, where there is no choir, the priest himself shall sing or else say the Agnus Dei, as the custom is, and meanwhile let the people again sing a good German spiritual song; and under the same the priest shall also say these following prayers. O Lamb of God, that takest away the sins of the world, have mercy upon us! O Lamb of God, that takest away the sins of the world, have mercy upon us! O Lamb of God, that takest away the sins of the world, grant us peace! O Lord Jesus Christ, who saidst unto thine apostles, My peace I give unto you, peace I leave with you: regard not my sins, but the faith of thy Church; and vouchsafe to pacify, keep, help and govern her according to thy will; who with God the Father and the Holy Ghost livest and reignest, God, world without end! Amen. Another prayer: O Lord Jesus Christ, Son of the living God, who by the will of the Father, the Holy Ghost working with thee, hast given life to thy Church: deliver us by this thy most holy body and blood from all iniquities and all our evils, and make us ever to obey thy commandments, and suffer us never to be separated from thy mercy for evermore; who livest and reignest, God, world without end! Amen. Another prayer: Let the sacrament of thy body and blood, O Lord Jesus Christ, which we unworthy desire to receive, not turn to us unto judgement and condemnation; but of thy goodness let it profit us unto the defence of mind and body, and unto the obtaining of healing; who livest and reignest with God the Father in the unity of the Holy Ghost, God, world without end! Amen.

Note. These are the Brandenburg prayers (§7.12.5), with three changes:

1. Fili Dei vivi. "Per mortem propriam mundum vivificasti" becomes "ecclesiam tuam vivificasti". The phrase about Christ's own death goes, and the world becomes thy Church.
2. Perceptio. "Corporis et sanguinis tui" adds the cup, which fits communion in both kinds.
3. The rubric. All three may be said, each marked Alia oratio.

7.14.7 Communion

> Darnach sollen zum sacrament gehn alle, die sich vor angesagt und die absolution empfangen haben, und der priester sol inen den leib des Herrn reichen mit disen worten: Nimm hin und iß! Das ist der leib Christi, der für dich gegeben ist. Desgleichen, wo man ministranten hat, sol der diaconus den kelch reichen denen, so den leib Christi genossen haben, und also sprechen: Nimm hin und trink! Das ist das blut des neuen testaments, das für dein sünd vergossen ist. Wo man aber nit ministranten hat, da sol der priester den leib des Herrn erstlich jederman reichen und darnach erst den kelch und, dieweil das geschicht, sol der chor das commun lateinisch singen und, wann es zu kurz were, ander gut lateinisch gesang mer, sonderlich, was de coena Domini ist, als das responsorium Discubuit Jesus. Wo aber kein chor ist, sol man die gemein abermals ein gut teutsch geistlich gesang, als da ist: Jesus Christus unser Heiland..., oder aber: Gott sei gelobet und gebenedeiet... oder ein andern gesang, der sich nach gelegenheit der zeit schicket, lassen singen. Wann nun jederman das heilig sacrament hat empfangen, so sol es dann der priester auch empfangen. Und, wiewol er von anfang sol fleiß haben, das er alle ding dermaßen verordne und in acht habe, damit von dem heiligen sacrament nit uberbleib, so sol er doch insonderheit zu ende darauf sehen, das es alles ausgeteilt werde und aufgehe, wie Christus befohlen hat, da er spricht Luce 22: Dividite inter nos..., auf das sich kein beschwerliche oder ergerliche unschicklicheit zutrag.

Thereafter all shall go to the sacrament who have announced themselves beforehand and have received the absolution; and the priest shall reach them the body of the Lord with these words: Take and eat! This is the body of Christ, which is given for thee. Likewise, where there are ministers, the deacon shall reach the cup to them that have partaken of the body of Christ, and say thus: Take and drink! This is the blood of the new testament, which is shed for thy sins. But where there are no ministers, the priest shall first reach the body of the Lord to every one, and only thereafter the cup; and while this is done, the choir shall sing the communion in Latin, and if it were too short, other good Latin chant more, especially what is de coena Domini, as the responsory Discubuit Jesus. But where there is no choir, the congregation shall again be let sing a good German spiritual song, such as "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior", or else "O Lord, We Praise Thee", or another song that befitteth the occasion of the time. When now every one hath received the holy sacrament, then shall the priest also receive it. And although he shall from the beginning take diligent care so to order and heed all things that nothing of the holy sacrament remain over, yet he shall especially at the end see to it that it be all distributed and used up, as Christ hath commanded, where he saith, Luke 22: Dividite inter nos ..., that no grievous or offensive unseemliness befall.

Note.

- The communion chant. The Latin communio of the day survives as the communion chant.
- The priest's communion. It is moved after the people's, so that nothing is left over. Sehling gives the background: this began in Nürnberg in 1524, and Luther wished it in order to cut short the question of what becomes of Christ's body and blood in the remaining elements.
- The quotation. "Dividite inter nos" is as printed; the Vulgate reads inter vos.

7.14.8 Thanksgiving, Latin ablution prayers, Benedicamus, blessing

> Darnach soll er dise zwo collecten unter einem beschluß in gewonlichem ton singen oder mit vernemlicher stimme sprechen. Laßt uns beten: O almechtiger, ewiger Gott. Wir sagen deiner götlichen miltigkeit lob und dank, das du uns mit dem heilsamen fleisch und blut deines einigen Sons Jesu Christi, unsers Herrn, gespeiset und getrenket hast, und bitten dich demütiglich, du wollest durch deinen Heiligen Geist in uns würken, wie wir dis heilige sacrament mit dem mund haben empfangen, das wir auch also dein göttlich gnad, vergebung der sünde, vereinigung mit Christo und ewigs leben, so darinnen angezeigt und zugesagt ist, mit festem glauben mögen begreifen und ewiglich behalten. Ein ander gebet. Wir danken dir auch, Herr Jesu Christe, das du uns durch dise heilsame gabe deines leibs und bluts hast erquicket, und bitten deine barmherzigkeit, das du uns solchs gedeihen lassest zu einem starken glauben gegen dir und zu brünstiger lieb unter uns allen, der du mit Got dem Vater in einigkeit des Heiligen Geists lebest und regirest immer und ewiglich. Chorus: Amen. Deinde inclinet se et dicat: Corpus tuum, Domine, quod nos peccatores sumpsimus, et calix, quem potavimus, adhaereat visceribus nostris, et praesta, ut ibi nulla remaneat peccati macula, ubi tam pura et sancta > introierunt sacramenta. Quod ore sumpsimus, Domine, pura mente capiamus, et de munere temporali fiat nobis remedium sempiternum, per Christum, Dominum nostrum. Amen. Darnach soll er oder seine diaconi bede oder einer unter dem ton, darunter man das Kyrieleison gesungen hat, das Benedicamus Domino singen, und der chor sol eben unter demselben ton antworten: Deo dicamus gratias. Darnach segne der priester das volk mit lauter vernemlicher stimm also: Der Herr gesegen euch und behüte euch! Der Herr erleucht sein angesicht uber euch und sei euch gnedig! Der Herr erhebe sein angesicht auf euch und gebe euch frid! Amen. oder also: Got sei uns gnedig und barmherzig und gebe uns seinen göttlichen segen! Er laß uns sein angesicht leuchten und geb uns seinen frid! Amen. oder also: Gesegne und behüte uns Gott der Vater und der Sun und der Heilig Geist, Amen. oder also: Der Segen Gott des Vaters und des Suns und des Heiligen Geists sei mit euch und bleib allezeit bei uns allen! Amen. Ende der meß mit communicanten.

Thereafter he shall sing these two collects under one conclusion in the accustomed tone, or say them with an audible voice. Let us pray: O almighty, everlasting God, we give praise and thanks unto thy divine bounty that thou hast fed us and given us to drink with the wholesome flesh and blood of thine only Son Jesus Christ our Lord; and we humbly beseech thee that thou wouldest work in us by thy Holy Spirit, that as we have received this holy sacrament with the mouth, so we may also with firm faith apprehend and for ever retain thy divine grace, forgiveness of sins, union with Christ and everlasting life, which are therein set forth and promised. Another prayer. We thank thee also, Lord Jesus Christ, that thou hast refreshed us through this wholesome gift of thy body and blood; and we beseech thy mercy that thou wouldest let the same prosper in us unto a strong faith toward thee and unto fervent love among us all; who with God the Father in the unity of the Holy Ghost livest and reignest ever and eternally. Choir: Amen. Then let him bow and say: May thy body, O Lord, which we sinners have received, and the cup which we have drunk, cleave unto our inward parts; and grant that no stain of sin may remain there where so pure and holy sacraments have entered. What we have received with the mouth, O Lord, may we take with a pure mind; and of a temporal gift may it become unto us an everlasting remedy; through Christ our Lord. Amen. Thereafter he or his deacons, both or one, shall sing the Benedicamus Domino in the tone in which the Kyrie eleison was sung; and the choir shall answer in the very same tone: Let us say thanks unto God. Thereafter let the priest bless the people with a loud, audible voice thus: The Lord bless you and keep you! The Lord lighten his countenance upon you and be gracious unto you! The Lord lift up his countenance upon you and give you peace! Amen. Or thus: God be merciful and gracious unto us and give us his divine blessing! May he cause his countenance to shine upon us and give us his peace! Amen. Or thus: Bless and keep us God the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost. Amen. Or thus: The blessing of God the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost be with you and remain alway with us all! Amen. End of the Mass with communicants.

Note.

- The thanksgiving. Brandenburg's single German thanksgiving is split into two collects "unter einem beschluß". The second is addressed to Christ.
- Corpus tuum. It keeps Brandenburg's older wording but reads "tam pura et sancta" and drops "omnipotens deus".
- Quod ore sumpsimus. It has the full Roman text, with et de munere temporali.
- Benedicamus. Benedicamus Domino is answered "Deo dicamus gratias", the form used at Lauds and Vespers.
- The blessings. They are Numbers 6:24–26, Psalm 67:1 and two Trinitarian forms.

7.15 Bugenhagen: the preparatory prayer, and "Hic est noster canon"

Johannes Bugenhagen's Masses keep nothing of the Canon. His Braunschweig order of 1528 (Sehling 6, I, pp. 440–442; doc 1983) runs as follows after the sermon:

- the chalice is prepared during a German hymn;
- an exhortation;
- on feasts, a Latin Preface and Sanctus;
- the Our Father, sung;
- the Verba over the bread, then communion of the bread;
- the Verba over the cup, then communion of the cup;
- the German Agnus Dei;
- Luther's thanksgiving collect and the Aaronic blessing.

Bugenhagen's own comment on the Preface: "wente de exhortatie vamme sacramente is de rechte prefatie, dat is eyne vohrrede" ("for the exhortation on the sacrament is the true Preface, that is, a foreword"). The same order says of the Canon that it is "tosamende flicket van velen stucken alse eyn praccherhoyke" ("patched together out of many pieces like a beggar's cloak", p. 440).

What his later orders do keep is a preparatory prayer of the priest at the altar step (Stufengebet). It is the evangelical counterpart of the Roman Iudica me, Confiteor and Aufer a nobis, and it is what is usually meant by "Bugenhagen's preparatory prayer". It appears in three forms.

Bugenhagen's northern Mass as a family of ordo is treated in Chapter 2, §2.4.2.

7.15.1 Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel, Christlike kerken-ordeninge, 1543

Sehling 6, I/2, pp. 54–55 (`eko.db` doc 1972). The order came out of the visitation of 1542 by Bugenhagen, Antonius Corvinus and Martin Görlitz (Sehling 6, I, p. 12). It prints the German Benedictus and a psalm at the beginning of the Mass. The prayer is said while they are sung.

> Under dem psalme edder gesange geyt de prester vor dat altar, knyet sick mit dem köster und bedet vor sick und vor dat volk und vor alle nött der christenheit also: Pater noster etc. De köster secht: Amen. Domine non secundum peccata nostra etc. De köster: Neque secundum iniquitates nostras etc. Domine ne memineris etc. De köster: Cito anticipent etc. Adiuva nos Deus etc. De köster: Et propicius esto etc. Darna steyt de prester up und geyt vor dat altar, schicket sick tho singen und tho lesen.

During the psalm or hymn the priest goeth before the altar, kneeleth down with the sexton, and prayeth for himself and for the people and for all the need of Christendom thus: Our Father, etc. The sexton saith: Amen. O Lord, deal not with us after our sins, etc. The sexton: Neither reward us according to our iniquities, etc. O Lord, remember not, etc. The sexton: Let thy mercies speedily prevent us, etc. Help us, O God, etc. The sexton: And be merciful, etc. Thereafter the priest standeth up, and goeth before the altar, and prepareth himself to sing and to read.

Note.

- The versicles in full. The versicles and responses are the Lenten tract Domine, non secundum, from Ps 103:10 and Ps 79:8–9, which also stands in the preces of the Office:
  - Domine, non secundum peccata nostra facias nobis: neque secundum iniquitates nostras retribuas nobis.
  - Domine, ne memineris iniquitatum nostrarum antiquarum: cito anticipent nos misericordiae tuae, quia pauperes facti sumus nimis.
  - Adiuva nos, Deus, salutaris noster: et propter gloriam nominis tui, Domine, libera nos: et propitius esto peccatis nostris, propter nomen tuum.
- What it replaces. The Roman prayers at the foot of the altar were said by the priest and server in dialogue: Ps 43 Iudica me, the Confiteor and Misereatur, the versicles Adiutorium nostrum and Deus, tu conversus, and Aufer a nobis. Bugenhagen keeps the form: kneeling, in dialogue with the sexton as server, during the opening chant. He replaces the confession of sin with the Lord's Prayer and the tract's plea for mercy, "vor sick und vor dat volk und vor alle nött der christenheit". Sehling's editor calls it a "Stufengebet".

The rest of the Wolfenbüttel Sacrament, for comparison with the orders above:

> Na dissem alle geschut de gewöntlicke predige. Wen de uthe is und denn gefunden werden, de sick berichten laten willen, schal de prester bereiden brod und wyn na dem talle syner communicanten und scholen sick thom altar vorvögen und ordentlick tho der communion schikken de manne thor rechten, de frouen und jungfrouen thor lüchter syden. Denne so kert sick de prester thom volke, welck sick berichten lathen wil und lest en vohr eine vormaninge thom sacramente also: Myne allerlevesten, uns werd stedes dorch de predige des evangelii Christi vohrgeholden, dat wy van uns sülvest unweten, arme sündere und verlaren sind. […] He secht: Dit is myn lyff, dat vor ju gegeven werd. Dit is myn blut, dat vor ju uthgelaten werd tho vorgevinge der sünden. Sülck schole gy loven. He gebüt avers: Nemet hen und ethet. Drinket alle daruth und gedenket myner. Sülck schole gy dohn na syner gnaden worde und bevehele. Amen.

After all this the customary sermon taketh place. When it is out, and there are found such as will be communicated, the priest shall prepare bread and wine according to the number of his communicants; and they shall betake themselves to the altar and orderly dispose themselves to the communion, the men on the right, the women and maidens on the candle side. Then the priest turneth to the people that will be communicated, and readeth them an exhortation to the sacrament thus: My dearly beloved, it is continually set before us by the preaching of the Gospel of Christ that we of ourselves are ignorant, poor and lost sinners. […] He saith: This is my body, which is given for you. This is my blood, which is shed for you for the forgiveness of sins. That shall ye believe. But he commandeth: Take and eat. Drink ye all thereout, and remember me. That shall ye do according to his gracious word and command. Amen.

Note.

- "schal de prester bereiden brod und wyn" is all that is left of the offertory, as in Braunschweig 1528 and Schleswig-Holstein 1542.
- The exhortation (Braunschweig 1528, pp. 443f.) is Bugenhagen's "rechte prefatie". The order also allows Luther's paraphrase of the Our Father to be read before it.
- What follows. The sung Our Father, the Verba over the bread, communion, the Verba over the cup, communion, the German Agnus Dei, Luther's thanksgiving collect ("Wy danken dy, almechtige Here Got …") and the Aaronic blessing.
- On feasts. In towns the priest may sing a Latin Preface (Christmas, Easter, Whitsun; the Trinity Preface on other feasts; "de quotidiana lasse men slichtes ligen alse unnödich"). The whole congregation then sings a German Sanctus, "Hillich is Got, de Vader, hillich is Got, de Sone, hillich is Got, de hilge Geist …". After it the exhortation may be left out.

7.15.2 Hildesheim, Kirchenordnung, 1544

Sehling 7, V, pp. 852–855 (eko.db doc 2136). This is the order for the city of Hildesheim, drawn up by Bugenhagen, Winkel and Corvinus. It has the same prayer, and at the end a private thanksgiving of the priest:

> Int erste mach me singen vor dem introitum einen düdeschen psalm edder ledt, ut der hilligen schrift gemaket. Under dem gesange geit de prester vor dat altar unde kneet sick mit dem oppermanne, bedet vor sick unde vor dat volk unde vor alle nodt der christenheit also: Pater noster etc. De opperman secht: Amen. Domine non secundum peccata nostra etc. De opperman: Neque secundum iniquitates nostras etc. Domine ne memineris etc. De opperman: Cito anticipent nos etc. Adiuva nos Deus etc. De opperman: Et propitius esto etc. Darna steit de prester up unde geit vor dat altar, schicket sick to singen unde to lesen. […] So hevet de scholmester an einen düdeschen, korten psalm, edder wat öhme gefellich unde darmede ein ende etc. Dewile överst de sank waret, tüt sick de prediger ut unde lecht dat missgewand tohope, kneet wedder nedder vor dem altare unde danket Godde hemelick vor sick sülvest.

First one may sing before the introit a German psalm or hymn made out of the holy Scripture. During the singing the priest goeth before the altar and kneeleth down with the sexton, prayeth for himself and for the people and for all the need of Christendom thus: Our Father, etc. The sexton saith: Amen. O Lord, deal not with us after our sins, etc. The sexton: Neither reward us according to our iniquities, etc. O Lord, remember not, etc. The sexton: Let thy mercies speedily prevent us, etc. Help us, O God, etc. The sexton: And be merciful, etc. Thereafter the priest standeth up and goeth before the altar, and prepareth himself to sing and to read. […] Then the schoolmaster beginneth a short German psalm, or what pleaseth him, and therewith an end, etc. But while the singing lasteth, the preacher unvesteth and layeth the Mass vestment together, kneeleth down again before the altar, and thanketh God secretly for himself.

Note.

- The sexton is the "opperman" (Opfermann, the offertory-man).
- The closing thanksgiving is the evangelical form of the priest's private thanksgiving after Mass (Gratiarum actio post missam: Trium puerorum, Ps 150 and collects), still said kneeling and "hemelick".

7.15.3 Schleswig-Holstein, Christlyke Kercken Ordeninge, 1542

Sehling 23, A, Nr. 7, p. 89 (eko.db doc 1576). This is the Low German form of the Danish Ordinatio ecclesiastica (1537), which Bugenhagen drew up. The text is fixed only by rubric:

> Ein Prester, de Misse holden wil, valle yn de kne vor dem Altar und lese by sick Confiteor. He bidde vor de Prediger des Evangelii, vor den Könninck unde vor dat Rike, ock vor desse Förstendöme. Darna handel he de Misse na older gewanheit. Doch dat he se nicht beflecke mit dem Titel des offerhandes effte werckes, wo denne der Papisten Hüchelie unde honspottinge vorhen gewesen ys. […] Dewile averst de Sanck wäret, thut sick de Prester uth unnde lecht dat Missegewandt tho hope, Knyet wedderumme nedder vor den Altar unde dancket Gade hemelick vor sick sulvest.

A priest that will hold Mass, let him fall on his knees before the altar and read by himself the Confiteor. Let him pray for the preachers of the Gospel, for the King and for the realm, and also for these duchies. Thereafter let him conduct the Mass according to the old custom; yet so that he defile it not with the title of sacrifice or work, as the hypocrisy and mockery of the papists hath been heretofore. […] But while the singing lasteth, the priest unvesteth and layeth the Mass vestment together, kneeleth down again before the altar, and thanketh God secretly for himself.

Note.

- The *Confiteor is kept in its Roman place and posture, said privately ("by sick").
- The intercession (preachers, king, realm, duchies) gathers into the preparation what the Canon's Te igitur and Memento had prayed for.
- "na older gewanheit". The Mass is to be kept "according to the old custom", but without "the title of sacrifice or work".
- At the Verba. The Latin Ordinatio allows an elevation at this point, "si ita visum fuerit ministro", with the bells.

7.15.4 "Hic est noster canon"

Bugenhagen names the evangelical replacement of the Canon in two places. The first is the Pia ordinatio caeremoniarum for cathedral chapters and monasteries. Sehling prints it among the Pomeranian orders (4, pp. 345–352, doc 1857). Its Danish hymn incipits show it belongs with the Danish Ordinatio. The second is its Low German form in Schleswig-Holstein 1542 (p. 147).

> Post verbum dei admoneantur, ut orent pro omnibus omnium hominum conditionibus, pro ecclesia, pro pace, salute etc. Hic est noster canon. Papistae autem heac seria cum suis mendaciis simul congresserunt in ullum occultum missae canonem.

> Na der Predige schollen de Lüde vormanet werden, dat se bidden vor allerley Stende der werlt, vor de Kerckheren, vor einen frede, vor de salicheit etc. Unde datsulvige gebedt ys unse Canon. Averst de Papisten hebben solck ernstlick dinck mit eren lügen thosamende geflicket yn den heimeliken Canon der Misse.

After the word of God let them be admonished to pray for all conditions of all men, for the Church, for peace, salvation, etc. This is our Canon. But the papists have patched these serious things together with their lies into that secret Canon of the Mass.

After the sermon the people shall be admonished to pray for all manner of estates of the world, for the pastors, for peace, for salvation, etc. And that same prayer is our Canon. But the papists have patched such an earnest thing together with their lies into the secret Canon of the Mass.

Note.

- The Canon has become the general prayer. For Bugenhagen, the Church's intercession after the sermon is the Canon: the prayer "pro ecclesia … pro pace" that Te igitur had once been. The German Masses of Strasbourg (§7.5.1–7.5.2) and Döber (§7.8.11) put the same intercession into the Canon's own place after the Sanctus. Bugenhagen moves it to after the sermon, where the general prayers of the later church orders stand.
- "in ullum" is Sehling's print, for in illum.

Appendix 7.A The Canon critique of 1533/1540/1543

This is Pfalz-Neuburg 1543, Sehling 13, I.2, p. 65. Sehling traces it through Brandenburg 1540 (Sehling 3, 64f.) to Brandenburg-Nürnberg 1533 (Sehling 11, 183f.). These are the register references 11:183 and 13:65. Sehling's footnotes to the three quotations give the Canon's own words; they are supplied here in brackets.

> Und ob die widersacher wolten sagen (wie sie dann durch angezeigte schrift gedrungen werden, wann sie nicht gar verstockt sein), sie opferten nicht, sonder meineten nur ein gedechtnus und representation des ersten opfers zu machen, so sol man inen antworten; Wenn sie die wort, darmit sie gestracks opfern (furnemblich aber dise: „die wir dir opfern für dein heilige christliche kirchen etc." [Te igitur: … rogamus, ut accepta habeas … haec … sacrificia …, quae tibi offerimus pro ecclesia tua sancta catholica] und: „Wir bitten dich, du wöllest dises opfer gnediglich annemen und uns von der ewigen verdamnus erlösen etc." [Hanc igitur: Hanc igitur oblationem, quaesumus, ut placatus accipias … atque ab aeterna damnatione nos eripi … iubeas] und: „Wir opfern deiner herrlichen majestat etc." [Unde et memores: … offerimus praeclarae maiestati tuae …]) heraus tun und setzen darfur: Wir gedenken des opfers deines einigen Sons etc., so wöllen > wirs glauben, das ihnen ernst sei, und sie seinds auch schuldig zu tun und könnens on ergernus wol ausrichten. Dann haben sie Kilianum und Totnanum umb gelts willen hinein gesetzt, das nichts nutz ist, so sollen sie nun billich umbs glaubens und der warheit willen dise wort endern, da es not ist.

And if the adversaries would say (as they are then driven by the scripture alleged, if they be not altogether hardened) that they offer not, but mean only to make a memorial and representation of the first sacrifice, then shall one answer them thus: if they take out the words wherewith they plainly offer (but chiefly these: "which we offer unto thee for thy holy Christian Church, etc.", and: "We beseech thee that thou wouldest graciously accept this sacrifice and deliver us from eternal damnation, etc.", and: "We offer unto thy glorious majesty, etc."), and set in place thereof, "We remember the sacrifice of thine only Son, etc.", then will we believe that they are in earnest; and they are also bound to do it, and can well perform it without offence. For if they have set Kilian and Totnan therein for money's sake, which is of no profit, they should now rightly, for faith's and truth's sake, change these words where it is needful.

Note. The three passages condemned are the offering clauses of Te igitur, Hanc igitur and Unde et memores. Sehling's note explains "Kilian and Totnan". The Würzburg missal (Speciale missarum, Würzburg 1495) added these Würzburg martyrs, with Colonat, and confessors to the saints of the embolism Libera nos: "nec non et sanctis martiribus tuis Chiliano, Colanato, Totnano sanctisque confessoribus tuis Martino, Nicolao, Burchardo, Benedicto". The argument is that a Canon already changed for local saints can be changed for the truth.

The orders in this file answer the demand in two ways:

- Worms 1524 (Moderate Reformed) had already done what the critique asks. It kept the Canon but turned each offering into prayer: "anbieten unser demütiges gebet" (§7.6.8); "wöllest dich unser und aller unser gebet … annemen" (§7.6.5).
- Osiander's prayer in Pfalz-Neuburg 1543 (§7.14.2) does it half-way. It "brings" the gifts before the divine majesty, but offers bread and wine, not the body and blood.

Chapter 8. Hymn Practice

This chapter covers where hymns were sung in the evangelical church orders of the sixteenth century, as printed in Emil Sehling's Die evangelischen Kirchenordnungen des XVI. Jahrhunderts. It asks four questions:

- In which parts of the Mass, the offices and the occasional rites (baptism, weddings, the sick, burial, ordination) did the orders put hymns?
- Which hymns did they assign to each of these places?
- Was a given place filled by one fixed hymn, by a choice among a handful, or by a hymn that changed with the season, the feast, the Sunday gospel or the sermon?
- What reasons did the orders give for their choices?

It deals with the slots of the service, not with the propers as such. Where a hymn took the place of a proper (introit, gradual, alleluia, sequence, offertory, communion), the replacement is recorded. Troped, farced and paraphrased ordinaries (Kyrie, Gloria, Credo, Sanctus, Agnus Dei) are treated in full.

This chapter is separate from the hymn database, `hymns.db` (Introduction), which holds the per-Sunday and per-feast hymn tables. The tables it holds (Naumburg 1537/38, Heilbronn 1543, Nördlingen 1544/1555, Anhalt 1551, Pirna 1555–1569, Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1565, Pomerania 1569, Weissenfels 1578, Nördlingen 1579, Mansfeld 1580, Hof 1592 and Hohenlohe 1596) are referred to here but not repeated.

The findings are summarised in §8.1, and the method is described in §8.2. §8.3 sets out the slots in outline. §§8.4–8.15 follow the slots of the Mass in order. §8.16 covers the offices (with the Benedicamus and the old festal songs such as Puer natus in Bethlehem), the catechism and the weekday services, and §8.17 the occasional rites. §8.18 gathers the reasons the orders give. §8.19 is a concordance of every order quoted. Appendix 8.A condenses the "Compare by day" sheet of `hymns.xlsx` into one table: the chief hymn (Hauptlied) of each Sunday and feast in the old sources, with its original, literal English and common English titles and its witnesses.

Related chapters. Several subjects are treated more fully elsewhere and are only cited here:

- the order of the Mass in which the slots stand: Chapter 2, §§2.4–2.5;
- the Latin propers that the hymns replaced: Chapter 4, §§4.3–4.9;
- the organ in alternation with choir and people: Chapter 9, §9.3;
- the offices and the catechism service in which the office hymns were sung: Chapter 10, §§10.7, 10.10;
- the Litany: Chapter 13, §13.21;
- the feasts and seasons: Chapter 12, §§12.10, 12.12;
- the prayer before the sermon and the sermon itself: Chapter 11, §11.10;
- the rites at which hymns were sung (baptism, marriage, burial and ordination): Chapter 13, §§13.3, 13.7, 13.9, 13.10.

8.1 Summary of findings

8.1.1 The main findings

1. Most hymn slots were fixed. In nearly every order a given place in the service was filled by one hymn, or by a choice among two to five. The choice was often exchanged at the high feasts for a hymn of the feast. Only one slot regularly changed from Sunday to Sunday: the hymn between the epistle and the gospel. From about 1560 a second slot joined it in some regions: the hymn after the sermon. The table in §8.1.2 sets out the pattern slot by slot.

2. The opening of the service was a prayer for the Holy Ghost. Veni sancte Spiritus, in Latin or in German ("Komm heiliger Geist, Herre Gott", or the prose "Komm, heiliger Geist, erfülle"), or "Nun bitten wir", was often sung kneeling. The Hessian Agende (1574, Philippist) gives the reason: "that the help and assistance of the Holy Ghost may be prayed for, for the performing of the whole service" (§8.4.1). Many orders also say plainly that the opening songs were sung "until the congregation cometh together" (§8.4.2). Some northern orders opened with the German Benedictus or the German Te Deum instead (§§8.4.3–8.4.4).

3. Hymns took the place of the introit, the gradual, the sequence and the offertory.

- Introit. A Scriptural Latin introit could be kept where a school sang it. Otherwise, and in the villages always, "a German psalm" was sung "an stat des introitus". The usual psalms were Ps 67, 51, 130, 12, 124 and 14, or "Komm heiliger Geist", usually rotated (§8.5).
- Gradual, alleluia and sequence. These gave way to a German psalm or hymn, often chosen by season or gospel (§8.8).
- Offertory. This became a German psalm sung while bread and wine were prepared and the communicants came forward (§8.11.3). In Bugenhagen's orders the creed hymn "Wir glauben all" served here, sung after the sermon (§8.9.2).
- Communion chant. This was replaced by the communion hymns (§8.14).
- Particular days. A hymn replaced the gradual at the Purification ("Mit Fried und Freud"), the sequence in Passiontide (Ps 51), and the offertory at Christmas ("Ein Kindelein so löbelich") (§§8.8.5, 8.11.3).

4. The ordinaries were troped and paraphrased in German.

- Kyrie. Troped German Kyries survive in the Low German Mass of Schleswig-Holstein (after 1526), Naumburg (1537/38), Mecklenburg (1545), Ritzebüttel (1556), Pfalz-Zweibrücken (1557) and Hof (1592). They were sung to the melodies of the Latin troped Kyries, the Fons bonitatis (also called the summum), the paschale and the Magne Deus, and graded by season. The Latin tropes themselves are named at Nördlingen (1579) and printed in Hof's Holy Week office (1592) (§8.6.4). The Kyrie was also sung in three tongues, Greek, Latin and German (Prussia 1525, Riga 1530, Neuenrade 1564) (§8.6).
- Gloria. Decius's "Allein Gott in der Höh sei Ehr", in Low German "Allene Godt yn der höge sy eer", was the German Gloria of the corpus. Fifty-two orders name it in the Gloria slot (§8.7.6). It was sung for, alternately with, or inside the Latin Gloria. In the last case the whole German hymn was inserted between Et in terra pax and Laudamus te (Schleswig-Holstein 1542, Wolfenbüttel 1543, Hildesheim 1544). Osnabrück (1543) sang it after the intonation and then the Latin to the end. The Lippe Mass [c. 1525–1538] and Neuenrade (1564) print all four stanzas in Low German. "All Ehr und Lob" was the alternative (§8.7).
- Creed. "Wir glauben all" (§8.9).
- Sanctus. Luther's "Jesaia dem Propheten" was usual (§8.12). The Trinitarian troped Sanctus, "Heilig ist Gott der Vater", in Low German "Hillich is Got, de Vader", is named in five orders: Wolfenbüttel 1543, Mecklenburg 1545, Stralsund 1555, Harlingerland 1573/74 and Hof 1592. One of Sehling's editors gives it to Decius; another calls it anonymous. No order assigns it to Advent, or to any season. The rules are of rank and place: German "at the other times" than the feasts, in the villages, during the communion, or in four parts at Hof on two feasts (§8.12.2).
- Agnus Dei. "Christe, du Lamm Gottes" and "O Lamm Gottes unschuldig" (§8.15). Decius's "O Lamm Gottes unschuldig" is found only in its short form, which follows the threefold Agnus Dei. It is one stanza sung three times, and the third time it ends with the prayer for peace instead of the prayer for mercy, as the Latin ends with dona nobis pacem (Calenberg-Göttingen 1542, Mecklenburg 1545, Neuenrade 1564, Engerhafe 1583, Hof 1592). No order uses the longer five-stanza version. Its four new stanzas, two on the Passion and two of thanks and prayer, begin "O Lamm Gottes im Staube", "O Lamm Gottes, unschuldig, / Trugst du die herbe Verhöhnung", "Von Herzen wir dir danken" and "Stärk in uns das Vertrauen". None of their lines occurs in the corpus (§8.15).
- Lord's Prayer and Verba. No troped or farced Lord's Prayer or Words of Institution was found. The congregation sometimes sang Luther's "Vater unser im Himmelreich" (§8.13).

5. At the three high feasts the Latin sequences were farced with German stanzas. The pairs were Grates nunc omnes with "Gelobet seist du", Victimae paschali with "Christ lag in Todesbanden" (or "Christ ist erstanden"), and Veni sancte Spiritus with "Nun bitten wir". Choir and people, or organ and cantor, sang by turns (§8.8.3). Most other sequences were dropped as impure (§8.8.2).

6. Before the sermon the congregation prayed in song. The hymn was "Nun bitten wir", often begun by the preacher from the pulpit, and sung "an Gebets statt". At the high feasts the old pre-Reformation Leisen took its place: "Ein Kindelein so löbelich", "Christ ist erstanden", "Christ fuhr gen Himmel", "Gott der Vater wohn uns bei". Some orders sang the Lord's Prayer hymn in Lent or Advent. Several orders give the whole year as a seasonal table (§8.10).

7. After the sermon the core hymn was "Erhalt uns, Herr, bei deinem Wort". It was sung as a prayer for the word against the Pope and the Turk (Prussia 1568: "as after every sermon always"). Other choices were "Es woll uns Gott genädig sein" and "Gott der Vater wohn uns bei". From the 1570s the Hanau-Lichtenberg, Hohenlohe, Öhringen, Reutlingen, Rostock and Marienhafe orders wanted a hymn that "agreeth with the sermon". Hohenlohe (1596) gave a menu under twelve doctrinal articles (§8.11.5).

8. The communion hymns hardly changed through the century. The core was Hus's "Jesus Christus unser Heiland", "Gott sei gelobet", "Jesaia dem Propheten" and Ps 111, followed by the German Agnus Dei. What changed was the number of hymns, measured almost everywhere by the number of communicants. Bugenhagen's orders stopped the song as soon as the distribution ended, "though a song begun be not sung out" (§8.14.3). Festal hymns, the Passion, Discubuit, Pange lingua and the Te Deum were added at the margin (§8.14).

9. Hymns covered movements and actions. Many orders say that the hymn is sung "while" or "meanwhile":

- the people gather (§8.4.2);
- the priest prays at the altar step (§8.4.6);
- the preacher goes up into or comes down from the pulpit (§§8.9.3, 8.10.5, 8.11.2);
- the priest "takes a little breath" (§8.11.2) or puts on his vestments (§8.11.2);
- the bread and wine are prepared (§8.11.3);
- the communicants come into the choir (§§8.11.4, 8.12.1);
- the celebrant takes off his vestments (§8.15.4).

Hof sang at baptism "that two actions may not follow one upon the other without a song" (§8.17.1).

10. The rules for choosing a hymn grew stricter over the century. In broad order, the reasons given were these:

- The text must be from Scripture and "pure" (§8.18.1).
- The hymn must "rhyme with the feast" and the season (§8.18.2).
- On ordinary Sundays it should "rhyme with the gospel". The rule of Pomerania 1542 and Mecklenburg 1545 lists hymns for gospels of faith and grace, of Christ's enemies, of good works, and of the use of earthly goods (§8.8.6).
- It should agree with the sermon (§§8.11.5, 8.18.3).
- In the catechism service it should be the hymn of the chief part being taught (§8.16.6).

Alongside these ran the practical reasons:

- The people should learn a few hymns well, repeated and rotated (§8.18.4).
- Luther's hymns should come first. Prussia 1568 says no new poet "can hold a candle to Luther" (§8.18.5).
- Private choice by schoolmasters and organists was to be curbed.
- Authorized cantionals were enforced: Spangenberg, Lossius, and an "unfalsified" Luther songbook (§8.18.6).
- There were limits of language, length and organ use (§§8.18.7–8.18.9).

11. The Benedicamus was graded, put into German and sometimes replaced, but never troped. No order in the corpus prescribes a Benedicamus troped with a festal song such as Puer natus in Bethlehem. The Benedicamus kept seasonal melodies (in adventu, angelicum, dominicale, paschale with alleluia), and was sung in German ("Last uns gesegnen den herren") at the end of the Mass or office. It could give way to a figured motet of the feast (Hof 1592) or to a German hymn, at Christmas "Dank sagen wir alle" (Nördlingen 1555, Wolfenbüttel 1569). Puer natus in Bethlehem and the other festal songs were sung next to it: upon the Magnificat (Naumburg 1537), at the entrance or going out of vespers (Pomerania 1569, Hof 1592), for the introit, and after the catechism or sermon (§§8.16.8–8.16.10).

8.1.2 The slots compared

"Fixed" means one hymn, or one per grade or feast. "A handful" means a named choice of two to five, often rotated. "Variable" means the hymn changed with the Sunday, gospel or sermon.

Slot	Where it falls	Hymns usually named	How fixed
Opening (§8.4)	before the introit, or before the sermon in the Württemberg type	Veni sancte / "Komm heiliger Geist"; "Nun bitten"; German Benedictus; German Te Deum; Ps 51	fixed or a handful; graded by feast in some orders
For the introit (§8.5)	first chant of the Mass	"Es woll uns Gott" (Ps 67), "Erbarm dich mein" (Ps 51), "Aus tiefer Not" (Ps 130), "Ach Gott vom Himmel" (Ps 12), "Wär Gott nicht mit uns" (Ps 124), "Komm heiliger Geist"; festal Leisen	a handful, rotated; festal exchange

Slot	Where it falls	Hymns usually named	How fixed
Kyrie (§8.6)	after the introit or confession	Latin by grade; German plain or troped ("Kyrie, Gott Vater in Ewigkeit", "Ach Vater, allerhöchster Gott", "O Herre Gott", "O Vater allmächtiger Gott")	fixed by grade and season
Gloria (§8.7)	after the Kyrie	"Allein Gott in der Höh"; "All Ehr und Lob"	fixed; Latin and German alternate or combine
Between epistle and gospel (§8.8)	the gradual, alleluia and sequence	farced sequences at the high feasts; German psalm matched to season or gospel; litany-hymn "Nim von uns"	variable: Sunday or seasonal tables, gospel rule
Creed (§8.9)	after the gospel, or after the sermon	"Wir glauben all"; sung Apostles' or Nicene Creed	fixed; place varies
Before the sermon (§8.10)	after the creed or prayers; from the pulpit	"Nun bitten"; Leisen at feasts; Lord's Prayer hymn	fixed with seasonal exchange
After the sermon (§8.11)	after the sermon and prayers; the offertory place	"Erhalt uns"; "Es woll uns Gott"; "Gott der Vater wohn uns bei"; any German psalm; sermon-matched hymn	a handful, becoming variable in later orders
Sanctus (§8.12)	after the preface or exhortation	"Jesaia dem Propheten"; "Heilig ist Gott der Vater"; Latin Sanctus by grade	fixed
Lord's Prayer and Verba (§8.13)	before the distribution	"Vater unser im Himmelreich" (rare)	fixed or none
Under the communion (§8.14)	during the distribution	"Jesus Christus unser Heiland"; "Gott sei gelobet"; "Jesaia"; Ps 111; Agnus; extras by number of communicants	fixed core; quantity varies
Post-communion (§8.15)	after the distribution	"Christe, du Lamm Gottes"; "O Lamm Gottes"; "Gott sei gelobet"	fixed
Close (§8.15)	after the blessing	"Verleih uns Frieden" / Da pacem; "Erhalt uns"; "Es woll uns Gott"; "Sei Lob und Ehr"; "Dank sagen wir alle"; festal hymn	a handful; festal exchange
Benedicamus (§§8.16.8–8.16.10)	end of vespers, matins, and some Masses	Latin by grade; German "Last uns gesegnen den herren"; "Dank sagen wir alle" at Christmas; figured motet; festal songs (Puer natus in Bethlehem) next to it, not in it	fixed by grade; replaced at feasts
Office hymn (§8.16)	vespers, matins	Latin hymn de tempore, purged; German office hymns	fixed by season
Catechism service (§8.16.6)	before or after the catechism sermon	the hymn of the chief part	fixed by the part taught
Occasional rites (§8.17)	baptism, wedding, burial, ordination	"Christ unser Herr zum Jordan kam"; Ps 127/128; "Mitten wir im Leben", "Mit Fried und Freud", "Nun lasst uns den Leib begraben"; "Nun bitten", Te Deum	a handful per rite

8.1.3 How the practice changed over the century

- 1523–1535: Luther and Bugenhagen. Luther's Formula missae (1523) wanted German songs near the gradual, Sanctus and Agnus. The Deutsche Messe (1526) filled these slots. Bugenhagen's orders (Braunschweig 1528, Hamburg 1529, Pomerania 1535) fixed the northern pattern:

    - German psalm or Benedictus at the start;
    - farced sequences at three feasts;
    - creed as offertory;
    - Hus's hymn and "Gott sei gelobet" at communion, stopped when the distribution ends;
    - "Christe du Lamm Gottes" after all have communicated.
- 1540s: the gospel rule and the Leisen. Pomerania (1542) and Mecklenburg (1545) chose the post-epistle hymn by the matter of the gospel. The Leisen before the sermon became standard. Mecklenburg 1552 had the preachers sing them from the pulpit, and Lüneburg (1564), Wolfenbüttel (1569) and Oldenburg (1573) copied the rule.
- 1550s–1590s: tables, sermons, catechism and books.
    - Sunday tables spread. Naumburg had printed one in 1537/38, which St George's at Nördlingen took over (1544/1555). Pirna (1555–1569), Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1565, Pomerania 1569, Weissenfels 1578, Nördlingen 1579, Mansfeld 1580, Hof 1592 and Hohenlohe 1596 followed.
    - Orders asked for hymns matched to the sermon (Hanau-Lichtenberg 1573, Öhringen 1582, Brieg 1592, Marienhafe 1593, Hohenlohe 1596).
    - Catechism hymns spread (Lippe 1571, Hoya 1581, Grubenhagen 1581).
    - Luther's hymns were defended as a canon (Prussia 1568, Harlingerland 1573/74, Hoya 1581).
    - Cantionals were imposed (Lossius, Spangenberg).
- 1607: Hessen-Kassel. As Hesse turned Reformed, Lobwasser's psalms entered the communion. Hymn numbers were posted on boards at the church doors, and the synod asked for a table of hymns "accommodated to the texts which should be preached" (§8.18.3).

8.2 Scope, sources and method

8.2.1 The corpus

The source is `eko.db`, the full-text database of Sehling's edition (Introduction). It holds 2,368 records in 32 digitized volumes and half-volumes, with Sehling's own subject registers. The orders run from Luther's Formula missae (1523) to the early seventeenth century. They cover Saxony, Thuringia, the Harz counties, Brandenburg, Silesia, Prussia, Pomerania, Mecklenburg, the Baltic, Schleswig-Holstein, Lower Saxony, Westphalia, Hesse, the Rhineland, Franconia, Bavaria, Württemberg, Swabia, Alsace and Transylvania.

The chapter quotes 164 orders, held in 145 records. Some records hold several orders: for example, the Henneberg village reports, the Nördlingen and Schwäbisch Hall volumes, and Prussia 1544/1568.

8.2.2 How the corpus was searched

The search was done in three passes.

1. Slot vocabulary. The whole text was searched for the terms by which the orders name the places of hymns:
    - Latin: introitus, pro introitu, loco introitus, post confessionem, post epistolam, graduale, sequentia, prosa, tractus, post evangelium, ante concionem, post concionem, offertorium, sub communione, post communionem, conclusio, pro ingressu, Benedicamus, hymnus, cantilena, cantio.
    - German and Low German: an stat des introitus, für den introitum, für das Halleluja, anstat des offertorii, an stat des sequenz, vor der predigt, nach der predigt, auf die epistel, nach der epistel, unter der communion, under der berichtinge, zum beschluss, tom beslute, deutscher Psalm, düdesch psalm, Lied, Leise, Gesang, Lobgesang, figurieren, orgel.
    - The incipits of the common hymns and of the ordinaries in German ("Kyrie, Gott Vater", "Allein Gott", "All Ehr und Lob", "Wir glauben", "Jesaia dem Propheten", "Heilig ist Gott", "Christe du Lamm", "O Lamm Gottes").
2. Registers. Sehling's per-volume registers of Lieder und Gesänge were read, and every page they cite was checked.
3. Reading the orders. About three hundred orders with hymn material were then read in the passages around each hit. Notes were taken slot by slot, and the rites were read in full.

The chapter gives the passages that state a rule, give a reason, or show a practice clearly. Where many orders say the same thing, the earliest or clearest is quoted and the others are named.

8.2.3 Cautions

- Prescription, not observation. Church orders say what should be sung. Only a few sources report what was actually sung. The Henneberg village pastors' reports of 1562–1566 are the richest of these (Sehling 2, pp. 329–357), with the Langenburg dispute of 1592. Even these may describe what the pastor wished the visitors to read.
- "Psalm". In these orders ein deutscher Psalm means any German metrical hymn, not only a psalm paraphrase. "Aus tiefer Not" is a psalm; so is "Nun freut euch".
- Database headings. The database's record headings, years and numbering do not always match the orders inside them. This chapter names each order from Sehling's running heads. In particular:
  - Doc 373 (headed 1544) is the Nördlingen St George's order of 1555.
  - Doc 1955 (headed 1590) is the Hadeln order of 1526.
  - Doc 2065 (headed 1571) is the Hoya order of 1581.
  - Doc 1809 holds both the Liegnitz order of 1542 and the Brieg order of 1592.
  - Doc 1248 holds the Henneberg village orders of Belrieth, Goldlauter, Herpf and Meiningen. The running head spells Goldlauter "Groldlauter".
  - Doc 1249 holds Obermassfeld and Queienfeld. A passage on p. 344–345 belongs to Queienfeld, though the running head of p. 345 names Ritschenhausen.
  - Doc 1250 holds Suhl, Sulzfeld and Wasungen (p. 356 is Wasungen, not Vachdorf).
  - Doc 84 is the Eisfeld visitation order of 1554, and doc 78 the Dresden Kreuzkirche order of 1574.
  - Doc 1262 holds the Anhalt order of 3 August 1548 and the Ordnung der deutschen Gesänge of before 8 February 1551.
  - Doc 2204 holds two Goslar chapter orders, of 1560 (p. 319–321) and August 1566 (p. 322–323).
  - Doc 2003, 2009 and 2017 (Lüneburg) are in half-volume 6/1.
- Sehling's summaries. For Danzig (1557) Sehling prints a summary with quotations, and the chapter quotes it as such.
- Apparatus. Footnotes, variant readings and editorial notes are interleaved in the database text. They have been removed from quotations. Where a quotation crosses a page break or a footnote, the break is marked "[…]".
- Later additions. A few passages are later additions printed with an earlier order. The Brandenburg-Nürnberg rule on the burial of the unrepentant (§8.17.4) is one; the 1577 variants of Kurpfalz 1556 (§8.12.1) are another. They are marked as such.
- Not repeated here. The per-Sunday hymn tables already extracted into `hymns.db` are described in the Introduction (The hymn database) and are not repeated.

8.3 The hymn slots in outline

8.3.1 What the orders called the slots

Most orders name a slot by where it falls: before or after something, or in the place of something. The Latin orders use introitus, post confessionem, post epistolam, post evangelium, ante concionem, post concionem, sub communione and conclusio. The German and Low German orders say vor der predigt, nach der predigt, unter der communion and zum beschluss. The replacement of a chant is always marked: an stat des introitus, für das Halleluja, anstat des offertorii, an stat des sequenz, pro introitu, loco Et in terra.

The fullest set of slot labels is the three-week hymn plan of Pfalz-Zweibrücken, Ordnung der Kirchengesänge, 17 August 1565 (Sehling 18, p. 337). Its first Sunday after Trinity reads:

> Introitus: Nun freudt euch, lieben [Christen gemein], die erst melodi. Kom, heilliger Geist. Post Confessionem: Das zweyt Kyrie. Post Epistolam: Ich glaub an gott etc. Ante Contionem: Nun bitten wir etc. Post Contionem: Herr, wie lanng wilt vergessen etc. Conclussio: Christum, unnsern Heylanndt.

Introitus: "Dear Christians, One and All, Rejoice," the first melody; "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord." After the confession: the second Kyrie. After the epistle: "I believe in God," etc. Before the sermon: "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc. After the sermon: "Lord, how long wilt thou forget," etc. Conclusion: "Christ, our Saviour."

The Mass order of Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592 (Sehling 11, p. 425) numbers the same slots. The eighth is the German hymn to the Holy Ghost before the sermon, sung kneeling:

> VIII. Organicen cantilenam germanicam ad Spiritum Sanctum directam: Nun bitten wir den Heiligen Geist etc. incipit (vel etiam in cantu figurali mutetam aliquam). Illa cantilena germanica genibus flexis a tribus choris continuatur.

Eighthly, the organist beginneth the German song directed to the Holy Ghost, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc. (or else some motet in figured song). That German song is continued by the three choirs upon bended knees.

8.3.2 Luther's two orders

Luther's Formula missae wished for German songs "near the gradual, the Sanctus and the Agnus Dei", and said that the poets to write them were lacking. Wittenberg, Luther, Formula missae, 1523 (Sehling 1, pp. 8–9):

> Cantica velim etiam nobis esse vernacula quam plurima, quae populus sub missa cantaret, vel iuxta gradualia, item iuxta Sanctus et Agnus dei. Quis enim dubitat, eas olim fuisse voces totius populi, quae nunc solus chorus cantat vel respondet episcopo benedicenti? […] Sed poetae nobis desunt, aut nondum cogniti sunt, qui pias et spirituales cantilenas (ut Paulus vocat) nobis concinnent, quae dignae sint in ecclesia dei frequentari.

I would also that we had as many songs as may be in the vulgar tongue, which the people might sing during the Mass, either next to the graduals, and likewise next to the Sanctus and Agnus Dei. For who doubteth that these were once the voices of the whole people, which now the choir alone singeth, or answereth to the bishop when he blesseth? […] But poets are wanting to us, or are not yet known, which might make us godly and spiritual songs (as Paul calleth them), such as be worthy to be used often in the church of God.

Three years later the Deutsche Messe had its slots filled. It opens with a German psalm to the first tone, puts a German hymn after the epistle and the German creed after the gospel. Wittenberg, Luther, Deutsche Messe, 1526 (Sehling 1, p. 14):

> Zum anfang aber singen wir ein geistlich lied oder einen deudschen psalmen in primo tono auf die weise wie folget. „Ich will den Herrn loben alle zeit."

But at the beginning we sing a spiritual song or a German psalm in the first tone, after the manner following: "I will bless the Lord at all times."

> Auf die epistel singet man ein deudsch lied: 'Nu bitten wir den heiligen geist'. oder sonst eins, und das mit dem ganzen chor. Darnach lieset er das evangelion in quinto tono […] Nach dem evangelio singt die ganze kirche den glauben zu deudsch: Wir gleuben all an einen gott.

After the epistle a German song is sung, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," or some other, and that with the whole choir. Then he readeth the gospel in the fifth tone […] After the gospel the whole church singeth the creed in German: "We All Believe in One True God."

At the communion the Deutsche Messe allows the German Sanctus, "Gott sei gelobet" or Hus's hymn. These three were for the whole century the core of the communion slot (§8.14) (Sehling 1, p. 15):

> Und die weil singe das deudsche sanctus oder das lied: Gott sey globet oder Johans Hussen lied: Jhesus Christus unser heiland. Darnach segene man den kilch und gebe den selbigen auch und singe, was ubrig ist von obgenanten liedern oder das deudsch Agnus dei.

And the while let the German Sanctus be sung, or the song "O Lord, We Praise Thee," or John Hus's song, "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior." Thereafter let the cup be blessed and given likewise, and let that be sung which remaineth of the aforenamed songs, or the German Agnus Dei.

8.3.3 A whole service in hymns

Where there was no school to sing Latin, nearly every part of the service became a German hymn. The village order of the city of Braunschweig lists them in order. Braunschweig, Ordnung der ceremonien auf den dorfern, undated (Sehling 6/1, p. 473):

> Sal erstlick der pfarher mit dem opfermann und ganzem volk singen: Kum heiliger Geist, Here Godt etc. 2. Damach das Kirieleison und et in terra deutsch, wie es Doctor Martinus vordeutschet hat. 3. Darauf sal der pfarher die collecten und epistel lesen. 4. ALßdann sol der opfermann mit dem volk das Vaterunser singen, auch wie es Doctor Martinus gemacht > hat. 5. Nach diesem sal der pfarher dem volk die funf haubtstucke des catechismi […] vorlesen. 6. Darauf sal der opfermann mit dem volk singen erstlick den glauben, darnach: Nhun piten wir den heiligen Geist. 7. Dan sal der pfarher das evangelium von der kanzel lesen und die predigt darauf thim. 8. Nach der predig sal der opfermann mit dem volk dat Sanctus Esaie deutsch singen. 9. Darnach sal der pfarher die vormanung an die communicanten lesen und das Vaterunser und die verba coene so pald darauf singen deutsch. 10. Unter der communion sal der opfermann mit dem volk singen: Jesus Christus ader Godt sei gelobt ein Sontag umb den andern, wen man des Hern abentmal helt.

First the pastor shall sing with the sexton and all the people "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord," etc. 2. Thereafter the Kyrie and Et in terra in German, as Doctor Martin hath put them into German. 3. Thereupon the pastor shall read the collects and the epistle. 4. Then shall the sexton with the people sing the Our Father, also as Doctor Martin hath made it. 5. After this the pastor shall read to the people the five chief parts of the catechism […]. 6. Thereupon the sexton shall sing with the people first the creed, thereafter "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray." 7. Then shall the pastor read the gospel from the pulpit and preach the sermon thereon. 8. After the sermon the sexton shall sing with the people the Sanctus of Isaiah in German. 9. Thereafter the pastor shall read the exhortation to the communicants, and straightway thereafter sing the Our Father and the words of the Supper in German. 10. During the communion the sexton shall sing with the people "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior" or "O Lord, We Praise Thee," one Sunday after the other, when the Lord's Supper is held.

The same order closes with "Es wolt uns Gott genedig sein" and "Erhalt uns, Herr" on alternate Sundays (§8.15.3).

8.3.4 Three shapes of service

The slots fall differently in three kinds of service. The hymns in each kind are much alike.

	Mass-shaped (Saxony, Bugenhagen's northern orders, Brandenburg, Prussia, Pomerania, Mecklenburg, Hesse (Moderate Reformed))	Preaching service with communion (Württemberg and its derivatives, Kurpfalz 1556, Pfalz-Zweibrücken, Baden, Strasbourg)	Village Mass without a school
Opening	Latin introit, or German psalm in its place; often Veni sancte or "Komm heiliger Geist" first	"Komm heiliger Geist", "Nun bitten" or a German psalm "der zeit gemeß"	"Komm heiliger Geist" or a German psalm
Kyrie, Gloria	Latin, German, or troped German Kyrie; "Allein Gott" for or with Et in terra	none	German Kyrie; "Allein Gott"
After the epistle	sequence, alleluia or German psalm; farced sequence at the three high feasts	none	German psalm or hymn "de tempore"
Creed	"Wir glauben all" after the gospel, or after the sermon	sometimes after the sermon	"Wir glauben all"
Before the sermon	"Nun bitten"; the old Leisen at the high feasts	the opening hymn serves	"Nun bitten"
After the sermon	a psalm-hymn, "Erhalt uns", or a hymn in the place of the offertory	a German psalm or the creed while the pastor goes to the altar	"Es woll uns Gott" or "Erhalt uns"
Communion	German Sanctus, "Jesus Christus unser Heiland", "Gott sei gelobet", Ps 111, O Lamm Gottes	"Gott sei gelobet", "Jesus Christus", German Sanctus	the same
Close	"Christe du Lamm Gottes", "Verleih uns Frieden", "Erhalt uns", festal hymn	"Erhalt uns", "Verleih uns Frieden"	"Erhalt uns"

The Württemberg shape begins with a hymn, then the sermon, then the communion. There is no introit, Kyrie, Gloria or sequence to replace. In its orders the whole weight of hymn choice falls on the hymns before and after the sermon and during the distribution. The Kirchenordnung of 1553 (Sehling 16, p. 252):

> So dann das Nachtmal Christi auff ein Sontag oder andern Feyrtag in der kirchen zuhalten fürgenommn würdt, soll anfenglich das gsang: Komm heiliger geist, etc., Nun bitten wir den heiligen geist, etc. oder sonst ein teutscher Psalm oder geistlich lied, sonderlich der zeit gemeß, gesungen werden. Nach disem gsang soll die gemein predig geschehen.

When, then, the Supper of Christ is purposed to be held in the church upon a Sunday or other holy day, the song "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord," etc., "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc., or else a German psalm or spiritual song, especially one agreeable to the season, shall be sung at the beginning. After this song the common sermon shall be held.

The Bugenhagen orders give the plainest reason for all these German songs. Hamburg, Kirchenordnung, 1529 (Sehling 5, p. 491), after listing the parts of the Mass:

> Solck alle geschüt dat meiste to düden umme des volkes willen, de wile Christus gebaden hefft. Solck dot to miner gedechtenisse.

All this is done for the most part in German for the people's sake, since Christ hath commanded: "This do in remembrance of me."

8.4 The opening of the service

Before the introit, or instead of it, stood a hymn or chant that asked for the Holy Ghost, or a German canticle. These opening pieces are the most fixed of all the slots. The choice is nearly always between the Latin antiphon Veni sancte Spiritus, its German form "Komm heiliger Geist, Herre Gott", and "Nun bitten wir den heiligen Geist". A second group opens with a German canticle: the Benedictus, the Te Deum, or Psalm 51.

8.4.1 Veni sancte Spiritus and "Komm heiliger Geist"

The Hessian Agende (Philippist) gives the reason. The whole service is asked of the Holy Ghost at its beginning, on bended knees. Hessen, Agende, 1574 (Philippist; Sehling 8, p. 411):

> Erstlich singen die schuler mit gebogenen knien: Komm heiliger Geist etc., damit die hülfe und beistand des heiligen Geistes zu verrichtung des ganzen kirchendienstes gebeten wird. 2. Darnach wird gesungen der introitus de trinitate oder de tempore auf Nativitatis, Resurrectionis und Pentecostes. 3. Hierauf folget das Kyrie und Et in terra.

First the scholars sing upon bended knees "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord," etc., that the help and assistance of the Holy Ghost may be prayed for, for the performing of the whole service of the church. 2. Thereafter is sung the introit of the Trinity, or of the season at the Nativity, the Resurrection and Pentecost. 3. Hereupon followeth the Kyrie and Et in terra.

The order of the village of Bruchhausen in the abbey lands of Corvey (1603) copies this sentence word for word (Sehling 21, p. 244).

At Hof the German forms were sung kneeling by the whole choir whenever the organ was silent. There were two of them: "Komm, du herzlich Tröster" (the German Veni sancte Spiritus sequence) and Luther's "Komm, heiliger Geist, Herre Gott". Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592 (Sehling 11, p. 424):

> Quotiescunque organi pneumatici usus est nullus; totus chorus introitui praemittit: Veni, sancte etc. Kom, du herzlich tröster etc. germanice genibus flexis. Hoc absoluto incipit introitus. Potest introitui quoque praemitti cantilena d. Lutheri: Kom, Heiliger Geist, Herre Gott etc.

As oft as there is no use of the organ, the whole choir setteth before the introit Veni, sancte, etc., "Come, thou heartfelt Comforter," etc., in German, with bended knees. This being ended, the introit beginneth. Doctor Luther's song, "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord," etc., may also be set before the introit.

Soest, whose order follows Bugenhagen's Braunschweig order, had three boys sing it kneeling at the altar. Soest, Kirchenordnung, 1532 (Sehling 22, p. 450):

> Up etlike tide mach men dree kleyne Jungen, gekneyt vor dem Altar, dat Veni sancte spiritus Dütsch edder latyn singen lathen vor der Mysse, darup eyne Dütssche Collecta.

At certain times three little boys may be made to sing, kneeling before the altar, the Veni sancte Spiritus in German or Latin before the Mass, thereupon a German collect.

In the late Verden order the antiphon is the priest's preparation at the altar, with versicle and collect. Verden, Kirchenordnung, 1606 (Sehling 7/1, p. 155):

> Erstlich, wann der priester oder pfarrer vor den altar getretten, so soll der chor die antiphen Veni, sancte Spiritus anfahen. Darnach soll der priester singen: Emitte Spiritum et creabuntur. Der chor soll antworten: Et renovabis faciem terrae.

First, when the priest or pastor is come before the altar, the choir shall begin the antiphon Veni, sancte Spiritus. Thereafter the priest shall sing: Emitte Spiritum et creabuntur. The choir shall answer: Et renovabis faciem terrae.

Some orders grade the opening hymn by feast. At Nördlingen the three stanzas of "Komm heiliger Geist" belonged to the high feasts. On other feasts and on Sundays all the stanzas of "Nun bitten" were sung, by two choirs, the school and the people, while the celebrant made his confession. Nördlingen, Kirchenordnung of Kaspar Löner, 1544 (Sehling 12, p. 311):

> Indes sollen zwen chore - einer der schulen, der ander des volks - an hohen festen singen umb einander Kum, hailiger Geist, alle drei gesetze aus. An andern festen aber und suntagen Nun bitten wir den Heiligen Gaist mit allen seinen gesetzen.

Meanwhile two choirs, one of the school, the other of the people, shall sing by turns on high feasts "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord," all three stanzas through. But on other feasts and on Sundays, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," with all its stanzas.

At Reutlingen the same pair of hymns ran from the last bell until the preacher was in the pulpit. Reutlingen, Ordnung der Schule und des Kirchengesangs, 1565/1566 (Sehling 17/2, p. 49):

> An dem sontag zur hauptpredig sollen schulmaister und provisor sampt den knaben, nach dem das ander zaichen gelitten worden, in die kirchen ghon und daselbst an statt des introitus ainen, zwen oder mehr gewonliche psalmen singen und zu letst gleich under oder nach dem zusamen leuthen den gesang: Kom, hailiger gaist, oder: Nun pithen wir den hailigen gaist etc., biß der prediger auff die cantzel gät.

On the Sunday, at the chief sermon, the schoolmaster and the usher with the boys shall go into the church after the second bell hath been rung, and there, in the stead of the introit, sing one, two or more customary psalms, and at the last, either during or after the ringing together, the song "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord," or "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc., until the preacher goeth up into the pulpit.

The prose German form of the antiphon, "Komm, heiliger Geist, erfülle die Herzen", was sung to the Latin melody. On the Henneberg prayer days it followed the litany and covered the preacher's going up into the pulpit. Henneberg, Kirchenordnung, 1582 (Sehling 2, p. 311):

> und wenn dieselbige geendet, als denn darauf das deutsche Kom heiliger geist, erfülle die herzen, etc. nach den noten des lateinischen Veni sancte spiritus gesungen werden, unter diesem gesang sol der prediger auf den predigstuel sich verfügen.

and when the same is ended, then thereupon the German "Come, Holy Ghost, fill the hearts," etc. shall be sung after the notes of the Latin Veni sancte Spiritus; during this song the preacher shall betake himself up into the pulpit.

8.4.2 Singing while the people gather

A reason given again and again for the opening songs is plain: the people were still coming in. The Dortmund order even defines the introit this way. Dortmund, Gottesdienstordnung, 1554 (Sehling 21, p. 208):

> Introitus ys unde schal syn ein Psalm edder ein ander Geistlick lavesanck, den men singet, dewile dat volck yngheit unde sick ynn de Kercke vorsamelt, dar he ock den namen van hefft.

The introit is, and shall be, a psalm or another spiritual song of praise, which is sung while the people go in and gather themselves into the church, from which also it hath its name.

Northeim, Kirchenordnung, 1539 (Sehling 6/2, p. 925), defending the Latin chants against those who would have no ceremonies:

> warümb solte man einen reinen introitum, Kyrieeleyson, Gloria in excelsis und das Et in terra, bis die gemeine zusamenkeme, nicht singen und bleiben lassen? Solchs kan ich zwar fur meine person nicht finden.

Why should one not sing, and let remain, a pure introit, Kyrie eleison, Gloria in excelsis and the Et in terra, until the congregation were come together? For my own person I can indeed find no reason for it.

Hessen, Kirchenordnung, 1566 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 8, p. 248):

> Erstlich, bis die gemein zusamenkompt, singt man ein psalm oder 2 nach gelegenheit eines iglichen orts.

First, until the congregation cometh together, a psalm or two are sung, according to the occasion of every place.

Bremen, Kirchenordnung, 1561 (Sehling 7/2.2, p. 513), for the weekday sermons:

> praemittantur etiam singulis concionibus aliquot Germanicae cantilenae, donec populus confluat.

Let there also be set before every sermon some German songs, until the people flock together.

Lippe, Kirchenordnung, 1571 (Sehling 21, p. 396). In the villages, where the people lived far apart, the Kyrie itself served while they gathered. On the high feasts a hymn of the feast took the place of the introit:

> nachdem die Leute hin und wider fern von einander zerstrewet wohnen, mit dem Teutschen oder Lateinischen Kyrie, bis die Gemein zusammen kömpt, anfahen. Aber auff den Hohen Festagen sol für den Introitum ein Geistlich Lied nach gelegenheit des Festes gesungen werden. Demnach sol volgen: Allein Gott in der höhe sey Ehre.

Forasmuch as the folk dwell here and there scattered far from one another, [he shall] begin with the German or Latin Kyrie until the congregation come together. But upon the high feast days a spiritual song according to the occasion of the feast shall be sung for the introit. Thereafter shall follow "All Glory Be to God on High."

A Henneberg pastor wrote in his report that without communicants a psalm took the place of the Kyrie and Et in terra, "that the people might meanwhile come together". Belrieth and Einhausen (Henneberg), Gottesdienst-Ordnung, 1566 (Sehling 2, p. 330):

> So aber keine communicanten furhanden sind, las ich erstlich an stat des kyrie und Et in terra ein psalm singen, das sich das volk in des zusamen bringe.

But when no communicants are present, I cause first, in the stead of the Kyrie and Et in terra, a psalm to be sung, that the people may meanwhile gather themselves together.

Bremen had the sexton see that German hymns were sung while the last bell rang. Bremen, Kirchenordnung, 1534 (Sehling 7/2.2, p. 464):

> schal als denn de Köster bestüren, dat yn der Kercken gesungen werde ein ledt, Alse: Nu ys dat heil uns kamen her, Nu frouwet juw leven Christen gemene, Unde Veni Sancte spiritus Düdesch edder Latin, alse me wil dat laste teken lüden.

Then shall the sexton see to it that a song be sung in the church, as "Salvation unto Us Has Come," "Dear Christians, One and All, Rejoice," and Veni Sancte Spiritus in German or Latin, when the last sign is to be rung.

Goslar, Neugestaltung des Gottesdienstes in the chapter church of SS. Simon and Jude, 1560 (Sehling 7/2.2, p. 320), at the Sunday vespers:

> oder sollen die leuthe, so sich in der predigtt samlen, christliche loebgesinge singen, biß das der seyer zwey slechtt.

or the people that gather for the sermon shall sing Christian songs of praise until the clock strike two.

The cost of this practice was noticed. The Mansfeld Agenda complained that Luther's hymns were being forgotten because they were sung only at the start, before the people were there, while the towns sang Latin and figured music. Mansfeld, Kirchen-Agenda, 1580, article XVIII (Sehling 2, p. 234):

> Wir befinden, das leider d. Luthers, des teuren mans gottes und letzten propheten deutsches landes schöne psalmen und anderer fürtrefflicher leute geistreiche deutsche lieder an vielen orten also in abfall und vergessen komen, das die jungen hernach wachsende leute wenig von denselbigen wissen. Und kömpt solches daher, das dieselben gar wenig und seiden oder etwa im anfange des ampts, ehe die leute zusamen komen, in der kirchen gesungen werden, oder auch das in den stedten am meisten die lateinischen gesenge und musica figuralis gehalten werden.

We find that, alas, the fair psalms of Doctor Luther, the dear man of God and last prophet of the German land, and the spiritual German songs of other excellent men, are in many places so fallen into disuse and forgetting that the young folk growing up after know little of them. And this cometh thereof, that they are sung in the church very little and seldom, or perchance at the beginning of the office, before the people come together; or also that in the towns the Latin songs and figured music are for the most part kept.

8.4.3 The German Benedictus

Bugenhagen's orders often begin the Mass with the German Benedictus ("Gelobet sei der Herr, der Gott Israel"), sung by the schoolmaster, the children and all the people. It is sung without the organ, so that the people might learn the words of Scripture. Wolfenbüttel, Kirchenordnung, 1543 (Sehling 6/1, p. 54):

> Int erste hefft an de scholemeister und singet dat düdesche Benedictus mit synen kindern und mit dem ganzen volke. […] Sülck Benedictus schal men nicht spelen up den orgelen, dat sick dat volk gewenne tho den worden der hilgen schrift. Darup singet men einen düdeschen psalm edder led uth der hilgen schrift gemaket, als im sankbökeschen doctoris Lutheri is.

First the schoolmaster beginneth, and singeth the German Benedictus with his children and with all the people. […] Such Benedictus shall not be played upon the organs, that the people may accustom themselves to the words of Holy Scripture. Thereupon a German psalm is sung, or a song made out of Holy Scripture, as is in Doctor Luther's little songbook.

Pomerania, Kirchenordnung, 1535 (Sehling 4, pp. 340–341):

> De scholmeister eder cantor hevet balde an dat düdesch benedictus, den sank Sacharie, mit der differentia septimi toni, mit der antiph. alleine in fine, Gelavet si de herr de godt Israel […] Dar up singet me einen düdeschen psalm Erbarm di miner etc. eder einen anderen.

The schoolmaster or cantor straightway beginneth the German Benedictus, the song of Zacharias, with the differentia of the seventh tone, with the antiphon only at the end, "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel" […]. Thereupon is sung a German psalm, "Have mercy on me," etc., or another. (Where there were good schools, a Latin introit might be sung at times.)

In Transylvania the German Benedictus replaced the Sunday procession that had been abolished; at Easter Salve festa dies was kept. Transylvanian Saxons, Kirchenordnung, 1547, Latin text (Sehling 24, p. 223):

> Dominicis diebus pro abrogato circuitu, ante Introitum, canitur Germanicum canticum Zachariae: Benedictus Dominus […] tempore Paschali: Salve festa dies.

On the Lord's days, for the procession that is abolished, before the introit is sung the German canticle of Zacharias, Benedictus Dominus […]; in Eastertide, Salve festa dies.

The German text of the same order (Sehling 24, p. 244):

> Am sontag an stat des abgelegten umbgangs singt man den lobgesang Zacharie: Gelobet sey der Herr. Zu Ostern: das Salve festa dies.

On the Sunday, in the stead of the procession laid aside, the song of praise of Zacharias is sung, "Blessed be the Lord." At Easter, the Salve festa dies.

The Wittenberg order of 1533 puts the Benedictus before everything, then an introit, Latin or a German psalm. Wittenberg, Kirchenordnung, 1533 (Sehling 1, p. 704):

> Vor allem in der messen soll man erstlich singen das deutsch benedictus Sacharie mit seiner kurzen antiphon, darnach einen introitum, zu zeiten lateinisch, zu zeiten deutsch, welches soll sein ein deutscher psalm.

Before all things in the Mass there shall be sung first the German Benedictus of Zacharias with its short antiphon, thereafter an introit, at times in Latin, at times in German, which shall be a German psalm.

In the Henneberg village of Sulzfeld the Benedictus was sung "an stat des introitus". Sulzfeld (Henneberg), 1566 (Sehling 2, p. 352):

> an stat des introitus hebt der schulmeister mit den knaben zu singen das benedictus Zachariae deutsch und darauf die antiphon: Gelobet sei der herre der gott Israel, wie es die noten ausweisen.

In the stead of the introit the schoolmaster with the boys beginneth to sing the Benedictus of Zacharias in German, and thereupon the antiphon "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel," as the notes show.

8.4.4 The German Te Deum at the opening

In some later northern orders the German Te Deum ("Herr Gott, dich loben wir") opens the morning service. It was played on the organ, or sung verse by verse. Hoya, Kirchenordnung, 1581 (Sehling 6/2, p. 1148):

> und da orgeln sein, sol der organist anfahen zu schlagen Herr Gott, wir loben dich etc. Da aber keine orgel ist, sol man es singen. Und wenn das geendet, sol der pastor in seinem gewönlichen langen rock für den altar treten, das meßkleid anziehen und den introitum de tempore singen. Darauf schlegt der organist das Kyrie, und der chor singet: Christe el[eison].

And where there are organs, the organist shall begin to play "Lord God, we praise thee," etc. But where there is no organ, it shall be sung. And when that is ended, the pastor in his accustomed long gown shall step before the altar, put on the Mass vestment, and sing the introit of the season. Thereupon the organist playeth the Kyrie, and the choir singeth Christe eleison.

The East Frisian order of Marienhafe, which follows Hoya, begins with a German Kyrie sung kneeling, "Ach Vatter", and then the Te Deum. Marienhafe, Kirchenordnung, 1593 (Sehling 7/1, p. 695):

> Zur hoichpredigt soll der schulmeister mit den knaben balt umme acht uhr dasein und kniend myt den Kyrie, Ach Vatter, ahnfangen etc. […] Darauf soll der organist das Te Deum laudamus anheben und das chor sampt der gemeinten dasselbe deutsch versch umb versch nach dem orgel andechtich singen etc. […] Darnach noch ein psalm oder geistlich leid, von prediger angesagt, spielen und singen.

For the high sermon the schoolmaster with the boys shall be there at eight o'clock, and begin kneeling with the Kyrie "Ah Father," etc. […] Thereupon the organist shall begin the Te Deum laudamus, and the choir together with the congregation shall sing the same in German devoutly, verse by verse, after the organ, etc. […] Thereafter yet a psalm or spiritual song, given out by the preacher, [shall be] played and sung.

The Hildesheim chapter lands opened with a choice of three: the German Te Deum, "Gott der Vater wohn uns bei" or "Nun freut euch", followed by "Allein Gott". Hildesheim (Stift), Kirchenordnung für Steuerwald und Peine, 1561 (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 781):

> erstlich das deutsche Te Deum laudamus oder: Gott der Vater wahn uns bey und lasse uns etc oder: Nun freuwet euch lieben Christen gemain singen, darauf: Allein Gott in der höge sey ehr.

[He shall] first sing the German Te Deum laudamus, or "Triune God, Be Thou Our Stay," etc., or "Dear Christians, One and All, Rejoice"; thereupon "All Glory Be to God on High."

Where a village pastor could not sing matins with his sexton, Pomerania had the German Te Deum sung "pro introitu". Pomerania, Agenda, 1569 (Sehling 4, p. 440):

> Wo de pastor mit dem cöstere nicht kan metten singen, alse vörhen gesecht is, schal he doch pro introitu singen dat düdische te deum laudamus, mit einer collecte.

Where the pastor cannot sing matins with the sexton, as is before said, he shall yet sing for the introit the German Te Deum laudamus, with a collect.

8.4.5 A penitential psalm-hymn for the confession

In Hesse (Moderate Reformed) the congregation could sing Psalm 51 in Erhart Hegenwalt's metrical version ("Erbarm dich mein, o Herre Gott") in place of the spoken confession and absolution. Hessen, Kirchenordnung, 1566 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 8, p. 248):

> Darnach tut man entweder die bekantnis der sünden mit aufnemung der absolution, oder singt die ganze kirch den 51. psalm: Erbarm dich mein, o Herre Gott, etc.

Thereafter either the confession of sins is made, with the receiving of the absolution, or the whole church singeth the fifty-first psalm, "Have mercy on me, O Lord God," etc.

Wittgenstein used "Aus tiefer Not" in the same way. Wittgenstein, Kirchenordnung [1565] (Sehling 22, p. 116):

> unnd nach dem Auß tieffer nott schrey ich zu dir etc. als ein confessionem singen unnd nach diesem das 6. capitel Johannis oder das 53. capitel Jesaiae vorlesen und alßdann den glauben singen, und folgend auff die cantzel tretten.

and thereafter sing "From Depths of Woe I Cry to Thee," etc., as a confession, and after this read the sixth chapter of John or the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah, and then sing the creed, and following that step up into the pulpit.

8.4.6 A hymn to cover the priest's prayers at the altar step

In the Bugenhagen city order of Hildesheim the opening German psalm is sung while the priest kneels at the altar with the sexton and prays the preparatory prayers. Hildesheim (city), Kirchenordnung, 1544 (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 852):

> Int erste mach me singen vor dem introitum einen düdeschen psalm edder ledt, ut der hilligen schrift gemaket. Under dem gesange geit de prester vor dat altar unde kneet sick mit dem oppermanne, bedet vor sick unde vor dat volk unde vor alle nodt der christenheit.

First one may sing before the introit a German psalm or song made out of Holy Scripture. During the song the priest goeth before the altar and kneeleth with the sexton, and prayeth for himself and for the people and for all the need of Christendom.

8.4.7 How fixed the opening was

The opening slot was the most stable in the corpus. Where a choice is named it is nearly always among these few:

- Veni sancte Spiritus (Latin antiphon), or its German forms "Komm heiliger Geist, Herre Gott" (Luther's hymn) and "Komm, heiliger Geist, erfülle" (prose, sung to the Latin melody).
- "Nun bitten wir den heiligen Geist".
- The German Benedictus.
- The German Te Deum.
- Psalm 51 ("Erbarm dich mein" or "O Herre Gott, begnade mich").

Only the grading by feast varies (§8.4.1). A few orders instead fill the slot with a seasonal song "pro ingressu" at vespers (§8.16.2).

8.5 Hymns in place of the introit

The introit is a proper, and this chapter does not treat the Latin introits as such. But it is the proper most often replaced by a hymn. The rule is nearly everywhere the same. A Latin introit taken from Scripture might be kept where a school could sing it. Otherwise, and in the villages always, "a German psalm" was sung instead. In the 16th century a "German psalm" (ein deutscher Psalm) is any metrical hymn, above all Luther's psalm-hymns, and not only a paraphrase of a psalm.

8.5.1 The rule: a Scriptural introit, or a German psalm

Schleswig-Holstein, Kirchenordnung, 1542 (Sehling 23, p. 89):

> Thom Ersten mach men singen effte lesen den Introitum, de nicht wedder de Gödtlike schrifft sy, men de gelick syn den yennen, de up den Sondagen, ock yn den Festen Christi, uth dem Psalter genamen, gesungen werden. Up den dörpen mach men einen düdeschen Psalmen vor den Introitum singen.

First one may sing or read the introit, such as is not against the divine Scripture, but like unto those which are sung on the Sundays, and also on the feasts of Christ, taken out of the Psalter. In the villages one may sing a German psalm for the introit.

Buxtehude, Kirchenordnung, 1552 (Sehling 7/1, p. 74):

> So der introitus in der misse hilliger schrift enlich, schall he ahn den festen edder fyrdagen beholden werden. So averst der introitus in der schrift ungegrundet edder sunst tor beteringe undenstlick were, schall ahnstede des introitus ein dudesch psalm gesungen werden, alse Kum, hilliger Geist, edder sunst ein ander na bevehl des pastoris. Des werkeldages averst schall stedewech vor den introitum ein dudesch psalm gesungen werden.

If the introit in the Mass be like unto Holy Scripture, it shall be kept on the feasts or holy days. But if the introit be not grounded in Scripture, or otherwise unserviceable to edification, then in the stead of the introit a German psalm shall be sung, as "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord," or else another at the bidding of the pastor. But on the working day a German psalm shall always be sung for the introit.

Prussia, Artikel der Ceremonien, 1525 (Sehling 4, p. 32). The German psalms already sung in place of the introit may stay until the new Latin schools can sing the Latin again:

> wo aber die introit abgethan sein, und deütsch psalmen dafur gesungen werden, lass man es auch dabei bleiben, bis das man der aufgerichten lateinischen schulen halben den lateinischen introit oder ganzen lateinischen psalm an die stadt ordnen wirt.

but where the introits are done away and German psalms sung for them, let it also abide so, until, for the sake of the Latin schools set up, the Latin introit or the whole Latin psalm shall be ordained in their stead.

Riga, Kirchenordnung, 1530 (Sehling 5, p. 15). The reason for keeping some Latin is that "the tongues should not be put so wholly out of the church's use":

> möchte man die sonteglichen introit um ubung willen der jugent (so sie nu in der schulen wird zugenommen haben) lateinisch singen, oder an stadt des introitus einen psalmen deudsch oder lateinisch, als nemlich diesen, es wolt uns gott gnedig sein etc. oder einen andern denn ie die sprachen nicht sollen so ganz aus der kirchen übung gethan werden.

one might sing the Sunday introits in Latin for the exercise of the youth (when it shall now have increased in the school), or in the stead of the introit a psalm in German or Latin, namely this, "May God Bestow on Us His Grace," etc., or another; for the tongues should not be so wholly put out of the church's use.

Tecklenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1543 (Sehling 22, p. 243):

> In stede des introitus sall man singen einen duischen psalm Davids of dergelichen, mit Gades worde beweirt, darneist dat Kyrie eleison und Gloria in excelsis duisch.

In the stead of the introit shall be sung a German psalm of David, or the like, proved by God's word; next thereto the Kyrie eleison and Gloria in excelsis in German.

The Calenberg order replaces all four chants of the village Mass with a single psalm. Calenberg-Göttingen, Kirchenordnung, 1542 (Sehling 6/2, p. 795):

> Demnach sollen die pfarherrn anstat des introitus, des Et in terra, des haleluja und des sequenz als einen psalmen singen.

Accordingly the pastors shall sing, in the stead of the introit, the Et in terra, the alleluia and the sequence, a psalm for each.

The same rule reached the Bohemian villages of Teschen. Teschen, Kirchenordnung, 1584 (Sehling 3, p. 462):

> Auf den dörfern aber mag man sonst einen gesang oder psalmen siengen anstadt des introits, deutsch oder böhemisch.

But in the villages one may otherwise sing a song or psalm in the stead of the introit, in German or Bohemian.

In the Albertine order the whole communion service of the villages begins with a hymn "pro introitu". Saxony (Albertine), Kirchenordnung, 1539 (Sehling 1, p. 272):

> Wenn man communicanten hat, sol man das volk ein feinen psalm oder sonst ein geistlichen gesang lassen singen, pro introitu.

When there are communicants, the people shall be made to sing a fine psalm or else a spiritual song, for the introit.

8.5.2 Which hymns: a short rotating list

Where the orders name the hymns for this slot, they give a short list, and several say plainly that the list is to be rotated. The favourites are Luther's and his circle's penitential and psalm-hymns: "Es wolt uns Gott genädig sein" (Ps 67), "Erbarm dich mein, o Herre Gott" (Ps 51), "Aus tiefer Not" (Ps 130), "Ach Gott vom Himmel sieh darein" (Ps 12), "Wär Gott nicht mit uns" (Ps 124), "Es spricht der Unweisen Mund" (Ps 14), and "Komm heiliger Geist, Herre Gott".

Prussia, Kirchenordnung, 1544 (Sehling 4, p. 64):

> Zum anfang, an stadt des introits, singt man der deüdschen psalmen einen, wie auch bishere alhie im fürstenthumb geschehen ist, nemlich: Es wolt uns got gnedig sein. Erbarm dich mein, o herre got. Aus tiefer noth. Ach gott vom himel sich darein. Wer got nicht mit uns diese zeit. Es spricht der unweisen mund wol etc. und dergleichen psalmen, umb einander abzuwechseln. In festen aber als Ostern, Pfingsten, Weinachten singe man die eigene introit deütsch oder lateinisch nach gelegenheit des orts, umb ubung willen, der jugend.

At the beginning, in the stead of the introit, one of the German psalms is sung, as hath been done hitherto here in the duchy, namely: "May God Bestow on Us His Grace"; "Have mercy on me, O Lord God"; "From Depths of Woe I Cry to Thee"; "O Lord, Look Down from Heaven, Behold"; "If God Had Not Been on Our Side"; "The Mouth of Fools Doth God Confess," etc., and the like psalms, to be changed about one after another. But on feasts, as Easter, Pentecost, Christmas, let the proper introits be sung, in German or Latin according to the occasion of the place, for the exercise of the youth.

Naumburg, Kirchen-Ordnung for St Wenzel, 1537/1538 (Sehling 2, p. 71) alternates three hymns Sunday by Sunday, and keeps sung Latin introits in part-music for the feasts:

> Für den introitum singet man einen sontag umb den andern: Kom heiliger geist etc. Erbarm dich mein etc. Aus tiefer noth etc. An den hohen festen aber singt man in mensuris als zu Weinachten. Den introitum puer natus oder dies est laetitiae etc. Palmarum. Gloria, laus et honor. Ostern. Salve festa dies etc. Pfingsten. Introitum de sancto spiritu. Trinitatis. Introitum de trinitate. Annunciationis Mariae. Haec est dies etc.

For the introit is sung, one Sunday after another: "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord," etc.; "Have mercy on me," etc.; "From Depths of Woe I Cry to Thee," etc. But on the high feasts one singeth in measured music, as at Christmas the introit Puer natus, or Dies est laetitiae, etc.; Palm Sunday, Gloria, laus et honor; Easter, Salve festa dies, etc.; Pentecost, the introit of the Holy Ghost; Trinity, the introit of the Trinity; the Annunciation of Mary, Haec est dies, etc.

The St George's order of Nördlingen (1555) copies this rotation, putting it after the Latin introit and before the confession (Sehling 12, p. 319). The Auctuarium of Brandenburg-Ansbach, an Interim order, gives the fullest village list. Brandenburg-Ansbach, Auctuarium, 1548 (Interim order; Sehling 11, pp. 329–330):

> Wo nit schulen oder leut vorhanden, die lateinisch singen konten, sollen die pfarhern anstad des introitus mit dem volk singen: Nun freud euch, lieben Christen gemain etc. Dis sind die heiligen zehen gebot etc. Erbarm, dich mein, o Herr Gott etc, […] Ich ruef zu dir, Herr Jesu Christ etc.

Where there are no schools, or folk that could sing Latin, the pastors shall sing with the people in the stead of the introit: "Dear Christians, One and All, Rejoice," etc.; "These Are the Holy Ten Commands," etc.; "Have mercy on me, O Lord God," etc.; […] "Lord, Hear the Voice of My Complaint," etc.

In the Pomeranian orders of 1542 and 1569 the choice is Latin introit or Psalm 51, in one of its two German versions. Pomerania, Kirchenordnung, 1542 (Sehling 4, p. 356):

> heven den introitum an to latin, efft singen einen düdeschen psalm darvor, erbarm di miner, in der melodie als idt in den druckeden sankbokern steit, efft den psalm, o here godt begnade mi etc.

[they] begin the introit in Latin, or sing a German psalm for it, "Have mercy on me," in the melody as it standeth in the printed songbooks, or the psalm "O Lord God, be gracious unto me," etc.

Pomerania, Agenda, 1569 (Sehling 4, p. 437):

> Tom anfange singet dat chor den introitum de festo vel tempore, edder up de dominica, edder: Kum hilige geist, herre godt. Erbarme di miner. O herre godt begnade mi etc. edder einen andern düdeschen psalm.

At the beginning the choir singeth the introit of the feast or of the season, or of the Sunday; or "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord"; "Have mercy on me"; "O Lord God, be gracious unto me," etc.; or another German psalm.

8.5.3 Early German Masses: a hymn as the introit itself

In some of the earliest German Masses a hymn stands where the introit stood, under the heading Introitus. The Nürnberg hospital Mass of Andreas Döber prints "Nun bitten wir" with the heading "Introitus oder eingang der meß". Nürnberg, Döber's German Mass in the New Hospital, 1525 (Sehling 11, p. 56):

> Introitus oder eingang der meß. [Noten] Nun bitten wir den Heiligen Geist [4 Verse. Hier nicht abgedruckt; dann Schluß der Noten].

Introit, or entrance of the Mass. [Notes] "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray" [four verses].

Strasbourg's Mass of 1525 (Moderate Reformed) had Psalm 51 or Psalm 130 "an stat des Introits". Strasbourg, Ordnung des Herren Nachtmal, 1525 (Moderate Reformed; Sehling 20/1, p. 156):

> Auff das fahet an die kirch zu singen ein psalmen als das Miserere oder ein anderen psalmen an stat des Introits und etwan das Kyrieleyson und Gloria in excelsis. Der CXXX. Psalm: De profundis, an stat des Introits etwan in der Meß: Uß tieffer not schrey ich zu dir.

Thereupon the church beginneth to sing a psalm, as the Miserere or another psalm, in the stead of the introit, and sometimes the Kyrie eleison and Gloria in excelsis. The hundred and thirtieth psalm, De profundis, sometimes in the stead of the introit in the Mass: "From Depths of Woe I Cry to Thee."

A Low German Mass from Lippe gives "Uth deper nodt" as the introit, with the choice of any other psalm. Lippe, Deutsche Messe [c. 1525–1538] (Sehling 22, p. 565):

> Dewyle averst de prester den confiteor lest, synget dat choer den introitum der misse. Introitus misse Uth deper nodt schrye ik tho dy etc. Offte eynen anderen psalmen, wat me vor eynen wyl. Item, nu thor tydt synget dat choer offte volck ghemeylick vor dem introitu de antiffen Veni sancte spiritus, Kum, hillige geist.

But while the priest readeth the Confiteor, the choir singeth the introit of the Mass. Introit of the Mass: "From Depths of Woe I Cry to Thee," etc., or another psalm, whichever one will. Item, now at this time the choir or people commonly sing before the introit the antiphon Veni sancte Spiritus, "Come, Holy Ghost."

8.5.4 A hymn of the feast for the introit

On feasts, some orders let a hymn of the feast replace the Latin festal introit. Mecklenburg sang Luther's Christmas Leise "Ein Kindelein so löbelich" (the four stanzas of "Der Tag, der ist so freudenreich") at Candlemas and on the Sundays between Christmas and Candlemas. Mecklenburg, Ordeninge der misse, 1545 (Sehling 5, p. 151):

> In die Purificationis singe me vor enen introitum de veer schonen versche. Ein kindelin etc. Welck ock de sondage twischen winachten und lechtmissen up den dörpern schal vor enen introitum gesungen werden. Up welckere sondage in den steden, under tiden dat Offitium, Puer natus, mach gesungen werden.

On the day of the Purification let the four fair verses, "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child," etc., be sung for an introit. The same shall also be sung for an introit in the villages on the Sundays between Christmas and Candlemas; on which Sundays in the towns the office Puer natus may be sung at times.

Wittgenstein kept the Latin introits of the high feasts but allowed three hymns in their place: "Der Tag, der ist so freudenreich" for Puer natus, "Christ lag in Todesbanden" for Resurrexi, and "Es ist das Heil" for Spiritus Domini. Wittgenstein, Kirchenordnung, 1563 (Sehling 22, p. 102):

> nach dem Veni sancte den gewönlichen introitum singen, als da sind: Puer natus est nobis etc., Resurrexi et adhuc tecum sum etc., Spiritus Domini replevit orbem terrarum etc., welche man auch auff den dörffern deutsch lernen und singen kan oder an stadt derselbigen brauchen: Der tag, der ist so freudenreich etc., Christ lag in todes banden etc., Es ist das heyl uns kommen her etc.

[they shall] after the Veni sancte sing the customary introit, as these are: Puer natus est nobis, etc., Resurrexi et adhuc tecum sum, etc., Spiritus Domini replevit orbem terrarum, etc.; which may also be learned and sung in German in the villages, or, in the stead of the same, may be used: "Now Hail the Day So Rich in Cheer," etc., "Christ Jesus Lay in Death's Strong Bands," etc., "Salvation unto Us Has Come," etc.

In the Henneberg village of Sulzfeld the chorus sang the Christmas song "Ein Kind geboren zu Bethlehem" (Puer natus in Bethlehem) instead of the introit, and "Also heilig ist der Tag" three times at Easter and Ascension. Sulzfeld and Klein-Bardorf, Kirchen-Ordnung, 1566 (Sehling 2, p. 353):

> zu weinachten an stat des introitus singt der chor: Ein kind geboren zu Bethlehem, auf ostern und himmelfart aber: Also heilig ist der tag etc. dreimal und an stat des psalmen zwischen den capiteln werden die gewönlich lieder von festen gesungen.

At Christmas, in the stead of the introit, the choir singeth "A Boy Is Born in Bethlehem"; but at Easter and the Ascension, "This Is Such a Holy Day," etc., three times; and in the stead of the psalm between the chapters the customary songs of the feasts are sung.

The Hamburg order of 1529 lists the Latin introits for the feasts it keeps. For other feasts, where there is no chant from Scripture, it allows "joyful psalms and songs". Hamburg, Kirchenordnung, 1529 (Sehling 5, p. 528):

> Int erste singet me einen dudeschen psalm, edder up etlike feste latinisch. Van winachten bet up purificationis puer natus. Twischen paschen und der hemmelfart salus populi ego sum. Darna bet up pinxten viri galilei. Van pinxten spiritus domini. Van sunte Johanse ne timeas Sacharia [...] Van sunte Michael Benedicite domino. Up feste, dar men sundergen sank ut der schrift nicht van hefft, kan me wol frolike psalme und lede singen.

First is sung a German psalm, or on certain feasts [an introit] in Latin: from Christmas unto the Purification, Puer natus; between Easter and the Ascension, Salus populi ego sum; thereafter unto Pentecost, Viri Galilaei; from Pentecost, Spiritus Domini; of St John, Ne timeas, Zacharia [...]; of St Michael, Benedicite Domino. On feasts whereof one hath no proper chant out of Scripture, one may well sing joyful psalms and songs.

8.5.5 A German prose antiphon as introit

Ritzebüttel, in Hamburg's territory, sang the prose German "Komm, heiliger Geist, erfülle" with its Alleluia "in stede des introitus". Ritzebüttel, Kirchenordnung, 1556 (Sehling 5, p. 557):

> Des sondages anfenglick hevet men an, in stede des introitus to singen den dudeschen gesanck: Kum hilliger geist, erfülle die herten diener gelovigen, und entfenge in en dat fuer diner godtlicken leer [...] Alleluia.

On the Sunday one beginneth first to sing, in the stead of the introit, the German song "Come, Holy Ghost, fill the hearts of thy faithful, and kindle in them the fire of thy divine love" [...] Alleluia.

8.5.6 Why a short list: that the people might learn them

The Halle order explains the aim of the rotation. The German psalms sung "pro introitu" were to be chosen so that the whole church might become sure of some good psalms, and in time of the whole Psalter, as at Jena. Halle, Kirchen-Ordnung der christlichen Gemein, 1543 (Sehling 2, p. 436):

> Wan man Aus tiefer noth, oder andere deutsche psalmen pro introitu singet, sollen dieselbigen dahin gericht werden, das die ganze kirche etlicher gueter trostlicher nüzlicher psalmen gewiss gewone, und man kente mit der zeit anrichten, > das aller psalmen im ganzen psalter das volk durch solche fleissige übung, wan man der psalmen nacheinander brauchet, gewenete, wie in etlichen kirchen, als zu Jena und andern orten nüzlich angericht.

When "From Depths of Woe I Cry to Thee" or other German psalms are sung for the introit, the same shall be so ordered that the whole church may become surely accustomed to some good, comfortable, profitable psalms; and in time it might be brought about that the people, by such diligent exercise, using the psalms one after another, should grow accustomed to all the psalms in the whole Psalter, as hath been profitably set up in some churches, as at Jena and other places.

Nördlingen dropped the introit altogether when the psalm after the epistle was a long one, and in winter "for the cold and for beloved brevity's sake". Nördlingen, Kirchenordnung, 1579 (Sehling 12, p. 375):

> Wo aber ein langer psalm fürfelle als Vater unser, Nun freuet euch, lieben christen gemein, Es ist das heil uns kommen her, Durch Adams fall, Wo Gott der Herr nicht bei uns helt und dergleichen, so würd der introitus zu singen ausgelassen und schlegt allein der organist. Sonderlich aber zue winterszeiten solle der introitus umb der kelte und geliebter kurze wülen ausgelassen werden.

But where a long psalm falleth, as "Our Father, Who from Heaven Above," "Dear Christians, One and All, Rejoice," "Salvation unto Us Has Come," "All Mankind Fell in Adam's Fall," "If God Were Not upon Our Side," and the like, then the singing of the introit is left out, and the organist alone playeth. But especially in the winter season the introit shall be left out, for the cold's sake and for beloved brevity's sake.

8.5.7 How fixed the slot was

Where a German hymn replaced the introit, the choice was among a handful, usually rotated. The core was "Komm heiliger Geist", Psalm 51, Psalm 130 and Psalm 67, with a few other psalm-hymns. At the high feasts the Latin introit returned, or a hymn of the feast took its place. No order found assigns a different introit-hymn to each Sunday of the year, as the Latin propers had done.

8.6 The Kyrie: plain, in three tongues, troped and German

The Kyrie is an ordinary, not a proper, so it was not replaced by a hymn in the way the introit was. But it was sung in German, it was troped in German, and it was graded by season, like the medieval Kyrie melodies. Most orders cut it back to three petitions, one to each Person of the Trinity. The Kyrie melodies of the chant books (summum, paschale, dominicale, angelicum, apostolicum, in adventu, de beata Virgine) survived as seasonal grades in the Lutheran cantionals of Spangenberg and Lossius. The grades themselves are treated in Chapter 12 §12.4.2. This section deals with the texts sung to them.

The Kyrie in the order of the Mass, and the seasonal Kyrie chants named in the orders, are treated in Chapter 2, §2.6.

8.6.1 Three times, not nine

Luther's Deutsche Messe already prescribed the Kyrie "drei mal und nicht neun mal" (Sehling 1, p. 14). The Wolfenbüttel order gives the reason: once for each Person of the Trinity. Wolfenbüttel, Kirchenordnung, 1543 (Sehling 6/1, p. 54):

> Id is nicht van nöden, negen mal dat eleison edder Kyrie tho repetirende, yd is genoch dremal im namen des Vaders und des Sons und des hilgen Geistes tho singende ane orgelen.

It is not needful to repeat the eleison or Kyrie nine times; it is enough to sing it three times, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, without organs.

Wittenberg kept a nine-fold Kyrie for the feasts. After the plain three-fold Kyrie there was no Gloria. Wittenberg, Kirchenordnung, 1533 (Sehling 1, p. 704):

> Darnach das rechte kyrie dreimal, oder zu zeiten, besondern uf die feste, ein anders neunmal, wie gewonlich. Auf das schlechte kyrie singet man nicht gloria in excelsis deo, sondern auf andere, wenn man will, und sonderlich uf die feste.

Thereafter the right Kyrie three times; or at times, especially on the feasts, another nine times, as is customary. After the plain Kyrie one singeth not Gloria in excelsis Deo, but after the others, when one will, and especially on the feasts.

8.6.2 In three tongues

Two Baltic orders have the three petitions sung in three languages: Greek, Latin and German. Prussia, Artikel der Ceremonien, 1525 (Sehling 4, p. 32):

> Von dem kyrieleyson ist fur gut angesehen, dieweil es dreimal gesungen wirt, das es in dreien zungen, wie man auch alhier pfleget, krichisch, lateinisch und deütsch gefangen werde.

Of the Kyrie eleison it is thought good, since it is sung three times, that it be sung in three tongues, as is also the custom here: Greek, Latin and German.

Riga, Kirchenordnung, 1530 (Sehling 5, p. 15):

> Auf den introit, singt man das kyrie eleison, mit wenig noten (ausgenommen auf die hohen fest, da man notam paschalem nemen mag) und were nicht unformlich, das es in dreien zungen, kriechisch, lateinisch und deudsch, wie man auch an etlichen orten pfleget, gesungen würde, die weil es doch dreimal gesungen wird.

After the introit the Kyrie eleison is sung with few notes (save on the high feasts, when the Easter note may be taken). And it were not unseemly that it be sung in three tongues, Greek, Latin and German, as is the custom in some places, since it is sung three times.

A Westphalian order prints such Kyries, several of them, to be chosen by the season. The first acclamation keeps the Greek, the second is in Latin, and only the third is in the people's tongue. Neuenrade, Kirchenordnung, 1564 (Sehling 22, p. 527):

> Na dem Te deum, wann de bichte vam Prester vor dem Altar gesproken is, singet man dat Kyrie, etc. Hir sint etlike na einander gesat, der man eins nemt, welker man will, na gelegenheit der thijt: Kyrie eleison. Christe miserere. O Here, erbarm dick unser. Ein ander: Kyrie eleison. Christe miserere. O Here, erbarm dick unser. Paschale: Kyrie eleison. Christe miserere. O Here, erbarm dick unser.

After the Te Deum, when the confession hath been spoken by the priest before the altar, the Kyrie is sung, etc. Here are several set one after another, of which one taketh whichever he will, according to the occasion of the season: Kyrie eleison. Christe miserere [Christ, have mercy]. O Lord, have mercy upon us. Another: Kyrie eleison. Christe miserere. O Lord, have mercy upon us. Paschale: Kyrie eleison. Christe miserere. O Lord, have mercy upon us.

A fourth of the same form stands before the German prose Gloria (p. 528).

8.6.3 Bugenhagen's defence of the Greek Kyrie

Bugenhagen defended keeping the Greek words, even in German. The people already sang Kyrieleis at the end of their best-loved hymns. Braunschweig, Kirchenordnung, 1528 (Sehling 6/1, p. 438):

> Eynen düdeschen text uth latinischer edder anderer hilger scrift to maken mit schicklikeme sange, is nicht eynes jederen mannes, unlustich singen anrichten is neyne kunst. Worumme scholde me dat Kyrie elsen in der misse nicht singen? Singet me id doch in anderen leden, alse synt: Got sy gelavet, Midden in deme levend, Dit synt de hilgen teyn gebot, Mynsche wiltu leven salichlick, Christ is upgestanden, Nu bidde wy den hilgen Geyst, Gelavet sistu Jesu Christ etc.

To make a German text out of Latin or other holy Scripture, with a seemly tune, is not every man's work; to set up an unlovely singing is no art. Why should one not sing the Kyrie eleison in the Mass? For it is sung in other songs, as are: "O Lord, We Praise Thee," "In the Very Midst of Life," "These Are the Holy Ten Commands," "Wilt Thou, O Man, Live Happily," "Christ Is Arisen," "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," "We Praise You, Jesus, at Your Birth," etc.

8.6.4 Troped Kyries

A troped Kyrie lengthens each acclamation with words of its own. The medieval Latin Kyries were of this kind, and were named after their tropes: the Kyrie fons bonitatis after its opening words, "Kyrie, fount of goodness". Sehling's editors gloss the names, in the hymn register of volume 12, as "various melodies of the Kyrie of the Mass with tropes, that is, texts set under them, which were dropped in the Catholic Church at the reform of the Missal, but kept in the evangelical service" (Sehling 12, p. 412).

The orders kept the names and the melodies, and set German words to them. Each German Kyrie has three petitions, one to each Person of the Trinity, and lengthens each with a clause or a rhymed couplet, which mostly ends in eleison or "have mercy upon us". The Naumburg order of 1537/1538 has three, "according to the occasion of the season", and names them by their Latin melodies: the paschale, the Fons bonitatis and the Magnus Deus (Sehling 2, p. 71). It prints all three in its order of "the high office on the holy day", whose collect and epistle are those of Pentecost, and there the Fons bonitatis is called the summum (p. 78). The St George's order of Nördlingen (1555), which follows Naumburg closely and often word for word (Sehling 12, p. 318, n. 1), takes the three over and gives each its season (Sehling 12, p. 318):

Kyrie	Its German text at Naumburg	From	Until
paschale	"O Herre Gott, Vater in Ewigkeit" (§8.6.4.2)	Easter	Pentecost
Fons bonitatis	"Kyrie, Gott Vater in Ewigkeit" (§8.6.4.1)	Pentecost	Christmas
Magne Deus	"O Vater, allmächtiger Gott" (§8.6.4.3)	Christmas	Easter

The texts follow, one Kyrie to a subsection, each in the original and in English:

§	Kyrie	Sung to	Text printed in	Named or begun in
8.6.4.1	"Kyrie, Gott Vater in Ewigkeit"	summum, Fons bonitatis	Naumburg 1537/1538	Nördlingen 1555; Herpf and Obermassfeld 1566; Hof 1592
8.6.4.2	"O Herre Gott, Vater in Ewigkeit"	paschale	Naumburg 1537/1538	Nördlingen 1555; Wasungen 1566
8.6.4.3	"O Vater, allmächtiger Gott"	Magne Deus	Naumburg 1537/1538	Nördlingen 1555; Hof 1592
8.6.4.4	"Ach Vater, allerhöchster Gott"	summum	Ritzebüttel 1556, in Low German	Mecklenburg 1545; Marienhafe 1593
8.6.4.5	"Here, o Godt vader yn ewicheit" and "Kyrie, milde vader"	—	Schleswig-Holstein [after 1526]; Ritzebüttel 1556	—
8.6.4.6	"Kyrie, Gott aller Welt Schöpfer und Vater"	paschale	—	Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557
8.6.4.7	The Latin tropes: the Holy Week Kyrie; the Fons bonitatis and the Magne Deus	—	Hof 1592; the other two from outside the corpus	Buxtehude 1565; Nördlingen 1579

8.6.4.1 "Kyrie, Gott Vater in Ewigkeit": the summum or Fons bonitatis

Naumburg prints the text first of its three, under the name summum, with the notes. Naumburg, Kirchen-Ordnung for St Wenzel, 1537/1538 (Sehling 2, p. 78):

> Hierauf singt der ganze chor das kyrie eleison wie volget. Kyrie sumum.
> Kyrie got vater in ewigkeit, gross ist dein barmherzigkeit, aller ding ein schopfer und regirer eleison.
>
> Christe aller welt trost und sunder allein due hast erlost, o Jesu gottes sohn unser mitler bist in dem hochstem thron, zu dir schreien wir aus herzen begier eleison, > kyrie got heiliger geist trost sterk uns im glauben alle zeit, das wir am letzten end frolich uns scheiden aus diesem elend, eleison.

Hereupon the whole choir singeth the Kyrie eleison as followeth. Kyrie summum.

Kyrie, God the Father in eternity, great is thy mercy, of all things the Creator and Ruler, eleison.

Christ, comfort of all the world, thou alone hast redeemed sinners; O Jesu, Son of God, our Mediator thou art in the highest throne; to thee we cry out of the desire of [our] heart, eleison.

Kyrie, God the Holy Ghost, comfort [and] strengthen us in faith at all times, that at the last end we may depart joyfully out of this misery, eleison.

The Latin trope of the Fons bonitatis, which no order prints, is given from outside the corpus in §8.6.4.7. The German does not translate it.

Hof sings the same text under the name of its Latin melody, on Whitsunday. Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592 (Sehling 11, p. 441):

> In festo Pentecostes. Introitus: Der ganze weltkreis ist vol des Geistes etc. Kyrie fons bonitatis: Kyrie, Gott Vater in ewigkeit. Loco Et in terra: All ehr und lob soll Gottes sein.

On the feast of Pentecost. Introit: "The whole world is full of the Spirit," etc. Kyrie fons bonitatis: "Kyrie, God the Father in eternity." In the place of Et in terra: "All Glory Be to God Alone."

Nördlingen sings the Kyrie summum at Pentecost and on Trinity Sunday (Sehling 12, pp. 321–322; quoted in §12.4.2). In the Henneberg parishes it was the German Kyrie of the Sunday communion, "the fair Christian song". Obermassfeld (Henneberg), Kirchen-Ordnung, 1566 (Sehling 2, p. 343):

> singt der schulmeister mit den knaben und der kirchen, wan communicanten vorhanden sind, erstlich das schöne christliche gesang: Kyrie got vater in ewigkeit, gros ist deine barmherzigkeit etc. Folgend darauf das Gloria in excelsis deo wie dasselbige auch gesangsweis deutsch gestellet: Allein got in der höhe sei ehr und dank für seine gnade etc. Wo aber nicht communicanten vorhanden singen wir: Kom heiliger geist, herre got.

When communicants are present, the schoolmaster with the boys and the church singeth first the fair Christian song "Kyrie, God the Father in eternity, great is thy mercy," etc. Following thereupon, the Gloria in excelsis Deo, as the same is also set in German as a song: "All Glory Be to God on High," etc. But where no communicants are present we sing "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord."

At Herpf the German summum could give way to the Kyrie of the feast. Herpf (Henneberg), 1566 (Sehling 2, p. 334):

> So man communicanten hat, singt man das benedictus deutsch, darauf auch das deutsch kyrie eleison summum oder vom gegenwertigen fest.

When there are communicants, the Benedictus is sung in German, thereupon also the German Kyrie eleison summum, or that of the present feast.

8.6.4.2 "O Herre Gott, Vater in Ewigkeit": the paschale

The paschale is the shortest of the three. Its petitions are prayers, without the eleison. Naumburg, Kirchen-Ordnung for St Wenzel, 1537/1538 (Sehling 2, p. 78):

> Kyrie paschale.
>
> O herre gott, vater in ewigkeit bis uns sundern gnedig,
>
> Christe der werlet heilant und ihr trost mach uns allen von sunden los.
> O gott heiliger geist, theil uns mit weisheit lieb und glauben allermeist, bring gotlich gerechtigkeit.

Kyrie paschale.

O Lord God, Father in eternity, be gracious unto us sinners.

Christ, Saviour of the world and its comfort, make us all free from sins.

O God the Holy Ghost, impart unto us wisdom, love and faith most of all; bring godly righteousness.

At Wasungen, on Sundays and feasts without communicants, the school sang a psalm "with the three short Kyries hung thereto in German". Their opening is that of the paschale, with "vater allen barmherzigkeit" (Father of all mercy) for "vater in ewigkeit" (Father in eternity); the identification is this book's. Wasungen (Henneberg), pastor's report, 1566 (Sehling 2, p. 356):

> Anfenglich singet die schul die deutsche letanei oder sonsten einen zimlichen langen psalmen als das vater unser oder: Durch Adams fall oder mit den drei kurzen kyrie daran gehenget deutsch: O herre gott vater allen barmherzigkeit bist uns sündern gnedig etc.

At the beginning the school singeth the German litany, or else a fairly long psalm, as the Our Father or "All Mankind Fell in Adam's Fall," or, with the three short Kyries hung thereto in German, "O Lord God, Father of all mercy, be gracious unto us sinners," etc.

At Hof the paschale is sung from Easter to the Ascension to the words that the order gives under its notes, "Herre, erbarm dich uber uns" (Lord, have mercy upon us): the plain German Kyrie, not a troped one (Sehling 11, pp. 439–441).

8.6.4.3 "O Vater, allmächtiger Gott": the Magne Deus

The third Naumburg Kyrie ends each petition with "erbarme dich uber uns" (have mercy upon us). Naumburg, Kirchen-Ordnung for St Wenzel, 1537/1538 (Sehling 2, p. 78):

> Kyrie magne deus.
> O vater almechtiger gott zu dir schreien wir in der noth, durch dein gross barmherzigkeit erbarme dich uber uns.
> Christe wolst uns horen, fur uns bistue geboren von Maria, erbarm dich uber uns.
> Herr vorgib uns unser sunde, hilf uns in der letzten stunde, der due für uns bist gestorben, erbarme dich uber uns.

Kyrie magne Deus.

O Father, almighty God, to thee we cry in [our] need; by thy great mercy have mercy upon us.

Christ, be pleased to hear us; for us art thou born of Mary; have mercy upon us.

Lord, forgive us our sins, help us in the last hour, thou who for us hast died; have mercy upon us.

Hof sings it from Christmas to Epiphany: on Christmas Day, on the Sunday after Christmas, at the Circumcision and on the Sunday after it, and at Epiphany (Sehling 11, pp. 433–434). It gives the German incipit under the name of the Latin trope. Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592 (Sehling 11, p. 433):

> Kyrie magnae Deus potentiae: O Vater allmechtiger Gott.

Kyrie magnae Deus potentiae: "O Father, almighty God."

The register of the Hof volume refers the text to a song of Johann Spangenberg, of which Hof takes the first, fourth and eighth stanzas (Wackernagel III, no. 1116), and calls it an expanded rewriting of the Kyrie magnae Deus potentiae (Sehling 11, p. 752). The Latin trope is given from outside the corpus in §8.6.4.7. By this book's reading, the German first line renders its opening, magnae Deus potentiae (God of great power), and the Christe "born of Mary" recalls its fili matris unice (only Son of [thy] mother); the rest is free. Hof's list of figured music sets the Latin Kyrie Magnae Deus potentiae for four voices on St Stephen's Day and at Epiphany (p. 458). Nördlingen sings the Magne Deus from Christmas to Easter, and again at the Annunciation, "and on that day the organ is played too" (Sehling 12, pp. 318, 322).

8.6.4.4 "Ach Vater, allerhöchster Gott"

In Mecklenburg the German Kyrie summum was "Ach vader, alder högeste godt", to be taught to the villages. Mecklenburg, Ordeninge der misse, 1545 (Sehling 5, p. 151):

> Das düdesche kyrie summum: Ach vader, alder högeste godt, schölen de kerckheren up den dörpern singen, unde dem volke idt leren, dat de ganze kercke idt singe. De koster kan groth gut darinne don, wenn he sick nicht ut dem wege stickt, ock nicht (wo etlike don) up dat altar liggen gaen, sonder im chör sick to tiden na der kercken wende, und dem > volke wol vorsinge. Dat kyrie paschale, kyrie angelicum, dominicale, de anderen to tiden ock mach men in den steden singen.

The German Kyrie summum, "Ah Father, God most high," the parsons shall sing in the villages, and teach it to the people, that the whole church may sing it. The sexton can do great good herein, if he keep not out of the way, nor (as some do) go and lie upon the altar, but turn himself at times in the choir toward the church and sing it well before the people. The Kyrie paschale, Kyrie angelicum, dominicale and the others may also at times be sung in the towns.

"Ach Vater" was still the opening Kyrie at Marienhafe in East Frisia in 1593, sung kneeling (§8.4.4). Sehling's editors identify the Marienhafe Kyrie as "a particular, troped Kyrie", from Johann Spangenberg's Cantiones ecclesiasticae latinae … Kirchengesenge Deudsch of 1545 (Wackernagel III, no. 1114). It stands in the Emden Enchiridion of 1589 as "Kyrie / Ach Vader du allerhögste Godt / Wo klein acht men dyn Gebodt …" (Kyrie, Ah Father, thou most high God, how little is thy commandment regarded; Sehling 7/1, p. XVII, adding to p. 695, n. 9). Those are the opening words of the second Kyrie of Ritzebüttel, whose first line has "Herr godt vader" (Lord God the Father) for "Ach vader"; the identification is this book's. Ritzebüttel, Kirchenordnung, 1556 (Sehling 5, p. 557):

> Ein andrer kyrieleison. Also:
> Herr godt vader, alder hogste godt, wie klein achtet man din gebot. Verschone unser blindheit, die vele sunde deit. Erbarme di unser
>
> Christe, der du bist die weg und dat ware licht. Die porte der warheit, und dat levent, des vaters radt und wort, den he uns hefft tom troste gegeven, erbarm die unser.
> Herr, hillige geist in ewicheit, stah uns bi dorch dine barmhertigkeit; unse sunde sind uns leid, wil nicht vorlaten di in di hapen, erbarm di unser.

Another Kyrie eleison, thus:

Lord God the Father, God most high, how little is thy commandment regarded! Spare our blindness, which doeth many sins; have mercy upon us.

Christ, who art the way and the true light, the gate of truth, and the life, the Father's counsel and word, whom he hath given us for a comfort, have mercy upon us.

Lord, Holy Ghost in eternity, stand by us through thy mercy; our sins are grievous unto us; [we] will not forsake thee, in thee [we] hope; have mercy upon us.

8.6.4.5 The other Low German Kyries: Schleswig-Holstein and Ritzebüttel

A Low German manuscript Mass from Schleswig-Holstein, written after 1526, has a troped Kyrie with its notes (§7.11.1). After it come the opening of the Gloria, where the text breaks off, and a plain Kyrie dominicale. Schleswig-Holstein, Deutsche Messe [after 1526] (Sehling 23, p. 56):

> Here, o Godt vader yn ewicheit, de du levest unde aver alle regerst, vorbarme dy unser.
> Criste, de du heffst upgeloßet den bant des dodes, vorbarme dy unßer.
> Here, o hilge geist, de du van vader unde sone utgeist unde gelyck Godt gepryset werst, vorbarme dy unser.
> […] Kyrie Dominicale Here, Got vader, vorbarme dy unser. Criste, vorbarme dy unser. Here, hylige geist, vorbarme dy unser.

Lord, O God the Father in eternity, who livest and reignest over all, have mercy upon us.

Christ, who hast loosed the band of death, have mercy upon us.

Lord, O Holy Ghost, who proceedest from the Father and the Son and art praised as God alike, have mercy upon us.

[…] Kyrie dominicale: Lord God the Father, have mercy upon us. Christ, have mercy upon us. Lord, Holy Ghost, have mercy upon us.

The Ritzebüttel order gives three German Kyries, "each with its own melody": a plain one, "Ach Vater" (§8.6.4.4) and a third, lightly troped. Ritzebüttel, Kirchenordnung, 1556 (Sehling 5, p. 557):

> Darna wert gesungen dat kyrieleison mit noten in dudescher sprake also: Herr godt vader, erbarme di unser. Christe, godt sohn, erbarme di unser. Herr godt, heiliger geist, erbarme di unser. […] Ein ander kyrie. Also:
> Kyrie, milde vader, wie bidden di alle, vader, erbarme di unser.
>
> Christe, unse konink und herr, erbarm di unser.
> Kyrie, heiliger geist, die du ein troster der bloden bist, erbarme di unser.
> Ein ieder mit siner melodie.

Thereafter the Kyrie eleison is sung with notes in the German tongue thus: Lord God the Father, have mercy upon us. Christ, God the Son, have mercy upon us. Lord God, Holy Ghost, have mercy upon us. […] Another Kyrie, thus:

Kyrie, gentle Father, we all pray thee, Father, have mercy upon us.

Christ, our King and Lord, have mercy upon us.

Kyrie, Holy Ghost, who art a comforter of the fainthearted, have mercy upon us.

Each with its own melody.

The same order speaks of a missa dominicalis, paschalis, pentecostes and nativitatis: seasonal sets of Kyrie and Gloria.

8.6.4.6 Pfalz-Zweibrücken: "Kyrie, Gott aller Welt Schöpfer und Vater"

The songbook appended to the Pfalz-Zweibrücken Kirchenordnung of 1557 has three German Kyries, each paired with a German Gloria. The edition gives only the headings and first lines of its songs (Sehling 18, p. 247, n. 791). As far as the first lines show, only the third, the paschale, is troped. Pfalz-Zweibrücken, Kirchenordnung, 1557, songbook (Sehling 18, p. 248):

> Folget das Kyrieleison mit dem Gloria in Excelsis: Kyrie Eleyson, Herr erbarme dich. Gloria in Excelsis: Glori sey Gott in der höhe Und auff erden Frid. Ein ander Kyrie und Et in terra: Herr, erbarm dich unser. Ehre sei Gott in der höhe. Kyrie Paschale: Kyrie, Gott aller welt sehöpffer und Vatter, Eleyson. Gloria in Exelsis Deo: All ehr und lob sol Gottes sein.

Here followeth the Kyrie eleison with the Gloria in excelsis: "Kyrie eleison, Lord have mercy." Gloria in excelsis: "Glory be to God on high, and on earth peace." Another Kyrie and Et in terra: "Lord, have mercy upon us." "Glory be to God on high." Kyrie paschale: "Kyrie, God, Creator of all the world, and Father, eleison." Gloria in excelsis Deo: "All Glory Be to God Alone."

The editor refers each to the Handbuch der deutschen evangelischen Kirchenmusik; the paschale is its no. 34 (Sehling 18, p. 248, n. 795).

8.6.4.7 The Latin tropes

The Latin troped Kyries were sung where there were Latin schools, but the orders seldom print their words.

Printed, but left out of the edition. The Buxtehude Agende of 1565 heads the first of its Kyries "In summis festivitatibus et dominica Trinitatis cum textu" (on the highest feasts and on the Sunday of the Trinity, with the text): the Kyrie of the highest feasts, with its trope (§12.4.2). Its source marks several forms of the Kyrie by text and melody, after Lucas Lossius's Psalmodia (Wittenberg, 1561). Sehling's editor left the texts out, since "without the notes and without the Psalmodia of Lossius" they seemed meaningless (Sehling 7/1, p. 123, n. 70).

Named by their opening words. The Nördlingen order of 1579 lists the Latin chants for the weekday office and vespers. For Advent it names the Kyrie Fons bonitatis by three of its tropes. Nördlingen, Kirchenordnung, 1579 (Sehling 12, p. 377):

> Verzaichnus der lateinischen gesang, so in der wochen in dem ambt und vesper zu singen. Dominica I. Adventus. I: Ad te, Domine, levavi animam meam. K: Fons bonitatis. Christe, unice Dei partis genite. K: Ignis divine. Collecta teutsch.

A register of the Latin chants that are to be sung in the week, in the office and at vespers. The first Sunday in Advent. Introit: Ad te, Domine, levavi animam meam [Unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul]. Kyrie: Fons bonitatis [Fount of goodness]. Christe, unice Dei patris genite [Christ, only-begotten of God the Father]. Kyrie: Ignis divine [O fire divine]. The collect in German.

The three are the opening words of the first Kyrie, the first Christe and the last Kyrie of the troped Kyrie fons bonitatis, verses 1a, 2a and 3c of the Latin text given below. Some late medieval sources have these three verses only (Analecta Hymnica 47, notes to no. 5). The register of the edition lists "Kyrie Ignis divine" as a Kyrie of its own (Sehling 12, p. 412). The same list has the Magne Deus from Christmas to the second Sunday after Epiphany and again in Lent, the dominicale from Septuagesima to Lent and from Pentecost to the third Sunday after Trinity, and the paschale from Easter to Pentecost. From the third Sunday after Epiphany, and from the fourth after Trinity, it has "K: sine textu" (the Kyrie without the text), that is, without its tropes (Sehling 12, pp. 377–380).

Printed in full. One Latin troped Kyrie is printed whole in the corpus. At Hof the Holy Week Matins survived as "the evening office, formerly called Tenebrae", on the Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of Holy Week (§13.23.4). After the sermon the Kyrie was sung with three tropes, each sung by a master of the school, between the acclamations of the boys. Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592 (Sehling 11, p. 416):

> VII. Kyrie eleison cum tropis hoc modo, a praeceptoribus, pueris et toto choro subiicitur: Nota: Ludimoderator et cantor hos tropos canunt, singulis diebus uno ex reliquis collegis sibi adiuncto. Primo die rector, conrector, cantor; secundo die cantor, rector et tertius collega; tertio die quartus collega, cantor et rector.
> Puer: Kyrie eleison. Tropi: primus scholae collega: Qui prophetice promisisti: Ero mors tua, o mors, Domine, miserere! Christus Dominus factus est oboediens usque ad mortem.
> Puer: Kyrie eleison. Alius puer: Christe eleison. Secundus collega: Qui expansis in cruce manibus traxisti omnia ad te secula, Domine, miserere! ut supra.
> Puer: Kyrie eleison. Alius puer: Christe eleison. Tertius puer: Kyrie eleison. Tertius collega: Vita in ligno moritur, infernus ex morsu despoliatur. Domine miserere! Christus, ut supra.

VII. The Kyrie eleison with tropes is added in this manner, by the masters, the boys and the whole choir. Note: the schoolmaster and the cantor sing these tropes, one of the other colleagues being joined to them each day: on the first day the rector, the conrector [and] the cantor; on the second day the cantor, the rector and the third colleague; on the third day the fourth colleague, the cantor and the rector.

A boy: Kyrie eleison. The tropes. The first colleague of the school: Thou who didst prophetically promise, I will be thy death, O death [Hos 13:14]: Lord, have mercy! Christ the Lord became obedient unto death [Phil 2:8].

A boy: Kyrie eleison. Another boy: Christe eleison. The second colleague: Thou who, with thine hands stretched out upon the cross, hast drawn all the ages unto thee: Lord, have mercy! As above.

A boy: Kyrie eleison. Another boy: Christe eleison. A third boy: Kyrie eleison. The third colleague: Life dieth upon the tree, hell is despoiled by the bite. Lord, have mercy! Christ, as above.

The refrain is the verse that ends the psalms of the same office (Sehling 11, p. 416): "Christus factus est pro nobis oboediens usque ad mortem" (Christ became obedient for us unto death). The "bite" of the third trope answers the rest of the verse of Hosea in the Latin Bible: "O hell, I will be thy bite". The editor refers the form to the Handbuch der deutschen evangelischen Kirchenmusik (vol. I/1, no. 10; Sehling 11, p. 416, n. 20).

The Fons bonitatis and the Magne Deus, from outside the corpus. The orders name these two Kyries but nowhere print their Latin words. They are given here from the critical edition of the medieval Kyrie tropes, Analecta Hymnica Medii Aevi, vol. 47, by Clemens Blume and Henry Marriott Bannister (Leipzig, 1905), with its numbering of the verses: three Kyries (1a–c), three Christes (2a–c) and three Kyries (3a–c). Its text is made from medieval manuscripts and printed missals. It has not been compared with Lossius's Psalmodia or the other Lutheran chant books from which the schools sang. Unlike the other block quotations in this book, these two do not come from `eko.db` (Conventions).

Kyrie fons bonitatis (Analecta Hymnica 47, no. 5, pp. 53–56):

> 1a. Kyrie, fons bonitatis, pater ingenite, a quo bona cuncta procedunt, eleison.
> 1b. Kyrie, qui pati natum mundi pro crimine, ipsum ut salvaret, misisti, eleison.
> 1c. Kyrie, qui septiformis dans dona pneumatis, a quo caelum, terra replentur, eleison.
> 2a. Christe, unice Dei patris genite, quem de virgine nasciturum mundo mirifice sancti praedixerunt prophetae, eleison.
> 2b. Christe, hagie, caeli compos regiae, melos gloriae cui semper astans pro munere angelorum decantat apex, eleison.
> 2c. Christe, caelitus assis nostris precibus, pronis mentibus quem in terris devote colimus; ad te, pie Iesu, clamamus: eleison.
> 3a. Kyrie, spiritus alme, cohaerens patri natoque, unius usiae consistendo, flans ab utroque, eleison.
> 3b. Kyrie, qui baptizato in Iordanis unda Christo effulgens specie columbina apparuisti, eleison.
> 3c. Kyrie, ignis divine, pectora nostra succende, ut digni pariter proclamare possimus semper, eleison.

1a. Kyrie, fount of goodness, Father unbegotten, from whom all good things proceed, eleison.

1b. Kyrie, who didst send thy Son to suffer for the sin of the world, that he might save it, eleison.

1c. Kyrie, who givest the gifts of the sevenfold Spirit, by whom heaven [and] earth are filled, eleison.

2a. Christ, only-begotten of God the Father, whom the holy prophets wonderfully foretold to the world as to be born of a virgin, eleison.

2b. Christ, holy one, master of the palace of heaven, to whom the highest of the angels, standing ever by, singeth the song of glory as its office, eleison.

2c. Christ, be present from heaven at our prayers, whom with lowly minds we devoutly worship on earth; to thee, O gracious Jesu, we cry: eleison.

3a. Kyrie, gracious Spirit, at one with the Father and the Son, being of one substance, breathing from both, eleison.

3b. Kyrie, who, when Christ was baptized in the water of Jordan, didst appear shining in the form of a dove [Matt 3:16], eleison.

3c. Kyrie, O fire divine, kindle our hearts, that being worthy we may together proclaim evermore: eleison.

Analecta Hymnica reads pro munere (as its office) in 2b, where many sources have pro numine. The German "Kyrie, Gott Vater in Ewigkeit", sung to this melody (§8.6.4.1), does not translate the trope; it keeps only its order of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost.

Kyrie magnae Deus potentiae (Analecta Hymnica 47, no. 99, pp. 158–160):

> 1a. Kyrie, magnae Deus potentiae, liberator hominis, transgressoris mandati, eleison.
> 1b. Kyrie mirifice, qui natum de virgine misisti redimere, nos pie eleison.
> 1c. Kyrie magnifice, qui carnem pro ovibus perditis assumpsisti humanam, eleison.
> 2a. Christe, summi patris genite, nostra salus et vita, eleison.
> 2b. Christe, fili matris unice, veritas, pax et via, eleison.
> 2c. Christe, spes misericordiae, lux apparens in luce, eleison.
> 3a. Kyrie, cuius natus Emanuel hoc exarat, quod Adam primus homo corruit; eleison.
> 3b. Kyrie sanctissime, quem visa stella magi adorant muneribus oblatis, eleison.

> 3c. Kyrie, in Jordane qui baptizato rege apparens in specie columbae, eleison.

1a. Kyrie, God of great power, deliverer of man, the transgressor of the commandment, eleison.

1b. Kyrie, wonderful one, who didst send thy Son, born of a virgin, to redeem [us]: graciously have mercy upon us.

1c. Kyrie, glorious one, who for the lost sheep didst take upon thee human flesh, eleison.

2a. Christ, begotten of the Father most high, our salvation and life, eleison.

2b. Christ, only Son of [thy] mother, the truth, the peace and the way, eleison.

2c. Christ, hope of mercy, light appearing in light, eleison.

3a. Kyrie, whose Son Emmanuel ploweth up this that Adam, the first man, overthrew; eleison.

3b. Kyrie most holy, whom the wise men, when they had seen the star, worship with gifts offered [Matt 2:10–11], eleison.

3c. Kyrie, who in Jordan, when the King was baptized, appearedst in the form of a dove [Matt 3:16], eleison.

In 3a several sources have hoc restauravit, quod Adam primus homo perdidit (restored this that Adam, the first man, lost), and homo natus (born man) for cuius natus (whose Son). Analecta Hymnica prefers cuius natus because the last three verses seem to be addressed to the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost in turn. The trope's verses on the Nativity, the wise men and the baptism in Jordan fit the season that Hof and Nördlingen give it, from Christmas into the weeks after Epiphany (§8.6.4.3). Analecta Hymnica also notes that the trope's opening is recorded in the Bremen Missal printed at Strasbourg in 1511 (Analecta Hymnica 47, p. 160).

8.6.5 The Kyrie and Gloria in one hymn: "Allein Gott"

In East Frisia the German Kyrie and Gloria together were sung "as it is sung in the song Allein Gott in der Höh sei Ehr". Ostfriesland, Kirchenordnung, 1535 (Sehling 7/1, p. 376):

> Tom ersten schal gesungen werden eyn edder twee duedsche psalmen. Darna synge man dat Kyrieleyson sampt den Gloria in excelsis to duedsche, alze dat gesungen wort in dem gesenge Alleyn Godt in der hoge sy eer.

First shall be sung one or two German psalms. Thereafter let the Kyrie eleison together with the Gloria in excelsis be sung in German, as it is sung in the song "All Glory Be to God on High."

8.6.6 How fixed the Kyrie was

The Kyrie was fixed by grade. Its text hardly changed. Its melody changed with the season and the rank of the day, where a school could sing the grades. In the villages there was one German Kyrie, or three at most, rotated by season. No order found fits the Kyrie to the gospel of the day. It is the most calendar-bound and least topical of the sung ordinaries.

8.7 The Gloria: "Allein Gott in der Höh" and "All Ehr und Lob"

Two German Gloria hymns run through the orders:

- Nikolaus Decius's "Allein Gott in der Höh sei Ehr", which reached the north first in Low German ("Allene Gade in der hoge sy ere").
- Luther's rhymed Et in terra, "All Ehr und Lob soll Gottes sein".

The priest's Latin or German intonation ("Gloria in excelsis Deo", "Ehre sei Gott in der Höhe") usually stayed. The hymn was sung for, or together with, the choir's Et in terra.

Sehling's editors take "Allein Gott" for Decius's German of the Gloria in excelsis with the Laudamus (Sehling 11, p. 747; 13, p. 600). The Hildesheim editor dates it to Braunschweig in 1522. The text, the editor says, was first printed in Joachim Slüter's Rostock songbook of 1525, and the melody first in Valentin Schumann's Leipzig songbook of 1539. In Slüter's book of 1531 the hymn begins "Allene Godt yn der höge sy eer" (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 853, n. 11). The editors of the Westphalian volumes call Decius

"Hovesch" (Sehling 21, p. 352, n. 7; 22, p. 566, n. 5). Fifty-nine orders name the hymn, in Low German and in High, from the Lippe Mass of about 1525–1538 into the seventeenth century. They are listed by use in §8.7.6. The Low German text is printed whole in the Lippe Mass (§8.7.3), and again at Neuenrade in 1564 (§8.7.4).

The Gloria in the order of the Mass is treated in Chapter 2, §2.7.

8.7.1 The German hymn inside the Latin Gloria

The Bugenhagen orders of Wolfenbüttel (1543) and Hildesheim (1544) interpolate the whole of "Allein Gott" into the Latin Gloria. The priest intones. The school choir sings the first line of the Latin. The whole church sings "Allein Gott" through. Then the scholars and the organ go on with Laudamus te to the end. Wolfenbüttel, Kirchenordnung, 1543 (Sehling 6/1, p. 55):

> Na dem Kyrie singet de prester: Gloria in excelsis Deo. Dat scholerchor antwerdet und singet: Et in terra pax, hominibus bona voluntas, nicht mehr. Balde singet de ganze kercke: Alleine Got in der höged sy ehr etc. vul uth. Darna singen de scholer und orgeln vordan: Laudamus te, benedicimus te etc. vul uth.

After the Kyrie the priest singeth: Gloria in excelsis Deo. The scholars' choir answereth and singeth: Et in terra pax, hominibus bona voluntas, no more. Straightway the whole church singeth "All Glory Be to God on High," etc., fully through. Thereafter the scholars and the organs sing on: Laudamus te, benedicimus te, etc., fully through.

The Hildesheim city order of 1544 has the same rubric almost word for word (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 852). So has the Schleswig-Holstein order of 1542, for Sundays and feasts, with "Allene Godt yn der höge sy eer" sung "without break to the end, without organ-playing" (Sehling 23, p. 146; §9.3). The Osnabrück city order puts "Allein Gott" straight after the intonation, and then the Latin Gloria "to the end". Osnabrück (city), Kirchenordnung, 1543 (Sehling 7/1, p. 258):

> Gloria in excelsis, darup gesungen Allene Gott in der höhe sy ehr, darna dat latineschen Gloria in excelsis, verfolget bet tom ende.

Gloria in excelsis; thereupon is sung "All Glory Be to God on High"; thereafter the Latin Gloria in excelsis, followed through to the end.

8.7.2 Latin one Sunday, German the next

Where a school sang the Latin, many orders alternated it with the German hymn so that the people would not lose their part. The Prussian order says so outright. Prussia, Kirchenordnung und Ceremonien, 1568 (Sehling 4, p. 81):

> Darauf singet der priester mit gebürlicher reverenz: Gloria in excelsis deo, der chor einen sonntag um den andern: Et in terra pax, oder: Allein gott in der höhe sei ehre, denn man muss die deutschen psalmen auch in ubung behalten und dem gemeinen haufen auch raum geben, das sie ihre andacht mit solchen geistlichen liedern uben.

Thereupon the priest singeth with due reverence Gloria in excelsis Deo; the choir, one Sunday after the other, Et in terra pax, or "All Glory Be to God on High." For the German psalms must also be kept in use, and room be given to the common multitude also, that they may exercise their devotion with such spiritual songs.

Lüneburg, Reformatio coenobiorum, 1555, for the convents (Sehling 6/1, p. 614):

> In der messe soll gesungen werden introitus, Kyrieleison, Gloria in excelsis et in terra pax oder Allein Gott in der hohe einen Sontag umb den anderen.

In the Mass shall be sung the introit, Kyrie eleison, Gloria in excelsis et in terra pax, or "All Glory Be to God on High," one Sunday after the other.

At Harzgerode in Anhalt the Latin Gloria and Et in terra dominicale alternated with the German on ordinary Sundays. At Christmas the old verses Dies est laetitiae were sung into it in Latin and German. Harzgerode, Kirchenordnunge, 1534 (?) (Sehling 2, p. 586):

> Volgende das Kyrie eleison auf die grosse feste mit dem Gloria in excelsis und Et in terra auf der orgel und chor, und zu weinachten mag man nach alten gebrauchen die vers dies est laeticie cum sequentibus latine und deutsch mit > dreinsingen. Aber an die gemein sontag sol man umb einander einen sontag das latinsche gloria und Et in terra dominicale, den a[ndern] […].

Following, the Kyrie eleison on the great feasts, with the Gloria in excelsis and Et in terra, upon the organ and by the choir; and at Christmas one may, after old custom, sing in among them the verses Dies est laetitiae with those following, in Latin and German. But on the common Sundays one shall sing by turns, one Sunday the Latin Gloria and the Et in terra dominicale, the other [the German] […].

Pomerania allowed the laity "Allein Gott" after the choir's Et in terra. When that grew too long, one or other was dropped by turns, and in Lent the Gloria might be left out altogether. Pomerania, Kirchenordnung, 1542 (Sehling 4, p. 356):

> die chor singe darup dat et in terra, wenn dat ut is, lat me die leien singen, allein godt in der hoge si ehr; wenn idt will to lange werden, so lat me under tiden dat latinische, unter tiden dat düdesche na, in der vasten mach me dat gloria wol gar ute laten.

The choir singeth thereupon the Et in terra; when that is out, let the laity sing "All Glory Be to God on High." When it will grow too long, let the Latin be left off at times, and the German at times; in Lent the Gloria may well be left out altogether.

The Pomeranian Agenda of 1569 offers both German Glorias. Pomerania, Agenda, 1569 (Sehling 4, p. 437):

> Et in terra pax, latin edder düdisch: Allene godt in der högede si ehre etc., Alle ehre unde pris schal gades sin, etc.

Et in terra pax, in Latin or German: "All Glory Be to God on High," etc., "All Glory Be to God Alone," etc.

8.7.3 Teaching the people to sing it

Oldenburg placed the sexton and some scholars among the congregation, below the choir. There they sang the German Et in terra and other German hymns in alternation with the upper choir, so that the people might learn tune and words. Oldenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1573 (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 1089):

> lateinisch für sich selbst, zu zeiten deudsch mit dem volk oder auch umbgewechselt singen. Darzu denn vonnöten, das der opperman oder küster sampt etlichen schülern an einem gewissen ort bey der gemein unter dem chor stehet und das deudsche Et in terra, wie auch andere deudsche geistliche heder mit umbwechselung der vers und gesetz des öbern chors singen, damit das volk des gesangs der melodey und der wörter je lenger je mehr gewohne und lust und liebe darzu gewinne.

[the scholars shall sing the Et in terra pax, at times] in Latin by themselves, at times in German with the people, or else by turns. For which it is needful that the sexton or clerk, with some scholars, stand at a set place by the congregation beneath the choir, and sing the German Et in terra, as also other German spiritual songs, changing verses and stanzas with the upper choir, that the people may more and more grow used to the song, the melody and the words, and win pleasure and love thereto.

The Brenz order for Schwäbisch Hall had hoped for this from the start. Schwäbisch Hall, Kirchenordnung, 1527 (Sehling 17/1, p. 49):

> Nach dem Kirieleyson dient wol das lobgesang Gottes, Gloria in excelsis, nach gelegenhait der zeyt und alter gewonhait, were auch gut zubesserung der kirchen, wie alle ding geschehen sollen in der gemein versamlung, das mit der Zeyt das volck uff teutsch das lobgesang, von engeln gesungen, et in terra pax hominibus und psalmen singen lernt.

After the Kyrie eleison the song of praise to God, Gloria in excelsis, serveth well, according to the occasion of the season and the old custom. It were also good for the edifying of the church, as all things should be done in the common assembly, that the people should in time learn to sing in German the song of praise sung by the angels, et in terra pax hominibus, and psalms.

Bugenhagen asked for "fine short German notes" for a German Gloria, so that children, maids and women could sing it together. Braunschweig, Kirchenordnung, 1528 (Sehling 6/1, pp. 438–439):

> Wil me övers Gloria in excelsis düdesch underwilen singen, besundergen dar neyne schölere synt, so schicke me ock fine korte düdesche noten darto, dat kyndere, megede unde wyve […] konen schicklick unde eyntrechtichlick mitsingen unde nicht alleyne de, de des latinischen sanges gewanet synt.

But if one will at times sing the Gloria in excelsis in German, especially where there are no scholars, let fine short German notes also be provided for it, that children, maids and wives […] may sing along seemly and with one accord, and not only those that are used to the Latin singing.

An early Low German Mass from Lippe prints "Allene Gade in der hoge" as the Gloria then "commonly" sung, all four stanzas, after a prose German Gloria. Lippe, Deutsche Messe [c. 1525–1538] (Sehling 22, p. 566):

> ghemeynlick synget me nu düt nabescreven Gloria in excelsis […] Gloria in excelsis Deo
>
> Allene Gade in der hoge sy ere unde danck vor syne gnade, Darumme, dat nu unde nümmermer uns roren kan eyn schade. Eyn walgeval Godt an uns hadt, nu ys grot frede ane underlath, alle veide heyfft nu eyn ende.
>
> Wy laven, prysen, anbeden dick, vor dyne ere wy dancken, dat du, Godt vader, ewychlick regerest an alle wanckelen. Gantz ungemeten ys dyne macht, vort schut, wat dyn wylle he ghedacht, wol uns, des fynen heren.
>
> O Jhesu Christ, soene eyngebaren dynes hemmelschen vaders, vorsoner der, dede weren vorlaren, du styller unses haders. Lam Gades, hilge here und Godt, nym an de bede van unser nodt, vorbarme dy unser amen.
> O hillige geist, du groteste gudt, du alder heylsameste troster, vor düvels ghewalt vordan behode, de Jhesus Christus vorlosede. Dorch grote marter unde bytteren doet affwende al unsen jamer und nodt, dar wy uns tho vorlaten.

Commonly this Gloria in excelsis written hereafter is now sung […]. Gloria in excelsis Deo:

To God alone on high be glory, and thanks for his grace; for that now and nevermore can any harm touch us. God hath a good pleasure in us; now is great peace without ceasing; all strife hath now an end.

We laud, praise and worship thee; for thy glory we give thanks, that thou, God the Father, reignest everlastingly without any wavering. Wholly without measure is thy might; forthwith is done what thy will hath purposed. Well is us of so fine a Lord!

O Jesu Christ, only-begotten Son of thy heavenly Father, reconciler of them that were lost, thou stiller of our strife: Lamb of God, holy Lord and God, receive the prayer of our need, have mercy upon us. Amen.

O Holy Ghost, thou greatest good, thou most healing Comforter of all, keep henceforth from the devil's power them whom Jesus Christ redeemed through great torment and bitter death. Turn away all our misery and need; thereto we trust ourselves.

Neuenrade prints the same four stanzas in 1564, with "Erbarm dick unser armen" (have mercy upon us poor ones) for Lippe's "vorbarme dy unser amen" (Sehling 22, p. 528).

8.7.4 Intonation and answer

In Wittgenstein the priest intoned in German and the people answered with Decius's hymn. Wittgenstein, Kirchenordnung, 1563 (Sehling 22, p. 102):

> Preiß sey Gott in der höhe. Antwortet der chor oder das volck: Allein Gott in der hohe sey ehr und danck vor seine gnade etc.

"Praise be to God on high." The choir or the people answereth: "All Glory Be to God on High," etc.

At Ritzebüttel the people took up the priest's Low German intonation and sang it to the end. Ritzebüttel, Kirchenordnung, 1556 (Sehling 5, p. 557):

> Hirna singet der prester: Ere si gode in der hogede; dat volk singet vordan und vulendet. Alleine godt in der hogede si ehre, und dank vor sine gnade etc.

Hereafter the priest singeth: "Glory be to God on high"; the people sing on and finish it: "All Glory Be to God on High," etc.

Neuenrade gave the choir three German answers to the priest. Neuenrade, Kirchenordnung, 1564 (Sehling 22, p. 518):

> De Prester: Herlicheit sy Gode in der hüge. Dat Chor: Sin torn up erden etc. oder: Und frede up erden, oder: Allene Gode in der hüge sy ehr, Wie dith alles drunden mit synen noten vortekent is.

The priest: "Glory be to God on high." The choir: "His wrath on earth," etc., or "And peace on earth," or "All Glory Be to God on High," as all this is set down below with its notes.

The three are printed further on (Sehling 22, pp. 527–528):

- a rhymed Et in terra that begins "Sin torn up erden hebb ein end, / Sin fred und gnad sick tho uns wend" (His wrath on earth hath an end, his peace and grace turn unto us), whose lines agree with those of "All Ehr und Lob";
- a German Gloria in prose;
- Decius's hymn in all four stanzas, headed "Ein ander" (another).

Luther's "All Ehr und Lob" was the other answer. In Nördlingen two choirs sang it stanza by stanza until the organ was ready. Nördlingen, Kirchenordnung of Kaspar Löner, 1544 (Sehling 12, p. 312):

> und die zwen chore solange, bis die orgel mecht angericht werden, das Et in terra auch teusch, wie doctor Martin Luther in die noten gebracht hat, ein gesetze umb das ander singen.

and the two choirs, until the organ might be made ready, [shall] sing the Et in terra also in German, as Doctor Martin Luther hath set it to the notes, one stanza after the other.

Naumburg, Kirchen-Ordnung for St Wenzel, 1537/1538 (Sehling 2, p. 78), for feast days:

> Darauf singet der priester das Gloria in excelsis deutsch, wie volget. Ehr sei got, in der hohe. Antiphona angelorum. All ehr und lob sol gottes sein, er ist und heist der höchst allein.

Thereupon the priest singeth the Gloria in excelsis in German, as followeth: "Glory be to God on high." The antiphon of the angels: "All honour and praise shall be God's; he is, and is called, the Highest alone."

Hof also marks "All Ehr und Lob" as sung "loco Et in terra" at Pentecost (§8.6.4) and at Christmas, Epiphany and the Purification.

8.7.5 Left out: Advent, Lent, winter

The Gloria was the ordinary most easily dropped. Nördlingen left it out in Advent because the hymns after the epistle were long. Nördlingen, Ordnung der ceremonien at St George's, 1555 (Sehling 12, p. 319):

> Aber den Advent uber wird das Gloria in excelsis sampt dem Et in terra ausgelassen, von wegen der langen geseng nach der epistel.

But through Advent the Gloria in excelsis together with the Et in terra is left out, by reason of the long songs after the epistle.

At Meiningen it was left out in winter, "when it will grow too long". Meiningen, Gottesdienst-Ordnungen, 1562/1566 (Sehling 2, p. 340):

> hebt das ambt an mit dem Veni sancte spiritus deutsch, darauf singt man einen psalm, das kyrie eleison deutsch, darauf das gloria (welchs man im winter da es zu lang werden will, auslesst) und das deutsch: Et in terra: Allein gott in der höhe sei ehr etc.

[he] beginneth the office with the Veni sancte Spiritus in German; thereupon is sung a psalm, the Kyrie eleison in German, thereupon the Gloria (which is left out in winter, when it will grow too long), and the German Et in terra, "All Glory Be to God on High," etc.

Where the Gloria was dropped, the German hymn went with it: in Advent at Nördlingen, in Lent in Pomerania (§8.7.2), and in winter at Meiningen. Elsewhere the Gloria kept its place in Advent, with a melody of its own. Pfalz-Zweibrücken lists among the Latin chants of its choir "Kyrie in adventu domini. Gloria in excelsis Deo" (Sehling 18, p. 255). The Oldenburg editor points to the Gloria that Lossius's Psalmodia sets with the Advent Kyrie (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 1088, n. 9). No order names a season for "Allein Gott" itself.

8.7.6 How fixed the Gloria was

The Gloria slot was fixed. When a hymn was sung, it was nearly always "Allein Gott in der Höh", with "All Ehr und Lob" as the alternative. The variation was not in which hymn was sung. It was in whether the German hymn replaced the Latin, alternated with it Sunday by Sunday, was inserted into it, or was left out for length or season.

The orders that name "Allein Gott". Fifty-two orders name it in the Gloria slot, and seven more name it only elsewhere. LG marks the Low German text. Each order is listed once, under its chief use, with the volume and page in Sehling.

How "Allein Gott" is sung	Orders
Inside the Latin Gloria, between Et in terra pax and Laudamus te	Schleswig-Holstein 1542, LG (23, p. 146); Wolfenbüttel 1543, LG (6/1, p. 55); Hildesheim 1544, LG (7/2.1, p. 852)
With the Latin Gloria kept as well	Lippe [1542], LG, "latin und dudesch" (21, p. 352); Osnabrück (city) 1543, LG, then the Latin "to the end" (7/1, p. 258); Pomerania 1542, LG, after the choir's Et in terra (4, p. 356); Cochstedt 1556, after the Latin Et in terra pax (2, p. 484); Lüneburg 1575, on its day of deliverance (6/1, p. 663)
For the Et in terra, after the intonation	Lippe [c. 1525–1538], LG (22, p. 566); Hadeln 1526, LG (5, p. 468); Ostfriesland 1535, LG, as the Kyrie and Gloria in one (7/1, p. 376; §8.6.5); Osnabrück (Stift) 1543, LG (7/1, p. 224); Bergedorf 1544, LG (5, p. 387); Mecklenburg 1545, LG (5, p. 151); Stralsund 1555, LG (4, p. 551); Ritzebüttel 1556, LG (5, p. 557); Waldeck 1556 (9, p. 247); Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557 (18, p. 188); Danzig 1557, in Sehling's summary (4, p. 168); Steuerwald and Peine 1561 (7/2.1, p. 781); Wittgenstein 1563 (22, p. 102); Neuenrade 1564, LG, one of three answers (22, p. 518); Thüngen 1564, or another psalm (11, p. 735); the Henneberg parishes of Belrieth and Einhausen, Goldlauter, Meiningen, Niederlauer, Obermaßfeld, and Sulzfeld and Klein-Bardorf, 1566 (2, pp. 329, 332, 340, 341, 343, 352); Aschersleben 1575, on the apostles' days (2, p. 480); Schweinfurt 1576 (11, p. 646); Hoya 1581 (6/2, p. 1148); Sensburg 1581 (4, p. 151); Grubenhagen 1583 (6/2, p. 1104); Soest 1609, at the middle sermons (22, p. 488); Osnabrück 1618 (7/1, p. 268); Stade c. 1620/22 (7/1, p. 56); Bischofswerda, in a letter of 1676, after a Kyrie in chant (2, p. 106)
Either it or the Latin Et in terra	Calenberg-Göttingen 1542, "anstat des Et in terra" (6/2, p. 793); Mecklenburg 1552, in the towns (5, p. 198); Amberg 1555/1557 (13, p. 290); Rostock c. 1560 (5, p. 288); Pomerania 1569, LG, or "All Ehr und Lob" (4, p. 437); Kurland 1570 (5, p. 88); Lippe 1571, in the towns (21, p. 387); the Mecklenburg convents 1572 (5, p. 256)
One Sunday the Latin, the next the German	the Lüneburg convents 1555 (6/1, p. 614); Prussia 1568 (4, p. 81)
In the villages	Lüneburg 1564 (6/1, p. 553); Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel 1569 (6/1, p. 155); Oldenburg 1573 (7/2.1, p. 1112); Verden 1606 (7/1, p. 164). Several of the orders above give it to their villages too: Pomerania 1542 (4, p. 358), Mecklenburg 1552 (5, p. 202), Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557 (18, p. 212), Prussia 1568 (4, p. 83), Pomerania 1569 (4, p. 440) and Lippe 1571 (21, p. 396)

Outside the Gloria. The hymn was also sung:

- in a service without communion, as one of the German psalms before the collect: Mecklenburg 1552 (5, p. 199), Amberg 1555/1557 (13, p. 292), Pfalz-Zweibrücken 1557 (18, p. 209) and Verden 1606 (7/1, p. 162). Lippe [1542] calls it "the psalm Alleine Gott yn der hogede" (21, p. 352);
- between the epistle and the gospel: Sayn 1590 (19/1, p. 412);
- after the sermon: at Northeim 1539, while the preacher came down and made ready the hosts and the cup (6/2, p. 926); at Osnabrück 1543, after the holy-day catechism sermon for the servants (7/1, p. 250); and at Lüneburg 1575, before and after the sermon on its day of deliverance (6/1, pp. 662–663);
- at Christmas, to close the middle sermon of the first day with thanks for the incarnation: Tangermünde 1603 (3, p. 339);
- after a baptism, or "Sei Lob und Ehr": Berlin 1574 (3, p. 167), Salzwedel 1579, Old Town and New Town (3, pp. 276, 291), and Perleberg 1581 (3, p. 256);

- to close a confirmation, or "Es woll uns Gott genädig sein": Pomerania 1569 (4, p. 445).

Kurland put it sixth, as "the Gloria", in the list of hymns that the pastors of the non-German country people were to teach them, after the five chief parts of the catechism: "6. Das gloria. Allein gott in der höhe sei ehr" (Sehling 5, p. 91).

8.8 Between the epistle and the gospel

This is the slot of the gradual, alleluia, tract and sequence. It is the one where German hymns were first put into the Mass (Luther, Formula missae: "iuxta gradualia"), and it is by far the most variable. Here the orders let the hymn change with the season, the feast and sometimes the gospel of the Sunday. Most per-Sunday hymn tables in the corpus are tables for this slot. This is the slot that later came to be called the Hauptlied or Graduallied, though neither word occurs in the corpus (see the Introduction, The hymn database).

8.8.1 The rule: a pure sequence, or a German psalm

The standard formula names the sequence first and "a German psalm" as the alternative. The choice depends on the school, the season, the length of the service, and whether the sequence is "pure". Saxony (Albertine), Kirchenordnung, 1539 (Sehling 1, p. 271):

> darauf die epistel gegen dem volk deudsch, darnach ein sequenz, oder deudschen psalm, oder andern geistlichen gesang, wie solches ein jede zeit erfordert.

thereupon the epistle in German toward the people; thereafter a sequence, or a German psalm, or another spiritual song, as every season requireth.

Kurpfalz, provisional Kirchenordnung, 1546 (Sehling 14, p. 96):

> so sing alsdann der chor das alleluia mit ainem sequentz, der do reyne und der heyligen geschrift nit entgegen ist. Wo solcher nit verhanden, werdt der sequentz underlassen oder mag gesungen werden ein tractus als dieser: Domine, non secundum peccata nostra facias nobis etc.

then let the choir sing the alleluia with a sequence that is pure and not contrary to holy Scripture. Where such is not at hand, let the sequence be left off; or a tract may be sung, as this: Domine, non secundum peccata nostra facias nobis, etc.

The later northern orders name the reason for having both. The Latin trains the scholars and the German lets the congregation sing. Wolfenbüttel, Kirchenordnung, 1569 (Sehling 6/1, p. 143):

> Nach der epistel singet man einen sequenz oder alleluja oder tractum, so rein sein, damit die schüler auch im lateinischen gesang geübet, oder auß D. Luthers gesangbuch ein deutscher psalm, auf das die christliche gemein mitsingen, auch ihr gottselige ubung haben möchte.

After the epistle a sequence or alleluia or tract is sung, such as are pure, that the scholars also may be exercised in the Latin song; or out of Doctor Luther's songbook a German psalm, that the Christian congregation may sing along and also have its godly exercise.

This sentence comes from the Lüneburg order of 1564 and passed into Oldenburg (1573). The Northeim order insists the choice is free. Northeim, Kirchenordnung, 1539 (Sehling 6/2, p. 925):

> Nach der epistelen mag auch der chor das haleluja und sequenz, wenn der text rein und die zeit nicht zu kurz ist, singen odder aber anstat des haleluja und sequenz einen psalm mit der ganzen gemeine. Denn es müssen solche dinge frey und keinem gesetz unterworfen sein.

After the epistle the choir may also sing the alleluia and sequence, when the text is pure and the time not too short; or else, in the stead of the alleluia and sequence, a psalm with the whole congregation. For such things must be free and subject to no law.

Honterus's reformation of Kronstadt in Transylvania uses the same test: German songs, or the customary chants, "if they be not repugnant to Scripture". Kronstadt, Honterus, Reformationsbüchlein, 1543, Latin text (Sehling 24, p. 183):

> consuetis cantionibus de tempore utimur neque in iis, quae primitiva servavit ecclesia, quicquam mutuamus, nisi quod post epistolam interdum adhibemus cantiones Germanicas, interdum vero alias consuetas, si non repugnent scripturae.

We use the customary songs of the season, and in those things which the primitive church kept we change nothing; save that after the epistle we sometimes use German songs, and sometimes other customary ones, if they be not repugnant to the Scriptures.

8.8.2 The sequences cut back to the chief feasts

Most of the medieval sequences were dropped. The northern orders keep only three, for the three high feasts of Christ, and always "with its German song". Schleswig-Holstein, Kirchenordnung, 1542 (Sehling 23, p. 90):

> darna vor dat Gradual einen düdesschen Psalm, uth der Schrifft genamen, edder ock ein Gradual, dat men twe verse hefft. De Sequentien unde prosen scholen alle underlaten unde nicht gesungen werden, uthgenamen yn dren groten Festen Christi, alse van Wynachten wente tho Lichtmissen: Grates nunc omnes, mit synem düdeschen gesange.

thereafter, for the gradual, a German psalm taken out of Scripture, or else a gradual that hath two verses. The sequences and prosae shall all be left off and not sung, save on the three great feasts of Christ: as from Christmas unto Candlemas, Grates nunc omnes, with its German song.

The Wolfenbüttel order of 1543 and the Hildesheim city order of 1544 carry the same rule, naming the three German songs: "Gelobet seist du" with Grates nunc omnes, "Christ lag in Todesbanden" with Victimae paschali, and "Nun bitten wir" with Veni sancte Spiritus.

Herford gives the reason: the old sequences were godless, and God will be honoured only according to his word. Herford, Kirchenordnung, 1532 (Sehling 21, pp. 176–177):

> Me hefft in vor tyden in der misse gesungen Gotlose Sequentie sunder jenige beschedenheit. Solkes wille wy nicht mer holden, so wy nu uth Gades gnaden weten, dat God na sinem worde wil geeret sin, und is alle Gadesdenst nichtes werth, de nicht na sinem worde geschüd, Math. 15. So wil wy van Winachten an wente tho Paschen singen de Sequentie Grates nunc etc. und dartüsschen Gelovet sistu, Jhesu Christ und Danck segge wy alle etc., alle mael 2 versch, thom lesten Huic oportet etc.

In former times godless sequences were sung in the Mass without any discretion. Such we will no more keep, since we now know by God's grace that God will be honoured according to his word, and all service of God is worth nothing that is not done according to his word (Matthew 15). So from Christmas unto Easter we will sing the sequence Grates nunc, etc., and between, "We Praise You, Jesus, at Your Birth," and "Thanks say we all," etc., two verses each time, and at the last Huic oportet, etc.

> Paschen wente tho Pinxsten schal me singen de Sequentie Victime Paschali etc., darup Christ lach in dodes banden Offt Christ ys erstanden etc. In dem Pinxsten overst schal me singen de sequentie Veni sancte spiritus etc. und darup na twen verschen Nu bidde wy den Hilgen gest, up der hilgen drevoldicheit dach den Introitum Benedicta und Sequentia Benedicta sit sancta, darup Nu bidde wy den Hilgen geist, so me wil. Doch me schal wenich singen van langen Sequentien.

From Easter unto Pentecost shall be sung the sequence Victimae paschali, etc., thereupon "Christ Jesus Lay in Death's Strong Bands," or "Christ Is Arisen," etc. But at Pentecost shall be sung the sequence Veni sancte Spiritus, etc., and thereupon, after every two verses, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray." On the day of the Holy Trinity, the introit Benedicta and the sequence Benedicta sit sancta, thereupon "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," if one will. Yet little shall be sung of long sequences.

Wittenberg (1533) is more generous, but it names one sequence it will not have: the "lousy and monkish" sequence of St John the Baptist. Wittenberg, Kirchenordnung, 1533 (Sehling 1, p. 704):

> Auf nativitatis Johannis den sequenz psallite regi nostro etc. Denn den lausigen und monichischen sequenz Sancti Johannis Christi präconis etc. und dergleichen wollen wir nicht haben. Den sequenz de Maria Magdalena laus tibi Christe mag man wol ein mal oder zwei im jar singen auf einen sontag, wen man will. Aber den sequenz de sancta trinitate so oft man will.

On the Nativity of John, the sequence Psallite regi nostro, etc. For the lousy and monkish sequence Sancti Johannis Christi praeconis, etc., and the like, we will not have. The sequence of Mary Magdalene, Laus tibi Christe, may be sung once or twice in the year upon a Sunday, when one will. But the sequence of the Holy Trinity as oft as one will.

The Brandenburg-Ansbach Auctuarium, an Interim order, lists the "pure and good" sequences of the chief feasts. On other days it puts a German psalm-hymn in the place of an impure gradual or alleluia. For the Purification its "sequence" is already Luther's German "Mit Fried und Freud". Brandenburg-Ansbach, Auctuarium, 1548 (Interim order; Sehling 11, p. 329):

> Die fürnembsten fest, haben ir raine und gute sequenz. Bei den soll man bleiben, als nemblich: Nativitatis Domini: Grates nunc omnes reddamus Domino. Purificationis: Mit frid und freud ich far dahin. Pascha: Victime paschali laudes. De Trinitate: Benedicta semper sancta sit Trinitas. De Spiritu Sancto: Veni, Sancte Spiritus, oder Sancti Spiritus adsit nobis gratia. An den andern feirtagen und festen, die nit raine oder keine sequenz haben, sol man das gradual oder Alleluia singen. Wo aber die nit rain weren, als gemainlich de sanctis, an dero stat sing man dieser psalm einen: Ein feste burg ist unser Gott etc. Wer Gott nit mit uns diese zeit etc. Wol dem, der in Gottes forcht steht etc. Aus tiefer not etc. Mensch, wilt du leben seliglich etc. Dan mag auch die gradualia und alleluia abwechseln an sontagen und gemelter psalmen ainen an dero stat singen von des volks wegen.

The chiefest feasts have their pure and good sequences. By these one shall abide, namely: the Nativity of the Lord, Grates nunc omnes reddamus Domino; the Purification, "In Peace and Joy I Now Depart"; Easter, Victimae paschali laudes; of the Trinity, Benedicta semper sancta sit Trinitas; of the Holy Ghost, Veni, Sancte Spiritus, or Sancti Spiritus adsit nobis gratia. On the other holy days and feasts, that have no pure sequences or none, the gradual or alleluia shall be sung. But where these were not pure, as commonly of the saints, let one of these psalms be sung in their stead: "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," etc.; "If God Had Not Been on Our Side," etc.; "Happy the Man Who Feareth God," etc.; "From Depths of Woe I Cry to Thee," etc.; "Wilt Thou, O Man, Live Happily," etc. Then also on Sundays the graduals and alleluias may be changed about, and one of the said psalms sung in their stead, for the people's sake.

8.8.3 Farced sequences: Latin verses and German stanzas by turns

At the three high feasts the northern and Saxon orders sang the Latin sequence with the stanzas of a German Leise sung between its verses, by the people or the whole church. The pairs are always the same:

Season	Latin sequence	German hymn sung between
Christmas to Candlemas	Grates nunc omnes	"Gelobet seist du, Jesu Christ" (at Herford also "Dank sagen wir alle")
Easter to Ascension or Pentecost	Victimae paschali	"Christ lag in Todesbanden" or "Christ ist erstanden"
Pentecost	Veni sancte Spiritus	"Nun bitten wir den heiligen Geist"
Trinity (some orders)	Benedicta semper sit Trinitas	"Nun bitten wir" (Herford) or "Gott der Vater wohn uns bei" (Anhalt)

The Hamburg order of 1529 gives the scheme exactly. Grates is sung three times, each time followed by two German stanzas. Huic oportet is followed by the last stanza. At Easter a stanza of "Christ lag" comes after every verse of Victimae. At Pentecost a German stanza of "Nun bitten" comes after every two Latin verses of Veni sancte. Hamburg, Kirchenordnung, 1529 (Sehling 5, p. 530):

> Van winachten bet up purificationis schalme singen de sequentie grates nunc omnes etc. und mit sulker wise dar twischen dat leed: Gelavet sistu Jesu Christ etc. Ersten schalme singen Grates, dar up twe dudesche versche, noch eins Grates und twe ander dudesche versche, ock tom drudden mal Grates und twe ander dudesche versche. Tom lesten Huic oportet mit dem lesten dudeschen versche. Van paschen bet up pinxsten schallme singen de snquentie Victime pascali, also dat me na allen verschen singe ock ein versch van dem dudeschen lede Christ lach in dodes banden, dat leed averst Christ is uperstanden, schal me singen na wontliker wise, wen me de predike anhevet. In pinxsten schalme singen de sequentie Veni sancte spiritus und na twen latinschen verschen ein dudesch versch van dem lede: Nu bidde wi den hilligen geest etc.

From Christmas unto the Purification shall be sung the sequence Grates nunc omnes, etc., and after this manner, between, the song "We Praise You, Jesus, at Your Birth," etc. First Grates shall be sung, thereupon two German verses; once more Grates and two other German verses; also the third time Grates and two other German verses. At the last Huic oportet, with the last German verse. From Easter unto Pentecost shall be sung the sequence Victimae paschali, so that after every verse one also sing a verse of the German song "Christ Jesus Lay in Death's Strong Bands." But the song "Christ Is Arisen" shall be sung after the accustomed manner when the sermon is begun. At Pentecost shall be sung the sequence Veni sancte Spiritus, and after every two Latin verses a German verse of the song "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc.

The Prussian order of 1568 has the same scheme and adds Trinity. The Trinity sequence is to alternate Sunday by Sunday with a German psalm, "that the German songs may remain in the church". Prussia, Kirchenordnung und Ceremonien, 1568 (Sehling 4, p. 81):

> Nach der epistel singet man die festtage die sequenzen, wo die rein sind, als weihnachten: Grates nunc omnes, und wenn das einmal gesungen, darauf mit der gemeine die zwei ersten verse im: Gelobet seist du, Jesu Christ etc., wenn es zum andern mal gesungen, abermals zwe versen im selbigen psalmen. Wenn nu darauf gesungen ist: Huic oportet, ut canamus cum angelis sollen darauf folgen die drei letzten vers und soll das von weihnachten gehalten werden bis auf Purificationis. Ostern singet man den sequenz: Victimae paschali laudes, und darunter: Christ lag in todesbanden, vers um vers. In pfingsten singet man: Veni sancte spiritus et emitte coelitus, etc. und auf zwen lateinische vers allezeit einen deutschen aus dem schönen gesang: Nu bitten wir den heilgen geist etc. Trinitatis singet man den sequenz: Benedicta semper sit trinitas, und mag man denselbigen den folgenden sonntag, einen um den andern, mit einem deutschen psalm abwechseln, dass man einen sonntag gemelten sequenz, den andern einen deutschen psalm singet, damit die deutschen geseng in der kirchen bleiben.

After the epistle, on the feast days, the sequences are sung where they are pure: as at Christmas, Grates nunc omnes; and when that hath been sung once, thereupon with the congregation the two first verses of "We Praise You, Jesus, at Your Birth," etc.; when it is sung the second time, again two verses of the same psalm. When Huic oportet, ut canamus cum angelis hath then been sung, the three last verses shall follow; and this shall be kept from Christmas unto the Purification. At Easter the sequence Victimae paschali laudes is sung, and among it "Christ Jesus Lay in Death's Strong Bands," verse by verse. At Pentecost is sung Veni sancte Spiritus et emitte coelitus, etc., and after two Latin verses always one German verse out of the fair song "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc. On Trinity the sequence Benedicta semper sit Trinitas is sung; and the same may be changed on the following Sundays, one after the other, with a German psalm, so that one Sunday the said sequence is sung, the other a German psalm, that the German songs may remain in the church.

In Mecklenburg the organ played the Latin verses and the cantor sang the German stanzas in between. The Latin text was not sung at all; the organ stood for it. Mecklenburg, Ordeninge der misse, 1545 (Sehling 5, p. 152):

> In den winachten unde vort bet to Purificationis schal me singen de sequentie: Grates nunc omnes, mit düsser wise. Wor ein orgel is, dar sla de organiste Grates. Dar na holde he stille unde de cantor vange an: Gelavet sistu. Dar na dat ander versch, des ewigen vaders, unde singe denn: Grates nunc omnes. Dar na sleit wedder de organiste Grates. […] In den ostern ock also, de organiste sla: Victime. De cantor höve an twe de ersten versche: Christ lach in dodes banden.

At Christmas and onward unto the Purification the sequence Grates nunc omnes shall be sung after this manner. Where there is an organ, let the organist play Grates. Thereafter let him hold still, and the cantor begin "Praised be thou." Thereafter the other verse, "Of the eternal Father," and then sing Grates nunc omnes. Thereafter the organist playeth Grates again. […] At Easter likewise: let the organist play Victimae; let the cantor begin the two first verses of "Christ Jesus Lay in Death's Strong Bands."

The same Mecklenburg order sang Luther's Advent hymn "Nun komm der Heiden Heiland" (the German Veni redemptor) after the Advent alleluia.

The Calenberg order sets the German stanzas "between every verse". Calenberg-Göttingen, Kirchenordnung, 1542 (Sehling 6/2, p. 793):

> Den sequenz belangen, sol man auf das haleluja denselbigen auch singen, doch also, das man von Ostern bis auf die Pfingsten singe: Victime paschali, von Pfingsten bis auf Trinitatis: Veni, sancte Spiritus, von Trinitatis, solange es den pfarherrn gut dünkt, den sequenz de sancta Trinitate, von den Weinachten bis purificationis Marie Grates nunc omnes. Man sol aber hie zwischen einem iden fers die gewönliche deutsche gesenge singen, als auf Ostern Christ ist erstanden, auf die Pfingsten Nu bitten wir den heiligen Geist, auf die Weinachten Gelobet seiestu, Jhesu Christ etc.

Touching the sequence, one shall sing the same also after the alleluia; yet so that from Easter unto Pentecost one sing Victimae paschali; from Pentecost unto Trinity, Veni, sancte Spiritus; from Trinity, as long as it seemeth good to the pastor, the sequence of the Holy Trinity; from Christmas unto the Purification of Mary, Grates nunc omnes. But here, between every verse, one shall sing the customary German songs: at Easter, "Christ Is Arisen"; at Pentecost, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray"; at Christmas, "We Praise You, Jesus, at Your Birth," etc.

At Harzgerode the people "sang in" the German stanzas, and on ordinary Sundays a German song took the place of the sequence. On the feasts of Our Lady the hymn was "Herr Christ, der einig Gotts Sohn". Harzgerode, Kirchenordnunge, 1534 (?) (Sehling 2, p. 586):

> zu weinachten werden in der sequenz Grates nunc omnes, die deutschen gesetz Gelobet seistu mit dem volgenden, vom volk mit drein gesungen, auf Oestern die sequenz Victime paschali sampt dem Christ ist erstanden, pfingsten die sequenz Veni sancte spiritus et Emitte celitus und darzu die gesetz Nu bitten wir den heiligen geist mit den andern, auf die gemeine sontag an stat des sequenz ein deutsch lied ader psalm, auf unser frauen fest das lied Her Christ der einig gots son.

At Christmas, in the sequence Grates nunc omnes, the German stanzas "We Praise You, Jesus, at Your Birth" with those following are sung in among it by the people; at Easter the sequence Victimae paschali together with "Christ Is Arisen"; at Pentecost the sequence Veni sancte Spiritus et emitte coelitus, and thereto the stanzas "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray" with the others; on the common Sundays, in the stead of the sequence, a German song or psalm; on the feasts of Our Lady the song "The Only Son from Heaven."

The Anhalt Ordnung der deutschen Gesänge calls this "weaving in". Anhalt, Ordnung der deutschen Gesänge, before 8 February 1551 (Sehling 2, p. 555):

> An die hohe festage als christag, ostern, pfingsten und trinitatis mag man die mess und vesper in latin und discant singen. Doch das under die sequentien vor dem evangelio die deudsche [...] gesenge, zu den festagen gehorig, mit angeflochten, und da und sunst allenthalben vor der predig des evangelii der glaube zu deudsch gesungen werde.

On the high feast days, as Christmas, Easter, Pentecost and Trinity, one may sing the Mass and vespers in Latin and in descant. Yet so that the German songs belonging to the feast days be woven in among the sequences before the gospel, and that there and everywhere else, before the sermon on the gospel, the creed be sung in German.

In the Hadersleben articles of 1528 the Latin sequences of the great feasts are allowed "and the Leisen in them". Hadersleben, Artikel, 1528 (Sehling 23, p. 64):

> Eth schal ock friig sin, dat sie in den groten festen mögen Gloria in excelsis up latin singen, des gelicken Alleluya und eine sequentien, alse Grates nunc omnes, Victime Paschali, Veni Sancte Spiritus, und de leyssen darinn, item dat latinische Patrem, prefatien, Sanctus unnd Agnus Dei, doch dat aleine up di groten feste.

It shall also be free for them on the great feasts to sing the Gloria in excelsis in Latin, likewise the alleluia and a sequence, as Grates nunc omnes, Victimae paschali, Veni Sancte Spiritus, and the Leisen therein; item the Latin Patrem, prefaces, Sanctus and Agnus Dei; yet only on the great feasts.

8.8.4 German sequences

Some orders sang the sequence itself in German prose, to the Latin melody. The Calenberg printed Masses of 1542 give "Danksagen wir alle Gott" as the Christmas sequence (the German Grates), followed by "Gelobet seist du". Calenberg-Göttingen, Kirchenordnung, 1542, the German Christmas Mass (Sehling 6/2, p. 820):

> Sequenz. [Noten:] Danksagen wir alle Got, unserm Herrn Christo, der uns mit seinem wort hat erleuchtet, hat uns erlöset mit seim blut von des teufels gewalte. Den sollen wir alle mit seinen engeln loben mit schalle singend: Preis sey Gott in der höhe [Ende der Noten]. Ein lobgesang von der geburt Christi.

Sequence. [Notes:] "Thanks say we all to God, our Lord Christ, who hath enlightened us with his word, hath redeemed us with his blood from the power of the devil. Him shall we all praise with his angels, with sound, singing: Praise be to God on high" [end of notes]. A song of praise of the birth of Christ.

The same Calenberg Masses have the Easter sequence "Laßt uns Christen alle singen" with "Christ ist erstanden" sung between its verses. The Pentecost sequence is "Komm, du Tröster, heiliger Geist" with "Nun bitten wir" "between every verse". The Hessian Agende of 1574 (Philippist) printed the same German sequences in its songbook appendix (Sehling 8, pp. 464–469). At Hof the Easter sequence was sung in German as "Wir Christen opfern allesamt". Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592 (Sehling 11, p. 440):

> Post epistolam: Christ lag in todesbanden, oder der sequenz Victimae paschali, deudsch: Wir christen opfern allesambt.

After the epistle: "Christ Jesus Lay in Death's Strong Bands," or the sequence Victimae paschali in German, "We Christians offer all together."

8.8.5 A hymn in the place of the gradual

Calenberg's German Masses replace the gradual and alleluia outright on two days. At the Purification the hymn is Simeon's song in Luther's version (Sehling 6/2, p. 823):

> Vor das gradual und alleluja sing man den gesang Simeonis wie volgt. [Noten:] Mit fried und freud ich far dahin in Gottes wille.

For the gradual and alleluia let the song of Simeon be sung, as followeth. [Notes:] "In peace and joy I now depart, according to God's will."

In the Passion Mass Psalm 51 replaces the sequence (Sehling 6/2, p. 825):

> Anstat des sequenz singe man den volgenden psalm. Erbarm dich mein, o Herre Gott, nach deiner grossen barmherzigkeit!

In the stead of the sequence let the following psalm be sung: "Have mercy on me, O Lord God, after thy great mercy!"

8.8.6 A German psalm that "rhymes with the gospel"

The fullest rule for choosing the hymn is in Pomerania (1542) and Mecklenburg (1545). On ordinary Sundays the German psalm-hymn is to be chosen by the matter of the Sunday gospel. Faith and grace, Christ's enemies, good works and the right use of earthly goods each have their hymns. Pomerania, Kirchenordnung, 1542 (Sehling 4, p. 356):

> effte up die andern sondage einen psalm, de sick upt evangelium rimet so vele mogelick, alse wenn dat evangelium ludet vam loven und der gnade, so singe me, idt is dat heil uns kamen her, item dorch Adams val oder dergeliken, wenn averst dat evangelion ludet van den godtlosen joden und huchelern, wo se wedder Christum handlen, so singe me, idt sprecket der unwise munt wol, item ach godt van hemmel; wenn idt van guden werken ludet, de uns godt gebut, so singe me, herr wol werd wohnen etc. und andere psalme, de man wet upt bequemest to gebruken.

or on the other Sundays a psalm that rhymeth with the gospel as much as may be: as, when the gospel speaketh of faith and of grace, let "Salvation unto Us Has Come" be sung, item "All Mankind Fell in Adam's Fall," or the like; but when the gospel speaketh of the godless Jews and hypocrites, how they deal against Christ, let "The Mouth of Fools Doth God Confess" be sung, item "O Lord, Look Down from Heaven, Behold"; when it speaketh of good works which God commandeth us, let "Lord, who shall dwell," etc. be sung; and other psalms which one knoweth to use most fitly.

Mecklenburg, Ordeninge der misse, 1545 (Sehling 5, p. 153):

> Up den dörpern schal me stedes einen düdeschen psalm singen, wo me in den steden to tiden ock don mach. Unde sundergen de psalm, de sick up dat hillige evangelion rimen. Als wen dat evangelion ludet van dem geloven und der gnade, so singe me: Idt is dat heil uns kamen her etc., Dorch Adams vall. So idt is ein lere unses heilandes, so singe me: Gades rechte und wunderdat. Ludet dat evangelion van den jöden, wo se wedder Christum handelen, so singe me: Idt sprickt der unwise mundt wol, Ach godt, van hemmel sü darin, Wo godt de here nicht bi uns hölt, und den II. psalm: Help godt, wo geit dat jümmer to. Wen idt van guden werken ludet, so singe men: Dit sint de hilligen tein gebot, Wol dem, de in gades fruchten steit, Here, wol wert wanen in diner hütten […]. Wenn dat evangelion eine lere is, van dem rechten gebruke düsser vorgenklicken dinge, so singe me: Wo godt nicht sülvest dat hus uprichtet.

In the villages a German psalm shall always be sung, as may also at times be done in the towns; and especially the psalms that rhyme with the holy gospel. As, when the gospel speaketh of faith and of grace, let "Salvation unto Us Has Come," etc., "All Mankind Fell in Adam's Fall," be sung. If it be a teaching of our Saviour, let "God's justice and wondrous deed" be sung. If the gospel speak of the Jews, how they deal against Christ, let "The Mouth of Fools Doth God Confess," "O Lord, Look Down from Heaven, Behold," "If God Were Not upon Our Side," and the second psalm, "Help, God, how goeth it ever so," be sung. When it speaketh of good works, let "These Are the Holy Ten Commands," "Happy the Man Who Feareth God," "Lord, who shall dwell in thy tabernacle" […] be sung. When the gospel is a teaching of the right use of these transitory things, let "Except God himself build the house" be sung.

Later orders keep the rule in shorter form. Pomerania, Agenda, 1569 (Sehling 4, p. 438):

> Hirup singet de chor de sequentiam de tempore vel feste, edder tractum, edder to tiden ein alleluia mit dem gradual, edder up de sondage einen düdischen psalm, de sick mit dem evangelio rimet. Up de sondage na Trinitatis schal men alle maente de sequentiam de trinitate singen. Wenn apostel dage, decollationis Iohannis, Mariae Magdalenae, conversionis Pauli, der hiligen marterer vallen, schal men des sondages to vörne, edder dar na, alse idt gelegen, desülvige sequentiam singen, alse se Lossius gesettet hefft, up dat de olden herliken gesenge de apostolis, evangelistis etc. nicht genzlick vorla[ren werden].

Hereupon the choir singeth the sequence of the season or of the feast, or the tract, or at times an alleluia with the gradual, or on the Sundays a German psalm that rhymeth with the gospel. On the Sundays after Trinity the sequence of the Trinity shall be sung every month. When apostles' days, the Beheading of John, Mary Magdalene, the Conversion of Paul, the holy martyrs fall, the same sequence shall be sung on the Sunday before or after, as it falleth, as Lossius hath set them; that the old glorious songs of the apostles, evangelists, etc. be not wholly lost.

Naumburg, Kirchen-Ordnung for St Wenzel, 1537/1538 (Sehling 2, p. 71):

> Ein deuzscher psalm nach der zeitgelegenheit oder der sich mit dem evangelio reimet.

A German psalm according to the occasion of the season, or one that rhymeth with the gospel.

Weissenfels, Ordnung der geseng, 1578 (Sehling 1, p. 693). This is the order whose one-hymn-per-Sunday table is printed in `hymns.db`:

> Singet die gemein ein deutsch lied, das sich uf die zeit und evangelium schicket, 5. Als dominica 1. adventus: Nun kom der heiden heiland.

The congregation singeth a German song that fitteth the season and the gospel; as on the first Sunday of Advent, "Savior of the Nations, Come."

At Weissenfels even the festal Mass sung in figured music kept this German hymn. Weissenfels, Ordnung der geseng, 1578 (Sehling 1, p. 694):

> Uf die fest werden vorgenannte gesenge alle figuraliter gesungen, ohne die deutschen lieder nach der epistel in der messen, und nach dem hymno in der vespern.

On the feasts the aforenamed songs are all sung in figured music, save the German songs after the epistle in the Mass and after the hymn in the vespers.

Verden, Kirchenordnung, 1606 (Sehling 7/1, p. 156):

> Nach der epistel soll man einen sequenz oder halleluja de tempore oder einen deutschen psalmen, der mit dem text oder inhalt des evangelii ubereinkomet, singen.

After the epistle one shall sing a sequence or alleluia of the season, or a German psalm that agreeth with the text or content of the gospel.

8.8.7 Sunday and season tables for this slot

Many orders fix the hymn for this slot by season, and some by Sunday. Ten of these tables are extracted in `hymns.db` and described in the Introduction (The hymn database): those of Naumburg (1537/38), Nördlingen (1544/1555), Anhalt (1551), Pirna (1555–1569), Pfalz-Zweibrücken (1565), Pomerania (1569), Weissenfels (1578), Nördlingen (1579), Mansfeld (1580) and Hohenlohe (1596). They are not repeated here, but Appendix 8.A sets out the hymn that they and the old hymnals most often give to each Sunday and feast. Two orders whose tables are not in `hymns.db` come first.

Neuenrade, Kirchenordnung, 1564, Low German (Sehling 22, pp. 530–531). The table runs by season. Holy Week has no hymn in this slot; instead, a Passion hymn is split around the sermon. The order closes with an open clause for the rest of the year:

> Na der Episteln singet man Alleluia und de Sequentie oder sunst ein Ledt, wie de hir naeinander verordent sint. Im Advent: Alleluia. Darup: Herr Christ, de einige Godes Son, etc. Up Winachten bet up Purificat[ionis]: Alleluia. Grates nunc omnes […] Darup: Gelovet s[e]istu Jhesu Christ […] Up Purificationis oder Lichtmesse Na dem Alleluia: Mit fred und freud ick far dahen, etc. In der Fasten: Midden wy im leven sint mit dem dod umfangen, etc. Up Annunciationis und Visitationis: Her Christ, de einige Godes Son, Vader in ewicheit, etc.

After the epistle the alleluia is sung, and the sequence, or else a song, as they are here ordained one after another. In Advent: alleluia; thereupon "The Only Son from Heaven," etc. From Christmas unto the Purification: alleluia, Grates nunc omnes […]; thereupon "We Praise You, Jesus, at Your Birth" […]. On the Purification or Candlemas, after the alleluia, "In Peace and Joy I Now Depart," etc. In Lent: "In the Very Midst of Life," etc. On the Annunciation and the Visitation: "The Only Son from Heaven," etc.

> Up Ostern beth up Hemelfarth: Alleluia. Darup volget Victimae Paschali laudes etc., Und singet dat volck dartwischen: Christ is upgestanden, oder man singe: Christ lag in dodesbanden […] Hemelfart: Alleluia. Nu freuwet iw, leven Christen gemein, etc. […] Pingsten: Alleluia. Nu bidde wy den hilligen Geist, etc. Trinitatis: God, de Vader, wone uns by, etc. Michaelis: Nu lave mine seele den Heren, etc. Up andere thijde nemet man, wat man will und sick am be[sten schicket].

From Easter unto the Ascension: alleluia; thereupon followeth Victimae paschali laudes, etc., and the people sing between: "Christ Is Arisen"; or one singeth "Christ Jesus Lay in Death's Strong Bands" […]. The Ascension: alleluia, "Dear Christians, One and All, Rejoice," etc. […] Pentecost: alleluia, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc. Trinity: "Triune God, Be Thou Our Stay," etc. Michaelmas: "My Soul, Now Praise Your Maker," etc. At other times one taketh what one will and what fitteth best.

Prussia, Kirchenordnung, 1544 (Sehling 4, p. 65). Here the alleluia is sung "with the melody rhymed to" the German psalm that follows. The list is to be rotated, "as is the use at Königsberg":

> Volgt Halleluja mit der melodei gereimet auf den deudschen psalmen, so man singen wil, als: Frölich wöllen wir halleluja singen. Eine feste burg ist unser got. Von der taufe Christi, doctoris Martini lied, item desselbigen Vater unser im himelreich. Item, Ach vater unser, der du bist etc. Abzuwechseln wie dann zu Königsberg in ubung ist etc. In den festen hats eigenes, als uf Ostern: Christ lag in todes banden. Item, Jesus Christ unser heiland. Auf Pfingsten: Kom, got schöpfer, heiliger geist. Nun bitten wir den heiligen geist. In Weihnachten: Gelobet seistu Jesu Christ. Item, Grates nunc omnes. Dank sagen wir nu alle etc.

There followeth the alleluia, with the melody rhymed to the German psalm that one will sing, as: "Sing Loud Hallelujah, in Jubilant Chorus"; "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God"; Doctor Martin's song of the baptism of Christ; item his "Our Father, Who from Heaven Above"; item "Ah Father of ours, who art," etc. To be changed about, as is the use at Königsberg, etc. On the feasts there is proper matter, as at Easter "Christ Jesus Lay in Death's Strong Bands," item "Jesus Christ, Who Came, Us to Save"; at Pentecost, "Come, God, Creator, Holy Ghost," "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray"; at Christmas, "We Praise You, Jesus, at Your Birth," item Grates nunc omnes, "Thanks say we now all," etc.

Of the tables in `hymns.db`, the following passages show how they were meant to be used.

Anhalt, Ordnung der deutschen Gesänge, before 8 February 1551 (Sehling 2, p. 556). This order gives hymns by season for three slots: before the early sermon, in the Mass before the gospel, and before the vesper sermon. For the Trinity season it tells the Mass to keep one hymn for about four Sundays running, so that the congregation may learn it:

> Nach Trinitatis. Bis auf die advent singe man allezeit vor der frupredig: Nu bitten wir den heiligen, in der messen aber sol man diese nachfolgende gesenge vor dem evangelio, etwan vier sontag nach einander bis auf den advent singen, damit die gemein des zu leichtlicher lerne und behalde: Erbarm dich mein o herre gott, Vater unser im himelreich, Es ist das heil > uns komen her, etvan halb und die ander helft darnach, Ach got von himel sich drein, Es spricht der unweiser mund wol, Ein feste burg, Es wolt uns got gnedig sein, Aus tiefer not, Ich rufe zu dir her Jesu Christ und dergleichen.

After Trinity. Until Advent let "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray" be sung always before the early sermon; but in the Mass these following songs shall be sung before the gospel, some four Sundays one after another, until Advent, that the congregation may the more easily learn and keep them: "Have mercy on me, O Lord God"; "Our Father, Who from Heaven Above"; "Salvation unto Us Has Come" (about half, and the other half afterward); "O Lord, Look Down from Heaven, Behold"; "The Mouth of Fools Doth God Confess"; "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God"; "May God Bestow on Us His Grace"; "From Depths of Woe I Cry to Thee"; "Lord, Hear the Voice of My Complaint"; and the like.

Nördlingen, Ordnung der ceremonien at St George's, 1555 (Sehling 12, p. 323). The order prints a Sunday list for the psalm after the epistle, taken from the Naumburg order of 1537/38 (Sehling 2, pp. 76–77). With it comes Naumburg's closing remark, which leaves the choice open:

> Nach gelegenhait der zeit, nachdem es in der christenhait zustehet, mag man wol andere, die bequemer sich zu jeder zeit schicken, an diser stad bisweilen nemen, desgleichen auch, wenn man mensur singet.

According to the occasion of the time, as it standeth in Christendom, one may well take at times others in this place, that fit themselves more fitly to every season; likewise also when one singeth measured music.

The Nördlingen order of 1579 prints its own list and fits it to the sermon as well. Nördlingen, Kirchenordnung, 1579 (Sehling 12, p. 386):

> Wo aber den sechsten Januarii oder den sonntag vor dem Obersttag von der taufe Christi geprediget, solle der psalm Christ unser Herr zum Jordan kam etc. gesungen werden. Von Purificationis bis uf den sonntag Septuagesima: Mit frid und freud ich fahr dahin etc.

But where on the sixth of January, or the Sunday before Epiphany, it is preached of the baptism of Christ, the psalm "To Jordan Came the Christ, Our Lord," etc. shall be sung. From the Purification unto the Sunday Septuagesima, "In Peace and Joy I Now Depart," etc.

Pirna, Kirchenordnung of Anton Lauterbach, between 1555 and 1569 (Sehling 1, pp. 642–643). The order is undated. Sehling dates it probably after 1555, since its passage on the poor and the schools uses the visitation recess of that year, and Lauterbach, the first superintendent of Pirna, died in 1569 (Sehling 1, p. 635). It lists two German hymns for each Sunday. It says they are arranged by the sense of the Sunday epistles and gospels, and may give way to Latin on the high feasts:

> Haec cantica germanica iuxta epistolarum et evangeliorum dominicalium sensum ordinata sunt, quae aliquando latinis canticis mutari possunt ad exercitium scholasticorum ad musicam pracipue solennibus festis ubi responsoria, hymni, introitus, gradualia pura assueto ordine cani possunt.

These German songs are ordered according to the sense of the Sunday epistles and gospels, and may sometimes be changed for Latin songs for the exercise of the scholars in music, chiefly on the solemn feasts, when pure responsories, hymns, introits and graduals may be sung in the accustomed order.

The Mansfeld table of 1580 goes furthest toward gospel narrative hymns. For the first Sunday after Trinity, whose gospel is Dives and Lazarus, it adds a ballad of the rich man, marked * as not by Luther. Mansfeld, Kirchen-Agenda, 1580 (Sehling 2, p. 238):

> Domin. I. post trinitatis. Gott der vater wohne uns bei, etc. Ach gott von himel sich darein etc. *Es war einmal ein reicher man.

The first Sunday after Trinity: "Triune God, Be Thou Our Stay," etc.; "O Lord, Look Down from Heaven, Behold," etc.; *"There was once a rich man."

On Oculi, Mansfeld puts the litany in the place of the sequence (Sehling 2, p. 238):

> Hie sol auch die litanei gesungen werden, an stat des sequenz, wenn das volk zusammen komen ist.

Here also the litany shall be sung, in the stead of the sequence, when the people are come together.

8.8.8 Why the hymn might not change: an unknown tune

Hof's Sunday table shows why a new hymn could not always be sung. For Septuagesima it offers a familiar alternative, because the congregation did not know the new hymn and "heareth only the tune". Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592 (Sehling 11, p. 436):

> Post epistolam: Herr Got, dein namen rufn wir, oder dafür Ach Gott vom himel sih darein, weil das vorgehend sowol des künftigen sontagsgesang dem gemeinen man unbekant. und er allein den ton höret.

After the epistle: "Lord God, we call upon thy name," or instead "O Lord, Look Down from Heaven, Behold," because the foregoing, as also the song of the coming Sunday, is unknown to the common man, and he heareth only the tune.

For Advent the same table offers a shorter hymn "when it is very cold", and keeps the longer one for the communion (Sehling 11, p. 432):

> Post epistolam: Durch Adams fall ist ganz verderbt oder wanns sehr kalt: Ich ruf zu dir, Herr Jesu. Ita ut praecedens sub communionem reservetur. vel etiam sequentia: Als der gutige Got vollenden wolt.

After the epistle: "All Mankind Fell in Adam's Fall," or, when it is very cold, "Lord, Hear the Voice of My Complaint"; so that the foregoing be kept back for the communion; or else the sequence "When the good God would fulfil."

Wittgenstein rotated its psalm-hymns for the opposite reason: so that the congregation would not stay "on one side" and leave the other fine psalms unlearned. Wittgenstein, Kirchenordnung, 1563 (Sehling 22, p. 103):

> Solche ordnung behelt man etliche sontage nach den hohen festen. Wenn aber solche zeit auß ist, soll man an stadt der vorigen gesenge andere geistliche deutsche psalmen singen also, das gleichwoll diese ordnung unnd gantze action fur und fur in ihrem wesen bleibe und erhalten werde. Unnd sollen die pastores auff den dörffern ihr völcklin vermanen und underweisen, das sie solche psalmen mit singen lernen, als da seind: Durch Adams fall etc. Diß sind die heiligen zehen gebot etc. Ich ruff dich an, herr Jesu Christ etc. Nun frewt euch, lieben christen gemein etc. Auß tieffer nott schrey ich zu dir etc. Erbarm dich mein, o herre Gott etc. Ein feste burg ist unser Gott etc. Wo Gott, der herr, nicht bey uns helt etc. Ach Gott, vonn himel sih darein etc. Es spricht der unweisen mund woll etc., welcher psalmen man jehands einen umb den andern singen soll, damit man nicht allezeit auff einer seiten bleibe und die schönen psalmen ungelernet bleiben.

This order is kept some Sundays after the high feasts. But when that time is out, in the stead of the foregoing songs other spiritual German psalms shall be sung, so that nevertheless this order and the whole action remain and be kept in its being continually. And the pastors in the villages shall exhort and instruct their little folk to learn to sing along such psalms, as these are: "All Mankind Fell in Adam's Fall," etc.; "These Are the Holy Ten Commands," etc.; "Lord, Hear the Voice of My Complaint," etc.; "Dear Christians, One and All, Rejoice," etc.; "From Depths of Woe I Cry to Thee," etc.; "Have mercy on me, O Lord God," etc.; "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," etc.; "If God Were Not upon Our Side," etc.; "O Lord, Look Down from Heaven, Behold," etc.; "The Mouth of Fools Doth God Confess," etc.; of which psalms one shall sing one after the other in turn, that one abide not always on one side and the fair psalms remain unlearned.

8.8.9 The litany in this slot

Several orders put a litany between the epistle and the gospel. Lüneburg used a Kyrie-litany hymn, "Nim von uns, Herr Gott". It gave way when there were children to baptize, and baptism was then held between the epistle and the gospel. Lüneburg, Kirchenordnung, 1564 (Sehling 6/1, pp. 543–544):

> Nach der epistel singet man einen sequenz oder alleluja, Lobet den Herrn, oder Nim, Herre Gott, von uns all unser sünde und missethat, und der priester das gebet, darin die litania begrieffen.

After the epistle a sequence or alleluia is sung, "Praise ye the Lord," or "Take from us, Lord God, all our sin and misdeed," and the priest [prayeth] the prayer wherein the litany is comprised.

> Wenn aber die zeit zu kurz fellet oder kinder zu teufen verhanden, so kan entweder der sequenz oder der gesang: Nim von uns, Herr Gott etc. oder der tractus ein oder alle ausgelassen werden. So denn kinder zu teufen verhanden, die sollen für der lection des evangelii getauft werden. So aber keine kinder zu teufen verhanden oder sonst so viel zeit ist, sol die litania stets gesungen werden.

But when the time falleth too short, or there be children to baptize, then either the sequence or the song "Take from us, Lord God," etc., or the tract, one or all, may be left out. When, then, there be children to baptize, they shall be baptized before the lesson of the gospel. But when there be no children to baptize, or there is otherwise time enough, the litany shall always be sung.

Kurland, Kirchenordnung, 1570 (Sehling 5, p. 88), which prints the same hymn:

> Folgends die sequentia pro tempore, mit dem alleluia, oder auf den gemeinen sontagen ein christlicher psalm, unterzeiten die letania. Oder um der kurze willen diese letania. Nim von uns, lieber herr, Unser sünd und missethat.

Following, the sequence of the season with the alleluia; or on the common Sundays a Christian psalm; at times the litany; or, for brevity's sake, this litany: "Take from us, dear Lord, our sin and misdeed."

Regensburg used the Prussian litany with "Erhalt uns, Herr" as its appendix, and the sequence only when there was figured music. Regensburg, Kirchenordnung of Justus Jonas, 1553 (Sehling 13, p. 420):

> Darnach singt der chor die zu Preußen gesetzten letanei mit dem anhang: Erhalt uns, Herr, bei deinem wort etc. […] An sunderlichen festen aber pflegt man je zu weilen von kurz wegen, so oft man figurirt, für die letanei die alleluia und sequenz de tempore zu nemen.

Thereafter the choir singeth the litany set forth in Prussia, with the appendix "Lord, Keep Us Steadfast in Your Word," etc. […] But on special feasts it is the custom now and then, for brevity's sake, as oft as figured music is sung, to take the alleluia and sequence of the season in the stead of the litany.

The later Regensburg order even calls "Erhalt uns" the "sequence of the season". Regensburg, Kirchenordnung, 1567 (Sehling 13, p. 462):

> darauf singt der chor sequentiam de tempore: Erhalt uns, Herr, bei deinem wort, oder sonst etwas deudsches.

thereupon the choir singeth the sequence of the season: "Lord, Keep Us Steadfast in Your Word," or else something German.

The Litany as a rite, with its forms, singers and days, is treated in Chapter 13, §13.21.

8.8.10 How fixed the slot was

This slot was variable. At the three high feasts it was fixed by the farced sequence and its Leise. Through the rest of the year practice ran along a scale:

1. A short list rotated to teach the people (Prussia 1544, Anhalt 1551, Wittgenstein 1563).
2. Seasonal assignment (Neuenrade 1564, and the first list of Mansfeld 1580).
3. A Sunday-by-Sunday table matched to the gospel (Naumburg 1537/38, taken over at Nördlingen 1544/1555; Pirna 1555–1569; Pomerania 1569; Weissenfels 1578; Nördlingen 1579, which keeps seasons for Advent, for Christmas to the Purification and for Easter to the Ascension; the fourth list of Mansfeld 1580; Hof 1592).
4. The rule of Pomerania 1542 and Mecklenburg 1545, which chooses by the matter of the gospel without a fixed table.

The Latin alternatives (sequence, alleluia, tract) and the litany came in at the edges.

8.9 The creed: "Wir glauben all"

The creed slot is among the most fixed in the corpus. Luther's "Wir glauben all an einen Gott" was sung by the people, either instead of the Latin Patrem or after it. It is named in more orders than any other hymn except "Nun bitten" and the communion hymns. The alternatives are few:

- the Apostles' Creed sung "von Wort zu Wort" ("Ich glaub an Gott Vater"), a sung prose form;
- a German Nicene Creed;
- rarely, the Athanasian Creed in German;
- in Advent at Schweinfurt, "Wir glauben" in the place of "Nun bitten" (§8.9.4).

What varies is where the creed stands and what it is used for.

The creed in the order of the Mass, Nicene or Apostles', is treated in Chapter 2, §2.9.

8.9.1 After the gospel, with or instead of the Latin Patrem

The Deutsche Messe set the pattern: "Nach dem evangelio singt die ganze kirche den glauben zu deudsch: Wir gleuben all an einen gott" (§8.3.2). Where the Latin was kept, the people sang the German creed after it, or even at the same time as it. Pfalz-Neuburg, Kirchenordnung, 1543 (Sehling 13, p. 72):

> Nach dem evangelio sol der priester das Credo und der chor das Patrem lateinisch singen oder, wo kein chor ist, mag es der priester selbs singen oder sprechen und das volk dieweil das teutsch gesang: Wir glauben all in einen Gott lassen singen.

After the gospel the priest shall sing the Credo and the choir the Patrem in Latin; or, where there is no choir, the priest may sing or say it himself, and meanwhile let the people sing the German song "We All Believe in One True God."

At Aschersleben the credal slot rotated over four Sundays: German, Latin with the Patrem, figured music, and the litany. Aschersleben, Kirchen-Agenda, 1575 (Sehling 2, p. 478):

> Es soll aber auch der cantor einen sontag teutsch, den andern lateinisch singen, darzu dan das patrem auch gehört, den dritten sontag figuriren, und den vierten die litaniam singen.

The cantor shall also sing one Sunday in German, the other in Latin (whereto the Patrem also belongeth), the third Sunday figured music, and the fourth sing the litany.

The Hessian Agende (Philippist) allows three German creeds, and on occasion the German Grates nunc omnes in their place. Hessen, Agende, 1574 (Philippist; Sehling 8, p. 411):

> Auf verlesung des evangelii wird gesungen das symbolum apostolicum teutsch, von wort zu wort, oder wie es Doctor Luther paraphrastice in gesangsweise gestelt hat, oder das symbolum Nicenum teutsch. Man mag auch je bisweilen nach dem evangelio das teutsch Grates nunc omnes, oder einen andern kurzen gesang singen und darauf das symbolum Nicenum oder Athanasianum mit klarer stimm dem volk für dem altar fürlesen.

Upon the reading of the gospel the Apostles' Creed is sung in German, word for word; or as Doctor Luther hath set it in paraphrase after the manner of a song; or the Nicene Creed in German. One may also now and then, after the gospel, sing the German Grates nunc omnes, or another short song, and thereupon read the Nicene or the Athanasian Creed to the people before the altar with a clear voice.

At Brieg (1592) the Latin Nicene Creed alternated Sunday by Sunday with the Athanasian Creed in German, taken from Triller's songbook. Brieg, Kirchenordnung, 1592 (Sehling 3, p. 446):

> nach der epistel einen deutschen gesang aus dem gesangbüchlein des herrn doctoris Lutheri, nach dem evangelio das Symbolum Nicaenum oder Athanasii, einen sontag latine, den andern sontag das Symbolum Athanasii deutsch, aus des Trilleri gesangbüchlein.

after the epistle a German song out of the songbook of Doctor Luther; after the gospel the Nicene or Athanasian Creed, one Sunday in Latin, the other Sunday the Athanasian Creed in German, out of Triller's songbook.

In the Prussian villages the creed-hymn is followed at once by "Nun bitten", so the two together lead into the sermon. Prussia, Kirchenordnung und Ceremonien, 1568 (Sehling 4, p. 83):

> auf das evangelium singet man: Wir glauben all an einen gott etc. und nach denselbigen: Nu bitten wir den heiligen geist etc.

after the gospel is sung "We All Believe in One True God," etc., and after the same, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc.

8.9.2 After the sermon: the creed as the offertory

In Bugenhagen's orders the sermon comes between the gospel and the creed. After it the people sing the creed while the communicants go into the choir and the priest prepares the bread and wine. The creed-hymn thus fills the slot of the old offertory. Hamburg, Kirchenordnung, 1529 (Sehling 5, p. 528):

> Wen de predicante afsticht, so singet de prester vor dem altar na dem altar gewendt: Ick love an einen godt. So singet dat volk edder chor versch umme versch dat ganze Simbolum Nicenum ut, unde dar to Wi loven all in einen godt etc. De wile gan de communicanten in dat chor, de frouwen und junckfrouwen an der luchter siden, besundergen, und de mans und knechte an der rechten siden besundergen und de prester bereidet brodt und win, und wes dar to nodt is.

When the preacher cometh down, the priest before the altar, turned toward the altar, singeth: "I believe in one God." Then the people or the choir sing the whole Nicene Creed through, verse by verse, and thereto "We All Believe in One True God," etc. Meanwhile the communicants go into the choir, the women and maidens on the left side apart, and the men and servants on the right side apart; and the priest prepareth bread and wine, and what is needful thereto.

In the Braunschweig order of 1528 the creed stood before the sermon, and a German psalm or song after the sermon did this work. Braunschweig, Kirchenordnung, 1528 (Sehling 6/1, p. 441):

> Wen de predicante affstiget, so singet me eynen düdeschen psalm edder led, dewile gan de communicanten int chor, de frauen unde de junkfrauen an de luchter side besundergen, unde de mans unde knechte an de rechter side besundergen, unde de prester bereydet bröt unde wyn, unde wes darto nöt is.

When the preacher cometh down, a German psalm or song is sung; meanwhile the communicants go into the choir, the women and maidens on the left side apart, and the men and servants on the right side apart; and the priest prepareth bread and wine, and what is needful thereto.

Buxtehude sings all three stanzas of "Wir glauben" without the organ, because in it the church confesses its faith. Buxtehude, Kirchenordnung, 1552 (Sehling 7/1, p. 75):

> Wen de predige geendiget, so schall der prediger upp dem predigstole dem chor und volke ahnheven Wy geloven. Unde dewile dat in dem Wy geloven de kercke ehren geloven bekennet, schollen alle dre versche ahne orgel van der gemeine ganz utgesungen werden. Dewile Wy geloven gesungen wert, schollen de communicanten in den chorr gahn, schicklick, ordentlick, mit reverentie dat hochwerdige sacramente aldar to entfangende.

When the sermon is ended, the preacher in the pulpit shall begin "We All Believe in One True God" for the choir and people. And because in "We All Believe in One True God" the church confesseth her faith, all three verses shall be sung wholly through by the congregation without organ. While "We All Believe in One True God" is being sung, the communicants shall go into the choir, seemly, orderly, with reverence, there to receive the most worthy sacrament.

Bremen, Kirchenordnung, 1534 (Sehling 7/2.2, p. 460):

> Darna singet de Köster edder Scholemester mit synen Jüngern unde allem volcke, manne unde frouwen, de thom singende vormanet werden, den geloven. Unde darunder ghan de Communicanten ynt Chor.

Thereafter the sexton or schoolmaster, with his disciples and all the people, men and women, who are exhorted to sing, singeth the creed. And during it the communicants go into the choir.

Osnabrück (Stift), Kirchenordnung, 1543 (Sehling 7/1, p. 224):

> Na dem sermone hevet de prester vor dem altare an: Credo in unum Deum. Darup gesungen: Wii geloven alle an einen Godt etc.

After the sermon the priest before the altar beginneth Credo in unum Deum. Thereupon is sung "We All Believe in One True God," etc.

The Lüneburg city order of 1575 keeps the organ silent during the creed. The creed also covers the minister's return to the altar. Lüneburg, Kirchenordnung, 1575 (Sehling 6/1, p. 659):

> Es werden auch zu zeiten die leute vormhanet, das sie in der kirchen bey der communion pleiben, und wird darauf das: Wir gleuben gesungen und unter deme nicht uff der orgel geschlagen und darnegst nach gelegenheit derzeit das: Credo in unum Deum etc. Unter dem gehet der diener widderumb vor den altar.

The people are also at times exhorted to abide in the church for the communion; and thereupon "We All Believe in One True God" is sung, and during it the organ is not played; and next, according to the occasion of the time, the Credo in unum Deum, etc. During it the minister goeth again before the altar.

The Liegnitz order of 1542 also has the creed after the sermon, after the Lord's Prayer and the reading of 1 Corinthians 11. Liegnitz, Kirchenordnung, 1542 (Sehling 3, p. 439):

> Darnach das evangelium teutsch und den gesang: Komm heiliger geist, und predigen drauf. Nach der predigt mag man singen das vater unser, nachdem mag man lesen den text Pauli 1. Cor. 11. Von dem abendmahl, oder das 6 te capitel Johannis. Darauf werde gesungen der glaube.

Thereafter the gospel in German, and the song "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord," and preach thereon. After the sermon one may sing the Our Father; after that one may read the text of Paul, 1 Corinthians 11, of the Supper, or the sixth chapter of John. Thereupon let the creed be sung.

8.9.3 The creed-hymn to cover the preacher's movement

The creed often covered the preacher's going up into the pulpit or coming down to the altar. Hadeln, Kirchenordnung, 1526 (Sehling 5, p. 468):

> Finito evangelio singe de magister mit dem chore: Wi geloven etc., underdes sticht de predicante up den predigstole.

When the gospel is finished, let the schoolmaster sing with the choir "We All Believe in One True God," etc.; meanwhile the preacher goeth up into the pulpit.

In Württemberg the creed or a German psalm covered his coming down. Württemberg, Kirchenordnung, 1536 (Sehling 16, p. 107):

> In dem aber, so er herab steygt und die predig volendet hat, soll man den teutschen glauben oder ein teutschen Psalmen singen, bis der pfarrherr mit statten zu dem altar kompt, da man das nachtmal begeen will.

But while he cometh down, having ended the sermon, the German creed or a German psalm shall be sung, until the pastor is fully come to the altar where the Supper is to be kept.

8.9.4 "Wir glauben" in the place of "Nun bitten"

At Schweinfurt "Nun bitten" followed the Latin Patrem on most Sundays. In Advent "Wir glauben all" was sung instead. Schweinfurt, Gottesdienstordnung, 1576 (Sehling 11, p. 646):

> Chorus incipit Patrem, quo finito immediate sequitur cantio Nun bitten wir den Heiligen Geist. NB. Im Advent aber mus und sol anstatt des gesanges Nun bitten wir etc. das Wir glauben all an einen Gott etc. gesungen werden. NB. Per tres dominicas Adventus soll der glaub gesungen werden.

The choir beginneth the Patrem, which being ended there followeth straightway the song "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray." N.B.: But in Advent, in the stead of the song "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc., "We All Believe in One True God," etc. must and shall be sung. N.B.: Through three Sundays of Advent the creed shall be sung.

8.9.5 How fixed the slot was Fixed. The text was "Wir glauben all", with a sung Apostles' or Nicene Creed as the only alternative. It did not change with the season (Schweinfurt's Advent rule is an exchange between two fixed slots). Its place moved: after the gospel in the Saxon and southern orders, after the sermon in Bugenhagen's northern orders. After the sermon it served as the offertory while the communicants gathered.

8.10 Before the sermon: "Nun bitten wir" and the old Leisen

The hymn before the sermon (ante concionem) is the second most fixed slot, after the creed. Its hymn is "Nun bitten wir den heiligen Geist". Its function is prayer. Many orders say the people shall "pray an Our Father, or sing" it, or sing it "an Gebets statt", "in the stead of prayer". The whole congregation asks for the Holy Ghost before the word is preached, and the preacher often intones it from the pulpit.

On the high feasts the orders put the old pre-Reformation Leisen in its place. These are single-stanza vernacular songs ending "Kyrieleis", in use before the Reformation and kept because the people knew them:

Feast	Leise
Christmas	"Ein Kindelein so löbelich" (or "Gelobet seist du, Jesu Christ")
Easter	"Christ ist erstanden" (or "Also heilig ist der Tag")
Ascension	"Christ fuhr gen Himmel"
Pentecost	"Nun bitten wir" itself, or "Komm heiliger Geist"
Trinity	"Gott der Vater wohn uns bei"

The pattern is fixed, with seasonal exchange. One hymn stands for most of the year and a Leise for each high feast and its season. Some orders use the Lord's Prayer hymn in Advent and Lent.

8.10.1 "Nun bitten" as the prayer before the sermon

Buxtehude, Kirchenordnung, 1552 (Sehling 7/1, p. 70). It changes the hymn before the sermon through the whole year. The Ascension hymn is "Zu Himmel zu dem Vater mein", the ninth stanza of Luther's "Nun freut euch":

> und vor alle sinen predigen dat gebett Nun bidde wy denn hilligen Geist gesangeswyse bidden, utgenahmen, dat sick de gesang vor der predige na gelegenheit der tydt mut voranderen, alse in Winacht bet to lichtmissen: Gelavet sistu, Jesu Christ, van Pasten bet up de himmelfart Christi: Christ ist uperstanden, van der himmelfart bet to Pinxsten: To himmel to dem Vader myn, van Pinxsten wedder bet to Wynachten: Nun bidden wy den hilligen Geist.

and before all his sermons [the pastor shall] pray in the manner of a song the prayer "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray"; save that the song before the sermon must change according to the occasion of the season: as from Christmas unto Candlemas, "We Praise You, Jesus, at Your Birth"; from Easter unto the Ascension of Christ, "Christ Is Arisen"; from the Ascension unto Pentecost, "To heaven, to my Father"; from Pentecost again unto Christmas, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray."

The Naumburg order of 1527 sang the first stanza of "Nun bitten" with an added stanza of its own, "Herre Christ, Gottes Sohn". Naumburg, Kirchen-Ordnung for St Wenzel, 1527 (Sehling 2, p. 60):

> so ruft man den heiligen geist an mit disem gesange also: Nuhe bitten wir den heiligen geist, u.s.w. […] Herre Christ, gottes son, durch deiner marter willen, so bedenk aller christenheit not, denn du uns lieber herr an dem creuze hast erlost. Kirieleis. Hirnach so geht der prediger auf die canzel.

then the Holy Ghost is called upon with this song, thus: "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc. […] "Lord Christ, Son of God, for thy passion's sake, remember the need of all Christendom; for thou, dear Lord, hast redeemed us on the cross. Kyrieleis." Hereafter the preacher goeth up into the pulpit.

Prussia, Kirchenordnung und Ceremonien, 1568 (Sehling 4, p. 79), at the early sermon in Königsberg:

> und wird auf das gebet gesungen: Nun bitten wir den heiligen geist etc., damit gehet der pfarrherr auf die kanzel und predigt das evangelium de tempore.

and after the prayer is sung "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc.; therewith the pastor goeth up into the pulpit and preacheth the gospel of the season.

In Nördlingen only the first stanza was sung, and the preacher began at once. Nördlingen, Kirchenordnung of Kaspar Löner, 1544 (Sehling 12, p. 312):

> Nach dem glauben sol aber die ganze kirche singen Nun bitten wir den Hailigen Gaist, nur das erste gesetze, und der predicant sol darauf predigen.

But after the creed the whole church shall sing "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," only the first stanza, and the preacher shall preach thereupon.

In Herford the preacher, from the pulpit, bade the people pray an Our Father or sing "Nun bitten", "according as the feasts are". Herford, Kirchenordnung, 1532 (Sehling 21, p. 176):

> Den geit de Prediker up den predikestoel und vormanth, en Pater noster tho sprecken offt singen Nu bidde wy den Hilgen geist etc., nadem dat de feste sinth Paschen, Pinxsten, Winachten etc.

Then the preacher goeth up into the pulpit and exhorteth to say a Pater noster, or to sing "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc., according as the feasts are, Easter, Pentecost, Christmas, etc.

The Pfalz-Zweibrücken plan of 1565 has "Nun bitten" before the sermon every Sunday of the Trinity season, "one day as the other", and says so twice (Sehling 18, p. 340):

> Ante Concionem: Nun bitten wir etc. ain tag wie den andern. […] Nota: Unnd hernach allen Sontag vor der Predig bis Weinachten gesungen werden: Nun bitten wir etc.

Before the sermon: "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc., one day as the other. […] Note: and thereafter on every Sunday before the sermon, until Christmas, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc. shall be sung.

For Christmas the same plan gives the Leise instead, until Candlemas, and then "Nun bitten" again until Easter (Sehling 18, p. 340):

> Also Mutatis Mutandis soll es an den nachvolgenden tagen gehalten, auch: Das kindelin, allemal vor der Predig gesungen werden bis Purificationis Marie, unnd hernach bis Ostern: Nun bitten wir etc.

So, mutatis mutandis, shall it be kept on the days following; also "The little Child" shall be sung always before the sermon until the Purification of Mary, and thereafter until Easter, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc.

At Hof, on Good Friday, "Nun bitten" was dropped and the last stanza of the Passion hymn "Gott dem Vater sei Lob" was sung kneeling in its place. Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592 (Sehling 11, p. 439):

> Loco Patrem: Got dem Vater sei lob und dem Sohn, ultimus versus hujus cantici genibus flexis canitur, loco Nun bitten wir. Nun bitten wir omittitur. Post concionem: O lamb Gottes unschuldig.

In the place of the Patrem: "To God the Father be praise, and to the Son"; the last verse of this song is sung on bended knees, in the place of "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray." "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray" is omitted. After the sermon: "Lamb of God, Pure and Holy."

8.10.2 The Leisen at the high feasts, sung from the pulpit

A family of orders runs from Mecklenburg (1552) through Lüneburg (1564) and Wolfenbüttel (1569) to Oldenburg (1573). In all of them the old German songs of the three feasts are sung by the preachers "from the pulpit, when they begin the sermon, with the people". Mecklenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1552 (Sehling 5, p. 200):

> die deudschen alten liedlin, als uff Nativitatis Ein kindelein so löbelich, uff ostern Christ ist erstanden, item, Also heilig ist der tag, uff pfingsten Nu bitten wir etc. Und sollen auch diese die prediger von der canzel, wenn sie die predig anfahen, mit dem volk singen.

the old little German songs, as on the Nativity "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child," at Easter "Christ Is Arisen," item "This Is Such a Holy Day," at Pentecost "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc. And these also the preachers shall sing with the people from the pulpit, when they begin the sermon.

Lüneburg, Kirchenordnung, 1564 (Sehling 6/1, p. 545):

> Darauf sol man ein Vater unser sprechen oder singen: Nu bitten wir den heiligen Geist. Umb die Weihnachten: Ein kindelein so löbelich etc. Umb die Ostern: Christ ist erstanden etc.

Thereupon one shall say an Our Father, or sing "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray"; about Christmas, "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child," etc.; about Easter, "Christ Is Arisen," etc.

The Lüneburg city order of 1575 calls these Leisen a "motet". Lüneburg, Kirchenordnung, 1575 (Sehling 6/1, p. 659):

> darnegst singt man das evangelion deutsch, darauf eine mutet, die heiligen Wiegenachten: Ein kindelein so lobelich, umb Osteren: Christ ist erstanden, auf himmelfart: Christ fur gen himmel, umb Pfingsten und sunsten das jhar durch: Nun bitten wir den heiligen Geist.

next the gospel is sung in German; thereupon a "motet": at holy Christmas, "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child"; about Easter, "Christ Is Arisen"; at the Ascension, "Christ Rose to Heaven"; about Pentecost and otherwise the year through, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray."

In Kurland the pastor intoned the Leise from the pulpit "after old custom". The list includes Simeon's song for the Purification. Kurland, Kirchenordnung, 1570 (Sehling 5, p. 88):

> Und wenn die festtage verhanden, der lobgesang für der predigt auf der canzel nach alter gewonheit zu intonirn. Gelobet seistu, Jesu Christ. Ein kindelein, so löbelich. Herr nu lestu deinen diener. Christ ist erstanden. Christ fur zu himmel. Nu bitten wir den heiligen geist. Auf und nach pfingsten, so lang man wil. Auf trinitatis. Gott der vater wohne uns bei etc.

And when the feast days are at hand, the song of praise before the sermon is to be intoned in the pulpit after the old custom: "We Praise You, Jesus, at Your Birth"; "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child"; "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant"; "Christ Is Arisen"; "Christ Rose to Heaven"; "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," at and after Pentecost as long as one will; at Trinity, "Triune God, Be Thou Our Stay," etc.

Hoya had "Gelobet seist du" sung three times running at Christmas. For Trinity it had "O Vater unser, gnädiger Gott", which then served "the whole summer through". Hoya, Kirchenordnung, 1581 (Sehling 6/2, pp. 1148–1149):

> Im anfang der predigt auf die hohen fest singet man auf dem predigstuel die alten, gewönlichen gesänge: auf Ostern Christ ist erstanden etc., auf Weynachten Gelobet seystu, Jhesu Christ etc. drey mal nacheinander, auf Pfingsten Nu bitten wir den heiligen Geist mit den folgenden versen, am tage der heiligen dreyfaltigkeit O Vater unser, gne[…] diger Gott, sampt den zweyen folgenden versen. Und also gemelten gesang den ganzen sommer durch.

At the beginning of the sermon on the high feasts the old, accustomed songs are sung in the pulpit: at Easter "Christ Is Arisen," etc.; at Christmas "We Praise You, Jesus, at Your Birth," etc., three times one after another; at Pentecost "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray" with the verses following; on the day of the Holy Trinity "O Father of ours, gracious God," together with the two verses following. And the said song so the whole summer through.

Hildesheim (Stift), Kirchenordnung für Steuerwald und Peine, 1561 (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 782):

> wan das aus ist, singet die ganze gemain: Wir glauben und darauf: Nun bitten wir den hailigen Gaist oder: Kom hailig Gaist, in Weyhnachten bis auf Lichtmes: Ein kindelein so löbelich, in Ostern bis auf Pfingsten: Christ ist erstanden, darauf volget die predige.

when that is out, the whole congregation singeth "We All Believe in One True God," and thereupon "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray" or "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord"; at Christmas until Candlemas, "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child"; at Easter until Pentecost, "Christ Is Arisen"; thereupon followeth the sermon.

Schwarzburg, Kirchenordnung, 1574 (Sehling 2, p. 133):

> Auf die hohen festa aber singt er von der canzel mit dem ganzen volk ein kurzes lied, welches uf solches fest verordnet ist, als uf weihnachten: Ein kindelein so löbelich, uf ostern: Christ ist erstanden, uf pfingsten: Nun bitten wir den heiligen geist, uf trinitatis: Gott der vater wohn uns bei.

But on the high feasts he singeth from the pulpit with all the people a short song which is ordained for such feast: as at Christmas, "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child"; at Easter, "Christ Is Arisen"; at Pentecost, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray"; at Trinity, "Triune God, Be Thou Our Stay."

Worms, Agendbüchlein, 1560 (Sehling 19/1, p. 206):

> darauff so singet der Chor das: Nun bitten wir den Heiligen Geist, oder, so es an hohen Festen ist, derselbigen Deutschen gesang eines auff die Festa verordnet, als zu Weihenachten: Ein Kindelein so löbeleich, Zu Ostern: Christ ist erstanden etc. Auff das Gesang volget alßbaldt die Predigt.

thereupon the choir singeth "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray"; or, if it be on high feasts, one of the German songs of the same ordained for the feasts, as at Christmas "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child," at Easter "Christ Is Arisen," etc. After the song the sermon followeth straightway.

Bugenhagen's Braunschweig order of 1528 already has "Christ ist erstanden" at the start of the Easter sermon, "after the accustomed manner", while "Christ lag" was farced into Victimae (§8.8.3). The Hamburg order of 1529 repeats the rule (§8.8.3).

The Hessian Agende (Philippist) gives the congregation's prayer before the sermon as the Lord's Prayer or a Leise. Hessen, Agende, 1574 (Philippist; Sehling 8, p. 412):

> die ganze kirche eintrechtiglich singet das Vater unser oder einen andern gewönlichen gesang nach gelegenheit der zeit als: Ein kindelein so löbelich, Christ ist erstanden, Christ fuhr gen Himmel, Nun bitten wir den heiligen Geist etc.

the whole church singeth with one accord the Our Father, or another accustomed song according to the occasion of the season, as: "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child," "Christ Is Arisen," "Christ Rose to Heaven," "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc.

Verden's order has the preacher start the hymn himself and the congregation sing it to the end. Verden, Kirchenordnung, 1606 (Sehling 7/1, pp. 156–157):

> Bißweilen mag er anstadt des Vater unsers den psalm Nu bitten wir den heiligen […] Geist anfangen und mit der gemeine zu end singen. Auf Weinachten soll man singen Ein kindelein so löbelich, auf Ostern Also heilig ist der tag oder Christ ist erstanden, auf himmelfahrt Christ fuhr gen himmel, auf Pfingsten Nu bitten wir den heiligen Geist, item Kom, heiliger Geist, Herre Gott, auf Trinitatis Gott der Vater wohne uns bey etc.

At times, in the stead of the Our Father, he may begin the psalm "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray" and sing it to the end with the congregation. At Christmas one shall sing "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child"; at Easter "This Is Such a Holy Day" or "Christ Is Arisen"; at the Ascension "Christ Rose to Heaven"; at Pentecost "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," item "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord"; at Trinity "Triune God, Be Thou Our Stay," etc.

8.10.3 Seasonal tables for the slot: the Lord's Prayer in Advent and Lent

Several orders give the whole year. In Lent (Lippe) or in Advent and Lent (Solms-Laubach) the Lord's Prayer hymn (Luther's "Vater unser im Himmelreich", or another Our Father song) takes the place of "Nun bitten". Lippe, Kirchenordnung, 1571 (Sehling 21, p. 387):

> so sol die Kirche ein Vater unser sprechen oder singen an Gebets statt die gewönlichen Gesenge nach gelegenheit der zeit und Festen, Als auff Ostern: Christ ist erstanden, bis auff Pfingsten. Von Pfingsten bis auff Weinachten: Nu bitten wir den Heiligen Geist. Auff Nativitatis Christi: Ein Kindelin so Löblich, bis an die Sontage der Fasten. Aber die Fasten uber sol das Vater unser oder sonst ein ander Bettpsalm gesungen werden.

then shall the church say an Our Father, or sing, in the stead of prayer, the accustomed songs according to the occasion of the season and feasts: as at Easter, "Christ Is Arisen," until Pentecost; from Pentecost until Christmas, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray"; at the Nativity of Christ, "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child," until the Sundays of Lent. But through Lent the Our Father, or else another prayer-psalm, shall be sung.

Solms-Laubach, Kirchenordnung [1576–1580] (Sehling 9, pp. 359–360):

> und wirdt daruf die predigt angefangen und nach der praefation von weihnachten biß uf purificationis Mariae gesungen: Ein kindelein so löbelich etc., von purificationis biß uf ostern: Unser vatter, der du bist in dem hiemel, von ostern biß ascensionis: Christ ist erstanden, von ascensionis biß pfingsten: Christ fur ghen hiemel, von pfingsten biß uff den advent: […] Nun bitten wir den heiligen geist, und: Gott, der vatter, wohn uns bei etc., vom advent biß uf weienachten: Unser vatter, der du bist in dem hiemel etc.

and thereupon the sermon is begun, and after the preface is sung, from Christmas until the Purification of Mary, "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child," etc.; from the Purification until Easter, "Our Father, who art in heaven"; from Easter until the Ascension, "Christ Is Arisen"; from the Ascension until Pentecost, "Christ Rose to Heaven"; from Pentecost until Advent, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray" and "Triune God, Be Thou Our Stay," etc.; from Advent until Christmas, "Our Father, who art in heaven," etc.

Tangermünde (1603) keeps the Christmas Leise on every Sunday until Candlemas. Tangermünde, Ritus, 1603 (Sehling 3, p. 339):

> ante concionem canitur: Der Tag, der ist so freuden etc. vel alia festo conveniens. Praeterea ab hoc festo diebus solis usque ad festum purificationis ante concionem mediam canitur: Ein Kindelein so etc. vel alia de tempore.

before the sermon is sung "Now Hail the Day So Rich in Cheer," etc., or another agreeable to the feast. Moreover, from this feast on the Sundays until the feast of the Purification, before the midday sermon is sung "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child," etc., or another of the season.

The Ysenburg-Birstein order uses the Lord's Prayer hymn from Trinity until Christmas. Ysenburg-Birstein, Kirchenordnung, 1588 (Sehling 10, p. 620):

> singet oder betet die Christliche Gemeyn mit ihme das Vatter unser oder anstat desselbigen einen kurtzen Gesang, der sich auff jede Jahrszeit schicket, als auff Weyhenachten: Ein Kindelein so löbelich etc., Auff Ostern: Christ ist erstanden etc., Auff Ascensionis Domini: Christ fuhr gen Himmel, Unnd auff Pfingsten: Nun bitten wir den heiligen Geist etc.

the Christian congregation singeth or prayeth with him the Our Father, or instead of it a short song fitting every season of the year, as at Christmas "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child," etc.; at Easter "Christ Is Arisen," etc.; at the Ascension of the Lord "Christ Rose to Heaven"; and at Pentecost "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc.

Pomerania, Kirchenordnung, 1542 (Sehling 4, p. 356):

> und sprecken ein vader unse, effte singen den lavesank, kum hillige geist here godt etc. In den winachten ein kindelein so lavelick, in ostern Christ is upgestanden, in den pingsten nu bidde wi den hilgen geist.

and say an Our Father, or sing the song of praise "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord," etc.; at Christmas, "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child"; at Easter, "Christ Is Arisen"; at Pentecost, "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray."

Transylvanian Saxons, Kirchenordnung, 1547, German text (Sehling 24, p. 244):

> Nach diesem ampt helt man gmeiniklich in steten die erste predig, vor welcher allzeit etwas gesungen wirdt, als: Der tag, der ist so freudenreich, oder: Christ ist erstanden, oder: Vom Heiligen Geist, oder sonst ein psalmen, wie es die zeit des jars bringt. Nach der predig singt man abermals etwas nach der selbigen zeit oder umb frieden und desgleichen.

After this office the first sermon is commonly held in the towns, before which something is always sung, as "Now Hail the Day So Rich in Cheer," or "Christ Is Arisen," or "Of the Holy Ghost," or else a psalm, as the season of the year bringeth. After the sermon something is sung again after the same season, or for peace, and the like.

Waldeck sets the Lord's Prayer hymn, the Ten Commandments hymn, a seasonal German song and the creed before the chief sermon. Waldeck, Kirchenordnung, 1556 (Sehling 9, p. 273):

> Vor der Hohen Predigt sol der Pfarrherr, Custos und Gemeyn das Vatter unser Martini Lutheri: Vatter unser im hymelreich, der du uns alle etc., Darauff die Zehen Gebott, Eyn deutsch gesenge und Collecten auß Viti Theodori oder andern, nach gelegenheyt der zeit bewerdt, Volgents den Glauben singen.

Before the high sermon the pastor, sexton and congregation shall sing Martin Luther's Our Father, "Our Father, Who from Heaven Above," etc.; thereupon the Ten Commandments; a German song and collects out of Veit Dietrich or others, proved according to the occasion of the season; following, the creed.

8.10.4 Chosen to fit the sermon

A few orders choose the hymn before the sermon by the sermon itself. At Thorn it was "a German song of the season, or what the text in hand and the common need required". Thorn, Kirchenordnung, 1575 (Sehling 4, p. 237):

> wann der prediger auf die canzel steiget, soll anfänglich das volk zum gebet vermahnet ein deutsches lied de tempore oder was der furhabende text und gemeine noth gefordert, gesungen, auch ein vaterunser gebetet und folgends die predigt gefordert.

when the preacher goeth up into the pulpit, the people shall first be exhorted to prayer, and a German song of the season, or what the text in hand and the common need required, be sung, an Our Father also prayed, and following that the sermon set forward.

Brieg asks that the hymn "agree with the sermon as much as possible", but not at the cost of the songs the people already know. Brieg, Kirchenordnung, 1592 (Sehling 3, p. 446):

> Auf der canzel zum amt soll der pfarr die predigt mit einem christl. gesang und vater unser anfangen, es soll aber der gesang soviel möglich mit der predigt übereinstimmen und hiermit sollen andere christl. gute gesänge, welche dem gemeinen manne bekannt nicht unterworfen sein.

In the pulpit at the office the pastor shall begin the sermon with a Christian song and an Our Father; but the song shall agree with the sermon as much as possible; and hereby other good Christian songs which are known to the common man shall not be put under.

The Hohenlohe Gesangsordnung of 1596 gives a menu for this slot. "Nun bitten", "Wir glauben all" or the sung Apostles' Creed are the defaults. The last two stanzas of "Es ist das Heil" can be sung if its first stanzas were sung before the lesson. Several psalm-hymns can be chosen "if it may fit the following sermon". Hohenlohe, Schul- und Gesangsordnung, 1596 (Sehling 15, p. 653):

> für der predigt soll der schuelmeister singen: Nun bitten wir etc. oder: Wir glauben all etc. oder: Ich glaub an Gott etc. oder (da man für der lection gesungen: Es ist das heyl uns etc.) vollend die zwey letste geScätz desselben gesangs: Sey lob und ehr etc., oder (da es sich zue folgender predigt sclricken möchte): Herr Christ, der einig etc., Auß tieffer nott etc., Nun welche hie ir hoffnung etc. oder auß des Lobwaßers psalmenbuchlein den 33. Psalm biß auf den 7. versicul.

before the sermon the schoolmaster shall sing "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," etc., or "We All Believe in One True God," etc., or "I believe in God," etc.; or (where "Salvation unto Us Has Come," etc. was sung before the lesson) finish the two last stanzas of the same song, "Praise and honour," etc.; or (where it may fit the following sermon) "The Only Son from Heaven," etc., "From Depths of Woe I Cry to Thee," etc., "Now they that here their hope," etc.; or out of Lobwasser's psalm book the thirty-third psalm, as far as the seventh verse.

8.10.5 To cover the preacher's going up

As with the creed (§8.9.3), the hymn before the sermon often filled the time while the preacher climbed the pulpit. Heilbronn, draft Gottesdienstordnung, 1532 (Sehling 17/1, p. 301):

> Uf dasselbig singt das volck ein theutschen psalmen oder zu einem vesttag ein theutsch lobgesang nach dem vest, darunder get der prediger uf die cantzel.

Thereupon the people sing a German psalm, or on a feast day a German song of praise after the feast; meanwhile the preacher goeth up into the pulpit.

Weißenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1528 (Sehling 11, p. 659):

> so sing der schuelmaister den teutschen glauben oder Kum, Heiliger Geist; indem so ge der diener auf die cancel und postulir das evangelium.

then let the schoolmaster sing the German creed or "Come, Holy Ghost, God and Lord"; meanwhile let the minister go up into the pulpit and expound the gospel.

8.10.6 How fixed the slot was Fixed, with seasonal exchange. Outside the festal seasons the hymn was "Nun bitten wir", with "Komm heiliger Geist" or the Lord's Prayer hymn as the alternative. At the three (or four, or five) high feasts the old Leise of the feast took its place, often for the whole season to the next feast. Only a few late orders (Thorn 1575, Brieg 1592, Hohenlohe 1596) let the sermon decide the hymn in this slot.

8.11 After the sermon: "Erhalt uns", the offertory, and the hymn that answers the sermon

The slot after the sermon (post concionem) did three jobs.

1. It was a prayer after the sermon, most often "Erhalt uns, Herr, bei deinem Wort". This was Luther's 1541/42 hymn "against the two arch-enemies of Christ and his holy Church, the Pope and the Turk", as the Pfalz-Zweibrücken songbook heads it.
2. It filled the old place of the offertory. The communicants came forward and the bread and wine were made ready while the people sang.
3. It covered the preacher's coming down from the pulpit, or his vesting for the altar.

Later orders added a fourth: to answer the sermon with a hymn on the same doctrine.

8.11.1 "Erhalt uns, Herr, bei deinem Wort"

Prussia sang "Erhalt uns" after every sermon and gave the reason: to pray that God would not let his word be taken away. Prussia, Kirchenordnung und Ceremonien, 1568 (Sehling 4, p. 81):

> Wenn dieselbige aus ist, singet die ganze kirche wie nach aller predigt allezeit: Erhalt uns herr bei deinem wort etc., damit der fromme, treue gott demütig gebeten werde, dass er sein wort ja nicht lasse von uns genommen werden, sondern dasselbige wider allen widerstand aller rotten und tyrannen, die unter den namen des papstes und türken [...].

When the same is out, the whole church singeth, as after every sermon always, "Lord, Keep Us Steadfast in Your Word," etc., that the godly, faithful God may be humbly prayed that he suffer not his word to be taken from us, but [keep] the same against all resistance of all sects and tyrants, which under the names of the Pope and the Turk [...].

In the Prussian villages the same hymn covered the priest's walk to the altar (Sehling 4, p. 84):

> Nach dem gebet singet die ganze kirche allezeit: Erhalt uns, herr, bei deinem wort etc., wie droben vermeldet ist. Unterdess gehet der priester von der kanzel fur den altar.

After the prayer the whole church singeth always "Lord, Keep Us Steadfast in Your Word," etc., as is mentioned above. Meanwhile the priest goeth from the pulpit before the altar.

The Schweinfurt order of 1543 quotes the hymn's first lines, with the Pope and the Turk. Schweinfurt, Kirchenordnung, 1543 (Sehling 11, p. 641):

> Wenn nun die predig aus ist, sol man drauf singen: Behalt uns, Herre, bei deinem wort und steur des babsts und türken mord etc.

When now the sermon is out, one shall sing thereupon: "Keep us, Lord, by thy word, and curb the Pope's and Turk's murder," etc.

Schönburg sang it "when pressing need is at hand, as alas in these last times". Schönburg, Kirchenordnung, 1542 (Sehling 2, p. 171):

> Nach der predigt schlägt der organista etwas, bis der priester über den altar kommt, praeparavitque panem et calicem offerendum. Wenn aber anbeiende noth vorhanden, als leider zu diesen letzten zeiten, soll alle wege nach ausgang der predigt der schulmeister anheben zu singen mit der ganzen ecclesia: Erhalt uns herr bei deinem wort etc. Verleih uns frieden etc.

After the sermon the organist playeth somewhat, until the priest cometh to the altar and hath prepared the bread and the cup to be offered. But when pressing need is at hand, as alas in these last times, the schoolmaster shall always, at the end of the sermon, begin to sing with the whole church: "Lord, Keep Us Steadfast in Your Word," etc.; "Grant Peace, We Pray, in Mercy, Lord," etc.

In Reuss the hymn after the sermon was always a song "for the common peace", begun from the pulpit. Reuss, Kirchen-Ordnung of Heinrich IV, 30 August 1552 (Sehling 2, pp. 153–154):

> Nach der predigt sol man allezeit uf der canzel einen gesang anfahen umb gemeinen friede, […] als: Erhalt uns herr bei deinem etc., Verlei uns frieden etc., O herr gott gib [uns dein fried].

After the sermon a song for the common peace shall always be begun in the pulpit, […] as: "Lord, Keep Us Steadfast in Your Word," etc.; "Grant Peace, We Pray, in Mercy, Lord," etc.; "O Lord God, give [us thy peace]."

Ritzebüttel, Kirchenordnung, 1556 (Sehling 5, p. 558):

> Na der predige singet men: Erholt uns here bi dinem worde bet tom ende, edder ein andere dudeschen psalm David na gelegenheit der tidt sampt volgender collecta: Here godt, giff frede in dinem lande.

After the sermon is sung "Lord, Keep Us Steadfast in Your Word" to the end, or another German psalm of David according to the occasion of the season, with the collect following: "Lord God, give peace in thy land."

The Hoya order of 1581 (Sehling 6/2, p. 1149) and the Hildesheim chapter order of 1561 (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 782; see §8.10.2) likewise set "Erhalt uns" after the sermon.

8.11.2 To cover the preacher's coming down, or his vesting

In Prussia (1544) the hymn after the sermon gave the priest time to come down from the pulpit, "take a little breath", and find his way back to the altar. Prussia, Kirchenordnung, 1544 (Sehling 4, p. 65):

> Bald auf die predigt, wo die litania nicht gehalten wird, singt die ganze kirche ein christlich lied, als: Nun freuet euch, lieben christen gemein. Nun lob mein seel den herren. Oder das vater unser von wort zu wort one auslegung nach der melodei des herren bischofs von Pomezan Doctoris Pauli Sperati. Unter des gehet der priester von der canzel, mag ein wenig respiriren und sich wieder zum altar finden.

Straightway after the sermon, where the litany is not held, the whole church singeth a Christian song, as "Dear Christians, One and All, Rejoice," "My Soul, Now Praise Your Maker," or the Our Father word for word without exposition, after the melody of the lord bishop of Pomesania, Doctor Paul Speratus. Meanwhile the priest goeth from the pulpit, may take a little breath, and find himself again at the altar.

At Verden the preacher who was to celebrate put his vestments back on while the congregation sang out the hymn he had begun. Verden, Kirchenordnung, 1606 (Sehling 7/1, pp. 157–158):

> Wenn nu die predigt geschlossen und das gemeine gebet verrichtet, so soll alßdan der prediger einen psalmen, als Gott der Vater wohn uns bey etc. oder Es wolt uns Gott gnädig sein, item Sey lob und ehr mit hohem preyß etc. oder nach ge[…]legenheit der zeit einen andern, auf der kanzel anfahen. Und soll derselbige von dem chor oder der gemeine vollends zu ende hinaus gesungen werden. Unterdessen aber soll der prediger, der das ambt halten und die communion verrichten wil, seinen ornatum ecclesiasticum wieder anlegen.

When now the sermon is ended and the common prayer performed, the preacher shall then begin in the pulpit a psalm, as "Triune God, Be Thou Our Stay," etc., or "May God Bestow on Us His Grace," item "Praise and honour with high price," etc., or another according to the occasion of the season. And the same shall be sung fully out to the end by the choir or the congregation. But meanwhile the preacher who will hold the office and perform the communion shall put on again his church vestment.

Hessen, Agende, 1574 (Philippist; Sehling 8, p. 412). The Corvey order of 1603 copies it:

> Allhie gehet der pfarherr vom predigstuhl ab, und wird underdes der christlich lobgesang gesungen: Lobet den Herren, alle heiden etc., oder sonst ein anderer christlicher kurzer gesang, als: Gott der Vatter wohn uns bei, etc.

Here the pastor goeth down from the pulpit, and meanwhile the Christian song of praise is sung, "Praise the Lord, all ye heathen," etc., or else another short Christian song, as "Triune God, Be Thou Our Stay," etc.

Weißenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1528 (Sehling 11, p. 659):

> so heb der schulmaister an zu singen ein kurzen psalm: Es woll uns Gott gnedig sein oder So pitten wir den Heiligen Gaist oder sünst, was ihm gefelt, das kurz ist. Indem so get der diener von der cancel zu dem altar.

then let the schoolmaster begin to sing a short psalm, "May God Bestow on Us His Grace," or "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," or else what pleaseth him, that is short. Meanwhile the minister goeth from the pulpit to the altar.

Hadeln, Kirchenordnung, 1526 (Sehling 5, p. 468):

> Im affstigende van dem predigstole singet de magister einen psalm.

In the coming down from the pulpit the schoolmaster singeth a psalm.

8.11.3 A hymn in the place of the offertory

The Latin offertory chant was a proper, and most orders dropped it because of its sacrificial texts. In many orders a German hymn took its place, sung while the bread and wine were prepared. Calenberg says so in the rubric of its printed Mass. Calenberg-Göttingen, Kirchenordnung, 1542 (Sehling 6/2, p. 814):

> Darnach gehet der priester wider vor den altar und singet der chor in mitteler zeit: Es wolt uns Gott gnedig sein etc. ader Gott der Vater wone uns bey etc. […] Darnach volget das offertorium. Anstat des offertorii sol man mit der gemein einen deutschen psalm singen.

Thereafter the priest goeth again before the altar, and the choir singeth in the meantime "May God Bestow on Us His Grace," etc., or "Triune God, Be Thou Our Stay," etc. […] Thereafter followeth the offertory. In the stead of the offertory a German psalm shall be sung with the congregation.

The same order's German Christmas Mass names the hymn (Sehling 6/2, p. 821):

> Offertorium. Anstat des offertorii singe man Ein kindelein so löbelich etc.

Offertory. In the stead of the offertory let "To Us Is Born a Blessed Child," etc. be sung.

The rubric in the general part of the order gives the reason: the priest must make himself ready and prepare everything for the communion (Sehling 6/2, p. 795):

> Und weil er sich da zur communion geschickt machen und alles bereiten mus, sol in mitler zeit die gemein einen feinen deutschen psalm singen.

And because he must there make himself ready for the communion and prepare all things, the congregation shall meanwhile sing a fine German psalm.

Dortmund, Gottesdienstordnung, 1554 (Sehling 21, p. 209):

> Na der predeke mach men echter einen bequemen Lavesang vor dat Offertorium singen.

After the sermon one may again sing a fitting song of praise for the offertory.

Lippe, Deutsche Messe [c. 1525–1538] (Sehling 22, p. 568):

> Dat offertorium Vor dat offertorium synget me eyn geystlick leidt, dat ys eyn psalme.

The offertory. For the offertory a spiritual song is sung, that is, a psalm.

The Naumburg order of 1527 sang "Aus tiefer Not" in the place of the offertory. Naumburg, Kirchen-Ordnung for St Wenzel, 1527 (Sehling 2, p. 60):

> so hebt man an in stat des offertoriumbs zu singen durch die ganze kirche den vordeutschten psalm Davids de profundis clamavi ad te etc. also wie folget: Aus tiefer not schrei ich zu dir.

then one beginneth, in the stead of the offertory, to sing through the whole church the psalm of David put into German, De profundis clamavi ad te, etc., as followeth: "From Depths of Woe I Cry to Thee."

The Brandenburg order of 1540 kept the Latin offertory of the day in the collegiate churches and let the villages sing a German psalm instead. Brandenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1540 (Sehling 3, p. 71):

> und nach geendigter predig das offertorium von der dominica oder festen, aber auf den dörfern mag man dafur einen deudschen psalmen singen.

and after the sermon is ended, the offertory of the Sunday or feast; but in the villages one may sing a German psalm for it.

In Corvinus's Lippe order the people sang Psalm 67 or "Dank sagen wir alle" while the priest made ready the wine and bread. Lippe, Kirchenordnung of Antonius Corvinus [1542] (Sehling 21, p. 345):

> Na gheschener bicht synget dat volck: Edt wolde uns Godt gnedich syn edder: Danck segge wy alle etc., mydtler tydt beredet de prester wyn und brodt vor de communicanten.

After the confession is done, the people sing "May God Bestow on Us His Grace," or "Thanks say we all," etc.; meanwhile the priest maketh ready wine and bread for the communicants.

In the Lutheran East Frisian liturgy of Engerhafe, organ and congregation sang "Herr Christ, der einig Gottessohn" in alternation while the communicants came to the table. Engerhafe, Liturgie, 1583 (Sehling 7/1, p. 677):

> Deinde pastor accedat ad mensam Domini, paret panem et infundat vinum in calicem. Organicen vero et ecclesia alternis canant hymnum Herr Christ, der einig Gottessohn, et interim communicantes ad mensam convenire poterunt.

Thereafter let the pastor go to the table of the Lord, prepare the bread and pour the wine into the cup. But let the organist and the church sing by turns the hymn "The Only Son from Heaven," and meanwhile the communicants may come together to the table.

The Albertine order for Celle kept Latin here, with the people kneeling in prayer "in the stead of the offertory". Albertine Saxony, Die Cellischen Ordnungen, 1545 (Sehling 1, p. 300):

> Man möchte auch wol zu zeiten abwechseln und einen andern reinen lateinischen gesang dafur singen, under disem obgeschribenen gesange sal das volk nider knien und sein gebete thuen an stadt des offertorii.

One might also at times change about and sing another pure Latin song for it. During this song written above the people shall kneel down and make their prayers in the stead of the offertory.

8.11.4 While the communicants come forward

Many orders tie the hymn to the movement of the communicants into the choir. It is sung "until they all kneel". Anhalt, Kirchen-Ordnung of Princes Johann and Georg, 3 August 1548 (Sehling 2, p. 554):

> Nach der prediget weil die communicanten in den chor gehen, die menner zur rechten, die weiber zur linken hand, soll ein deutscher psalm gesungen werden, bis das sie al[le knien].

After the sermon, while the communicants go into the choir, the men to the right, the women to the left hand, a German psalm shall be sung until they all [kneel].

Soest, Kirchenordnung, 1532 (Sehling 22, p. 450):

> so lange die preedike geendigt ys, alßden werdt men enen karten Psalm singen, midtler tidt gaen se ynt kor, setten sick dale up eer knee.

until the sermon is ended; then a short psalm shall be sung; meanwhile they go into the choir and set themselves down upon their knees.

Nördlingen, Kirchenordnung of Kaspar Löner, 1544 (Sehling 12, p. 312):

> Nach der predig sol der chor singen ein teusch lidlein, bis der celebrant zum communicieren den kelch und die ostien zubereitet, und die communicanten sollen sich für den alter fünden.

After the sermon the choir shall sing a little German song, until the celebrant hath prepared the cup and the hosts for communicating; and the communicants shall find themselves before the altar.

Pomerania (1535) used the Ten Commandments hymn or Da pacem. Pomerania, Kirchenordnung, 1535 (Sehling 4, p. 341):

> Wenn dat alle ute is, so singet men van den tein baden gades eder da pacem latinisch unde düdesch, eder sus wat anders. Under des vögen sick de communicanten to dem altar de manns up de rechte hand de frouwen up de luchtere hande.

When all that is out, one singeth of the ten commandments of God, or Da pacem in Latin and German, or else somewhat other. Meanwhile the communicants betake themselves to the altar, the men on the right hand, the women on the left.

Brieg asked that this hymn, too, agree with the sermon. Brieg, Kirchenordnung, 1592 (Sehling 3, p. 446):

> Nach der predigt soll der cantor einen deutschen gesang singen, damit sich die communicanten können zum altar finden; es soll aber auch der gesang mit der predigt übereinstimmen.

After the sermon the cantor shall sing a German song, that the communicants may find their way to the altar; but the song also shall agree with the sermon.

8.11.5 A hymn to answer the sermon

The Mecklenburg order of 1545 wanted a short hymn after the sermon, "commonly a prayer, which the whole congregation can sing". Mecklenburg, Ordeninge der misse, 1545 (Sehling 5, p. 154):

> schal de pastor na dem gespraken bede, einen psalm anfangen, de nicht lank is, gemenlich ein gebet, den de ganze gemene singen kann, alse: Idt wolde uns godt gnedich sin, Here Christ etc. Wat kan uns kamen an vor not.

the pastor shall, after the prayer spoken, begin a psalm that is not long, commonly a prayer, which the whole congregation can sing, as: "May God Bestow on Us His Grace," "Lord Christ," etc., "What need can come upon us."

Later orders ask that it agree with the sermon's teaching. Rostock, Conformitas ceremoniarum, c. 1560 (Sehling 5, p. 288):

> Nach der predigt und dem gebet sol der pastor einen psalm anfahen, der mit der lere des evangelii sol übereinstimmen.

After the sermon and the prayer the pastor shall begin a psalm which shall agree with the teaching of the gospel.

The Hanau-Lichtenberg order gives examples by Sunday. Hanau-Lichtenberg, Kirchenordnung, 1573 (Sehling 20/2, p. 54):

> III. Die Predig sol alwegen mit eim Gesang, so mit uberein stimmet und sich darzu reimet, beschlossen werden, Als auff Misericordias Domini singt man: Auß tieffer not, Auff Jubilate: Ach Gott, vom Himel sihe darein, Auf Cantate: Ein feste Burg, Auff Trinitatis: Gott, der Vater, wohn uns bey etc.

III. The sermon shall always be concluded with a song which agreeth and rhymeth therewith: as on Misericordias Domini one singeth "From Depths of Woe I Cry to Thee"; on Jubilate, "O Lord, Look Down from Heaven, Behold"; on Cantate, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God"; on Trinity, "Triune God, Be Thou Our Stay," etc.

In Marienhafe the hymn after the blessing was one "agreeing with the sermon". Marienhafe, Kirchenordnung, 1593 (Sehling 7/1, p. 697):

> volgens der segen gesprochen und darauf ein psalm oder leid, auf der predigt stimmend, myt denn orgel ahnfangen und von chor und gemeine außgesungen etc.

following that the blessing spoken, and thereupon a psalm or song agreeing with the sermon, begun with the organ and sung out by choir and congregation, etc.

The Hohenlohe Gesangsordnung of 1596 has the schoolmaster ready with a hymn chosen by the doctrinal article the sermon chiefly treated. It gives twelve articles, each with its hymns. Hohenlohe, Schul- und Gesangsordnung, 1596 (Sehling 15, p. 653):

> Sontags wie auch an gemeinen feyertagen nach der predigt solle der schuelmaister widerumb mit einem gesang gefast sein, als, da die predigt fürnemblich were gerichtet gewesen auf den articul 1. Vom wort und sacramenten: Der IJerr ist mein getreuer hiert etc., 0 Gott, du liöchster gnadenhort etc., Gott, der Vatter etc., auß dem Lobwaßer den 93. Psalm: Gott als ein könig etc. 2. Vom gesatz und guetten werken: IJerr Christ, der einig Gottes etc., 0 Gott, du höchster etc., Nun bitten.

On Sundays, as also on common holy days, after the sermon the schoolmaster shall again be provided with a song: as, when the sermon had been directed chiefly to the article (1) of the word and sacraments, "The Lord is my faithful shepherd," etc., "O God, thou highest treasury of grace," etc., "Triune God, Be Thou Our Stay," etc., out of Lobwasser the ninety-third psalm, "God as a king," etc.; (2) of the law and good works, "The Only Son from Heaven," etc., "O God, thou highest," etc., "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray."

The list goes on through the articles on the gospel, sin and the merit of Christ, prayer, the cross, persecution, earthly want and blessing, the transience of life, the pestilence, idolatry, and the last day. When many communicants were waiting, a short hymn was to be sung instead (Sehling 15, p. 654):

> Im fall aber am sontag vill communicanten fürhanden weren, alßdan umb der kurtze willen: Danksagen wir alle etc. oder auß Lobwaßer den 93. Psalm: Gott als ein könig etc., den 100.: Ihr völker auf der erden all etc. oder den 117.: Den Herrn lobt ihr etc. oder den 121.: Mein augen ich etc.

But in case there were many communicants on the Sunday, then for brevity's sake: "Thanks say we all," etc., or out of Lobwasser the ninety-third psalm, "God as a king," etc., the hundredth, "Ye peoples on the earth all," etc., or the hundred and seventeenth, "Praise ye the Lord," etc., or the hundred and twenty-first, "Mine eyes I," etc.

Reutlingen wanted variety here. It asked for "not always the old common fiddle", "Es woll uns Gott genädig sein", even though that too was a fine psalm. Reutlingen, Ordnung der Schule und des Kirchengesangs, 1565/1566 (Sehling 17/2, p. 49):

> Nach der predig, so man communiciern will, sollen sie singen: Ehre sey dem vatter etc., oder: Sey lob und eher mit hohem preyß etc., unnd wa man nit communiciert, abermals ainen schönen psalmen und nit nur alwegen die alte, gemaine geigen: Es wölle uns Gott gegnädig sein, welcher schöner, herrlicher psalm doch auch nit underlassen, sonder beyweilen wie andere gesungen werden soll.

After the sermon, when there is to be communion, they shall sing "Glory be to the Father," etc., or "Praise and honour with high price," etc.; and where there is no communion, again a fair psalm, and not only always the old common fiddle, "May God Bestow on Us His Grace"; which fair, glorious psalm yet shall not be left off, but be sung at times like the others.

The Reutlingen school visitation of 1574 asked for a hymn "agreeable to the season or to the text preached", and not a weary repetition of the one sung before the sermon. Reutlingen, Artikel der Schulvisitation, 1574 (Sehling 17/2, p. 58):

> Item, es solle allwegen nach der predig, sonderlich wann man das heilig nachtmal nit heltt, ein sonder gesang oder psalm ohngevar uff drey oder vier gesetz, minder oder mehr, der zeitt oder dem gepredigten text gemes, gesungen unnd der vor der predig gesungne (ohngeacht, das er nit gar zu endt gebracht) nit mit vertruß (wie bißanhero vilfelttig beschehen) widerholt werden.

Item, there shall always after the sermon, especially when the holy Supper is not held, be sung a separate song or psalm of about three or four stanzas, less or more, agreeable to the season or to the text preached; and the one sung before the sermon (notwithstanding that it was not brought quite to the end) shall not be repeated to weariness, as hath hitherto often been done.

8.11.6 One hymn split around the sermon

Some orders split a single hymn: the first stanzas before the sermon and the rest after it. The Naumburg order does this with the Lord's Prayer hymn. Naumburg, Kirchen-Ordnung for St Wenzel, 1537/1538 (Sehling 2, p. 72):

> Darauf ein kurzer psalm nach der zeit, oder Vorleih uns frieden gnediglich, Es wolt uns got gnedig sein, Die lezten drei gesetz, im Nun bitten wir den heiligen geist, Und die andern hohen fest de tempore, item Behalt uns herr bei deinem wort, Die lezten sechs gesez im vater unser, so man vor der predigt die ersten drei gesungen hat.

Thereupon a short psalm according to the season; or "Grant Peace, We Pray, in Mercy, Lord," "May God Bestow on Us His Grace," the last three stanzas of "To God the Holy Spirit Let Us Pray," and on the other high feasts of the season, item "Lord, Keep Us Steadfast in Your Word," the last six stanzas of the Our Father, when the first three have been sung before the sermon.

Anhalt, Ordnung der deutschen Gesänge, before 8 February 1551 (Sehling 2, p. 556), for Christmas:

> Am christag und ezliche tage darnach singe man vor der fruepredig drei versen von dem lobsang: Gelobet seistu Jesu Christ etc. und die ander versen nach der predig, in der messen vor dem evangelio singe man: Gelobet seistu Jesu Christ gar aus.

On Christmas Day and some days after, let three verses of the song of praise "We Praise You, Jesus, at Your Birth," etc. be sung before the early sermon, and the other verses after the sermon; in the Mass before the gospel let "We Praise You, Jesus, at Your Birth" be sung through entire.

The German school order of Öhringen had the schoolmaster sing, after the sermon, the last stanza of the hymn he had sung before it. Öhringen, Kirchen- und Schulordnungen, 1582 (Sehling 15, p. 503):

> soll er ein psalmen singen, als: O Here Gott begnade mich etc. oder: Eß ist das heil uns kommen her etc. und dergleichen. […] Nach der predigt das letzt gesang des vorigen psalmen als: Sey lob und ehr mit hohem preiß oder dergleichen etwas kurztes.

he shall sing a psalm, as "O Lord God, be gracious unto me," etc., or "Salvation unto Us Has Come," etc., and the like. […] After the sermon the last stanza of the foregoing psalm, as "Praise and honour with high price," or the like, somewhat short.

At Neuenrade, in Holy Week, the Passion hymn "Gott dem Vater sei Lob" was sung to its fifteenth stanza before the sermon and taken up again there after it (Sehling 22, p. 531). The funeral orders of Schwäbisch Hall and Limpurg split the burial hymn in the same way (§8.17.4).

8.11.7 How fixed the slot was

A handful, with a trend toward the variable. The Saxon, Prussian and northern orders mostly fixed the slot on "Erhalt uns", with "Verleih uns Frieden", "Es woll uns Gott" or "Gott der Vater wohn uns bei" as the alternatives. Where it was the offertory, any "German psalm" would do. From the 1560s the Upper German, Hessian (Moderate Reformed), Hohenlohe and East Frisian orders increasingly wanted a hymn chosen to answer the sermon. That is the most topical choice of hymn anywhere in the service.

8.12 The Sanctus: "Jesaia dem Propheten" and "Heilig ist Gott der Vater"

The German Sanctus had two forms:

- Luther's "Jesaia dem Propheten das geschah" (1526). This is a rhymed narrative of Isaiah 6, printed in the Deutsche Messe.
- A troped Trinitarian Sanctus, "Heilig ist Gott der Vater, heilig ist Gott der Sohn, heilig ist Gott der Heilige Geist", printed in Low German in Bugenhagen's Wolfenbüttel order. Sehling's editors give it to Decius or call it anonymous (§8.12.2).

The Latin Sanctus stayed in towns with schools and on feasts. In most orders the German Sanctus followed the sermon and exhortation and led straight into the communion. In some it was sung during the distribution itself (§8.14).

8.12.1 "Jesaia dem Propheten" as the communicants come forward

Prussia, Kirchenordnung, 1544 (Sehling 4, p. 65):

> Darauf singt der chor ader die kirche das deudsche sanctus oder das lied: Jesaia dem propheten das geschach, dar unter bald treten zum altar die communiciren wöllen, und darf der priester das sacrament nicht erheben, dann die elevation ist disfals unnötig, und aus dieser ursach abgethan.

Thereupon the choir or the church singeth the German Sanctus, or the song "Isaiah, Mighty Seer in Days of Old," during which those that will communicate straightway step to the altar. And the priest need not elevate the sacrament, for the elevation is herein unneedful, and for this cause is done away.

Nördlingen, Ordnung der ceremonien at St George's, 1555 (Sehling 12, p. 319):

> Das Sanctus aus dem Esaia teutsch, damit sich das volk zur communion im chor samele.

The Sanctus out of Isaiah in German, that the people may gather in the choir for the communion.

Pomerania had the boys intone the words "Heilig ist Gott der Herre Zebaoth" inside Luther's hymn, with the choir answering. Pomerania, Agenda, 1569 (Sehling 4, p. 438):

> De pastor schal ock vorschaffen, dat vor dat sanctus vaken gesungen werde: Esaia dem propheten dat geschach etc. unde dat de knaben allene dat sanctus darinne intoneren unde dat chor respondere.

The pastor shall also see to it that in the stead of the Sanctus there be often sung "Isaiah, Mighty Seer in Days of Old," etc., and that the boys alone intone the Sanctus therein and the choir answer.

Wittgenstein gives "Dank sagen wir alle" as an alternative in this slot. Wittgenstein, Kirchenordnung, 1563 (Sehling 22, p. 103):

> Nach verrichter predige fange man den lobgesang an zusingen: Esaia, dem propheten, das geschach etc., oder: Danck sagen wir alle etc.

After the sermon is performed, let the song of praise be begun: "Isaiah, Mighty Seer in Days of Old," etc., or "Thanks say we all," etc.

The later Kurpfalz text of 1577 gives the choice between "das sanctus, Isaia dem propheten, Grates nunc omnes, danck sagen wir alle oder einen andern dergleichen kurtzen gesang" (Sehling 14, p. 149, apparatus).

In Calenberg's German Masses the priest prayed a collect for the authorities in silence while the Sanctus hymn was sung. Calenberg-Göttingen, Kirchenordnung, 1542, the German Christmas Mass (Sehling 6/2, p. 821):

> Hirauf folget das Sanctus. Jesaia dem propheten .... Die collecta, so der priester unter dem Sanctus betet. Barmherziger himlischer Vater.

Hereupon followeth the Sanctus, "Isaiah, Mighty Seer in Days of Old". The collect which the priest prayeth during the Sanctus: "Merciful heavenly Father …"

8.12.2 The Trinitarian German Sanctus

Five orders name the Trinitarian Sanctus: Wolfenbüttel 1543, Mecklenburg 1545, Stralsund 1555, Harlingerland 1573/74 and Hof 1592. The first three give it in Low German, "Hillich is Got, de Vader". Sehling's editors differ on its author:

- The Hildesheim editor calls it "this anonymous Sanctus". The editor finds it in High German in the Newe deudsche geistliche Gesenge that Georg Rhau published for the schools (Sehling 7/2.1, p. 856, n. 34). The Hof register names the same collection (Sehling 11, p. 750).
- The Harlingerland editor takes it for Decius's song setting of the Sanctus, probably written in 1522/23 and printed in Joachim Slüter's Rostock songbook of 1531 as "Hyllich ys Godt de vader / hyllich ys Godt de söne". The editor adds that Ph. J. Rehtmeyer named Decius as the author of a High German form in 1710, and said it was by then little used (Sehling 7/1, p. 739, n. 3).

Wolfenbüttel, Kirchenordnung, 1543 (Sehling 6/1, p. 59):

> Up de latinische praefatio mach de ganze kercke frölick dat düdesch Sanctus singen. (Noten:) Hillich is Got, de Vader, hillich is Got, de Sone, hillich is Got, de hilge Geist. He is de Here Zebaoth. Alle werld is syner ehren vul. Hosianna in der höchde. Gelavet sy, de dar kumpt im namen des Heren. Hosianna in der höchde. (Ende der Noten). Sülck düdesch Sanctus mach men wol ock up ein andermal edder alle tidt singen under der communion neven andern gesengen.

After the Latin preface the whole church may joyfully sing the German Sanctus. (Notes:) "Holy is God the Father, holy is God the Son, holy is God the Holy Ghost. He is the Lord of Sabaoth. All the world is full of his glory. Hosanna in the highest. Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord. Hosanna in the highest." (End of notes.) Such German Sanctus may well be sung another time also, or at all times, during the communion alongside other songs.

Stralsund kept the Latin Sanctus for feasts and the two German forms for the rest of the year. Stralsund, draft Kirchenordnung, 1555 (Sehling 4, p. 551):

> Up de feste Sanctus agnus dei underwilen gesungen, und up de andern tide dudesk: Hilich is godt de vader, und wo idt ock doctor Martinus ut deme propheten Esaia vordudeschet hefft.

On the feasts the Sanctus and Agnus Dei are sung at times; and at the other times in German, "Holy is God the Father," and as Doctor Martin hath also put it into German out of the prophet Isaiah.

Mecklenburg allowed the towns to take the Sanctus melodies set in the songbooks for the feasts, matched to their Kyries. The villages sang "Jesaia" or "Heilig ist Gott der Vater". Mecklenburg, Ordeninge der misse, 1545 (Sehling 5, p. 154):

> Na der prefation singet men in den steden dat sanctus latine, to tiden Esaia dem propheten. Idt is ock nicht not, dat me stedes ein sanctus to latine singe, sünder de sülven to tiden nemen, de in den sankböken van den groten festen up de kyrie vorordent sint. Up den dörperen singe men dat Esaia, edder dat ander: Hillich is godt de vader, welck me in den steden ock to tiden singen mach.

After the preface one singeth in the towns the Sanctus in Latin, at times "Isaiah, Mighty Seer in Days of Old." Neither is it needful always to sing one Sanctus in Latin; but at times take those which in the songbooks of the great feasts are appointed to the Kyries. In the villages let "Isaiah, Mighty Seer in Days of Old" be sung, or the other, "Holy is God the Father," which may also be sung at times in the towns.

In Harlingerland three boys knelt to sing the Benedictus. The Et homo factus est of the creed was sung the same way. Harlingerland, Kirchenordnung, 1573/74 (Sehling 7/1, p. 738):

> vor der communion ordnen wir zu singende daß Sanctus latein und teutsch, alß solches in bemeltem psalmbock Lutheri zue finden, und daß mit sonderlicher andacht, durch drey knaben niedergekniet, daß Benedictus und in dem Symbolo Athanasii Et homo factus est gesxungen werden soll, alß den solcheß biß daher gebreuchlich gewesen.

Before the communion we ordain to be sung the Sanctus in Latin and German, as the same is to be found in the said psalm book of Luther; and that with special devotion, by three boys kneeling, the Benedictus, and in the creed the Et homo factus est, shall be sung, as the same hath hitherto been customary.

During the communion Harlingerland had "Heilig ist Gott der Vater" sung in turn with the other communion hymns, in the choir and below in the church. Harlingerland, Kirchenordnung, 1573/74 (Sehling 7/1, p. 739):

> Unter der communion wollen wir zue singende Jesuß Christuß, unser heyland etc., Gott sey gelobet und gebenedeyet etc., O lamb Gotteß etc., Heilig ist Gott der Vatter etc., einß umb daß ander, im chor und nedden in der kirchen.

During the communion we will that there be sung "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior," etc., "O Lord, We Praise Thee," etc., "Lamb of God, Pure and Holy," etc., "Holy is God the Father," etc., one after the other, in the choir and below in the church.

Hof sang it in four parts during the communion, from its choirbooks: on St John the Baptist's day and at the dedication of St Michael's church. At Epiphany "the German Sanctus for four voices" might go before the communion motet. Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592 (Sehling 11, pp. 458, 466, 468):

> Sub communione: Magi viderunt stellam. A 4. L. de Victoria. Praemittatur Sanctus germanicum A 4, si usus postulat.

> Sub communione: Sanctus praecedentis missae vel Sanctus germanicum: Heilig ist Gott der Vater. A 4. in den beschlagenen.

> Sub communione: Sanctus germanicum Heilig ist Gott der Vater. A 4. In den schwarzen beschlagenen partibus.

During the communion: Magi viderunt stellam, for four voices, by L. de Victoria. Let the German Sanctus for four voices go before, if need require.

During the communion: the Sanctus of the foregoing Mass, or the German Sanctus, "Holy is God the Father," for four voices, in the clasped [books].

During the communion: the German Sanctus, "Holy is God the Father," for four voices, in the black clasped part-books.

Sehling's editor finds it hard to say which of the books in Widmann's list are meant, and says they no longer survive (Sehling 11, p. 466, n. 17).

Not in Advent. No order assigns "Heilig ist Gott der Vater" to Advent, or to any season. The rules the orders give are of rank and place:

- Stralsund keeps the Latin Sanctus for the feasts and sings the German forms "at the other times";
- Mecklenburg gives it to the villages, and to the towns "at times";
- Wolfenbüttel allows it after the preface, or during the communion "at all times";
- Harlingerland sings it in turn with the communion hymns;
- Hof sings it in parts on two feasts, and perhaps at Epiphany.

In Advent Hof's communion has instead the Sanctus et Agnus angelicum, on the first three Sundays (Sehling 11, pp. 432–433). Angelicum ("angelic") names a plainsong melody, not a text: Sehling's editor glosses the Benedicamus angelicum as "Melodiebezeichnung" (Sehling 11, p. 412, n. 13), and the Latin school sings the Kyrie angelicum "in Adventu Domini" (Sehling 11, p. 472). The Hof Kirchenamt sang it in German. On the first Sunday the Kyrie angelicum seu feriale is noted with "Herre, erbarm dich uber uns", and the Sanctus notes begin "Heiliger" (Sehling 11, p. 432). The same Sanctus is not kept to Advent. Hof sings it "ut in Adventu" on the Epiphany Sundays and at the Annunciation (pp. 435, 439), and the Sanctus et Agnus angelicum on Trinity Sunday and the first Sundays after it, on the feasts of St John the Baptist, St Laurence, the Visitation and the Virgin, and of the apostles and martyrs (pp. 442–450). The other grades are the dominicale from the fourth Sunday after Trinity (pp. 443–445) and the quadragesimale in Lent (p. 439).

8.12.3 At the elevation

Brandenburg kept the elevation. After it the collegiate churches sang the Latin responsory Tua est potentia and the parishes a German hymn. Brandenburg, Kirchenordnung, 1540 (Sehling 3, p. 69):

> Nach der elevation sol man in Thumen und stiften einen latinischen gesang singen, als das responsorium tua est potencia etc., in den pfarren aber einen deudschen gesang. Es wolt uns gott gnedig sein oder sei lob und dank mit hohem preis.

After the elevation one shall sing in cathedrals and collegiate churches a Latin song, as the responsory Tua est potentia, etc.; but in the parishes a German song, "May God Bestow on Us His Grace," or "Praise and thanks with high price."

The bells rung at the elevation are treated in Chapter 9, §9.5.4.

8.12.4 In the place of Sanctus and Agnus

Hof allowed "Jesaia" in the place of the Latin Sanctus and Agnus, or after them when there were many communicants. At Christmas it used "Vom Himmel hoch". Hof, Ordo ecclesiasticus, 1592 (Sehling 11, p. 426):

> Interdum loco Sanctus et Agnus (vel etiam praesentibus multis, qui participant de corpore et sanguire Christi, post illa) canitur: Esaia, dem propheten, das ge[schach].

Sometimes in the place of the Sanctus and Agnus (or also, when many are present who partake of the body and blood of Christ, after them) is sung "Isaiah, Mighty Seer in Days of Old."

8.12.5 How fixed the slot was

Fixed. The choice was between the Latin Sanctus (graded, on feasts), Luther's "Jesaia", and the Trinitarian "Heilig ist Gott der Vater". Rarely a hymn of thanks ("Dank sagen wir alle", Grates nunc omnes) or a hymn of prayer at the elevation takes its place.

8.13 The Lord's Prayer and the Words of Institution

No troped or farced Paternoster or Words of Institution were found in the corpus. The Verba were sung by the priest to Luther's tones, or read. The Lord's Prayer was often sung by the priest in German, and sometimes by the whole congregation as Luther's metrical "Vater unser im Himmelreich".

8.13.1 The congregation sings the Lord's Prayer hymn

In the Braunschweig villages the sexton and people sang Luther's "Vaterunser" after the epistle, and the pastor sang the Lord's Prayer and the Verba before the communion (§8.3.3). In Schwarzburg the people sang the Lord's Prayer themselves where there were no scholars. Schwarzburg and Stolberg, Ordenunge der religion, 1549 (Sehling 2, p. 130):

> Wan nicht schuler sein, mach das valch selbs singen das vater unser, darnach geschicht di communio des volk etc. — Mach das volk singen: Gott sei gelobet und gebenedeit. Ader ander schone gesang.

Where there are no scholars, the people may themselves sing the Our Father; thereafter the communion of the people taketh place, etc. The people may sing "O Lord, We Praise Thee," or other fair songs.

At weekday communions in Riga the whole assembly sang the Lord's Prayer hymn, so that the schoolboys were not kept from their lessons. Riga, Kirchenordnung, 1530 (Sehling 5, p. 17):

> Am wercktag aber, so die communicanten verhanden sind, singt man vor der predigt, wie gewonlich, aber bald nach der predigt, hebt man an das gesetzte lied des vater unsers, das es die ganze versammlung singe (da mit die knaben in der schulen an irer lere nicht verhindert werden). Darauf spricht der priester die wort der benedeiung über das brot, über den wein.

But on the working day, when communicants are present, one singeth before the sermon as is customary; but straightway after the sermon one beginneth the set song of the Our Father, that the whole assembly may sing it (that the boys in the school be not hindered in their learning). Thereupon the priest speaketh the words of blessing over the bread and over the wine.

Sayn, Kirchenordnung, 1590 (Sehling 19/1, p. 407):

> Hernach sprech oder sing der Priester das Vatter unser und die Wort vom Leib und Blut Christi oder mag die Kirch das Vatter unser Teutsch miteinander singen.

Thereafter let the priest say or sing the Our Father and the words of the body and blood of Christ; or the church may sing the Our Father in German together.

8.13.2 A communion hymn split around the consecration

A Henneberg village pastor began Hus's "Jesus Christus unser Heiland" before the Lord's Prayer and the Verba, and had the people finish it during the distribution. Queienfeld (Henneberg), pastor's report, 1566 (Sehling 2, p. 344):

> Nach der predigt, wen communicanten do sein, singen wir: Jesus Christus unser heiland etc. Darauf singe ich oder lese das vater unser. Darnach verba consecrationis. Darnach communicir ich die leut und das volk singt das: Jesus Christus vollend aus und: Gott sei gelobet und gebenedeiet etc.

After the sermon, when there are communicants, we sing "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior," etc. Thereupon I sing or read the Our Father. Thereafter the words of consecration. Thereafter I communicate the people, and the people sing "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior" out to the end, and "O Lord, We Praise Thee," etc.

In the Lutheran liturgy of Engerhafe the three stanzas of "O Lamm Gottes unschuldig" were divided across the rite. The first came after the Verba, the second after the exhortation, and the third after the absolution, and with the third the communion began. Engerhafe, Liturgie, 1583 (Sehling 7/1, pp. 678–680):

> Canatur Imo O lamm Gottes unschuldig etc.

Let "Lamb of God, Pure and Holy," etc. be sung the first time.

> Canatur 2do O lamm Gottes unschuldig etc. et dicat sacerdos: Kniet nieder, geliebte im Herrn, erhebet eure herzen zu Gott und lasset uns andächtig beten.

Let "Lamb of God, Pure and Holy," etc. be sung the second time, and let the priest say: "Kneel down, beloved in the Lord, lift up your hearts to God, and let us pray devoutly."

> Canatur 3tio O lamm Gottes unschuldig etc. et fiat communicatio his verbis.

Let "Lamb of God, Pure and Holy," etc. be sung the third time, and let the communion be made with these words.

8.14 Under the communion (sub communione)

Hymns during the distribution are named more often than hymns in any other slot. The core never changed through the century:

- "Jesus Christus unser Heiland, der von uns den Gotteszorn wandt", Luther's version of the Latin hymn ascribed to John Hus, and often called "Johann Hussen Lied";
- "Gott sei gelobet und gebenedeiet", Luther's expansion of a medieval single stanza;
- the German Sanctus, "Jesaia dem Propheten";
- Psalm 111 in German, "Ich danke dem Herrn von ganzem Herzen" (Luther's Confitebor);
- the Agnus Dei, Latin or German ("O Lamm Gottes unschuldig", "Christe, du Lamm Gottes").

Around this core stood hymns added "when there are many communicants". These were the Latin responsory Discubuit Jesus, O sacrum convivium, Pange lingua (in Latin and German, "Mein Zung erkling"), "Als Jesus Christus unser Herr" (Sebald Heyden), "Nun freut euch", "Was kann uns kommen an für Not", "O Christ, wir danken deiner Güt", "Help Gott, dass mir's gelinge", a Passion hymn in Lent, the festal hymns at the feasts, and the German Te Deum.

8.14.1 The core pair

Prussia, Artikel der Ceremonien, 1525 (Sehling 4, p. 33):

> Under solchem communicirn sol das volk mit dem chor singen das deütsch lied Jesus Christus unser heilaut, und nach der communication got sei gelobet etc.

During such communicating the people with the choir shall sing the German song "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior," and after the communion "O Lord, We Praise Thee," etc.

Eisfeld, Verordnung der Visitatoren, 1554 (Sehling 1, p. 562):

> Unter der communion sol man singen das lid Joannis Hussen: Jesus Christus unser heiland, oder got sei gelobet oder Christe du lamb gott[es].

During the communion the song of John Hus shall be sung, "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior," or "O Lord, We Praise Thee," or "Christ, thou Lamb of God."

A Henneberg pastor calls Hus's hymn "the instructive and comforting song of the holy martyr John Hus". Herpf (Henneberg), Kirchen-Ordnung, 1566 (Sehling 2, p. 335):

> Unter dieser und der allerheiligsten action singt der chor das lerhaftig und trostlich lied des heiligen merterers Johannis Huss Jesus Christus unser heiland etc. und darauf die danks[agung Gott sei gelobet].

During this and the most holy action the choir singeth the instructive and comforting song of the holy martyr John Hus, "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior," etc., and thereupon the thanksgiving, "O Lord, We Praise Thee."

Bremen in 1561 wanted Hus's hymn "in the ancient melody", that is, the Latin Jesus Christus nostra salus, "and at times also in the new one composed by Luther". This order was written against the Zwinglian party in Bremen, and it sets out the communion hymns in order. Bremen, Kirchenordnung, 1561 (Sehling 7/2.2, p. 510):

> Placet igitur nobis, ut occinatur textus Esaiae alternis vicibus Latine vel Germanice. Hunc postea sequatur inter communicandum cantilena Johannis Huß in prisca melodia et interdum etiam in recenti per Lutherum composita. Adiiciatur quoque psalmus 111 una cum Agnus Dei, si magna est multitudo communicantium. Et tandem concludatur cum gratiarum actione: Gott sey gelobt etc.

It pleaseth us therefore that the text of Isaiah be sung, by turns in Latin or German. Let there follow it, during the communicating, the song of John Hus in the ancient melody, and at times also in the new one composed by Luther. Let there be added also the hundred and eleventh psalm together with the Agnus Dei, if the multitude of communicants be great. And at length let it be concluded with the thanksgiving "O Lord, We Praise Thee," etc.

8.14.2 As many hymns as there are communicants

Nearly every order measures the number of communion hymns by the number of communicants. Saxony (Albertine), Kirchenordnung, 1580 (Sehling 1, p. 369):

> Unter der communion, und so der communicanten viel sind, sol das agnus dei lateinisch, sampt den deudschen gesengen, als Esaia dem propheten das geschach, item der 111. psalm, ich danke dem herrn von ganzem herzen, oder, Jesus Christus unser heiland, item, gott sei gelobet, etc. eins oder mehr gesungen werden.

During the communion, and when the communicants are many, the Agnus Dei in Latin, together with the German songs, as "Isaiah, Mighty Seer in Days of Old," item the hundred and eleventh psalm, "I thank the Lord with all my heart," or "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior," item "O Lord, We Praise Thee," etc., one or more, shall be sung.

Henneberg, Kirchenordnung, 1582 (Sehling 2, p. 309):

> Unter der communion sol man singen: Jesus Christus unser heiland, item, Gott sei gelobet, oder, Esaia dem propheten das geschach, oder was sonsten von geistlichen gesengen sein mag, so dieser action gemess und bequem und die notdurft nach anzal der communicanten erfordert. Wann aber der communicanten so wenig, das auch obgemelter gesenge einer zu lang were, so sol darmit, so bald die communion geendet, auch aufgehört werden.

During the communion shall be sung "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior," item "O Lord, We Praise Thee," or "Isaiah, Mighty Seer in Days of Old," or what else there may be of spiritual songs which are agreeable and fitting to this action and which the need requireth according to the number of communicants. But when the communicants are so few that even one of the aforesaid songs were too long, then it shall be stopped as soon as the communion is ended.

At the Dresden Kreuzkirche all the listed hymns were sung if there were many communicants. Dresden, Gottesdienst-Ordnung der Kreuzkirche, 1574 (Sehling 1, p. 555):

> sub communione canitur vel agnus dei, sanctus, Gott sei gelobet und gebenedeiet, Jesus Christus unser heiland, mein zung erkling. Si multi sunt communicantes omnes hae cantilenae canuntur.

During the communion is sung either the Agnus Dei, the Sanctus, "O Lord, We Praise Thee," "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior," "My tongue, resound." If the communicants are many, all these songs are sung.

The Lippe order puts the Agnus Dei, "O Lamm Gottes" and "O Christ, wir danken deiner Güt" on the high feasts, and ends with a hymn of thanks. Lippe, Kirchenordnung, 1571 (Sehling 21, p. 388):

> Unter der Communion, weil das Sacrament dispensirt und ausgetheilet wirdt, soll die Kirche der Nachgesetzten Gesenge einen oder mehr, darnach der Communicanten viel oder wenig, singen, als: Jhesus Christus, unser Heylandt; Auff den Hohen Festagen: Agnus Dei, O Lamb Gottes, unschüldig, O Christ, wir dancken deiner güte. Nach der Communion sol vom Predicanten die Collecta gesungen, darauff die gewönliche segen oder Benedictio, Nume. 6, gegen dem Volcke gesprochen werden, Und entlich mit einem Danckliede Als: Gott sey gelobet, Oder: Sey lob und ehr mit hohem preiß von der gantzen Kirchen beschlossen werden.

During the communion, while the sacrament is dispensed and distributed, the church shall sing one or more of the songs hereafter set, according as the communicants are many or few, as: "Jesus Christ, Our Blessed Savior"; on the high feast days, the Agnus Dei, "Lamb of God, Pure and Holy," "O Christ, we thank thee for thy goodness." After the communion the collect shall be sung by the preacher, thereupon the accustomed blessing or benediction (Numbers 6) spoken toward the people, and at the last it shall be concluded by the whole church with a song of thanks, as "O Lord, We Praise Thee," or "Praise and honour with high price."

Regensburg first sang the Latin Agnus Dei three times, slowly. If that was not long enough, a Latin thanksgiving from the gradual followed. Regensburg, Wahrhaftiger Bericht, 1542 (Sehling 13, p. 393):

> Unter diser des volks speisung singet der schulmaister das Agnus Dei dreimal langsam. Wo aber der communicanten so vil sind, das die drei Agnus Dei nit gelangen mögen, bis man si alle verrichtet, so wirdet ein lateinische danksagung darzu gesungen, wie man die im gradual am bequemsten finden kan.
